WHAT ABOUT ACETONEMIA?

Q: Is this dairy cow problem, acetonemia, a strictly nutritional disease?

A: No. Sometimes called 'ketosis', this disease usually affects the best producing cows and good feeders, although poorly-fed animals are also susceptible.

Q: What causes it?

A: The exact cause is unknown, but veterinarians believe it is related to the liver's failure to properly convert food sugars to blood sugar.

Q: What forms does this disease take?

A: There are two forms, the mild form and the severe form. In mild cases, symptoms are vague, such as the cow going off feed and giving milk which has a peculiar taste. In severe cases, the cows may be either nervous, or depressed, lose weight, and may even go down. Milk production drops drastically.

Q: Can the farmer take any preventive steps?

A: One safeguard is to feed good quality hay and grain.

Q: What should owners do if they suspect acetonemia?

A: They should contact their veterinarian immediately so an accurate diagnosis can be determined by chemical tests. Acetonemia is easily confused with other diseases such as milk fever or plant poisoning.

Q: Can the disease be treated successfully?

A: Yes, intravenous injections are quite successful. Further treatment varies with the symptoms. If started in time, death losses can usually be prevented. However, careful nursing is required before the animals get back into production.

Grasshopper More Destructive In Alabama

The lazy grasshopper of the fairy tale bears no resemblance to the ones becoming more plentiful.... and more destructive.... in Alabama.

In recent weeks many farmers throughout the state have complained of grasshopper damage to cotton and corn crops. Since the pests are fond of dry weather, the last two seasons have been ideal for their growth.

But science is on the farmers side, and new insecticides now on the market are effective in making man's battle against the insect a winning one. Toxaphene, for example, will stop the pest. So will chlordane and aldrin.

These poisons should be applied along fence rows and at the edge of fields, preferably in Spring while the hoppers are still young. If the insects get into hay fields or pastures, toxaphene is the safe poison to use. It can be applied at the rate of 15 to 20 pounds per acre and cattle can be put back into the treated areas within a week or ten days.

The hoppers that have caused the most damage in Alabama are commonly known as bird grasshoppers. They are large straw-colored insects with a wing expanse of almost four inches. Around the home and in flower gardens the lubber grasshopper, which is large and black with red markings and no well-developed wings, has been doing a lot of damage.

The female grasshopper lays eggs one or two inches under the ground along fence rows, in hay fields, and in other cultivated areas. The eggs are laid in late Summer and Fall and hatch the following Spring. One female may lay as many as 150 eggs.

The young hoppers develop by feeding on grass and weeds in the area until they have wings. After the wings, then comes the attack! The pest may migrate miles to do their damage. In some sections of the U. S. hoppers have been known to destroy all green growth in a given area and then to begin on clothing hanging on clotheslines, bark of trees, and even fence post, hoe handles, and other farm equipment.

At this time of the year grasshoppers in Alabama are in the winged stage. They are swarming into fields and causing considerable damage. By spraying or dusting with any of the recommended chemicals, they can be controlled before a crop is entirely destroyed.

HE'S ALL EARS—In the jungle of his cornfield, Basil Soupos, South Gifford, Mo., holds a yardstick to demonstrate the prolific yield he has received via liberal fertilizing. Seven ears can be counted in this 36-inch segment of Soupos' 100 acres of corn. The civil engineer-turned-farmer figures he has about 30,000 stalks per acre while some of his neighbors get no more than 7000. Because of the lack of rain Soupos probably won't reach his coveted goal of 200 bushels per acre, but if the dry spell continues he'll flood his field with water pumped from the Chariton River. Looking ahead, Soupos says he won't be satisfied until he raises 300 bushels per acre.

LEADERSHIP SCHOOL

"Using Hand Tools" to build a luggage rack will be taught to House Furnishings Leaders on Tuesday, August 19.

The Leadership School will be held in The Vocational Shop, Columbiana High School. Elvin Hill, Vocational Teacher, and W. M. Clark, Ass't County Agent, will be instructors. The meeting will begin at 9 o'clock. These leaders will give this demonstration in all Home Demonstration Clubs in December.

COLUMBIANA H. D. C. MEETS

Columbiana Home Demonstration club held its July meeting at Mrs. Mary McWilliams.

Seventeen members answered roll call. Mrs. Garvin Baker was welcomed as a new member.

The minutes were read and approved. Treasurer's report was given, and the secretary reported a note of thanks had been written to Mr. Clark and Mr. Curlee.

Letters of thanks and appreciation were read by the secretary from Mrs. Mary A. Lollar, Executive Secretary Chester Knight, Red Cross VA Representative and Lucille B. Osburn, Recreation Director, for the Veterans party the club sponsored.

A motion was made and carried to pay for cook books in advance in order to get the books printed.

The following paid for their books: Mrs. Crawford, Mrs. Bozeman, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Holman, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Edmondson, Mrs. McWilliams and Mrs. Johnston.

The club voted to change from figurines to "Cake Baking" for the exhibit at the County Fair. Mrs. Bolton and Mrs. Edmondson are on the committee for Cake Baking. Mrs. Barney Isbell is chairman of the exhibit.

The club voted to sponsor a Maid of Cotton at the County Fair. The committee, Mrs. Bolton, Mrs. Green and Mrs. Bozeman are to select a girl.

Mrs. Williams reported on the council meeting. The secretary reported on the Farm Bureau.

Mrs. Crawford reported the club would see about the cleaning of cemetery as soon as the weather got cooler.

Mrs. Williams reminded the group of a recreational school which will be held at the High School. She also asked if the club members would like to participate in a county-wide choir which will be directed by Miss Collins.

The hymn story was given by Mrs. Bolton after which the group sang "Softly and Tenderly" accompanied by Mrs. Edmondson.

Demonstration, "Accessories For The Home" was given by Mrs. Green.

The attendance prize was won by Mrs. Baker. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

The meeting was adjourned to meet on the lawn of Mrs. Gene Edmondson's residence on Tuesday night, August 19, at 7 P. M. for a family picnic.

Mrs. G. C. Moore, Jr. and Mrs. W. M. Galloway will be in charge of the recreation.

Pastry should contain just enough water to hold the dough together and should not be handled any more than necessary.

FARM NEWS

FALL GARDEN WILL HELP FOOD BUDGET

Turnips, rutabagas, and greens will furnish good eating at low cost in late fall, when most fresh vegetables are gone.

John Bagby, API Extension horticulturist, says growers can get best results by planting on a low spot where soil moisture is plentiful. Purple top globe is the most popular variety of turnips, while the American purple top rutabagas are best.

Bagby adds that these crops need 1,000 pounds of 5-105 fertilizer per acre before planting and a top-dressing of 200 pounds of nitrate of soda or its equivalent when they are two to three inches high.

POND OWNERS ADVISED TO ELIMINATE CATFISH

Earl Kennamer, API Extension fish and wildlife specialist, says pond owners might be heard using the expression "Curiosity killed the catfish."

He points out that these fish are undesirable and should be eliminated when found in farm ponds. In fact, if enough of them aren't removed by later winter, the pond owner may have to drain his pond, poison the remaining water, and restock the pond in order to insure good fishing the following year.

"However," adds Kennamer, "catfish curiosity about a tempting bait, such as fistsized pieces of soybean cake, and a good trap may cook their goose. Make a trap five to six feet long and about 15 to 18 inches in diameter. A funnel is formed at each end, something like a minnow trap. The mouth of the funnel should be around three to four inches in diameter. Provide a small hinged window in the middle of the trap so the fish can be removed."

TRAP THE WATER THAT DOES FALL ON FARMS

For several weeks many farmers over the state have again realized the importance of water in the production of crops and livestock.

"But droughts occur nearly every year in Alabama despite the fact that our annual rainfall exceeds 50 inches," states S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist. We get plenty of water to produce crops every year. But too often it is permitted to run off sloping land or go to waster in other ways. This water is sorely needed if dry weather follows.

Doughty says that farmers can help insure crops against drought damage by putting each acre of land in the crop best suited to it. "In other words," he says, don't try to grow row crops on lands that are suited only for sod crips."

"Also," Doughty adds, "increasing the supply of organic matter in the soil so that it will absorb and hold more water is important. Use crop rotations that include more sod crops to trap rainfall and store it in the soil for futre use. And control run-off water that soil does not absorb by spreading it onto meadows and pastures or storing it in farm ponds.

PROPER STORAGE FOR ALL FARM MACHINERY

All farm machinery that has finished its year's work should be stored properly until the next season, according to J. T. Gaillard, API Extension engineer.

He says to thoroughly clean combines and to remove canvases and belts and hang them up away from rats and mice. Land-polished surfaces should be covered with a heavy oil or rust preventative.

POND WEEDS

Summer is an excellent time to gett rtid of pond weeds, such as cattails and water lillies. Use a strong ester type of 2, 4-D on the exposed leaf surface. Repeat spray application when new growth appears.

SERICEA FOR DRY WEATHER

In every drought-stricken county, cattle can be seen grazing and doing well on farms that are growing sericea. The same holds true for cattle on kudzue.

GRASSHOPPER CONTROL

On field crops and in flower gardens, one of the materials that can be used to control grasshoppers is the 20 per cent toxaphene dust. Rate of application is 15 to 20 pounds per acre.

Phyllis has learned to prepare many new dishes this summer. Some of these are cakes, oatmeal cookies, tac-cakes, peanut butter, beverages, cereals, corn muffins, flour muffins, and biscuits.

Phyllis is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wooley. Her sponsor is Mrs. W. F. Fulman.

THE THREE-MEAL-A-DAY PLAN MAY NOT BE BEST

The usual American custom of three meals a day is not necessarily the best eating schedule.

Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, explains that some people, often the elderly, feel better if they eat more frequently, but less at a time. They may prefer to divide their daily fare into four or five meals instead of three. Or some food may be saved out for snacks between meals or at bedtime. Many people find that warm milk at bedtime is an aid to restful sleep.

"However," warns Miss Hulsey, "older people who eat frequently need to guard gainst two hazards. First, don't spoil the appetite for milk, fruit, vegetables, and other needed food by filling up on toast and ttea or cake and coffee. Second, don't overeat and become overweight."

The specialist adds that growing children, active works, and underweights also may benefit by between-meal snacks. Non-appetite spoilers that give children nourishment for active play are a glass of milk, a snadwich, fruit, or a hard-cooked egg.

FARM NOTES

A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent

1. The Government has declared Alabama as a disaster area due to the prolonged drouth. As quick as a working plan has been decided upon we will inform the farmers of Shelby county.

2. Much of the corn crop is worthless except for roughage and this corn should be cut. This will clear the land for fall planted grazing and small grain crops.

3. Land should be turned as soon as moisture will permit and fertilizer applied, disking in thoroughly. If land can be prepared and fertilized such crops as crimson clover and rye grass should be planted the last of August or the first of September. Oats, rye, wheat, vetch and other grazing and grain crops should be planted a little later.

4. Permanent pasture lands should be prepared as soon as possible so white clover, orchard grass ,blue grass and fescue grasses can be planted in September.

5. Plant food crops on low bottom land where there will likely be moisture. Prepare good seedbed and fertilize generously.

Plant collards, cabbage, turnips, kale, carrots, spinach and lettuce. Bush string and bunch lima beans should be planted soon. Plant Irish Potatoes within the next week if possible. Onion sets should be planted in the next few weeks.

Pecans that are boiled for 15 minutes will crack whole.

FOX HUNTERS TO GATHER IN CLANTON AUGUST 18

Fox hunters from a wide area of Alabama will gather in Clanton on August 18th for the field trial and bench show sponsored by the Chilton County Foxhunters Association.

Several hundred hunters, according to President Clark Headley, are expected to enter hounds in one of the toughest foxhunters trial of the state.

A unique part of the Chilton trial will be that all field judges will be mounted and running will be mostly after red fox.

The events will open Monday, August 18, with registrations at the Willingham Hotel in Clanton. At the bench show Monday night, Mr. Buck Tatum, of Ripley, Miss., will be the judge. He will also act as Master of Hounds in the field.

Running will commence Tuesday morning with the first cast at daybreak in the rolling, open country along the Coosa river east of Clanton. Eight trophies will be engraved.

Hunters from throughout the state and South are invited to participate in the three-day gruelling event.

HALL OF FAME ORGANIZATION COMPLETED

Organization of the Alabama Hall of Fame has been completed according to Joseph N. Greene, Birmingham, member of the board.

With completion of the body, plans move ahead to honor Alabama's immortal citizens. First selection for the Hall of Fame will probably be made in October, 1953, when the board's annual meeting will be held.

The board has decided that candidates for the Hall of Fame must have been dead at least 5 years to be eligible for selection, Green said, because the board feels that it is only after death that a candidate's true evaluation can be made."

He said the board will consider any candidates presented by the public, and invitations for nominations will be extended on Jan. 2, in each year or 1953, 1954, and 1955, and biennially thereafter.

SEN. BONNER TAKES STEPS TO INSURE FREEDOM OF PRESS

Wilcox County's Sen. J. Miller "Bull" Bonner is taking steps to insure freedom of the press in Alabama.

Recently completed by Bonner, and ready for introduction in the 1953 legislature is a completely deworked edition of the Wilcoxan's 1915 bill on the subject. It makes sure that public business in Alabama is an "open book" for the press.

Members of boards, commissions and other governmental groups must not hold secret meetings Bonner's revised bill provides, and it would be against the law for board members to cast secret ballots on public questions.

Any official violating the act would be subject to a fine or jail sentence.

One of the first acts of Alabama's initial post-Civil War convention, called September 12, 1865, was to declare that, "hereafter there shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in this state, otherwise than for the punishment of crime, whereof the party shall be duly convicted."

Although Bellefonte was once the county seat of Jackson county, the town no longer exists.

ALA. EDUCATION ASSN. TO HOLD LEADERSHIP SCHOOL

The Alabama Education Association will hold its annual Leadership School at Alabama College, Montevallo, on August 15-17.

The theme of the School is EDUCATIONAL COMMUNICATION. The over-all theme will be discussed under five topics, as follows: When We Talk To Ourselves; It Begins In The Classrooms; Keeping In Step With The Public; Building The 1953 Legislative Program; Retirement, Social Security and Tenure.

The out-of-state consultants include Dr. William Lloyd, director of public relations for the city of Richmond, Va.; Dr. B. I. Griffith, director of public relations of the Ohio State Education Association; Dr. Lyle Ashby, director of professional relations, National Education Association, Washington, D. C.

All officers of the Alabama Education Association, and more than two hundred other leading educators from over the state will be officially represented by the county president, Mr. D. B. Smith, and the secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Poole, both of Vincent.

Superintendent W. W. Elliott, vice-president of the Alabama Education Association, will preside at the opening meeting on Friday afternoon, August 15.

Miss Anita King, will serve as leader of the discussion group, It Begins in the Classroom.

The Shelby County and Alabama College Teacher's Association will serve as hostesses to the group at an informal reception on Friday night, August 15.

HELD MORALLY BOUND VOTERS IN PRIMARY

Alabama voters who took part in the Democratic primaries have a moral obligation to vote for the party's nominees for president and vice-president, in the opinion of Atty. Gen. Si Garrett.

Garrett took issue with Probate Judge Walter F. Gaillard, Mobile, who held that there is neither a moral nor legal obligation.

In the opinion requested by the Mobile Press, Gaillard noted that he was not suggesting Democrats should not support the national ticket, but was only setting forth his conclusions as to voters' rights.

The attorney general cited the case of Ray vs. Garner, decided by the Alabama Supreme Court, March 27, 1952, quoting from the majority opinion written by Justice Simpson:

"Every participant in a party primary election obligates himself to support the party nominee . . . such obligation inhering in the very nature of his act . . . although being unenforceable through the courts because it is merely a moral obligation, binding no longer than it could be conscientiously performed."

"I am sure that all men and women of honor who participated in the May and June Democratic primary elections will support the party nominees for president and vice president in the coming election," Garrett added.

CANDIDATES QUALIFY FOR MUNICIPAL OFFICES

The date for qualifying for Mayor and Councilmen is past. In visiting the official headquarters this morning we find the following candidates unopposed for re-election in Columbiana: Mayor, Wales W. Wallace, Jr., Arthur Wood, Elvin Hill and Cecil Duke, Councilmen. Conrad M. Fowler, former member of the Council, did not again seek the office, nor did Luther Curlee, however, we find Francis Leonard, owner of the Farm and Home Hardware Company and Bruce Alverson of Walton Hardware Company have qualified to run.

The election will be held September 15.

The preliminary trials of Davis McTyre and Ira A. Dawson, charged with robbery of J. O. (Little Man) Popwell on July 20, which were set for Friday, August 15, were continued for two weeks due to the fact that some witnesses could not be located.

The cases of Jimmie Glass, Emmett Whitten, Russell Whitten, Edward Glass and Fred O. White, charged with robbery and rape of Judy Morello, near Calera on August 7, were continued, due to the fact that Judy Morello was not able to come to court. Their individual bonds have been set at $1500.

"CAPT. TOM" PHILLIPS NOT INTERESTED IN SENATOR SPARKMAN'S PLACE

According to Fred Taylor of the Birmingham News we find that Sen. J. T. Phillips of Siluria, who has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for governor, bowed out of consideration for the U. S. Senate appointment.

Sen. Phillips is quoted as follows: "I have no interest in the interim appointment for U. S. Senate whatsoever, if the place becomes vacant, and it has not been officially offered me anyway", he told Mr. Taylor.

Sen. Phillips further states: "I would not resign my seat in the State Senate to take the interim appointment for 60 days or some other short period, because I owe an obligation to the people of Shelby, Chilton and Autauga counties, which make up my district, who elected me to serve them in the Alabama Senate".

FAIR TIME IS FUN TIME

A festive spirit mingled with keen anticipation pervades Columbiana this week as she makes ready to receive hundreds of visitors scheduled to be present at the third Shelby County Fair, which will swing wide open its doors next Monday to greet her sons and daughters and behold their talented achievements in the various departments now being made ready for displaying them.

There will be lots of pies and cakes, canned products, hand craft, needle work, and enthusiastic competition, as contestants vie for the prizes offered. The Kiwanians have worked hard to bring the third annual Fair standard up several notches, since last we all met at the "Merry Go Round" — and, judging from what we have heard and seen on the week's agenda—you will be glad all over again that you belong to Shelby County. And, if you are lucky enough to have been born and bred in this Garden Spot of Alabama, well, you will again thrill with pride that you can call yourself a "native". .

So, take this tip from me — and meet me at the Fair. We will ride the Loop-the-Loop, or the Merry-Go-Round, or the Ferris Wheel, or the Aero Plane, and eat cotton candy; drink pink lemonade; eat hot dogs served by the P.-T. A. members—Nibble a candy apple-on-a-stick; view the exhibits, see old friends we haven't met in a long, long time. In other words, throw away the cares of the day — relax — and have a good time.

All this, plus more, awaits you at the Shelby County Fair. Don't miss it. Lee Amusement Company opens on Midway Monday, August 25. Exhibits and Fair proper opens Wednesday, August 27. I'll BCNU.

ONE FARMER TO ANOTHER—Democratic presidential candidate Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois inspects a prize-winnin Shorthorn steer shown to him by a young farmer at Springfield, Ill. Governor Stevenson, like his Republican opponent, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, has a 78-acre farm in Libertyville, Ill. Ike's farm is near Gettysburg, Pa.

Miss Betty Cosby To Join API Faculty

Miss Betty Ruth Wallace Cosby, an API graduate and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Cosby of Wilsonville, will begin duties as assistant dean of women at Alabama Polytechnic Institut September 1.

Miss Cosby replaces Miss B. Wilson, who resigned to do graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh.

Originally from Birmingham Miss Cosby holds the degree of bachelor of science in education from Alabama Polytechnic Institue and a master's degree from Syracuse University.

As an undergraduate at API, Miss Cosby was president and vice president of the Women's Student Government Assn., a member of Oracles, Owls, Cardinal Key and Kappa Delta Pi honor societies, Kappa Delta Sorority, the Executive Cabinet and the Publications Board.

As assistant dean of women at API, she will serve as Panhellenic adviser and will be in charge of women's housing.

Everything Ready For Big County Fair

TREE MEETING CALLED FRIDAY NIGHT, AUGUST 22

Columbiana as a city of trees as well as of beautiful homes was envisaged Monday night when a small group of citizens met in the First National Bank Building and outlined plans for securing the cooperation of all citizens in a tree-planting program. James I Harrison presided over the informal session.

A Tree club, whose purpose is the stimulation of tree planting, the selection of appropriate tree varieties, their placing along sidewalks and in gardens and their future care and cultivation is proposed for speedy organization so that young plants may be secured and set out this fall.

A meeting to organize the Tree club will be held Friday night, August 22, at 7:30 in the Bank Building. All home owners and home lovers are urged to be present. Suggestions as to tree varieties for use as shade and garden ornaments will be heard and discussions of ways and means to obtain both native trees and nursery varieties will be conducted by some local gardeners experienced in the growing of shrubs and trees.

It has been many times said that Columbiana, as one of the old Alabama towns should be the proud possessor of great trees arching above its streets and offering stretches of cool and dappled shadows to the mororists who, in increasing numbers pass through the town. Instead, the town can boast few old trees. Older citizens, however, can remember when there were many towering trees. In the march of progress, many of these gave way to widening street pavements; others were destroyed through carelessness and neglect.

In an effort to revive some of the lost beauty of the town, civic clubs purchased for interested citizens a large number of crepe myrtle plants a few years ago. Luther Curlee who, in his work for the city is not only doing much to keep these plants alive but also keeps track of the number surviving, reports that several hundred of these plants are thriving. It is hoped that, added to these crepe myrtle trees, may be other gay plantings of redbud, silver maples, red maples, sycamore, oak and other plantings so that in future years Columbiana may be known as truly the gardenspot of this section.

The meeting Friday night is open to all and every Columbiana citizen is not only invited by urged to attend.

UNION SERVICE FIFTH SUNDAY NIGHT

The second joint meeting of the Baptist and Methodist Churches in Columbiana, will be held in the Baptist Church at seven-thirty o'clock August 31st, at which time the Rev. A. D. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist Church, will bring the evening message.

The "Youth Choir" under the direction of Robert Holliman, will present the special music for this occasion. All are cordially invited to attend this union service.

MRS. IRENE MITCHELL

Funeral services for Mrs. Irene Mitchell, wife of a veteran Montevallo dentist, who died Saturday night, were held at 3 p. m. Monday afternoon at Montevallo Baptist Church. Burial was in Montevallo Cemetery, Bolton-Walton directing.

Surviving besides the husband are six daughters, Mrs. J. H. Pratt, Mrs. Cooper Shaw, Mrs. R. H. Gresette, Mrs. C. C. Austin, Mrs. L. E. Anderson and Miss Eleanor Mitchell; three sons, B. B., W. H. and W. L. Mitchell and a sister, Mrs. R. R. Hassler.

CORRECTION AND APOLOGY

The Reporter-Democrat offers an apology to A. B. Baxley and his church in Calera. In last weeks paper it was erroneously stated that Mr. Baxley would conduct a series of meetings at the Calera Church of God. It should have said the services would be held at the Calera Church of Christ.

ROY MANN

Recreation Program Closed Friday Night

Marking one of the most successful summer sessions in the history of recreational activities in Columbiana, the season came to an end Friday evening at the Shelby County High School.

The evening's offerings were directed by Coach Roy Mann and the art exhibit under the supervision of talented Dot Lefkovits, won favorable acclaim. The articles completed by these students were both beautiful and useful. Games, contests, a picture show and congenial chatter topped off the evening. With the grand finale—an old fashioned water melon cutting.

Approximately 200 citizens shared this memorable occasion.

Visitors interested in placing recreational facilities in Centerville were here as guests of Coach Mann and expressed themselves as highly pleased with the program. Among these visitors were the athletic director of Centerville High, Mr. and Mrs. White and Mrs. Nelson Fuller.

According to an announcement made by Postmaster R. J. .Ozley of Columbiana, who is Shelby County Chairman of the 6th Congressional District Division of Postmasters, there will be a meeting of all postmasters in this District on August 27, beginning promptly at two o'clock in the Shelby County High School Lunch room.

Louie Gregory, postmaster of Fairfield, is president, and will be in charge of the program presentations and instruction.

The guests will be welcomed by Mayor Wales W. Wallace, Jr. Invocation by the Rev. A. D. Wilson of the Methodist Church. Willie Mae Hancock, of Ethelsville, Alabama, is Secretary and will be present at this session. Among other distinguished guests will be A. H. Albright, postmaster of Birmingham. Several inspectors will be here to preside over the School of Instruction during the afternoon.

The evening session will begin with a banquet after which other dignitaries will be presented and heard regarding the U. S. Postal Department.

Columbiana is indeed fortunate in having so distinguished a group of postal officials in our town. A warm welcome awaits them.

1953 ACP TO CENTER AROUND COUNTACTS OF COUNTY COMMITTEEMEN

Operation of the 1953 Agricultural Conservation program will center around the on-the-farm visits of elected PMA community committeemen, says H. C. McDanal, chairman of the Shelby County PMA Committee.

Representatives of the Soil Conservation Service, Forest Service, Extension Service, Farmers Home Administration and other agricultural agencies are to assist in preparing committeemen for these farm-by-farm visits.

There are 1620 farmers in Shelby County and each committeeman will have about 75 farms to visit. These farms are in eight designated agricultural communities. Elections are held in each community each year and three local farmers are named to serve on the PMA community committee.

Under the 1953 Agricultural Conservation Program, the assistance available will be directed to the most urgently needed conservation on the farm.

In the field-byfield check, the conservation needs of the farm will be noted and the most needed conservation determined. Farm plans prepared for the farm by the Soil Conservation Service or other agency will be considered in determining practices to be carried out in 1953 with Agricultural Conservation Program assistance.

PARTLOW SCHOOL TO BE IMPROVED

Plans for improvements at the Partlow School, Tuscaloosa, were discussed at a meeting of officers directors of the patrons, with Harry V. Harding presiding.

Attending the meeting were S. Palmer Keith Jr., C. D. Shaw, Jr., Mrs. B. H. Thompson, Birmingham; Rux Carter, Columbiana; Mrs. Lewis C. Martin, Mrs. James Stoudemire, Montgomery; Mayor J. D. Brown, Ozark, and Fuller Kimbrell, Fayette.

Kiwanians Extend Cordial Welcome To Whole County

A cordial invitation is extended to the people of Shelby County by the Fair Association to attend the Third Annual Shelby County Fair to be held in Columbiana during the week beginning August 25.

The Lee Amusement Company of Montgomery will open for business on the Fair grounds on Monday. Commercial and educational exhibits will be open for the public on Wednesday. Kids Day is to be held on Thursday between the hours of 3:00 and 6:00 p. m. All rides at the Fair will be only 10 cents each to the children.

The livestock and poultry show will begin Friday morning at 9:30. The Maid of Cotton contest, sponsored by the Shelby County Farm Bureau, will be held in the High School Auditorium at 8:00 p. m. Friday night.

One of the principal features of the Fair will be the exhibits presented by Shelby County Home Demonstration Clubs. Clubs from Calera, West Calera, Spring Creek-Valley Grove, Westover, Helena, Ebenezer, Wilsonville, Columbiana and Klein.

During the last week 4423 catalogues were mailed to the postal box holders in Shelby County. These catalogues gave complete information concerning the Fair.

Elvin Hill of Columbiana is Chairman of the Fair Association and Luther Curlee, also of Columbiana, is Vice-Chairman of the Association.

The following committees from the Kiwanis Club have worked very hard to bring the fair to you:

FOR UNDER AGE SCHOOL CHILDREN NO 'COTTON PICKING'

The Alabama Department of Industrial Relations has warned Alabama farmers against hiring under-age minors to pick cotton during school hours.

An industrial Relations spokesman said the federal government is threatening stiff penalties against employers who work under-age minors during school. The only exception is in the case of a farmer employing his own children on his own farm.

However, it is all right to employ the children under 16 after school hours as well as on holidays or school vacations.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR:

When St. Clair's ragged militia is humiliated by the Indians in battle, Will Morgan feels that his fears for Mary Bolden are justified. The Carolina girl he loves has settled near the Miami lands with her parents. He spends dreary months wondering about her fate, fearing that she, like Ann Randall, might become a victim of the Indians. The news that there are traitors in the militia ranks makes the situation look much worse to him, for, even at its best, the militia is incapable of matching the full strength of the combined Indian tribes. He retires to his tent, one night, shocked at the conduct of the undisciplined militia.

CHAPTER IX

Four A.M. arrived all too soon. Drums rolled throughout the camp and the militia officers went cursing to the task of arousing their men. By daylight the regulars were ready to move but the militia camp was still in utter confusion. Officers ran back and forth, cursing and shouting while no one paid any attention. Men stood around sullenly or went back to sleep again. Only two companies were able to report all men present, some of the green troops having strayed into the village and stayed overnight.

It was past nine o'clock when a semblance of order was achieved and the march began. One of the regular regiments led off with colors flying, fifes and drums playing valiantly and the men swinging along in good spirits. Then the show turned to comedy as a militia regiment followed. They straggled in hit-or-miss fashion with many of the men too drunk to know what they were doing and the others ambling along with fine disregard to the meaningless orders which were being bawled at them by their officers. The packers waited until the whole sorry contingent had passed, hurling taunts until it seemed that a battle would start before camp was broken.

Kirby Accompanies Will On Visit to Bolden's

To Will Morgan it all seemed like some sort of bad dream. This army meant too much to him; it hurt to realize that he could hope for nothing good as a result of its movements.

Finally the mob had moved on and the second regiment of regulars with the artillery followed. Theirs was the hopeless task of keeping the militia moving. Their movement did something to improve the picture but as the baggage train got under way another scene was unfolded which ruined the effect. The camp followers—mostly female—trailed along to the accompaniment of much hilarious profanity.

On the fourth day there was the problem of getting the baggage across the Big Miami at Fort Hamilton but otherwise there was nothing to slow the march. Still the progress was so slow that in nine days they covered less than seventy miles. Here they camped at a spot which St. Clair decided would be a good spot for a fort so the army went to work at the task of construction.

For the first time a fair share of the chore went to the militia, the regulars now being constantly employed in halting desertions. It was straggling no longer; the raw troops were actually leaving the army.

When it became apparent that there would be no advance for some days Will hit upon the scheme of making a quick trip across country to the home of the Boldens. He would have no real duties until the pack train moved again and he felt that here was the chance he had been awaiting for over a year. He broached the subject to Kirby and received the riverman's assurance that there would be ample time for the trip. Old Sam offered no objection, merely warning against too long a stay, and on the following morning they set out on what was advertised as a hunting trip.

Tilly accompanied them for a few miles but turned aside to do some actual scouting while the two packers cut on across country to the region where they understood the Bolden settlement to be.

Will quickly discovered that his trail lore was inadequate to the task at hand. They were working their way through the most tangled thickets and it seemed uncanny the way Kirby could keep up his speed. Twice they were forced to wade streams which came to their armpits, Kirby forging across without hesitation while Will floundered along behind him, trying to keep his rifle and powder dry. It was rough going but just before dusk they struck a larger stream which Kirby declared to be a branch of the Big Miami.

"Now all we gotta do," he grinned, "is guess whether the settlement is on this branch or the other—and whether it's upstream or down. What's yer bet?"

Will studied the matter, trying to make sure that he would come up with a reasonable answer. "No trail along here so I don't figure there's a settlement above. We better try our luck downstream."

"Sounds reasonable," Kirby assented. "Downstream it is."

"Tonight?"

"Lord no! Ye ain't that anxious, are ye? We'll camp here and head downstream in the mornin'."

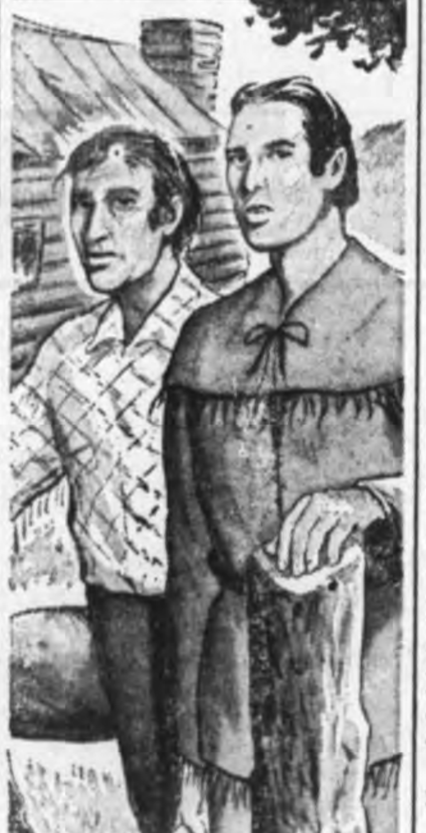
Next morning they were astir with the earliest streaks of dawn, eating their morning portion of hardtack as they moved downstream. At nine o'clock they heard the sound of an axe and presently they came upon a sizeable clearing. Five log houses attested to the place being more than the work of a single family while corn shocks indicated that it was of sufficient age to be productive.

"Looks like this might be it," Will remarked, trying to keep his voice casual. "There were several families."

"Soon find out," Kirby grunted.

A bearded man at the edge of the woodland had dropped his axe and stood holding a rifle as he stared at them. Kirby hailed him promptly. "Howdy, brother! Got a family in these parts name of Bolden?"

The man dropped the butt of his rifle to the ground and waved a hand in greeting. "Right over thar. Yo' kinda have yore choice o' two lots of 'em. Last two cabins."



Weariness was in his eyes. "It's your life, son. When you're ready, take her and make her happy the best way yo' can."

"Mary's folks and her uncle's family," Will murmured.

The settler had already gone back to his axe, leaving the newcomers to cross toward the cabins he had indicated. As they approached the nearer one the door opened and young Dan Bolden came out. A year had made a difference in the boy, the hard life apparently agreeing with him.

Will and Mary Enjoy Another Happy Reunion

"Hi there, feller," he greeted. "What yo' doin' in these parts?"

"Scouting," Will said briefly. "Meet Bullhead Kirby, boss riverman, Indian scout and general best all-around man in the territory."

The boy shook hands with Kirby, then jerked a thumb toward the second cabin. "I reckon yo'll find her there," he said.

"Howdy, Morgan," Charles Bolden said quietly. "I heard yo' talkin' to Danny. Come in and set."

He stood aside to permit Will to enter. "The lass'll be along in a minute or so. What's the news of this here army governor St. Clair's takin' north? Do yo' reckon it'll end our troubles?"

Will shook his head, trying to concentrate on the question while his pulses beat until he was certain Charles Bolden could hear the thump. "It's a big army," he said finally, "but I'm not too optimistic about it. Too many green militiamen and not enough training in any kind of tactics."

The man's face fell but before Will could say anything more there was the creak of hinges at the rear of the cabin and Mary appeared in the doorway. "Hello," she said almost shyly. "I didn't expect to see you around here."

The afternoon was a continuing disappointment to Will Morgan. During all the long months that he had planned for this meeting his imagination had always brought pictures of a secluded spot where he and Mary could say all the things which had been left unsaid. Now he was forced to hold the reunion in the midst of a company of people all highly excited over the news of St. Clair's advance. The neighbors found all sorts of excuses to drop in at the Bolden cabin and when supper time came Will had not been able to exchange a half dozen words with the girl.

Supper was served in the open before the Bolden home, the entire settlement gathering for an impromptu celebration.

Kirby enjoyed himself hugely, quite amused by the joke on Morgan. He spun tall tales of the river for Dan Bolden and the other boys, working in an occasional quip which no one but Will seemed to understand. For her part Mary remained discreetly silent, apparently unaware of Morgan's disappointment.

Finally the last stomach was filled and Kirby had told his last anecdote. By that time darkness had fallen and the pioneers began to drift away to their own cabins, aware that there was plenty of work ahead for the next day. It was then that Mrs. Bolden broke the subject of accommodations for the night.

"Yo're plumb welcome to stay in our cabin if yo' ain't partickler about room," she said with evident embarrassment. "We might be a mite crowded but I reckon . . ."

"Don't figger on us," Kirby interrupted. "We're used to campin' under the trees. No sense in takin' up cabin space."

No one argued very much about it. The Boldens went ahead with the business of clearing up and the visitors pitched a rude camp at the edge of the clearing behind the cabin. Will said nothing and it was not until they were ready for the night that Kirby offered a comment. Then it was merely a dry reminder. "Ye ain't got no time to kick around, Will. Remember we got to head back tomorrow."

Will was spared a reply as footsteps among the dead leaves told him that his luck was changing. Out of the gloom Mary's voice came low but challenging. "Little too early to turn in yet, ain't it? Want to take a walk?"

The girl took his arm and swung in beside him, moving along through the trees. "Seems to me we're always takin' walks," she laughed. "I wonder how this one is goin' to turn out?"

Marriage Plans Made, Will Begins Return

"That depends on you," he told her, his lips close to her ear.

She did not reply, merely giving his arm a gentle pressure as they walked along. Presently he saw the gleam of water ahead and laughed aloud. "Gosh! You're not taking me down here to shove me in again, are you? It wasn't so bad when the weather was warm but these October evenings are a bit crisp for that sort of thing."

"Silly!" she retorted. "I didn't push you in last time, did I?"

"In love—yes. Mary, I came out here to ask you to marry me—just as soon as possible. Will you do it?"

Her reply was to wrap both arms about his neck, her sudden flare of passion almost taking his breath.

Moments ticked away as they stood there, locked in a fierce embrace which sent his last doubts flying. Then she released herself and drew him along toward the stream. "We'll set here under this big tree," she said. "It's a nice place to come when yo' want to be alone."

"Suits me fine," he replied, taking her in his arms again.

The sound of activity in the clearing awakened Morgan next morning. Kirby was already gone from the little camp at the edge of the forest. Will took time only for a quick wash in the creek, then he headed directly for the Bolden cabin. Time was getting short and he had several bits of business to attend to. Taking heart from the knowledge of Mary's affection he went right to the root of the matter when he came face to face with Charles Bolden.

"I want to marry your daughter, sir," he said bluntly. "I want to come back here for her when the campaign is over—and take her back to the river. Is it all right with you?"

The older man smiled at the bluntness of it. "I reckon it's all right," he agreed slowly. "But why the river? We got a right nice little settlement comin' along here and we could use another good man."

Will grinned happily and took the other man's outstretched hand. "That's great! I'd like to . . ." He stopped and became more serious as he realized that Bolden had asked him a question. "I just think I can make her a better home, back there," he said slowly.

Charles Bolden nodded, some of the weariness showing in his eyes once more. "It's your life, son. When you're ready take her and make her happy the best way yo' can. When do yo' expect to be back?"

"Hard to say. I'll be here just as soon as I can get away. . . . It'd be nice if you could find a parson so we could have the wedding here."

The journey back to St. Clair's new fort was made in almost complete silence. Will was too full of memories to have any desire for conversation and Kirby respected his thoughts. They traveled swiftly, Morgan's woodcraft now having reached a point where he needed little or no help from the older man in working through the brush. They were within five miles of the fort when both halted abruptly, rifles raised and ready. There was a moment's complete silence, then Kirby grunted amusedly. A fat white man was moving silently through the trees just ahead of them.

"Tobe Ansley," Will chuckled.

Kirby shouted a greeting and Ansley swung around to face them. His clothing was even dirtier than usual, its tears indicating that he had been through some rough country. Kirby took note of the fact. "Looks like ye've been out fightin' a war all by yerself, To'

Bible Comment:

Proverbs Can Be Foundation for World Harmony

THE dictionary defines harmony as "concord or agreement in facts, opinions, manners, interests, etc." But many of the passages of the Book of Proverbs have to do with getting on with angry and disagreeable people, with whose opinions one isn't likely to have much in common.

In general, the basic advice is that if other people act meanly toward you, don't be nasty yourself. If a man is angry with you, that's the time to control your own temper. "A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger." "Make no friendship with an angry man; and with a furious man thou shalt not go; lest thou learn his ways and get a snare to thy soul." Proverbs that recall Paul's counsel, "As much as lieth in you live peaceably with all men." There are limits even to the practice of forbearance, but one is wise to keep the boundary very wide.

In a similar spirit, the Proverbs stress the wisdom of regulating one's own life with good sense, and not according to what others are doing. Envy of others, of their power, wealth, success, or some advantage that they seem to possess, can create disharmony in one's own soul. Peace of mind is of the very essence of inward harmony, and there can be no peace of mind where envy and bitterness are harbored.

In our personal lives and relationships we can do much to avoid people who don't like us, or who are unfriendly towards us. But in the larger relationships—social and international—we are confronted with situations which we must accept as they are. They involve sharp differences, if not conflicts, in ideas and ideals, ways and manners. Yet, unless we can achieve some measure of good will, tolerance, and forbearance, dark tragedy looms again upon the nations.

The proverbs and the counsels that make for wisdom and harmonious living in individual lives ought to be watchwords in the affairs of the nation, and in the dealings of nations with one another.

Scientists claim they have discovered something 4,000 times sweeter than sugar. As yet, we have been unable to get her phone number.

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN TO BE RELEASED

More than 3,600 Alabama National Guardsmen in the 3st (Dixie) Infantry Division stationed at Camp Atterbury, Indiana, will be released by January 15, according to Commanding General A. G. Paxton.

The 31st, made of Alabama and Mississippi National Guardsmen, was inducted into federal service in January, 1951.

Paxton said a point system similar to that used at the end of World War II had been set up to allow men who have been on active duty involuntarily for 19 months to be released.

Points will be given on the basis of extent of service, type of service and dependents. Priority also will be given men normally engaged in seasonal occupations, teachers, and individuals re-entering colleges, Paxton said.

Paxton said the 31st National Guard Division will be reorganized in January, 1953.

-1195 extra pounds of it!

—to cut your costs, increase your profits!

GMC engineering brings you this great new Model 470 highway tractor that hauls up to 1,195 pounds more cargo than any other vehicle in the 45,000 gross weight class.

Here are the reasons why. It will pay you to study them carefully.

Sensational new engine. Model 470 is powered by GMC's new 145 h.p. valve-in-head "302" engine — the most powerful gasoline engine for its weight in truck history.

Maximum power-to-weight ratio. The "302" engine weighs as much as 500 pounds less than other engines of comparable power, due to new high efficiency design.

Highest Compression—7.2 to 1—excels any other standard gasoline truck engine, accelerates faster. Delivers full power at an easy-stroking 3,200 r.p.m.

More ton-miles per gallon—less dead weight in engine and chassis means more profit in every mile.

Highest payload capacity—upwards of one-half ton greater than any other tractor of the same GCW rating.

Price—the biggest surprise of all. Compare the price you have to pay for this pace-setting GMC against the field. Nowhere else will so little buy so much in a 3- to 4½-ton tractor.

Why not come in and see for yourself!

THE JOINT OPERATION OF GOODNESS AND POWER

"He telleth the number of the stars, and calleth them all by their names. He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up all their wounds." Psalm. 147:3-4.

An incident occurred a few years ago that may illustrate the meaning of this passage. A St. Louis businessman was a member of a fishing club that had its headquarters on one of the limpid Wisconsin lakes. He would often take a night train from his home city, spend the next day on the lake, returning home the following night. On one of his summer trips he took his little seven-year-old son along with him. Arriving at their destination in the early morning, they breakfasted at the club house, and then proceeded to the day's sport.

The father put the little son in the rear end of the boat and pushed out from the bank. It was a new experience for the boy, and naturally he felt uneasy about it. In a moment the child asked, "Father, is this water over my head?" "Yes sonny, it's over your head." A bit later came another question, "Father, is it over your head?" "Yes, it's over my head, too." A little farther out the little fellow gazed down at the far-away bottom of that pellucid lake, and all a-tremble, cried, "Father, is this water over God's head?" "No, my boy, you needn't be afraid. It's not over God's head."

In these stormy times people all over the world are wondering if God himself is equal to the emergency. The answer comes, based on the accumulated teaching of Holy Writ: "God is a Spirit, infinite, eternal and unchangable, in his being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth."

History, divine revelation, and human experience, all combine to assure us that the Soverign God is still on his throne, and that all things will work together for good to them that love him. An ancient statesman, Isaiah by name who dared the threats of ruthless monarchs, challenged organized iniquity with the words, "I will trust, and not be afraid."

In our deep disquietude we find a note of cheer in a couplet from the pen of Ella Wheeler Wilcox:

"Be still, sad heart, and cease repining,
For behind the cloud is the sun still shining."

God, who directs the stars in their courses, still has us in mind. Therefore, we will not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea.

If they continue to increase the sizes of buses and trucks, locomotives will have to cross crossings cautiously.

An old settler with a long memory informs us that the wet stuff that fell in Montgomery last week was rain.

"I am getting ready to plant Rescue grass, Chapel Hill, of course, on about 20 acres. Some will be doctored with 10 pounds per acre of alfalfa and there is already a crop of reseeding crimson clover on the ground"—I. P. Johnson, Alabama College.

"Our champion Chapel Hill Rescue grass seed patch has a thick reseeding stand about two inches high now. It has been limed and fertilized for the fall" —Elvin Hill, Columbiana F. F. A. Chapter.

"We have found the severe drought did not stop our grass where reseeding crimson clover has been used for several years. Our cattle had a surplus of grazing although only 1 1-2 acres per head was allowed"—M. B. Bates, Vincent.

Over 800 acres of Chapel Hill Rescue will be planted in the next 30 days in Shelby County, and only 30 were planted last year!

And royally shouted these very "words":

"Hunter", fetch me a "Buck",
"Patridge" and "Hinds",
And kill me a "Duck" and
"Birds" of all kinds,
"Dates" and "Dewberries" and corn on the "Cobb"
My "Hardy" "Farmer" must yield,
And despite "Snow" and "Frost" and such "Good" "Beans"
from my "Field."

From the "Poole" at my "Fountain" "Fisher," "Spear" me some fishes,
While my "Butler" in his
"Green" apron awaits upon my wishes,
Take a "Partridge" and "Pickett"
and "Seale" in the flavor,
"Brown" it over the "Pitts" to that "Sharp" "Woods" savor.

"Baker" bake me a "Swann,"
"Salter", "Turner" and
"Spice",
And make "Crumbley" "Bunns"
"Nunn" could be nicer!
"Taylor" and "Weaver enrobe me,
"Barber" trim my "Curlee"
"Long" hair,
I must quickly go "Sample"
what "Cooks" and "Carvers" prepare!

"Carpenter" build in my "Stone"
"Hall" on the "Hill", Wooden tables of "Liveoak" and pine and of "Deal",
Deck the "Sides" with "Gay"
"flowers" both "Ruddy" and
"White",
And shine bright the "Potts" for my festive "Knight"!

"Page" now summon my "Brothers", the "Pope", the
"Abbott," and "Shaw",
"May" my "Nabors" for "Miles" respond to my call!

A nights lost sleep is the "Price"
and the "Cost"
Of this rhyming "Riddle"—
At least, well, almost!

14 POLIO CASES REPORTED LAST WEEK

The State Health Department says that 14 Alabama polio cases were reported last week, bringing the state's 1952 total to 136 cases.

It was the third highest total of the year, but the 1952 total through last week was far below the 617 cases reported for the same period in 1951.

The Health Department also said that burns of all types killed 24 persons in Alabama during May.

The department said 22 of the victims received fatal burns in home accidents. Only 12 deaths due to burns were reported in April.

MILDRED WHITE WALLACE

Mrs. Ada Bozeman had as her guests over the week end her sons C. E. Bozeman of Tuscaloosa, W. H. of Biloxi, Miss, W. J. of Siluria and Howard, now stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Flora Mae Bozeman has completed summer school and is now vacationing at Biloxi and other points in Mississippi.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Davis and fine young son of Anniston spent the week end with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Davis.

Lt. James Crawford, jet pilot de luxe, home for a few days relaxaction before jetting of for the far East.

An old married man seated in our office looking through the office window remarked upon seeing a "lady in peddle pushers" down town shopping, remarked: "Aint that a sight—just look—! I think women should stay out of parades, pants, politics and philosone man's opinion, however. Take it or leave it, ladies!

M. E. Smalley, who for a number of years lived in Columbiana and had a host of friends, now resides in Ft. Payne. Recently a rumor ran around Main to the effect that Mr. Smalley was critically ill . . . We are delighted to state that the rumor . . . like most rumors . . . was false, and that M. E. Smalley remains on his job as District Manager for Liberty National Life Insurance Company in Ft. Payne . . . and is doing quite well . . . thank you!

If you have not driven through the new Housing Project, you have missed seeing one of Columbiana's most attractive additions.

George Horn had a birthday all his own Tuesday . . . and a lot of folk wish for this happy-go-lucky fellow many more happy anniversaries. George is the best commercial neighbor we have ever had. He is never "too busy" to answer our "squawks" for this and that . . . and that's the kind of neighbor we like to have around.

THERE'S A JOKER IN THE CROWD!

"Bob Hope," and "Joe Miller" snwered "Here" at the first call of the role at the Signal Corps Organized Reserve Corps two week summer encampment at Camp Gordon, Georgia.

The officer in charge immediately declared the "gag rule" to be in effect. Limited debate discovered that Miller was not the Joe of jokebook fame, but Master Sergeant Joseph Miller from Jackson, Miss. He is pole line construction foreman of the 306th Signal Support Company, a reserve unit from Jackson.

Where there's Bob, there's Hope, and the soldier counterpart of the famous comedian, Sergeant Robert Hope from the 494th Signal Construction Company, Birmingham, Alabama, also reported for duty as a pole line construction specialist.

In the field of fun, Joe Miller and Bob Hope claim a distinctive reputation. As part of another team, famous for its reliable service to the country in time of national emergency, M/Sgt. Joseph Miller and Sgt. Robert Hope, citizen soldiers of the organized reserves learn to "Get the Message Through" for the U. S. Army Signal Corps as they train at Camp Gordon.

FACTS AND FIGURES

Dear Folks:

The Shelby County Fair Catalogue is now in your homes, and Columbiana citizens have the welcome mat out, just waiting for you to step on it. Make your arrangements to meet your friends here and share with us the local exhibits and the attractions on the Midway offered during the week.

There is a carnival like spirit in the air this morning. Everyone seems to be in the mood to close the summer out with a Merry-Go-Round of activities before settling down to a Fall routine. This spirit is almost as contagious as the Christmas Spirit. Everybody you meet is on the up and up and thats the way we like it!

In looking thru the "facts and figures" compiled for the Fair Catalogue, I find some interesting revelations, which may be of historic interest "25 Years From Now"— when energetic scribes begin browsing around thru these files to find out what you and I were doing— "away back when". So, briefly I am going to tabulate a few figures, for future reference about several of our incorporated towns in the county, and what they have to offer.

COLUMBIANA, County Seat:

Population: 1763. Modern fire and police protection. Fifty new homes have been constructed since the war. Sixty-six new low rental apartments have been completed. A new Methodist Church completed. A new Baptist Church now being constructed. An active Recreation Program featuring diversions for all age groups thru the summer months, Director Roy Mann. Valley Mills employs 180 people and is the largest industry. Columbiana Heading Mill employs 50; McCord Lumber Co. employs 20; B. L. Owen Lumber Co employs 11, Marshall Durbin employs 9.

Town officials include Mayor Wales W. Wallace Jr., and members of the Town Council are: Conrad M. Fowler, Arthur Wood, Luther Curlee, Elvin Hill, and Cecil Duke.

Water system has been enlarged and contracts have been signed bringing Natural Gas into the homes and commercial business houses. Adequate school facilities are offered. Free lunch program for underprivileged children are provided. A large per cent of all teachers in the county have obtained their degrees thereby raising the standard of education.

CALERA:

Calera's population registers 1361, according to 1950 census. Town officials include: Mayor R. E. Bowdon Jr., Councilmen, C. D. Cowart, J. W. Anderson, J. L. Hill, N. K. Blankenship, and R. L. Holcombe.

Many streets paved; natural gas distribution system has been installed; new City Hall built; new fire station; enlarging and expanding water supply now in progress — all mark civic improvement. Southern Cement Company, is largest industry, employing 50 people. Baptist denomination and Church of Christ members have constructed new buildings. L. & N. and Southern Railways run thru the town. Also Highways 31 and 25 furnish excellent transportation facilities. Good school and splendid bank. The Central State Bank serves Central Alabama, Roy Downs, President.

VINCENT:

City officials of Vincent include James H. Sharbutt, Mayor, Councilmen include: W. C. Browne, L. L. Carter, I. L. Sharbutt and T. C. Elliott. Population 1240; Chief industry, Southland Fashions, Inc., with 25 employees. Improvements include, a modern fire truck; a new steel jail in the City Hall; Two traffic lights over Highway 25. Water Works expanded. The Vincent school has the largest enrollment of any school in the county. Railroads thru the town include, Central of Georgia and Atlantic Coast Line, Highway 25 also serves this area.

MONTEVALLO:

Mayor—W. W. Wyatt; Councilmen: L. W. Wooten, F. P. Givhan, Sam Klotzman, M. L. Orr, Jr., and M. C. Jeter. Population, 2175. Many natural resources in the form of nearby deposits of limestone, coal and good timber lands. New homes show marked improvements in residential sections. A natural gas distribution system has been installed and a new City Hall built. Fifty low-rent housing units are under construction. Montevallo is the home of the beautiful Alabama College with average enrollment of 750. Strand Theatre, with Manager T. E. Watson, owner, is the most elaborate cinema house in the country. Merchants & Planters Bank, one of the oldest in the county. Southern Railroad serves the town, in its Selma-Rome division.

Excellent Highways, Bus service. Good connections to all poinst in State.

HARPERSVILLE:

The town of Harpersville lies in the center of the agricultural section of Shelby County. Two main highways run thru the town, No. 25 and the Florida Short Route. The town is 30 miles from Birmingham and 14 miles from Sylacauga. Its population numbers 475.

Town officials include Mayor: J. W. Donahoo. Councilmen: B. E. Morris, O. W. McCall, O. L. Baker, J. Alton Glaze, and Howard Minton.

HELENA:

The present citizens serving Helena as its "official family" include: Mayor, Floyd Naish and Councilmen: Luther Naish, T. S. Wallace, C. J. Hinds, Jack Johnsey and Louie Cates. Population 676.

Helena is located in western part of the county about 15 miles south of Birmingham. This section was first settled by Joseph Roy, a Tennessean who served under Andrew Jackson in the 1813-14 campaign against the Creek Indians, who came into this area about 1815. His neighbors moved into the Cahaba Valley from Tennessee, Georgia and South Carolina.

Principal industries of Helena are: Plantation Pipe Line Co. with 30 employees and Paramount Coal Company with 40 employees. The town of Helena has a low rent housing project, consisting of 26 units, now in the development stage. The L. & N. and A. C. L. Railroads furnish transportation facilities.

WILSONVILLE:

Wilsonville's City officials include: Mayor Jack Story and Councilmen: D. F. Bolton, J. C. Roper, L. H. Cosper, J. S. Hill, and V. J. Fulmer. Population 770. Wilsonville is the hub of Eastern part of Shelby County. A splendid farming section. In recent years, many new homes have been built and a new City Hall and Fire Department Building was erected in 1951. Splendid school facilities are available. Six new low rental units are in the devlopment stage. Wilsonville is served by Highway 25 and Southern Railway.

WILTON:

Present city officials include: Mayor, J. C. Gaddy and Councilmen: Edith Gregory, C. M. Broker, B. G. Rhodes, Grey Strother and Whitfield Moreland.

The population numbers 500. Two churches include Methodist and Baptist. Wilton has 2½ miles of paved streets and a beautiful City Hall. Southern Railway has a Junction located at Wilton and employs approximately 20 people in this area. Highway 25 also furnishes a splendid means for transportation.

. . . We are delighted to include in our ever widening list of subscribers, Harold Tinney, son of the late Mr. Billie Tinney, former resident of Columbiana, who now resides in Birmingham.

SPORT GOODS SALESMAN AT S. C. H. S. AUGUST 22

Get ready to "hit that line" Wildcats!

UP AND DOWN MAIN

. . . The Home Demonstration Club members with director, Marion Cotney, left Wednesday in a chartered bus for a weeks vacation in Florida. They will visit Laguna Beach, Florida, Panama City and other interesting towns before returning home.

. . . Mrs. Addye C. Head of Wilton, after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Head and Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Miller, in Columbiana, has returned to her home in Wilton. We enjoyed a visit with this friend of ours, whom we too seldom have the privilege of seeing and "over the cokes" it was good to turn Old Memory's Clock back and renew, even for a brief hour, the good times we used to share. Time truly brings its changes, but it is heartening to realize that "old" friends" remain the same, whether "here" or "there".

. . . George Starcher, Soil Conservationist by profession, commercial artist and poet for diversion, took down the new phone book last week, and decided he would find out "What's In A Name"— Read his poetic effusion elswhere in this paper, which he states, was inspired "by a summer evening, when nothing more diverting, than flipping thru the new phone book was on tap"—

. . . Jimmy McDow stopped us this morning and asked WHY we had not mentioned the Sheriff's Amendment to be voted on next November. That is, whether a Sheriff in Alabama may serve only four years, as the present law indicates, or six years. Now, Jimmy McDow evidently had NOT read the Reporter-Democrat last week, as we mentioned this very fact, front page, paragraph 2! (Dear Jimmy: All on earth we can do is 'write it'. It is up to you to read it. Then, vote as you deem best.)

. . . Mrs. J. A. Tucker, who is making a friend of every customer at the new Drive In Barbecue Place on the Calera-Columbiana Highway, is a delightful person to know. Before coming to Columbiana, Mrs. Tucker was a well known business woman of Birmingham, who operated Tuck's Beauty Shop for a number of years. Now, she is successfully filling a need here for a Drive In, and the most delectable Barbecue and Chicken Dinners are daily served as are short orders. Take this tip from me— Instead of "stewing" over whats going in or coming out of the stove, go to TUCK'S, just a mile from town, and enjoy the cuisine offered. You will make many friends there who have already decided this is the best thing to do. And, another thing, your favorite custard or pie is right on tap, to top off your order—plus ice cream, all kinds. Tuck's is, to make a long story short—"the place to go" for a real meal, or a snack, between meals. The Tuckers have reserved some plush chairs in our reading circle for 1952-53 so they can have the "Home Paper" to enjoy after the busy day is over. Thats another thing we like about the TUCKS—Natch!

. . . The Rev. and Mrs. Bill Riddle and children of Gadsden spent last week in Columbiana, as the guests of Mr. Riddle's parents, Judge and Mrs. L. B. Riddle.

. . . Dr. Sam Shafferman and Ann Shafferman of Birmingham spent Thursday in Columbiana. "Dr. Sam" pursuing his favorite past-time, fishing!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Clay Lester of Birmingham spent Thursday in Columbiana as guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Bearden.

J. R. McMillan Honored By Methodist Sunday School

Sunday morning J. R. McMillan, widely known civil engineer of Columbiana, was honored by officials and members of the Methodist Church during the Sunday School hour, when Superintendent Wales W. Wallace, Jr., paid a tribute of gratitude and appreciation to him for years of faithful services rendered as secretary of the Sunday School in Columbiana during thirteen consecutive years.

Mr. Wallace revealed the following facts: Mr. McMillan was born in Preston County, West Virginia, January 3, 1877, and attended the University of West Virginia for three and a half years. He left college in 1901 to accept a position with the United States Geological Survey where he was employed for ten years. During this time the work assigned Mr. McMillan took him to all parts of West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio North and South Carolina, Mississippi, and Puerto Rico where he remained six months.

Following his return to the states, he went back to Preston County and married Miss Daisy Smith, the daughter of a Methodist preacher, the Rev. W. G. Smith, who had been a minister for fifty years. Their marriage was solemnized on December 27, 1911, at Masontown, West Virginia.

In 1913, Mr. and Mrs. McMillan came to Shelby Springs where he engaged in farming. In 1920, he again took up his profession as a surveyor, and has been actively engaged in this work since that time.

Immediately after the McMillans came to Shelby County to make their future home, they joined the Methodist church in Shelby Springs; later (in 1923), moving their membership to the Methodist Church in Columbiana.

Prior to this union with the Church in Columbiana, Mr. Mcmillan told Mr. Wallace that he and his family each Sunday morning rode the Southern train to Columbiana from their home, in order to attend church services. .

Mr. McMillan's first assignment in the Methodist Sunday School was assistant superintendent of the Church School, which office he held during the tenure of Superintendents L. E. (Pete) Christian, E. H. Childs, and Karl C. Harrison. In 1939 Mr. McMillan became Secretary of the Sunday School and has faithfully kept the records since that time.

Church life in the McMillan family has not been just a Sunday event, an altar for prayer was daily observed in their home..

Mr. and Mrs. McMillan (who passed away in 1950) were parents of four children.. They were Warren, Margaret, Miriam, and Winifred. All are now married and their names are: Warren E. McMillan, Mrs. W. G. Kinsey, Mrs. J. C. Wilson and Mrs. Geo. C. Osborne.

He also has nine grandchildren.

Following Mr. Wallace's brief summary of Mr. McMillan's useful life in church, civic, educational, and cultural circles in the communities he has lived in — friends and members of the Methodist Church in Columbiana extended congratulations to him and expressed personal appreciation for his faithfulness and loyalty to the church of his choice.

. . . Miss Patricia Boykin of Birmingham is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Alvin Stinson and Mr. Stinson.

"Mr. Sellers" (formerly of Montevallo, now with Kinard Construction Company, operates one of the largest pieces of machinery we have watched in motion. It looks like a Ferris Weel with teeth on it . . . and what those teeth can't grab and throw out of its way . . . just hasn't been thought up yet. It digs a ditch quicker than we can write a sentence about it . . . When we saw Mr. Sellers he was leaving town to "dig some foundations for housing projects". He is a skilled workman and has done a splendid piece of work here and will continue to do so wherever he goes. That's the kind of fellow Mr. Sellers is . . . and that's the kind of a workman that makes the wheels keep turning. .

TREE PLANTING PROJECT FOR COLUMBIANA

Myrtle Miles is one of the most civic minded citizens Columbiana possesses. Not only civic minded, but alert to the advantages and improvements that could be made which would be a step forward into a more beautiful town. Miss Miles attended the Tree Meeting called by Jimmy Harrison last Monday night and is most enthusiastic over the possibilities of "Tree Planting" in our yards and along the streets.. Nothing could be more beautiful than tree-lined streets. Can't you just visualize yourselves walking under their friendly branches? Now, there is one thing heartening about this movement . . . and that is Myrtle Miles is interested . . . When that dynamo gets behind a project . . . it's bingo! So far as we are concerned, we are ready with our little pick and shovel to go digging . . . and plant trees down Magnolia Manor way . . . just any where the lady thinks a tree would grow. It is true that "Only God can make a tree" . . . but, anybody can plant one! Let's get busy on this forward looking movement and accelerate its momentum.

Judy Horn and Shirley Sims have returned from a delightful visit with Dona Whitten in Birmingham.

Mrs. Ralph Hunt, Sr., is convalescing from surgery at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Hunt, Jr., in Columbiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Rux Carter, Kathy, Nina and Judy Carter, are spending a weeks vacation in Florida. Next Saturday, Nina and Kathy, will celebrate their 4tth birthday anniversary.

Mr. Charlie Edwards will celebrate his 70th birthday next Saturday, August 25. A host of friends will be wishing for him "many happy returns of the day."

Elisabeth Hunt will be the attraction on August 20, as she marks another milestone off her calendar of days.

Dr. Crawford will be on the alert this week as he seeks some gift to offer Lucille Crawford on Saturday, August 23, which marks the passing of a birthday anniversary.

Mac Stinson will be receiving a cake with candles on it August 22, which will be happy birthday time for him in the home of his grandmother, Mrs. J. L. Isbell.

Luther McGiboney, Jr. was the recipient of birthday greetings on Tuesday of this week when he passed his 14 milestone.

. . . Leonard Rogers and his family have returned from Canada, and he tells me he drove 5,100 miles with no car trouble. This speaks well for that snazzy looking Nash he drives. Mr. Rogers states, Illinois has the best roads he found on this extensive tour, and that Alabama compared favorably with all the other states thru which he passed as far as roads are concerned.

Friends and patrons of Olin Jackson will be glad to learn he has reopened his radio repair shop in the Columbiana Western Auto Store. Olin has just returned from Puerto Rico where he has been for the past year with Uncle Sam's airmen.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl C. Harrison, Nancy, Carol, Helen and Tommy Harrison have returned from a two weeks vacation spent in Savannah Beach, Georgia.

Friends of Miss Marian Cotney will regret to learn of the sudden death of her father, which occurred Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Ward Bentley died Tuesday about noon after a long and painful illness. Funeral arrangements are pending.

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad M. Fowler were feted guests of the Gulf States Paper Corporation Thursday night and enjoyed a cruise on the Warrior River on the company's yacht.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Mann and Jane Mann are spending a few days in Alex City this week.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all of our neighbors and friends who were so thoughtful and kind to us during the illness and death of J. W. Hester. Words cannot express our deep appreciation. May God bless each and every one.

Mrs. J. W. Hester and Relatives

. . . Met a "Mr. Collins" this morning (Thursday) down from Birmingham looking for a farm in Shelby County. Mr. Collins wants to go into the livestock business and move to Shelby County. We hope he found what he was looking for.

. . . If every person runs for Sheriff next time, whom we "hear is running now" there will be a policeman on every block.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Alvin (Buddy) Bird announce the arrival of a little girl who was born August 12th.

Mrs. Myra Chandler spent the week end in Huntsville, the guest of Mrs. Starr who has been in Columbiana for several days visiting friends.

Jim and Sue Duke were home for the week end . . . and we are happy to say that Jim and Warren Duke will be released from military assignments in November. Here's hoping these attractive couples will find something to do here which will be attractive enough to warrant their future residence.

. . . Sunday morning the Baptist Choristers will sing "Crown Him Lord," by Norman and "Tarry In The Garden" by Peter Marshall, Katherine Rush Davis, soloist.

. . . The Choristers are most fortunate in having O. G. Dexter and Roy Mann join the Bass section. These new members will add much to this organization of musicians who have been working harmoniously together for the past four years.

. . . Grace Carter Ozley celebrated her sixth birthday anniversary Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Ozley entertained for her with a trip to "Kiddie Land" in Birmingham and a dinner at Joy Youngs with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wallace Jr. and Shirley Wallace as their guests.

. . . Mrs. A. M. Muncy has asked us to send to Mrs. O. B. Foster of Wilsonville Rt., "The Reporter-Democrat" as a birthday gift. So, tucked in this issue of the "home paper" go many good wishes to Mrs. Foster and we hope she will enjoy each edition of The County Paper which Mrs. Muncy so thoughtfully sent her.

Charles and Sue Spearman of Augusta, Georgia were greeting friends on Main during the past week end. They were guests of Mrs. Spearman and Mrs. McDonald.

Thanks to Cliff Evans for a renewal subscription to the Reporter-Democrat, which he states he "simply cannot do without" . . . That's the kind of "news" that sounds well to this little scribbler.

The cutest little "ball players" we saw at the recreation field last Friday evening, when Roy Mann, director, closed out the summer program with a commun ity night, were Ray Lyon, tw years old, weighing 40 pounds . . and petite and dainty Donn Pierce, engaged in a soft ball toss ing game, totally oblivious to 20 other people on the concrete are How they managed to "hang on without falling down and breakin a bone, is still an unsolved myster We cringed every time they mad a dash for the pigskin, but, i some miraculous way, they woul both come up hugging the ba so tightly no one could pry the loose. Hope Alvin Stinson got picture of these cherubs. We sug gest Ray Lyon as a mighty fin prospect for football 14 years fro this date. .

The art display for which tal ented Dot Lefkovits is responsibl drew possibly more favorable com ment than any other feature o fered last Friday night at th recreation finale . . . It is amazin what those pupils of Dot's hav accomplished this summer . . . an what's more . . . here is anothe suggestion . . . and we hope th schools will take action on it. Pro cure Dot Lefkovits as Art Instruc or and provide a studio . . no ma ter what has to be shifted aroun This opportunity of studying unde so able an instructor . . . shoul not be passed up . . . That is . . if Dot will consider the positio of course!

Sometimes this writer fears, to little stress is laid on the artist side of a child's school life. Th result . . . simply a routine . . humdrum existence that is not happy experience to be called bac into. With music, art, and, c course, athletic activities, on th daily program, that's a differen story, and a brighter tomorrow t get up and face for the kiddies.. A least, kind sirs, won't you thin it over?

Attest: Cecil Duke, Town Clerk
August 21, 28, 1952

There may be some question as to Harry Truman's talent as a piano player, some people may doubt his ability as a fisherman, but you will have to admit he's a champion coon skinner.—The Covington Dispatch.

In making good tea, it should be prepared quickly. And be sure the water is boiling in order to bring out the flavor of the tea. Allow one teaspoon of tea for each cup of boiling water. Cover closely and let leaves steep from three to five minutes, then strain.

Making of a King

Lesson for August 24, 1952

ONE of the most romantic and heroic figures known to song and story is that of David, King of Israel. Even when Christ came to earth, his fellow-countrymen could think of no grander title for him than "Son of David."

Dr. Foreman

Now David has been idealized almost beyond recognition. The whole story of his life (as seen in the Bible) reveals a man in whom strength and weakness, good and evil, were strangely mingled.

But that is not the main point here. The fact is, David made a strong and successful king; and if there was evil in him, it was more in the older man than in the young one. The story of how he became king is too long even to review here. Let us concentrate on that eloquent little one-sentence portrait of him drawn for a description of him by one of his friends when they both were young. It is found in I Sam. 16:18.

His Family and His Fun

THE BIG ARGUMENT for strong-David by his friend who was recommending him to the king, is that he was son of Jesse of Bethlehem.

A man's family is not an important fact. Men do not often reach high places merely on the reputation of their ancestors; but having the right parents will make a good start.

This is seriously true; for a man's heredity is what goes into the making of his bone and muscle, brain and nerves. The kind of place where a man lived as a boy, the kind of father he had, spells volumes about the man, even years later.

Can we forget that David was the son of a sheep-rancher, a boy who grew up working out of doors? That his parents were God-fearing people?

David's friend also mentioned his playing the harp. No doubt David did this as a recreation; he was no professional musician. But his avocation, his spare-time enjoyment, turned out to be the first rung on his climb to fame. It is important to know about any man: How does he spend his spare time?

His Brawn and His Brains

DAVID'S FRIEND, recommending him for a position in the royal court, spoke of him as a "mighty man of valor, and a man of war." This was an exaggeration, for David at that time had never seen military service, as the story in Samuel shows.

However, it was a good prophecy; and so far as the valor went, it had well been proved. A man who can take a bear by the beard and kill him, may be a bit rash but he is certainly no coward. And what muscles that young man must have had! Never think of David as a little boy when he killed Goliath the giant; he was an athlete better than most.

But David, unlike some athletes, did not need a manager. He was a "man of war," or at least the young friend who was describing him thought he was; and time proved him right.

Now it takes more than muscle to be a successful general. Almost anybody can be a private; and a man can rise somewhat in the ranks on sheer brute power. But when it comes to staff work, planning campaigns, handling large numbers of men and supplies, fitting everything together like a gigantic chess game with nations at stake, —that calls organizing ability, farsightedness, mental powers of a high order.

His Face, His Fluency, His Faith

THE UNKNOWN young man whose word-picture of David we are following, was like many young people in mixing together items that an older person would take up separately. Almost in one breath he reported that David was a good speaker, good-looking and godly.

But the best thing about him, his friend saved to the last: the Lord is with him. We make a mistake if we think that highly gifted, fortunate people can afford to get on without God. It is just these who need God most, if we can say that any one person needs God more than others.

Let us rather say that it is more important for the rest of us that the superior men and women among us be God-fearing, God-loving, God-obeying men and women, than that less important persons should be so.

Good Morning

Milton Bird

Sgt. Nathan W. Averytt Jr.
United States Army Hospital
Fort Knox, Kentucky
Dear Biggon:

News from the Old Street this week may be just the thing for a guy who is torn between an absence from duty and pretty nurses in white dresses. But tear yourself away from 'em, fellow, and come with me down the avenues and let's find out what's going on.

I went up to Lakeview last night to see Adam and Vera Wyatt. They've got a swell place up there, with about everything folks need to have an enjoyable evening. Frank Fulton went with me and he and Adam got as busy as two bees gawking the charms of a damp August night. The moon on the water was like a hunk of gold dust. It shivered in the damp misty air and pushed out long ragged streamers that danced on the water. And the stars were there, too, misty-eyed. And I was there, all eyes, helping the stars watch over the lovelies along the bank. You know, Biggon, I believe they've made the world too beautiful this year.

A guy has his troubles even on the home front. Things like one guy getting all the best of the breaks. Donnie Hall and I have been friends for months. We stood side by side the day he wouldn't stay in out of the rain and faced his mother's ire together. And the day he messed the posters up I went to bat for him in a big way. But today I found out that Donnie was the top-kick back here. I was out peddling special deliveries, in the hot sun, and passed by Donnie's house. He was out there in the shade, up to his neck in some sort of game with LeAnne and Dede Rush, Deborah Battle, Deetsie Spires, Paula and Susan Ray. Well, it was just a case of one guy getting all the ratings, and another catching the dirty details. If you're down this way anytime soon look us up. You'll find Sergeant Hall in his cool front yard surrounded by a flock of dimpled lovelies, and Private Bird will be around somewhere up to his ears in some crazy detail.

But a guy has his big moments too. And sometimes they come in the strangest ways. Like buying beans for instance. I don't like beans. I guess I still remember hoeing 'em, barefooted, under a frazzled straw hat, with the washhole dancing in my brain. Our garden was so full of rocks folks used to coax mad dogs up there so they'd have plenty of rocks to kill 'em. And I think every rock on the hill, at one time or another, bounded off the edge of my hoe and hit my ankle. But beans are different now. Every one you see is nestled in the arctic air of the refrigerator counters along Main. Every store has them. But, somehow, every Friday I wind up at Arthur Wood's Place in front of the beans, waiting for Mrs. Wood to weigh me up two pounds, and peeking out of the corner of my eye toward the grocery counter. For that's where Betty Rose Wood stays, and Betty is as pretty as a summer day. I pay around sixty cents for beans, and Betty throws in a big smile for boot, and suddenly I'm feeling like I got a three-day pass with enough money for transportation to town and a little over to spend on the girls.

Peggy Perry is working for Ellis and Fowler now. Tura Gantous went to the big town and Peggy came in with Lilla Bristow. I wouldn't advise a guy to get in dutch with his tall-hatted uncle, but if you do don't piddle away any time with no provost marshal. Get all your good characteristics together in one wad and head this way. It'll be worth a hitch in the hoose-gow just to sit and look at this girl while Bully and Mr. Ellis disentangle your predicament.

Barbara Walton Cutler is staying with her folks, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Walton, while Bill is over the pond. I slip package notices in Barbara's box every morning so she'll have to come to the window. When a guy gets my age he learns a thousand little ways of hanging pretty pictures in the windows of his day.

I don't know how long this mess is gonna last, Biggon. Maybe not too long, but even a guy like me, pushing eighty and with one war already made, feels a funny feeling down his spine every time Maude Simmons comes in to mail her letters. Will Page and Uncle Jim Kirkland and I dodge her just like you did that sergeant at basic. So today I got to thinking. Suppose they did come up with 34 393 008 again, figuring maybe that they could make a pretty fair 1952 sport job out of an old beat up 1892 model. Well, I'd have to have some pretty gals to keep the honey-bee mail coming. So I decided I'd like to wait around three more years— you can wait until the time suits you, can't you?—and then Myra Bentley and Lucretia Owen and Joan Nichols would be just right for sending those letters that drip honey all over the place.

The weather is still hot here. But it hasn't got a chance with those teen-age bundles of calico who look as fresh and delightful as April rain in summer clother they wear. And guys like Deward and Howell Horn and Earl Riley and Chubby McGhee aren't exactly crying in their green-spots about it either. Hilly King and Fat Boy Sims were swapping words with me at the window when one came in yesterday. Hilly swallowed his bubblegum and Fat Boy dropped a sack of eggs that splattered on the floor. But somewhere back in history's pages some gink learned to uncough his bubblegum in a miraculous fashion, and a little thing like getting their composure back in a jiffy has been standard equipment for little boys ever since. Hilly looked the situation over. His eyes were wide. They reminded me of other eyes I have seen, that were helping little ears listen for the sound of reindeer feet on the roof. But he had uncoughed his bubblegum in an unconscionable manner. "Oh," he said, his composure a thing to behold, "what pretty shoes you're wearing."

KEEP AMERICA GREEN
...and you'll keep America strong

AMERICA is growing trees for its citizens to use and to enjoy. Her forests, and the industries they supply, produce 44 percent of the world's lumber, 43 percent of the world's pulp and paper and 58 percent of its plywood. If protected from fire, these forests will continue to produce the wood 150 million Americans need. Forest fire prevention is everybody's job. Always be careful with fire — avoid setting the woods on fire!

The American Forest Products Industries, Inc., reports that after more than a century of use Alabama's commercial forests are producing new crops of trees at a rate almost one-third faster than the national average.

WHAT ABOUT THE DOWN COW?

Q: What causes cows to go down?

A: There are several causes; among them are leukemia, acetonemia, milk fever, "hardware disease", and nutritional deficiencies. Or the trouble may stem from fractured bones, nerve injuries and various poisons from infections and food sources.

Q: Are these diseases very deadly?

A: Most of them can prove fatal.

Q: What should the owner do if a cow goes down?

A: His first step should be to call a veterinarian, so the trouble can be diagnosed and corrective treatment started. While waiting for professional help it's a good idea to cover the cow with warm, heavy blankets, because in most of these cases the cow's temperature usually drops. This is especially true of milk fever. Keeping her warm helps her chance for recovery. Do not try to move the cow as it may lead to further injury and complications.

Q: Is there any advance warning that a cow is about to go down?

A: In milk fever, the cow often looks dull and doesn't like to move around. In leukemia, there may be a swelling of the lymph glands in the neck, general weakness, loss of appetite and a wasting away. "Hardware disease" is marked by a loss of appetite, grunting and other symptoms.

Q: How successful is treatment?

A: It depends on the individual case and how quickly treatment is started. Modern techniques are now saving many down cows which would have been considered hopeless cases a few years ago.

OAT VARIETIES FOR GRAIN PRODUCTION

The best oat varieties for grain production in Alabama are Anderson, Arlington, De Soto, and Victor grain 48-93, according to API Agricultural Experiment Station tests.

All of these varieties have some susceptibility to helminthosporium blight. However, their average yields over several years of testing have been higher than the yields of other varieties in the same experiments. An additional advanage of these varieties is that they have a higher degree of resistance to lodging or falling over than do other varieties tested.

Yield differences in favor of the varieties named were not as large in southern Alabama as in northern and central Alabama.

DELICIOUS HONEY IS ON PLENTIFUL LIST

Honey is on the plentiful list this year, and because of the large supply, handlers, wholesalers, retailers and others are promoting a campaign to increase its sale.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and other agricultural agencies are cooperating in the program to acquaint people with the good buy in honey. They are encouraging increased use of honey in homes, restaurants, school lunch programs, public food serving institutions, and other food outlets.

"The food trade and all agencies who will assist in the program to increase honey consumption are alerted for emphasis on a special merchandising campaign during the month of October," advises A. Jones, API Extension marketing specialist. "However, no one need wait until then to use more of this delicious and nutritious food since an abundant supply is available now."

If you wish to use less eggs in a cake, add one-half teaspoon of baking powder for each egg white omitted.

NEW WEAPON AGAINST CECAL COCCIDIOSIS

Alabama broiler growers have another weapon to use in their fight against cecal coccidiosis, a costly disease of growing chicks.

John Weeks, API Extension poultryman, says a vaccine has recently been put on the market that will immunize chicks against the disease at an early age and at small cost.

The vaccine is fed to the chicks in a wet mash when they are three days old. And the chicks develop a very mild case of coccidiosis 14 days later. At this time they are treated with a sulfa drug. By the time chicks are 28 days old, they have a solid immunity to cecal coccidiosis.

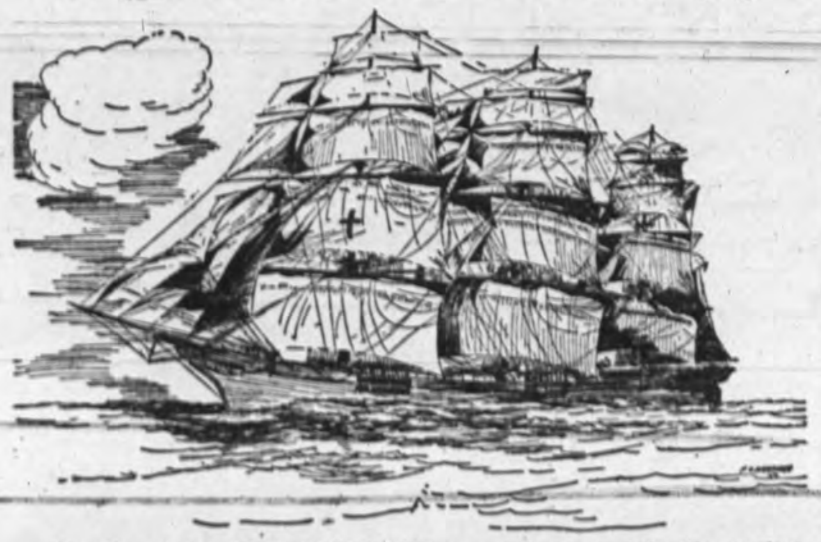
A Famous American Ship



Sketch of the DREADNOUGHT, most famous Atlantic packet, whose record passage across the Atlantic made in 1859 still stands, according to the American Merchant Marine Institute. Her best passage between New York and Liverpool was 13 days, 8 hours, a far cry from the 3 day, 10 hour record established by the new superliner UNITED STATES. For over a decade the DREADNOUGHT was the champion of the Atlantic Ocean before she was shifted to other services. Her proud skipper, Capt. Samuel Samuels, was a national hero, the ideal of the Yankee tar, writes W. L. Marvin in his book "The American Merchant Marine." The DREADNOUGHT lived up to her name in no uncertain manner. She gained a reputation for sailing with full canvass in the worst weather, day and night.

SAVE VITAMIN, COVER MILK WHILE HEATING

Keeping milk covered while heating helps save reboflavin, an important B-vitamin.

Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, explains that riboflavin is destroyed easily by light and that this destruction is hastened by heat. Tests show that milk boiled in the light lost considerable riboflavin, but milk boiled in the dark lost very little.

Miss Hulsey believes that it is important for the housewife to take every precaution against loss of this vitamin in milk, because milk is the food on which children and adults depend for most of the riboflavin they need for best health.

GIVING FURNITURE AN OILED FINISH

It just takes a little work to give a piece of furniture an oiled finish that won't show spots or scratches.

First, remove all dust and dirt. Then brush on a coat of finish made by mixing two parts boiled linseed oil and one part turpentine. Wipe off all excess oil with a clean cloth. Remember to clean all crevices, otherwise the oil will harden and will have to be removed with varnish remover.

Alice Peavy, API Extension home management specialist, says that after this job is done, rub finish for five to 15 minutes, or until a hard, lustrious surface results. Do this at intervals of not less than two days until all dull spots disappear.

GET-TOUGH POLICY AGAINST CATTLE RUSTLERS

State Department of Agriculture officials have taken the first step in a statewide get-tough policy against cattle rustlers.

Agriculture Department officials met with sheriffs, solicitors and cattlemen to seek their fullest cooperation in prosecuting persons indicted for cow theft.

State Farm Commissioner Frank Stewart said about 75 persons attended the special meeting, first organized effort ever launched in Alabama against cattle rustlers. Inspectors in the Montgomery meeting said 15 to 20 new cases were being reported every week.

The world is full of willing people; some willing to work, the rest willing to let them.

FAMILY PHYSICIANS TO MEET

The Alabama Academy of General Practice will hold its fifth post-graduate seminar at the Medical College, Birmingham, on August 20-21. The Academy, which is made up of family physicians, has as one of its aims the continuation of medical study by the practicing physician. Thus the doctor can keep abreast of new developments and thereby serve his patients better.

Each member of the Academy must have one hundred and fifty hours of postgraduate study in each three year periods, and fifty of these must be formal study such as that sponsored by the Medical College in this Seminar. The other one-hundred hours may be attained through attendance at scientific lectures such as those given at County Medical Society meetings. The Academy is the only medical organization which has such a requirement for continued membership.

The Seminar on the 20th and 21st will be under the auspices of the Medical College of Alabama, and the program will include dermatology, pediatrics, fractures, physical medicine, and anemias.

Mr. Leo E. Brown, Public Relations Director of the American Medical Association, Chicago, will be the guest speaker at the banquet on the evening of August 20. Mr. Brown's subject will be "Winning Ways With Patients".

Some one hundred general practitioners are expected to attend the seminar.

TRAFFIC SAFETY IMPROVING

Alabama's 1951 traffic safety record was a big improvement over 1950, according to the National Safety Council.

The state had 822 traffic fatalities, according to the council's annual inventory. The figure ranked 42nd in the nation and sixth in its own classification of states.

In 1950 ,the state ranked 42nd nationally and 11th sectionally.

The state's 1951 death rate was 10.9 per 100 million miles traveled, as compared with 12.4 in 1950.

DOG LOST

On Wednesday morning, August 13, I lost a redbone hound on Yellow Leaf Creek between the Jackson Springs and Westover road and north of the Muncy Place. When last heard he was trailing up Dry Creek some 2½ or 3 miles from the Muncey Place and was going in the direction of Chelsea.

This dog is shy of strangers and I doubt if anybody can catch him. If anyone happens to see the dog straying around anywhere and will let me know I can probably find him if I can get in the vicinity two or three hours after he is seen. Any help in this matter will be greatly appreciated.

THE BIRMINGHAM POST-HERALD CALLS FOR 'IKE' TO GET GOING

In an editorial which appeared in Tuesday's edition of Birmingham Post-Herald, the editor asks this question: "Ike, When Do We Start?"

Some weeks before the Democratic Convention met in Chicago, the Post.Herald and the News editorially endorsed Gen. Ike Eisenhower for President, a rather premature announcement, but both papers are sticking by their guns, or have been. However, the morning's Post-Herald is calling for the General to "come out fighting" and judging from their own statement, they seem a bit discouraged over the General's reluctance to speed up action.

The article states as follows: "We are continuing our support, unshaken in our faith in General Eisenhower's qualifications, but we must admit that Ike has not done anything lately to fortify our belief that he can win."

"We still cling to the hope that when he does start campaigning, he will come out swinging and that he will hit hard. If he doesn't, he might as well concede defeat and go back to the cloisters of Columbia University or the tranquility of his Pennsylvania farm."

"Ike is running like a dry creek."

Those statements do not sound very confident as to the outcome of the presidential campaign, and whats more, we still believe Adlai Stevenson and John S. Sparkman will take their seats on Capitol Hill, after January 1953.

Gen. Eisenhower is a great General, but that does not mean he would be a successful executive in the president's chair, and so far, as much as we admire the General, he has neither done nor said anything to convince us that he, rather than Adlai Stevenson, is the Skipper we need to pilot us thru the troubled shoals that lie ahead. In other words, I'll still take "Steve and the Donkey" in preference to "Ike and the Elephant".

DR. TRAVIS SHELTON LEAVES FOR TEXAS

Travis Shelton, life long friend, is now eligible to be called "Dr." Travis Shelton. He has just received his Doctorate from Columbia University, and will leave next week for his new position in Dallas, Texas, as Assistant Director of Music in Texas A. & M. University, Choral Division.

We deeply appreciated his visit with us Wednesday. There were so many wonderfully fine times to recall which we have enjoyed together while travelling Melody Lane, and although regretting to say "Goodbye" for now, we realized many months ago, that Travis Shelton would never return to Alabama after completing his musical course in Columbia. The field in which he had excelled in Alabama, was far too small for his future dreams and plans. So, we could only extend him our hearts best wishes as he left, knowing full well that "Dr. Travis Shelton" was destined for the top rung of the ladder of fame, but always for us, he would remain, the same loyal friend we have always had, and called "Trav" for short, and thats something very priceless to realize in a friend and still more valuable to call your very own possession!

Calera Civitans Sponsor Labor Day Festivities

The Civitan Club of Calera extends a cordial invitation to Shelby County people to join them this year in the Labor Day celebration which will take the form of a Barbecue Dinner and Baseball games for entertainment.

The Barbecue Dinner is being prepared under a professional "Barbe-cuer"! The plates will be sold at $1.25 per. The proceeds will go into the scholarship fund which is being set up by this club to provide a college education for some underprivileged students of Calera High, whose ambitions and grades warrant this "helping hand"....

Baseball games between Calera and Isabella, and a Birmingham team will be played morning and afternoon.

The Barbecue dinner will be served at the High School from 12 until 2 P. M., according to Chairman of the Board of Directors W. N. Minor. Julius Pilgreen is President of the Civitan Club and many worthwhile undertakings have been sponsored during his official term of office, none more worthy, in the opinion of this writer, than the one above mentioned for which Labor Day celebration will be sponsored this year.

This event is the only one reported to this office in Shelby County scheduled for Labor Day, and should draw a huge crowd.

REV. CURTIS BEAN

REV. CURTIS BEAN RESIGNS ACCEPTS CHAPLAIN POSITION

The Rev. Curtis Bean resigned from the Baptist Church as its pastor, Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour and will reenter the U. S. Air Force as Chaplain on October 6.

Mr. Bean, after finishing the Louisville Seminary in May, was called to serve the Columbiana Baptist Church and during the few months this widely beloved minister has been in Columbiana, the new church, long contemplated has been started and is progressing satisfactorily with much enthusiasm shown by all the members to go forward in the completion of the Education Building.

Mr. Bean's resignation was regretfully accepted, after hearing the young minister express his position and sincere conviction that he "felt he should return to this work."

The following members of the church were appointed as a pulpit committee who will be responsible for guest pastors until a regular minister is called. They include: N. A. Jones, Arthur Wood, Edwin Rush, Mrs. E. M. Young and Maggie Powell.

FUNERAL RITES FOR HOYT A. EDMONDSON

Funeral services were conducted for Hoyt A. Edmondson, age 33, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Edmondson of Columbiana, Tuesday afternoon, August 26, from Bolton Chapel. The Rev. Curtis Bean of the Baptist Church officiating.

Mr. Edmondson was killed in a truck accident which occurred on Highway 91 on August 24. Occupants of the truck involved also included injury and hospitalization for Martha Roberson, Allan Harris and Agnes Harris, residents of Columbiana.

Mr. Edmondson is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Edmondson, one sister, Ann Edmondson and one brother, Charles Henry Edmondson.

MRS. E. R. POPE PASSES IN TALLADEGA

Mrs. E. R. Pope, age 78, passed away at her home in Talladega August 24. She was a former resident of Wilsonville, and the wife of the late J. F. Pope of that town.

Mrs. Pope was widely recognized for her success as a teacher and as a religious figure was widely beloved in Talladega. It was when one of the members of the First Baptist Church called at her home to take her to Sunday School last Sunday, that her body was found.

Friends had been entertained in her hospitable home the night before and she was apparently in excellent health.

Surviving Mrs. Pope are three sons, Dr. Reeves Pope of Plant City, Florida; Elgin Pope of Morristown, Tennessee; and Leon Pope of Montgomery; three daughters, Mrs. J. O. Phillips of Morristown, Tenn.; Mrs. L. H. Baer of Marion and Mrs. Don Miller of Birmingham; a brother, Judge Henry Reeves of LaGrange, Georgia.

Shown above are the Shelby County P. T. A. Council members and State Representatives who attended the School of Instruction conducted by the Shelby County Council of Parents and Teachers, held at the Shelby County High School in Columbiana on July 30.

Following the registration and luncheon, Study Groups were conducted on these subjects: "Parliamentary Procedure - Fundamentals of Organization", Leader, Mrs. Don Beavers; Consultant, Mrs. John Bruce; "Parent-Teacher Magazine Promotion - Parent Education Study Groups - Secretarial Work", Leader, Mrs. Homer Walton, Consultant, Mrs. Harry Nelson and "Program Planning," Leader, Mrs. Zollie Cowart, Jr., Consultant, Mrs. H. O. Crostwaite. auditorium at 2:30 o'clock, with Mrs. R. M. Denty, Jr., President of the Council, presiding. After group singing, Mrs. John Bruce, Vice-President of District V addressed the group.

Who Will Shelby County's Maid Of Cotton Be For 1952?

Mildred White Wallace

"Who will wear Shelby County's Maid Of Cotton Crown?"

Well, that question has been going the rounds for several weeks and we, like other folk, have been wondering why we had heard nothing from the "fair ladies of our land" regarding this annual event.

This fact, sent us scurrying around this morning in an attempt to find out who's who, and when we can present our contestants. So far, here is the line up and all the information we could procure.

DORIS EDWARDS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tillman Edwards of Vincent will be the entry from Klein Home Demonstration Club.

Miss Edwards is an attractive brunette and a member of the student body of Jacksonville State Teachers College.

HAZEL DAVIDSON has been chosen by the Siluria-Alabaster Home Demonstration Club to represent them on this occasion.

MARTHA MORROW, Thompson High graduate and a student at Howard College has been entered from Helena.

FAYE WILSON, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Wilson of Columbiana, is the choice of the Columbiana Home Demonstration Club and they are sponsoring her entrance. Miss Wilson is a beauteous blonde and a student of secretarial science in Birmingham.

PEGGY PERRY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Perry, has been chosen by the Culture Club as its representative. Miss Perry will enter Judson College in September. She is a graduate of Shelby County High School.

MARCIA GAYLE BUCK, of Chelsea, a popular co-ed of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, is the entry of the Vignette Club of Columbiana. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray S. Buck, and is specializing in Secretarial training as her vocation. Miss Buck is a former graduate of S. C. H .S.

VILLA PEARL BENTLEY, lovely daughter of Mr. Ward Bentley of Columbiana is the choice of the Kiwanis Club in Columbiana. Miss Bentley is a graduate of Alabama College and by profession, a Medical Technician. She is, at present a member of the Child Welfare Department's group of Case Workers, having been called from her professional activities in Sylacauga, on account of the critical illness and death of her mother.

Miss Bentley, in addition to the above mentioned profession, is a talented musician and a member of the Baptist Choir in Columbiana.

These paragraphs are certainly lacking in details, but evidently, somebody forgot about this annual event, or the time slipped up on them. There must be some reason for this delay, for no other county we know anything about has as many pretty girls as Shelby county, and certainly we are known for our COTTON CROPS, and here we are right at the last minute with very few entries, and the contest to be decided Friday night!

Hope some more lovelies get in this beauty parade!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LEADER VISITS COLUMBIANA

Judge Joseph Carthel of Montgomery, Secretary of the Alabama Council of Religious Education, was a visitor in Columbiana, Monday. He came to arouse an interest on the part of Sunday School workers in having the general Sunday School organization restored in Shelby County.

ALABAMA COLLEGE PLANS OPENING

The formal opening of Alabama College for the session of 1927-28 will be held Monday, September 12, with the strongest faculty in its history, in the opinion of O. C. Carmichael, President.

There is every indication that the enrollment will be the largest ever recorded. For weeks the dormitories have been filled. A large home on the campus has been obtained to house 18 students. Many students have obtained board in private homes.

BRO. TOM'S CLASS NUMBERS 50

With an enrollment of fifty men and an actual attendance Sunday of 32 members and four visitors, Bro. Tom's Bible Class of the Methodist Church of Columbiana was organized Sunday. The following officers were unanimously elected: Luther Fowler, president; W. E. Merrell, vice-president; J. W. McGiboney, Secretary-Treasurer. Membership Committeee includes: C. E. Niven, Roy B. Lester, W. E. Lovelady, J. P. Pearson, J. F. Norris and Steadman Wood.

The teacher is "Bro. Tom" and and the class will hold its Sunday morning meeting in the Presbyterian Church.

Leonard Wyatt, Jr. Adds Another Star

Kildred White Wallace

Congratulations to Master Sergeant Leonard N. Wyatt, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wyatt of Harpersville, who has again brought fame to his native county and added a "star" to his already distinguished military record.

Leonard Wyatt was born in Harpersville and received his early education in the Vincent school, later entering Howard College and University Center of Birmingham.

On October 19, 1942, Sgt. Wyatt joined the U. S. Army. On December 7, 1942, he married the beauteous and talented Gloria Brasher of Birmingham. Soon after his marriage, the young Sergeant was called for overseas duty and assigned to General Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters in the South Pacific where he remained for 16 months during World War II.

After the hostilities ceased, Sgt. Wyatt returned to the States and served in the Army, Alabama Military District, in the Magic City. When the Korean war broke out, Sgt. Wyatt (in August 1950), left for General Headquarters in Korea where he served for 16 months. Sgt. Wyatt's comment during a brief visit home before leaving, was a patriotic one. He stated, "America must be defended, and I am one who stands ready at all times to do my part, wherever it is!"

Not long after arriving in the Far East, in his tent one memorable night, General MacArthur gave the order to "Forward March" to the Yalu River. The battle defeat and the harrowing experience of viewing the atrocities of prisoners during five days and nights, travelling in retreat in a snow covered jeep, are indelibly engraved on his mind and heart.

There are few soldiers who have so bravely borne the hardships and the dangers this gallant lad from Shelby County has experienced. Sgt. Leonard Wyatt has 10 battle stars and three bronze stars. He received one in Manila; one in Korea; and one in Washington, D. C.

The picture shows General Omar Bradley awarding him the last star he has received. Sgt. Wyatt is, at present, assigned to the Chief of Staff Office in Washington, D. C., and this week, at his post, of duty, his native county, through the Reporter-Democrat, proudly salutes him.

SOUTHERN BELL HEARING POSTPONED

The Alabama Public Service Commission has postponed a hearing on the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company request for rate increases.

The hearing, orginally slated for September 9, will be held September 23.

ALABASTER TAKE STEPS TO INCORPORATE

Realizing that Alabaster is located in one of the most rapidly expanding sections of Shelby County, keen visioned citizens are this week taking steps leading toward incorporating Alabaster and placing it under the guidance of a Mayor and council. The required number of citizens have expressed a desire to have this done as early as is possible, and an election will soon be held to officially announce the fact.

Watch this paper for further announcements regarding this wide-awake town, for its citizens certainly have some far reaching plans on the agenda for its permanent development.

PRE-SCHOOL CONFERENCE FOR TEACHERS

Superintendent W. W. Elliott announced today that a pre-school conference for all white teachers would be held at Alabama College September 3, 4, and 5. Among the visitors who will address the county teachers will be Dr. Morrison McCall of the State Department of Education and Dr. Louis E. Armstrong, Director of the Indian Springs School.

The negro Institution will be held at Montevallo negro high school Friday, September 5, beginning at 9:00 a. m.

Mr. W. W. Elliott announced that all county schools would open at 9:00 a. .m, on Monday, September 8th. A roster of the teachers for the next term will be published next week.

MRS. WARD BENTLEY PASSED AWAY AUGUST 19

Mrs. Ward Bentley, age 48, passed away at her home in Columbiana on Tuesday, August 19. She had suffered a long and painful illness since February.

Mrs. Bentley had lived in Shelby County all her life. She was an active member of the New Bethel Baptist Church and a lover of Sacred Harp music.

She is the daughter of Mrs. J. F. Archer and the late Rev. J. F. Archer.

Services were held at the Columbiana Baptist Church with the Rev. Curtis Bean and the Rev. Cox officiating.

Pallbearers, nephews of Mrs. Bentley were: Waymon Bentley, Leo Bentley, Horace Vick, Ellis Bentley, Jr., David Bentley, Jr., and Erskine Bentley.

Surviving are her husband, Elbert Ward Bentley, 1 son, Ray Bentley, two daughters, Villa Bentley and Sharon Bentley; mother, Mrs. J. F. Archer; 2 sisters, Mrs. Kermit Vick and Mrs. Joseph J. Romono; one brother, Roland Archer.

Interment was in the Columbiana Cemetery with Bolton-Walton in charge.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: Will Morgan can almost smell the trouble that is brewing in the Indian lands beyond Pittsburgh. For this reason, he was more than casually concerned about the fate of Mary Bolden, a girl from Carolina, with whom he had fallen in love. After finally convincing her of his affections, he sees her move with her family to a settlement near the Miami Indians. When it becomes evident that there will be a savage uprising, he visits her and she promises to marry him as soon as he can return for her. Enroute back to St. Clair's new fort, Will and Bullhead Kirby have a strange meeting with Tobe Ansley in the woods.

CHAPTER X

Ansley grinned a bit dubiously. "I been a fair piece," he admitted. "Kinda lookin' over the land while them fools in camp waste time."

"Any Injun sign?"

"Nothin' fer miles. I reckon the size o' the army has got the varmints skeered."

They pushed on in silence once more. Kirby tried a couple of questions at intervals but Tobe did not seem inclined to gossip. That suited Morgan well enough and he spent the remaining time remembering his brief moment of happiness and planning for the future.

They found the new fort nearly completed—and duly named Fort Jefferson. However the inefficiency and disorganization of the army was such that there was no immediate move in prospect. Five days of useless fretting had to pass before there was an advance, five days which Will might have spent on the upper Miami.

Only when the order had been given for the column to advance did the commissary officers discover that the army was already short of supplies. That fact coupled with the epidemic of dysentery which had come from lack of sanitation seemed about to cause another indefinite delay. However, General St. Clair was growing impatient. He ordered a messenger back to Fort Washington with a requisition for additional supplies, detailed a guard to stay with the several hundred sick men—and announced marching orders to take effect at once. It was action at last but scarcely a satisfactory kind of action.

Rumors and Sickness Advance With Army

The supply train moved slowly in the wake of the healthy part of the force, delaying frequently as the troops cut a stumbling path northward through the forests. At noon on the first day Tilly dropped back to talk with the packers, thoroughly disgusted.

"No use stayin' up there," he growled to Will. "Ain't a sign of a scout or patrol out ahead. I been out on my own a few times and there's plenty o' Indian sign—but the gold braid boys don't seem to care."

Morgan frowned. "I understood that there was no sign for miles ahead."

"The hell there ain't! We had Injuns in front of us since before we stopped to build that damned fort. We oughta have strong patrols out all the time but nobody seems to think so."

The following day he was back again with the same complaint. "I'm through," he growled. "I'll ride back here 'til they holler for me. General Washington gave old St. Clair strict orders about marchin' blind but the danged old fool is plowin' through the wilderness without scouts—just like that lunkhead Braddock did in the old French war. Either he's mighty confident about his two cannons scarin' the heathens or somebody is givin' him a heap of bum advice."

"Is Tobe Ansley in the confidence of any of the officers?" Will asked. "He claimed there were no Injuns around."

Tilly laughed. "I don't know who'd pay any attention to Tobe. He's mostly drunk or beggin' liquor."

Morgan said no more about it. Tilly disappeared next day and did not join the pack train again until twenty-four hours later. There were rumors of fighting in front of the column and Tilly explained it. "General Butler took matters into his own hands yesterday and sent a couple o' patrols out. We skirmished with the redskins all day; the woods is full of 'em. Last night St. Clair heard that a couple of our boys got shot so he sends word that no more patrols are to go out. If that don't beat hell I don't know what it'll take!"

The following days were much the same. Stragglers were constantly being cut off by the hovering bodies of savages which now seemed to surround the army. Dysentery became practically a fatal disease. Any man who dropped away from the column into the brush was almost certain to be tomahawked. The militia were getting close to panic but were deserting less frequently, fearful of leaving the protection of the column.

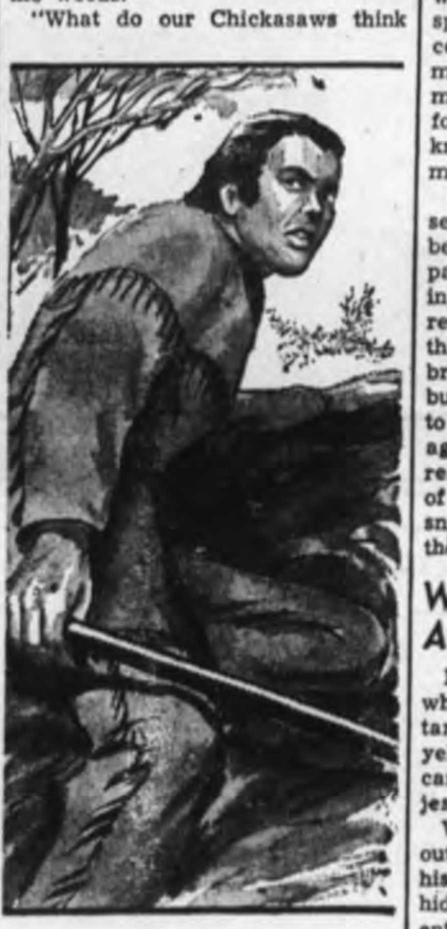
Then word spread that General Butler had fallen sick and was going back to Fort Washington. St. Clair was in little better condition and the real command fell to Adjutant-General Colonel Sargent. At any rate he had all the problems but was hampered by St. Clair's interference.

From his position at the rear of the army Will heard the various stories as they filtered back, either by courier to Fort Washington or directly from Tilly when he made his frequent visits to the pack camp. It was not a pleasant picture and his apprehensions increased as the stories recorded the mounting difficulties of the advance guard.

Then came a day when the pack train did not move at all. There was some advance ahead but not enough to warrant moving the pack camp. Tilly came back that evening, disgusted as ever.

"Sargent wants to halt and clear the woods ahead but the old man won't let him. We're runnin' into a hornet's nest and the general won't even believe what he hears from the woods."

"What do our Chickasaws think about it?" Kirby asked. "They can tell him and maybe he'll believe 'em."



Will felt a flash of relief at the sight, but he could also see the mistake caused by it.

Tilly grunted. "He wouldn't even use 'em until today. Then he sent 'em scoutin' to the west to find out whether the Miamis are goin' to get help from the Wabash varmints! There don't seem to be nothin' too dumb for that man to do!"

At dawn there was another movement in the same direction, the sadly depleted second regiment of regulars. This time there was no difficulty in learning what had happened. Desertion by squads and platoons had finally culminated in a mass desertion of a large company of militia. The regulars were being sent after them.

St. Clair's Ragged Army Under Attack

"Hell's fire!" Old Sam growled. "Half the fightin' men gone jest when we need 'em! Better let the damned militia go and keep the reg'lars on hand."

Will permitted himself one of the rare comments which indicated his sympathy with the pessimists.

"What do we need troops for?" he asked sarcastically. "As long as those poor devils of artillerymen can haul their brass cannons through the bogs we'll scare the Indians!"

"I don't know about the Injuns," Kirby declared. "But me—I'm scared as hell right now. This thing's gettin' worse all the time."

Three evenings later the pack train was ordered forward as the army began to make camp, continuing on until they were with the first regiment of regulars instead of at the rear. It gave Will a chance to see the condition of the force and he marveled at the way it had melted away. Less than half of the original number remained.

There had been unusually hard skirmishing during the day and the army went into camp in defensive formation, the pack train, artillery and horses on a narrow rise of ground along an eastern branch of the Wabash.

Campfires were kindled hurriedly, the growing cold already putting a skim of ice on the pools as men prepared to spend the night in the welter of gear, baggage and horses. Even as they worked there was skirmishing between the sentries and prowling warriors in the trees.

The firing stopped at dark, a fact which worried Morgan and brought a comment from Kirby. "Looks bad," he complained. "Like as not they're gettin' ready fer a big rush and they want us to think they've left."

Still the night passed quietly enough and at dawn St. Clair gave orders for the troops to be mustered under arms.

Will turned away when the men were dismissed, watching the engineers lay out the defense lines. For the first time the commander seemed to be doing something intelligent and it brought a feeling of some satisfaction. Almost with the thought, there was a burst of firing from the militia camp.

Men dropped their tools and reached for muskets as the scene unfolded before their eyes. The militia camp was being attacked by a howling pack of savages in full war paint—and the panic-stricken militiamen were huddling together like so many sheep. They fired a few shots, then the hatchets and scalping knives were among them. It was bloody work for a matter of seconds and then the militia broke and fled for the protection of the regulars' camp.

The war whoops of the Miamis rang on the frosty air as men fell before the deadly tomahawks. Fugitives splashed in complete panic through the shallow but partially frozen creek, throwing away arms and equipment and threatening to infect the hastily formed regulars with their hysteria. Confusion spread through the camp and Will could almost feel the doubt in the minds of the waiting regiment as men were torn between a desire to follow the flying militia and a knowledge that resistance must be made.

As the Indians came on Will seized his rifle and flung himself behind a pile of supplies. Other packers were doing likewise, lending effective support to the valiant regulars who were trying to stem the tide. The first Indian assault broke before this stiff resistance but there was no time for anyone to feel pleased about it. The savages simply gave up the charge and resorted to their traditional mode of warfare, taking cover and sniping at the exposed troops on the ridge.

White Faces Discovered Among Attacking Forces

Kirby worked his way across to where Will was firing whenever a target showed. "It's murder!" he yelled above the din. "Them sojers can't see a dam' thing and they're jest standin' up there to git shot!"

Will nodded grimly and peered out under the cloud of smoke. From his prone position he could see the hideous figures of savages resplendent in their hawk and eagle feathers, their faces painted grotesquely in the war colors of red and black. From time to time a group of them would dash forward into the smoke and be upon the troops before the men even knew they were approaching. Swiftly the knives and hatchets would do their vicious work and the raiders would withdraw before any real resistance could be organized. Will and Kirby took some toll of these raids but they could do little to halt them.

Suddenly Morgan made a discovery which sent a chill down his spine. "Look, Kirby!" he shouted in the riverman's ear. "There's white men with 'em!"

Kirby nodded. "Renegades and Canadian militia. I saw Simon Girty a minute ago. I'd give a good deal to put a bullet into his stinkin' hide!"

He broke off as another attack developed in front of them. The troops were still firing blindly into the smoke-drenched woods, doing no damage to the wily enemies who lay sheltered behind trees or rocks until it came time to rush in with knife and tomahawk. Already most of the officers had been picked off by Indian marksmen. St. Clair was displaying the greatest personal valor, having been in the thick of the fight since the beginning with no more damage than bullet-torn clothing. The ailing General Butler was just as active but not so lucky. Early in the fight his arm had been broken by a ball but he continued to fight until another shot felled him.

Will saw him fall just as one of the Indian attacks rolled back. He ran out and dragged him to a place of safety behind a supply bale. The act proved useless as the officer died almost immediately.

Morgan had no sooner returned with the wounded man than the fighting broke out bitterly around the two guns. Far from being awed by the thundering field-pieces the Indians centered their fire upon them and now rushed in to scalp the gunners. For some moments they were successful but the change in tactics gave the troops a chance to see the hitherto invisible foe. St. Clair personally directed a bayonet charge which drove the Indians headlong into the forest, the first bit of success for the harassed army.

Will felt a flash of relief at the sight but he could also see the mistake caused by it. Encouraged by its success the officers ordered bayonet charges all along the line. The Indians were forced to leave their hiding places as a result but the soldiers were not well enough trained in Indian fighting to take advantage. The savages simply retreated and poured in their deadly fire again as soon as the troops halted.

Morgan and Kirby started to follow one of the charging platoons but took cover as soon as they saw what was happening. It gave them a chance to cover the retreat of the bewildered soldiers but at other points along the line the Indians wiped out every man of the assault groups.

"Goin' from bad to worse," Kirby shouted. "Git back to camp."

Bible Comment:

Great Proverbs of Old Give Us Guide To the Good Life

GREAT proverbs are the crystalization of experience. Sometimes they are reflections upon life and conduct; terse concentrated bits of wisdom, or philosophy; homely or picturesque expressions of truth, that are to character and the good life as the acorn is to the oak.

Sometimes they are the observations of discerning critics, who have seen the wisdom of the wise, and the folly of the foolish, and have set down human values and the best way of attaining them in rules or guidemarks in the form of popular, memorable maxims.

Sometimes they seem to have been spontaneous thoughts, quickened by some experience or incident, in much the same way as an artist catches and records some passing scene or impression.

A deep philosophy of life is in 4:23 of the Proverbs: "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." Similar reflection is in the list of things the Lord hates—the six things listed in 6:16-19; and in the well-known 14:34, "Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people."

Of the second sort—terse, practical observations—is 16:18, "Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall."

A good example of the spontaneous, but no less deeply wise proverbs is 27:19, "As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man."

We can imagine the thirsty traveler stooping down to drink in some limpid pool, before mirrors were common, and as he saw each feature given back from the pool having flash into his mind that vivid metaphor to which Sir Francis Bacon devoted an essay of interpretation.

Every people and country have their proverbs, but richest of all are those that come from the ancient Hebrews. No doubt they were compiled from many sources, but it is no coincidence that they came from a race and a time that gave to the world its greatest saints and prophets, and ultimately the Savior of Men, whose parables express and fulfill the wisdom of the Scriptures that He knew so well.

ALABAMA COLLEGE HAS LARGE FRESHMAN CLASS

One of the largest freshman classes in recent years will begin registration week at Alabama College, Montevallo, when doors open for the 57th academic year Monday, September 8.

New students, who will begin arriving in front of Main Dormitory Sunday, September 7, will be greeted in the traditional Montevallo manner by upperclassmen wearing white suits and dresses.

Members of the welcome committee will guide freshmen to their dormitory rooms, take them on campus tours and entertain them at parties in the new swimming pool, on the shores of the college lake and in Bibb Graves Hall.

Upperclassmen will begin their registration at 8 a. m., Tuesday, September 9 and the business of getting down to classes will start when the first class bell rings at 8 a. m., Thursday, September 11.

Alabama College begins the year under leadership of a new president, Dr. F. Edmard Lund, and with seven new members on its faculty.

Dr. Lund will discuss plans for pre-school faculty meeting at 5 p. m., Saturday, September 6 when faculty members will gather at Reynolds Hall after summer study and vacations in all parts of the country.

At the recent session of the International Press Institute in Paris, some of the correspondents were discussing the differences between "a reliable source", "an informed source", and "an unimpeachable source." They agree: A reliable source is the man you just met. An iformed source is the man who told the man you just met. And an unimpeachable source is the man who started the rumor originally.

NOTICE OF TIMBER SALE

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be called for and received until 2:00 P. M., September 10, 1952, at the office of the Department of Conservation, 7 North Bainbridge Street, Montgomery 4, Alabama, by the Director of Conservation, acting by and for the State of Alabama for all merchantable timber on seventy-six acres, more or less, of a proposed lakesite on Oak Mountain State Park, Shelby County; said lakesite lying in parts of Sections 13 and 24 T 19 S, R 2 W and part of Section 18 T 19 S, R 1 W.

Composition of the timber on this area has been estimated by Scribner Rule as follows: These volumes are estimates only and are not guaranteed. The Scribner volumes ordinarily saw out ten percent more than the estimate:

Pine 843 trees	105,760 bd. ft.
Poplar 59 trees	8,550 bd. ft.
White Oak 60 trees	5,400 bd. ft.
Red Oak and Post Oak	5,510 bd. ft.
Hickory	2,100 bd. ft.
Beech	1,530 bd. ft.
Grand Total	128,850 bd. ft.
Pine pulpwood	App. 100 cords

These figures include all trees inside the water line, which is surveyed and marked, and trees standing within five feet of the water line. Trees tallied outside of the water line and marked with a spot of yellow paint at 4½ feet above ground and stump height are also included.

The pine is approximately 98% loblolly, containing approximately 1% each of longleaf and shortleaf. Logging conditions are good over most of the area.

The purchaser will be required to remove the timber by the Cahaba Valley road, which passes within a few hundred yards of the area, in order to eliminate a hazard to traffic on the State Park roads. The purchaser may remove all merchantable timber, but must leave no stumps higher than six inches from the ground. All trees occurring near the water line, the stumps of which will be under two feet or less of water, must be cut at ground level or not over two inches from the ground.

An area of approximately five acres making up the dam site and borrow pit must be cleared of all merchantable timber by October 1, 1952. The remaining area must be cleared of all merchantable timber by November 1, 1952.

Terms of Sale, Cash, with a ten percent deposit in the form of a certified check made payable to the Director of Conservation, to accompany the bid. The deposit will be applied toward the purchase price of the timber, except in the case of the unsuccessful bidders, whose deposits will be returned.

A performance bond of not less than $2,000.00 (two thousand dollars) will be required of the successful bidder to insure compliance with the contract of sale.

A sample timber sale contract may be obtained by writing the Alabama Division of Forestry, Department of Conservation, 607 Monroe Street, Montgomery 4, Alabama.

The envelope containing bid should be marked Timber Bid so it will not be opened prematurely as ordinary mail.

The right to reject any and all bids is reserved by the Department of Conservation.

Dated this, the 25th day of August, 1952.

PERFECT ATTENDANCE THRU GRAMMAR SCHOOL

J. W. CARDEN

MILDRED WHITE WALLACE

Teachers, friends, and classmates of J. W. Carden's, join us in saluting this splendid young fellow this week as we record his outstanding scholastic record.

J. W. Carden finished the 6th grade in the Shelby School last May, with a perfect attendance. In September, 1946, J. W. entered the First Grade and since that time has not missed one single day answering "Present".

On September 8, when Shelby County High School swings wide open its doors to new students, this bright-eyed young fellow will take his place with other members of the 7th grade and we join others in hoping his unbroken record of "perfect attendance" may continue thru High School and College.

Congratulations J. W. Carden, and best wishes for your future success.

With the various tribes of early Alabama Indians, red paint on their bodies and mounts was always a sign of war, while white paint was a symbol of peace.

The zero milestone of Birmingham, the point from which official mileage of Birmingham is computed, is located at Woodrow Wilson Park. It is marked by a marble shaft, capped with a direction finder of bronze, erected by the Alabama Motorists' Association.

VIGNETTE AND CULTURE CLUBS SPONSOR BOOTH AT FAIR

Three of the most worthy causes we know of will be forcefully brought to the attention of Fair visitors this week by members of the Vignette and Culture Clubs of Columbiana, namely, the drive for funds to curb Polio, Cancer and impress on the public the need for the Red Cross Blood Donations.

This Booth is being prepared by these patriotic members and they cordially urge every Fair Visitor to drop by and contribute as liberally as is possible, or if not convenient at this time to donate to these causes, take home some of the available literature they have with the factual evidence of the need for these annual drives.

. . . Beware of electric mowers on wet grass! Lallage Powell Bentley had a near tragic accident Monday when she began mowing her lawn with an electric power mower and a shock knocked her down. Mrs. Bentley is still in bed from this accident but, is recuperating satisfactorily. We record this happening, lest others fall victim to Redy-Kilo-Watt's unbreakable grip!

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our gratitude for the loving kindness shown us during the long illness and death of our loved one. For the flowers and expressions of sympathy we are deeply grateful and we will never forget each of them. May God's Blessings be with you.

Mr. Ward Bentley

'WE' AND 'SMALL FRY' VISIT THE FAIR

For a refreshing two hours, take "Small Fry" by the hand and go right up to the annual County Fair which is in full swing on the Columbiana School grounds. First, stop and buy a wad of cotton candy, get all sticky. Then, take on an apple on the stick next, toss down a sack of pop corn, and take a ride on the "white horse" at the Merry-Go-Round. Get off, get some change, get more tickets and get back on, same horse (no other color will do). Get going round and round until thoroughly drunk, and either pass out or go by the Hot Dog stand, where ladies from the P. T. A. will receive you with a cup of java and a hot dog. Take a breathing spell, then, walk in the Fun House, and if you have a very keen sense of humor and balance, you may enjoy the "thrills and chills" furnished by this look in. There are many other rides, you may whizz thru the atmosphere on, but, will advise that you take a long look before mounting some of those tilt-O-whirls unless you just like those topsy-turvy curves. At any rate, forget the cares of a routine day, and visit the County Fair.

You will, in addition to meeting many of your friends, enjoy watching as we did, Larry Dorrough down from Birmingham, forcing Grandpa Bolin Cooper to shell out the shekels for him to continue piloting a miniature automobile; or Gary Kaplan looking for "Big Norman" to give him another ticket or, even younger than these two swell little fellows, take a look at Stan Edwards, held in the arms of Patsy Duke, sound asleep on the Merry Go Round".... or Tommy and Kent Rush occupying double a trip on the ponies.

In the next age group, we saw Conrad Fowler, and a gang of "cow-boy" replicas who would have charged a bear with a buggy whip just as fearlessly as they were taking the whole thing in as they came to them. Amazing, the lack of fear these kiddos have!

Now, thats all we are going to tell you about the attractions of this County Fair, you will just have to join the crowds that are enjoying it and see for yourself the rest of it. Better still, take "Small Fry" along and share it with them, as Clarence Abbott was doing when we saw him as we flew across his line of vision. Little Helen promptly dismissed him, after getting a hand full of dimes, and preferred riding alone, first one horse and then, another. Ho-Hum, we were really whipped after the trip, but Gee, we had a good time! "Come on, let's go back tonight" said we to Hiz-zoner", but, he banged down his gavel, and handed down a positive decision containing only two letters, NO! And that was that!

. . . Zera Walton and Mildred Harrison down town talking up the needs of the High School Band. For instance, money for music and instruments. Seems as if these items have not been included in the school's budget. We hope, along with this asset, that FREE LUNCHES for underprivileged children has not been overlooked as it was last year. That situation simply must not be tolerated. No one thing more tragic to this writer, than the sight of a hungry child.

. . . Mike Copeland, one of the most personable young fellows we know is down from his home in Anniston spending a few weeks with his grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Ellis. Sunday morning, during the tribute of appreciation to the Rev. A. D. Wilson, little Mike decided to sing a cow-boy song in his honor, and created a mild sensation, when his suggestion failed to find a place on the pre-arranged program. Everybody on Main looks forward to Mike Copeland's visits.

. . . Truett Farris of Alabaster spent Monday in Columbiana. He is one of Alabaster's most enthusiastic boosters.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Lou Hoynes (Catherine Parker), of Indiannapolis, Indiana, and their two sons, Sam Wallace Hoynes and Lewis Hoynes, spent last week at "The Pines" with Mrs. Hoynes' mother, Mrs. Will Parker.

Rev. Allen D. Wilson Honored By Methodist Church

REV. ALLEN D. WILSON

The Rev. Allen D. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist Church of Columbiana is widely known for his friendliness to all people in this town. His ready cooperation and valuable helpfulness in all worthwhile projects has made him one of the most popular ministers ever to serve in this community.

Sunday, August 24, was "Allen D. Wilson Day" in the Methodist Church, at the Bible School hour and all Sunday School classes, officials and members of this church gathered in the Sanctuary to "give honor to whom honor is due."

Superintendent of the Sunday School, Wales W. Wallace, Jr., presented a brief sketch of Mr. Wilson's life and the highlights of his ministerial career which facts we have been asked to record so that Mr. Wilson's friends might share this outstanding occasion by reading this factual tribute.

Mr. Wilson was born in Ashville, Alabama (St. Clair county) on September 20, 1902 and remained at work on the farm during his early years while attending the schools in his native county. He attended High School in Flat Rock, later going to Jacksonville State Teachers College. Upon completion of this course, he accepted a position as instructor, and taught for two years in DeKalb county. Then followed two years experience as Assistant Mercantile Manager for DeBardelaben Coal Company, after which he received his first ministerial appointment at Bexar, where he and his bride, Miss Olma Posey, began their work together. Mr. Wilson continued his college work at Birmingham-Southern during the time he was in the Bessemer area, and among the first churches he served full time are included: Docena, Edgewater, Adamsville, Chalkville, Tanner, Parrish, Flat Creek, Valley Head, Heflin. A present he is worthily and capably filling the pastorate in Columbiana.

Mr. Wilson is widely known for his ability to get things done and in every church assignment he has accepted, a building program has marked his reign. During his years of service in the Methodist Churches in Alabama, he has built two parsonages; repaired four parsonages; built three churches, paid off an indebtedness of $11,000 which he inherited in one of his charges.

His conference official record is a credit to him. Mr. Wilson has been District Missionary Secretary for ten years; Conference statistician for twelve years; Recording Secretary for four years and is a member of the Licensing Committee for young preachers.

Two years ago, Mr. Wilson was selected by the Conference Board of Evangelism and went to Syracruse, New York, to share in the program arranged in which 1000 churches participated.

In addition to Mr. Wilson's numerous ministerial assignments, he is public spirited and an active member of the Masonic Lodge and Kiwanis Club of Columbiana.

The entire church membership in Columbiana from the tiniest member of tthe Cradle Roll to the oldest member of the Bible Class joined the Superintendent of the Sunday School in this appreciation tribute to the Rev. A. D. Wilson on the above mentioned occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson have one daughter, Faye Wilson, who is making an enviable record in Birmingham where she is completing a course in Secretarial Science.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lauderdale, Mr. and Mrs. Tony Gilmore and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gilmore and their families have returned from a delightful vacation spent in Florida.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Max Grelier, Charles and Mickey Grelier of Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tinney, Johnnie and Tommy Tinney of North Carolina, spent the week end in Columbiana as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Tinney.

. . . Mary Hughes of Eutaw, former resident of Columbiana, spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Fore.

. . . Friends of Mrs. Edna Roberts will be delighted to learn she is recovering from a fall received in her home in Childersburg and will soon be released from the hospital.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Clinkscales of Birmingham were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Weldon and Mr. and Mrs. Eaves in Columbiana.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wood of Savannah, Georgia, are vacationing for a week with relatives and friends in Childersburg and Columbiana. Earl tells me that he and his wife will soon move to Malvern, Arkansas. That is, as soon as he is released by Uncle Sam. Mrs. Wood's home is in Malvern, and Mr. Wood has accepted a civilian position there as soon as this present military assignment is terminated. We enjoyed talking with this former resident of Main, who is looking just fine and is as jolly as Santa Claus. We told him he would likely run into some more Shelby county residents out in Malvern. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wallace (Janie Wallace) reside there and we know they will be happy to extend a cordial welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wood.

. . . Mrs. J. A. Ingram Sr. of Columbiana Rt. has returned from a delightful visit with her son, J. A. Ingram Jr. and Mrs. Ingram of Atlanta, Georgia, who are the proud parents of a babette born July 31st. We have not learned its name yet, but will tell you more about it when we do.

FELLOWSHIP CLASS ENTERTAINED AL FRESCO

Mrs. Gray Goodwin entertained the Fellowship Class of the Methodist Church, taught by Paul O. Luck, last Friday evening with an al fresco covered dish supper. Members of this congenial group of young matrons were co-hostesses, and the honorees, were their husbands.

Following the delectable menu, a social hour was enjoyed, after which a picture show party was held at the Shelby Theatre.

REPORTER-DEMOCRAT QUOTED IN WALL STREET JOURNAL

Tommy King, is one of our favorite salesmen. He is Grit's representative, but little did we dream when we were telling his Shelby county friends about how splendid he was, that Wall Street Journal (according to Henry Nichols, Sr., who read the article in his copy), reprint, what "we" thought of Tommy. However, thats what happened. So, Main Street, goes to Wall Street a la Reporter-Democrat route! Never can tell how far this little Democrat Donkey is going to travel, nor who is going to read what he has to say!

. . . The McGhee family (Mr. and Mrs. R. C.), former residents, we are glad to state have returned to make Columbiana their future home and are occupying the Mary Peters home. Mr. McGhee is Southern Depot Agent.

ROSE KAPLAN WILL OPERATE AND MANAGE EAGLES STORES

It takes Spartan-like courage to "keep-a-goin'" when dreams are shattered and discouragements come thick and fast bringing disappointments too deep for expression, but, Rose Kaplan, undaunted by the recent tragic happenings in her erstwhile sheltered life, has proved that brave souls do carry on!

A special privilege is accorded me this week as I answer the question many of you have asked since Mr. Kaplan passed away, regarding the Eagles Store, and the continued operation on Main.

I have just had a long talk with Rose Kaplan and I am glad I know Rose, and that she is my friend. There are few people indeed who have so bravely borne the hours of anxiety, suspense and heart-aches that have come to Rose in recent months. Fewer still, perhaps, are those who have so loyally remained true to the task left to finish, and smilingly accepted the inevitable.... minus any bitterness.

Naturally, Rose has realized thru the past months that this vital decision would one day have to be made. It came sooner than either Rose or Bob realized. However, after weighing many things concerning her life, and that of the children, the friendliness of little old Columbiana and the host of friends here, finally won out, and Rose Kaplan will remain with us, carrying out the same policies for which Eagles has long been noted.

This will be good news on Main this morning, not only for Rose's friends, but for those friends and classmates lovely Helen Kaplan has, and to all the little folk and grown up folk too, who adore little Gary as he goes about greeting everyone he meets on Main with an upraised chubby fist, and a merry twinkle in his brown eyes as he yells "HI".... to all he happens to see. Yes, we bring good news this morning and we know you won't lose any time getting down to Eagles Store and letting Rose know how happy we all are to have this little family choose "us" for friends and neighbors, and Main Street for continued commercial ventures.

New Fall merchandise is on its way! Rose is noted for her exquisite taste. So, in a few days, you may walk right in and select your winter wardrobe, or your Campus Togs, and feel perfectly sure that you are correctly attired for any occasion.

Yes, everyone who knows the Kaplan family, will be delighted to join us in saying: "Yes-sir-ree, Rose Kaplan is going to stay right on in Columbiana, and whats more, call it 'Home for keeps.'"

. . . Congratulations wing their way from Columbiana to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McWilliams in Texas in honor of the arrival of a little girl in their home who was born Sunday, August 24.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Alvin (Buddy) Bird have named their little daughter, Sharon Joyce.

. . . Helen Kaplan has a new way of carting "little brother" around. She simply picks Gary up, puts him in her shopping basket attached to her bike, and here they come, little Gary riding high, wide and handsome and full of conversation. A joy to meet them.

. . . Kathy and Neena Carter enjoyed their fifth birthday anniversary in St. Petersburg, Florida. They entertained "on the beach" for their new found friends in Florida, and had a wonderfully fine "party". They will return to Columbiana Thursday.

. . . Friends of Mrs. Mamye George will regret to learn she has had another stroke which has made her condition more critical.

. . . Pretty little Jenny Lou Gates, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Gates and Joan Gates, of Helena, were guests of Dr. Gates Monday. Little Jenny Lou and her Dad were having a fine time when we saw them at the Fair Monday night.

. . . Mr. O. P. Head, of Wilton, was the center of attraction in the home of Mrs. Grover Cleveland last Sunday when he celebrated the passing of a birthday anniversary with his devoted family and a host of friends.

Usually this annual event is shared with his grand-son, Oliver Pickens Head, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Head of Columbiana, but this year finds young Lieutenant Head at his post of duty in Ft. Benning, Georgia, with other khaki-klad soldier-men who are doing their dead level best to maintain peace in this U. S. A. Our hearts best wishes go to both of them with the hope that many, many more birthdays will come their way, and bring the happiness both so richly deserve.

. . . You may not recognize the name "Mrs. B. E. Thompson"... but if I should say, remember Idell Turner?... there would be a lot of folk, who would quickly say.... "I certainly do". Well, Idell Thompson (Mrs. B. E.) now resides in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, and all too frequently returns to her former home to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Turner. However, from this week on, Idell will be able to keep up with "whats happening on the Main Drag" and other current news from over the county, for that thoughtful Dad of hers has just been by the office and ordered the paper sent to her hospitable home in Carolina, for the next 52 weeks. Therefore, it will be a pleasure to visit with the Thompsons each week, even though the miles are many that lie between Winston-Salem and Columbiana. Thats one good thing about this little Reporter-Democrat, it goes anywhere on earth that there is a postoffice, for only $2.00, and the more he travels, the better he likes it. (Thanks Mr. Turner, we got that paper off in exactly three minutes after you left our office. MWW).

. . . Ralph Hunt III, Denton Cole, Freddie Wood and Carlos Moorer, having successfully completed their summer courses at API, Auburn, Alabama, left here again Sunday to visit friends and relatives in the Midwest and points of interest in Canada, returning in September for Fall term at Auburn.

. . . Glad to learn that the Recreation Department of Columbiana will stage a Community Night once each month during the winter. Anything that brings the people of a community together is certainly to be desired if the citizens of a community intend working together on mutual interests.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Zelle Barnett of Montgomery and family are guests of Mr. Barnett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Noland Barnett in Columbiana. Zelle is putting in most of his time, fishing!

. . . Misses Martha Murphree and Rebecca Henry, Music and Art instructors from Houston, Texas, spent Sunday in Columbiana. These attractive and talented girls motored cross country on their vacation and enjoyed their visit Sunday night as guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Fowler. Miss Murphree is a neice of Mrs. Fowler's and a music teacher who formerly taught in Columbiana schools.

. . . Mrs. Richard Ozley entertained the Monday Night Bridge Club August 25, at her home with a Dessert Party. Following the tabulation of scores, Mrs. Frank Sloan won high score and Mrs. Jay Falkner came in with the low score. Mrs. Tom Tinney of Wilmington, N. C., was guest of honor.

. . . No matter how many "birthdays" a fellow has, nor how many years the calendar has registered, it is always good to be remembered. And I am sure no one ever had a happier birthday than this little penpoint-pusher enjoyed last Monday. From day-dawn, until dusk! To those of you who, in some way, found out, or, even more miraculously, thru the years did not forget this date (By the way, I wondered what on earth was happening to me, for, in the rush of a hectic routine, I had forgotten all about that certain day that brought me here), made the occasion an unforgettable ble one. Gifts, phone calls, cards across many miles bearing individual good wishes brightened my day, and, until I can personally answer these wonderful expressions from you, please accept my everlasting appreciation for your thoughtfulness of me. I know I do not deserve it, but, I love it! And I shall try very hard, in some way, somehow, sometime, somewhere, to merit it.

MRS. BEAN HONORED WITH GIFT SHOWER

The members of the Women's Missionary Society of the Baptist Church in Columbiana entertained at the home of Mrs. Charlie Tinney on Monday afternoon with a Gift Shower in honor of Mrs. Curtis Bean.

From a beautifully appointed table centered with pink roses and tube roses arrangement, delectable iced punch was poured and served with pink and white individual cakes, nuts and mints. Gifts were displayed and an informal social hour enjoyed.

Mrs. Bean is being urged to remain with us until Mr. Bean is permanently located with the U. S. Air Force, and friends eagerly await her decision.

Fifty guests shared the above mentioned courtesy.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Stone and son, John Milton of Atlanta, and Miss Margaret Stone of Easonville, were Thursday guests of the Rev. and Mrs. T. K. Roberts.

. . . Mrs. James Battle of Birmingham had a birthday August 24, and her mother, Mrs. Nath Atchison, could not think of anything more enjoyable each week in the year to send Dot than, the "Home Paper". So, we happily greet Dot this week and wish for her many, many happy returns of the day.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Strong (Mary Sparks) of New Mexico are in Columbiana visiting Mrs. Strong's brother, Slim Sparks and a host of friends. Mary, by the way, is more beautiful than even we remembered her, and it was a pleasure to greet them on Main, Wednesday morning.

. . . Lillian Starcher marked her 8th birthday with a party for thirty youngsters at her Phillips Circle home Tuesday afternoon.

MAYBE YOU WILL BELIEVE IT, 'HANDY ELLIS SAID IT!'

Handy Ellis, of Columbiana, is a gentleman who is known throughout the length and breadth of Alabama, but those of us who intimately know this "attorney-sportsman-coon hunter de luxe" are well aware of the fact that he has some valuable dogs. And when one of these canines gets out of pocket, well, not one thing else matters in the life of Handy Ellis, until Fido is back in the Kennel, and thats where "we" came into the picture, on August 20, 1952.

On the above mentioned date, while tap-tap-tapping out the news items, none other than "Mr. Handy Ellis" walked in our office, or should we say, ran into our office, stopped by the desk, looked at us over his "specs", and in that "positive, always-in-a-hurry-tone" (and I don't mean whisper) he said: "Lady, put this advertisement in the paper, and whats more, put it where folks can see it!" Period. And ZIP, he "jetted" (if you get what I mean) thru the door.

Naturally, we turned a cartwheel, ran every step of the way to the other office, stopped the press, delivered the ultimatum to the startled make-up man and lino operator, and they in turn began hauling out "type big enough for folk to see it" and pretty soon, that S. O. S. for Fido was on its way to your homes. That was August 20, 1952.

Friday, August 22, this same "Mr. Handy Ellis" walked in our office, leisurely smiled and seated himself, puffed a few times on the ever present cigar, and more relaxed than we have ever seen him remarked: "Well Lady, I found my dog! It truly pays to advertise"... He continued: "That paper had no sooner hit the streets of Harpersville than a phone message came thru telling me that my dog was there, etc."

Naturally, Mr. Ellis lost no time in spanning the miles in that Buick he drives (and I dodge day in-day out) in arriving in Harpersville and getting his dog. We are delighted that Fido is home again. We are even more delighted that "Mr. Handy Ellis" says that "It pays to advertise". So, maybe, you will believe it! And don't forget "we" are agents for advertising that gets results! Fido says "Bow-wow" to that which in dog lingo means "thanks for showing me the way to go home"!

And everybody lived happily ever after, and we hope, with all our hearts, that this "True Story" fills up this space Luther McGiboney and Arthur Davis told me had to be filled "this minute"!

NOTICE OF SALE OF $285,000 PRINCIPAL AMOUNT OF 4% GAS SYSTEM REVENUE BONDS OF THE TOWN OF COLUMBIANA, ALABAMA

The Town Council of the Town of Columbiana will meet at 11 o'clock A. M., on; September 5, 1952, in the Town Hall of said Town for the purpose of conducting a public sale at auction of $285,000 principal amount of 4% Gas System Revenue Bonds of the Town of Columbiana, said bonds to be dated June 1, 1952, and to mature on June 1 in each the following years in the following amounts: $5,000 in each of the years 1955 to 1957, inclusive; $6,000 in each of the years 1958 to 1961, inclusive; $8,000 in each of the years 1962 to 1965, inclusive; $10,000 in each of the years 1966 to 1969, inclusive; $12,000 in each of the years 1970 to 1976, inclusive; and $15,000 in each of the years 1977 to 1982, inclusive.

Said Bonds shall bear interest at the rate of four per cent (4%) per annum, payable December 1, 1952 and semiannually thereafter on June 1 and December 1 in each year until paid. The Bonds which mature in 1963 and thereafter shall be redeemable, at the option of the Town of Columbiana, on June 1, 1952, or on any interest payment date thereafter, in whole or in part, but if in part, shall be in the inverse order of maturities and identification numbers, latest maturities and highest numbers first, and any redemption shall be a redemption price equal to the par value thereof, plus accrued interest thereon to the redemption date plus a redemption premium which shall be equal to ¼ of 1% of the par value of each Bond to be redeemed for each year or fraction thereof from the date fixed for redemption to the date of each Bond to be redeemed, provided, however, that said redemption premium for any Bond redeemed shall in no event exceed 4% of the par value of such Bond.

Each bidder will be required to deposit $5,700 in cash or a certified check for $5,700 payable to the order of the Town of Columbiana, with the Town Treasurer to assure his purchase of and payment for the Bonds if awarded to him. All deposits will be returned at the conclusion of the sale except that of the successful bidder. Should the successful bidder fail to purchase and pay for the Bonds as required, his deposit shall be retained by the Town of Columbiana as liquidated damages.

The Town will furnish printed Bonds, legal opinions and pay other expenses connected with the issuance and sale of the Bonds. The Town Council shall have the right to reject all bids. The Bonds are to be subject to the legal opinion of Thompson, Dumas, O'Neal and Hayes, of Birmingham, Alabama.

The Statesman

Dr. Foreman

A POLITICIAN is a man who goes into politics as a man goes into any game—to win. He wants office, wants people to vote for him. Popularity is his stock in trade. A statesman, on the other hand, is not remembered for the number of votes he commanded, nor for the number of times he was elected, nor for the particular titles he held. A statesman's claim to fame is not based on what he did for himself, but on what he did for his country. That is why a "statesman is a dead politician." Some time has to go by, before it can be finally said whether any particular politician's career was good for his country or not.

Achieving Unity

DAVID, King of Israel, has been dead long enough now so that we can with great assurance call him a statesman. We saw a few weeks ago (Aug. 10 and 17) that Saul faced much the same problems that face nations today, but failed to solve them, largely because he was the wrong kind of man. David had the same problems; but he solved them.

We must remember that David's times were a thousand years before Christ, so of course he was no Christian. Nevertheless, looking back at his achievements, history can say, Well done! Here lived a man who had what it took to lead his nation to have and to be what it needed to have and to be at that time.

What Israel needed to become a strong nation were unity and security. At Saul's death these were lacking, and of course that spelled national weakness. The split between Judah and the other tribes had never been healed. David secured the unity of the nation in a dramatic way: he captured the city of Jerusalem which had been in enemy hands for hundreds of years, and made that city, for the first time, the capital of Israel. He built his palace there (Saul's had been at Gibeah,) he brought the ark there (see lesson for Sept. 14), and intended building a temple which would be the central shrine for the entire nation. Through creating this new and centrally located capital, David achieved political, military, religious and sentimental unity all at once.

Some Wars Are Not in Vain

AS FOR national security, there are three kinds of it and David developed all of them. First there is military security. The only way to get it, for David, was to beat down the armies that had been beating the Israelites.

It is a blood-stained story; but still the question is a fair one: If David had lost all the battles he won, what would have become of Israel? They would have gone the way of the Hivites and the Girgashites—if any one knows where that is. A few scraps of pottery, perhaps, some fragments of ruined walls, something for professors of ancient history to dig up and wonder about, —that is what Israel would have come down to, if David's wars had not succeeded.

He wound up his series of wars with this happy situation: Every single nation or tribe that had been giving the Israelites trouble, was either welded into the Israelites kingdom, or made into an ally.

Other Kinds of Security

ANOTHER kind of security is commercial. A nation cut off from trade with its neighbors is doomed to be a poor nation, even perhaps a beggar nation. Out of the mass of proper names in these chapters about David's kingdom, four are specially meaningful: Edom and Tyre and Damascus and Hamath. The three latter were great commercial and transportation centers. Edom, with its border on the Red Sea, gave Israel for the first time a seaport on deep water, with all the possibilities that involved.

The reign of David's successor was to be one of unprecedented prosperity and international good will; but it was David's statesmanlike policies that made the prosperity possible.

The third kind of security is more internal, and more a matter of the spirit than the sword, more of the mind than of money. It is the national security which can exist only where there is a united and uniting loyalty on the part of the citizens.

David had the rare gift which a politician uses for selfish ends, a statesman for the good of his country: the ability to make friends out of potential enemies.

RE-EMPLOYMENT RIGHTS FOR VETERANS

A number of laws have been passed since 1940, which will help a veteran get his job back when he is discharged from service. Any person who is drafted or enlisted in the Armed Forces of the United States, is entitled to Re-Employment Rights. This also includes members of the Reserves who go on active duty for training, as well as members of the National Guard and reserve officers of the United States Public Health Service.

Of course, in order to be entitled to re-employment rights, you, must have satisfoctroily completed your period of service and have a certificate to that effect. In addition, the job you left in order to enter the service must have been with a Private Employer, the United States Government, or any Political subdivision of the United States Government. Employees of States and their subdivision are not covered by the Federal laws, but most states have their own laws under which they may be covered.

The job you left must have been a PERMANENT job and you must still be qualified to perform the duties of the job. Application for re-employment must be made within 90 days after you are relieved from military training. And the employer's circumstances must not have changed to such extent as to make it impossible or Unreasonable to restore you to your old job, or one of the same type and with the same pay.

Now, if you can meet all these requirements, which are very reasonable, what rights are provided for you? Well, your employer must restore you to your old job, or one similar to it, in which you will get the same pay, and keep your same standing with your company. You shall be considered as being on a furlough, or leave of absence from your old job during your period of military services. When you return to your old job, you will be entitled to take part in insurance or other benefits according to the established rules and practices in effect at the time you entered service. You shall not be discharged from the job within one year, without just cause.

Now, suppose you meet all requirements and your employer refuses to restore you to the position to which you believe you are entitled. What can you do about it? The circumstances of both the employer and the veteran may have changed in many respects. Whether such changes are sufficient to deny an employee of the rights which the Congress means to confer, must depend upon the facts in each case. Any person who desires assistance with re-employment problems may contact the nearest office of the State Employment Service. Where necessary, he will be referred to a local volunteer committeeman for information and assistance.

In cases where such problems can be solved locally, you may get in touch with the nearest office of the Bureau of Veterans' Re-Employment Rights. The office in Atlanta serves the State of Alabama. A Field Representative of the Bureau will consider all the facts in the case and will make every effort to work out some arrangement which will be satisfactory to the veteran and his employer.

NOTICE

An Ordinance Fixing and Prescribing Rates and Charges For Services and Facilities To Be Furnished By The Gas System To Be Constructed By The Town Of Columbiana, Alabama.

Be It Ordained By The Town Council Of The Town Of Columbiana as follows:

Section A. RATES - That the rates for the services and facilities to be furnished by the Gas System to be constructed by the Town of Columbiana, are hereby fixed, uniformly throughout the territory to be served by said System, as follows, subject to such adjustments from time to time as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of the Ordinance, entitled "An Ordinance Authorizing And Providing For The Issuance And Sale Of $285,000 4% Gas System Revenue Bonds Of The Town Of Columbiana, Alabama, For The Purpose Of Defraying The Cost Of Construction Of A Gas System For Said Town And Surrounding Territory, Prescribing The Details Of Said Bonds, And Providing For The Collection, Segregation And Distribution Of The Revenues From Said Gas System," adopted by the Town Council on August 12th, 1952; pursuant to which said Ordinance Bonds are to be issued to finance the cost of constructing said gas system:

For the first 300 cubic feet or fraction thereof a minimum monthly bill of $1.00

For the next 1,000 cubic feet or fraction thereof 1.50 per MCF

For the next 1,700 cubic feet or fraction thereof 1.30 per MCF

For the next 17,000 cubic feet or fraction thereof .80 per MCF

For the next 30,000 cubic feet or fraction thereof .60 per MCF

All over 50,000 cubic feet .50 per MCF

That the Mayor and Clerk are hereby authorized, with the prior consent and approval of the Council, to enter into individual contracts with any customer normally using not less than 25,000 cubic feet or more than 200,000 cubic feet of gas per day for the furnishing of the services and facilities of the system, upon such terms and conditions as may be mutually agreed upon, provided, however, that no preferential rates shall be given to users of the same class, and provided such rates are substantially as follows:

For Large Commercial And Industrial Users:

The following schedule of monthly charges consisting of two parts shall be applicable to customers of this class:

Demand Charge: $2 per 1,000 cubic feet of billing demand. (The maximum quantity of gas delivered by Town to customer on any day during the 12 months' period ending with the close of such month.) Commodity Charge: 20c per 1,000 cubic feet of monthly delivery. Minimum Bill: The demand charge.

Industrial - Interruptible Rate:

The industrial gas rate hereinafter set forth shall be available to any non-residential customer whose requirements are more than 200,000 cubic feet for any day in the twelve (12) months' period preceding the last billing date; but no such customer shall receive in excess of 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas in any day. This rate shall be as follows:

Interruptible Gas $.28 per MCF based on 1,000 BTU Gas per cubic foot.

Gas sold under this schedule shall be subject to curtailment in whole or in part during periods of peak demand upon two hours' notice. Customers may contract for a limited daily and hourly quantity of firm gas which shall not be subject to curtailment except under the conditions set out in customer's contract.

The minimum monthly bill and other requirements for interruptible industrial gas shall be by special contract.

Section B - Regulations. Gas service shall be subject to the following:

1. That all persons, firms, private and public corporations desiring gas service for domestic and small commercial use shall first make application therefor on forms provided by the Town and if approved, shall pay the required amounts, all as hereinafter set forth.

2. That all gas service, except as herein provided, shall be furnished upon a metered basis and a separate meter shall be installed for each property served with gas; that the delivery point shall be at the outlet side of the Town's meter and that no seperate delivery points shall be consolidated for billing purposes without the consent of the Town.

3. That no gas service shall be furnished or rendered free of charge to any person, firm, corporation, political subdivision of the State, or to any Federal agency.

4. That all gas meters shall be read at approximately 30-day intervals and based upon such readings, bills shall be rendered monthly; that all gas bills shall be due and payable on and after the date of rendition at the Office of the Town Clerk or designated person during the regular hours of business.

5. That the rates and charges set forth herein are net, the gross rates being 110% thereof, and that if any gas bill is not paid within 10 days from the date of rendition, the gross rates shall apply.

6. That if any bill for gas service shall be and remain as long as 30 days past due and unpaid, gas service to such customer shall be discontinued and shall not be restored until all past due bills are paid in full, including a service charge of $3.00 for restoring service. It shall be the duty of the Town Clerk to notify the operator of the gas system, who shall proceed immediately to disconnect or otherwise terminate gas service of the customer so in arrears.

7. That for each new connection to the gas mains on or after January 1, 1954 the person or firm applying for service shall, if said application is approved by the Town, pay to the Town Clerk, in addition to any other applicable charges, a tapping fee equal to the actual cost of installing a service line from the gas main to the location of the meter, regulator, and fittings to be furnished by the Town.

8. That the service agreements with customers presumes the continuous use or availablility of gas for a 12-months' period and contemplates the payment of the minimum monthly bill or for such gas used at the prescribed rates. In the event a customer requests a termination of service prior to the end of such period for reasons other than a change of occupancy or ownership, there shall be, if such request is granted by the Town, a charge of $3.00 for discontinuing service.

9. That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to tamper with or change any gas meter, to make any connection to the gas meter without permission from the Town, or to reconnect service when it has been disconnected for nonpayment of a bill for service until such bill has been paid in full, including any applicable service charge.

Section C - COVENANT TO MAINTAIN RATES.

That as the issuance and sale of the 4% Gas System Revenue Bonds of the Town of Columbiana, Alabama, has been predicated upon a covenant by the Town to maintain such rates for service provided by the gas system as shall produce revenues sufficient to pay the reasonable cost of operation and maintenance of said system, and to pay the principal and interest on said bonds promptly as the same shall become due, and to maintain a reasonable reserve therefor, the rates in this ordinance shall not be changed to the extent that the covenant above referred to will be impaired or adversely affected.

Section D - PUBLICATION.

A copy of this Ordinance shall be published in The Reporter-Democrat, a newspaper published and of general circulation in the Town of Columbiana. Any customer shall be furnished a copy of this Ordinance upon request Whether so published or not, or whether a copy is furnished to a customer or not, this Ordinance shall nevertheless be effective as fixing the rates and charges which any customer, by accepting services from said Gas System agrees to pay and the terms and conditions of rendering the same.

Notes On Your Family Doctor

Dr. E. F. Sloan, County Health Officer

On December 22, 1823 the people of Alabama placed in the hands of the Medical Profession the responsibility of determining the qualifications of any person to practice the Art and Science of Healing.

Since that date the requirements to obtain a Doctor of Medicine degree have been steadily increased.

Your doctor today must spend 8 years in College and one year in a hospital and then pass the examination of the State Board of Medical Examiners, composed of 10 eminent physicians and surgeons, to qualify him to practice medicine.

He then stays abreast of the constant advances in his profession by attending the meetings of his county, State and National Medical organizations; and by attending clinics from time to time. He also has access to the various medical periodicals.

He alone can prescribe and use the great chemotherapeutic agents and antibiotics that have so shortened the duration of many diseases and have greatly lowered the mortality rates. He alone can prescribe drugs to relieve you of acute pain.

During the past few years many cults of so-called healers have sprung up, outside the pale of the law. These cultists have, as a rule, a meagre education, the average duration of training being 2 years or less. They are not in position to broaden their education because they do not have access to hospitals, clinics, medical literature or medical societies.

The ethics of the medical profession forbid that they advertise. The cultists advertise their claims with wild abandon.

One of the chief dangers in these cultists is the fact that a patient with such diseases as Cancer, Tuberculosis, Acute Appendicitis, Intestinal Obstruction, Laryngeal Diphtheria, Polio and many others, may delay proper treatment until their hope of recovery is lost.

An adjoining State has recently passed strenuous laws dealing with these cultists and there has, therefore, been an influx of these individuals into Alabama.

It is felt that this warning to the people is necessary for their own protection.

A tasty sandwich is made from mashing one can of sardines, adding two hardboiled eggs mashed, and adding salad dressing to moisten.

Farm News

PUT AN END TO BUCKET BRIGADES ON THE FARM

An electric water system in the average farm home makes possible the installation of modern kitchen and bathroom facilities.

"It can also eliminate about 49 miles of 'water toting' just to keep the family supplied with drinking water each year," reveals William T. Cox, API Extension specialist in farm buildings.

He adds that with the help of an electric clothes washer, running water can reduce the annual time spent in the laundry by 144 hours.

GROW MORE AND BETTER WINTER GRAZING CROPS

There are several things many Alabama farmers can do to grow more and better supplenmentary winter grazing crops.

"Of course," says D. R. Harbor, API Extension agronomist, "success will depend to a large extent upon the weather during the months of September, October, and November. But with usual weather conditions that prevail during these months, it will be best to plant a mixture rather than one kind of seed. The reason for planting a mixture is that if one of the crops fail the other will most likely succeed. And it is desirable to have a grass with a legume to help control bloat in cattle."

Harbor adds that another thing farmers can do is to plant several different mixtures for winter grazing. Also, it might be helpful to stagger seeding dates by planting some seed early, others a week or two later, and still others a little later.

WINTER GREENS

Don't forget that turnips and collards tie for first place in southern winter gardens.

TIP FOR COTTON GROWERS

Weevils will destroy more cotton late in the season than at any other time.

To make a clear, slightly thick gravy for chicken pie, beat an egg thoroughly, add a little chicken broth slowly, and stir mixture into remaining broth.

FARM BUREAU OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS TO MEET

The Officers and Directors of the Shelby County Farm Bureau along with the Home Demonstration Farm Bureau Chairmen are urged to attend a meeting on Tuesday night, September 2nd, at 7:30 P. M. This will be a Supper Meeting with important business matters to be brought before the group afterwards. Mark this on your calendar NOW and be there.

HELENA H. D. C. HAS SUPPER

August is the month of picnics for the Home Demonstration Clubs of Shelby County. The Helena Club planned a picnic for Thursday, August 14th. Due to the rain, we couldn't have our picnic, but we did carry our food to the Civitan Hall. Everyone had a wonderful time in spite of the rain.

WILSONVILLE H. D. C. HAS ANNUAL PICNIC

The Wilsonville Home Demonstration Club had its annual picnic out at Bolton Springs Friday, August 22. Each family brought a picnic lunch; fried chicken, potato salad, sandwiches, cakes and pies were enjoyed by at least 24 members and their children.

Afterwards wading was enjoyed by some of the children and even some adults. A wonderful day was had by all.

The next meeting will be held September 19th, the hostess to be announced later.

HONEY ADDS ZEST TO SUMMER TREATS

Honey makes a good sweetening for summer fruits and beverages, according to Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist.

For example, she says that a delicious fruit cup for the first oro last course of a meal is made by arranging whole or diced canned or fresh fruits attractively, mixing honey with lemon juice and pouring it over the servings before chilling.

Miss Hulsey adds that honey ambrosia salad can be a cooling hot weather treat. Slice peeled oranges and dip the slices in honey. Then dip in shredded coconut. Arrange the slices on salad plates.... about five slices for each serving. Heap halves of berries in the center where the orange slices meet, if desired. Pour a little honey over the fruit in the center to make a light coating. Serve cold.

BEST WAY TO CAN TEMPTING PEACHES

The best way to can peaches is to make a thin or medium syrup befre preparing fruit.

"To make the right amount," says Lavada Curtis, API Extension food preservation specialist, "allow one cup of syrup for each quart jar. Of course, the syrup should remain hot until used."

Miss Curtis says to scald ripe peaches, place in cold water to cool, and then place them in a dry container and begin peeling. As the peaches is peeled and stone removed, place it in the jar. When one leayer is placed in the jar, cover with syrup. This will prevent peaches from darkening. Remove air bubbles and process pint and quart jars in a waterbath canner for 15 minutes.

VALUE OF A SOUND LAND-USE PROGRAM

Farmers know that a sound land-use program provides for cropping land in such a way that the soil will be held in place and its fertility maintained and improved.

And S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist, points out that the cropping system or rotation used on any given field will depend upon the slope, type, and condition of the soil. However, regardless of the system in use, maximum use should be made of good, thick-growing ground cover. It will control erosion, provide forage for livestock, and build up the productivity of the soil.

Farm Labor Situation Serious

"The farm labor situation throughout the country is becoming more acute and serious," according to C. R. Schoby, President of the American Dairy Association.

Mr. Schoby, an Iowa dairy farmer, says growing shortages of dairy farm workers and the heavy investment a dairy farm demands today leads him to wonder if the question "how much does a quart of milk cost" may turn into "where can we get a quart of milk?"

"Census figures show," Mr. Schoby declared, "that there were about 1,320,000 fewer people working on U. S. farms in 1950 than in 1940.

"The decline of farm workers was caused largely by the decrease in the number of farm operators and family workers who are members of the operator's family, resulting from the decrease in the number of farms. There were approximately 500,000 fewer hired workers on farms in 1950 than in 1940. Expenditures for hired labor were 271 per cent greater than in 1939.

"The number of farms in the United States in 1950 was 495,000 less than in 1945 and 713,000 less than in 1940. The average size of farms increased from 174.0 acres in 1940 to 194.8 acres in 1945 and 210.5 acres in 1950. The percentage of farms operated by tenants declined from 38.7 in 1940 to 31.7 in 1945 and to 26.7 in 1950.

"Displacement of about 3,500,000 American farm workers by 1970 as a result of labor-saving devices 'revolutionary in impact' is forecast in a recent study made public by a Senate committee."

Mr. Schoby said that dairy farmers are using all possible mechanical devices to help them carry on their 365 day a year job of milk production.

"Mass production of milk on the dairy farm is not sufficient to take up the loss of labor," he added, "and overcome gradual disappearance of the family type farm. During the five years from 1945 to 1950 there was a decline of 124,000 in farms of from 100 to 219 acres."

CAMP BRANCH CHURCH

The community enjoyed a truly Spiritual uplift last week during revival services, under the leadership of the pastor, Newton Maloney, Gerald Duncan, Evangelist and Rev. Carl Chambers, singer. The consecration of these fine young men to the work of the Kingdom of God was an inspiration to each of us.

The Commencement exercises of Vacation Bible School was held Sunday at the eleven o'clock hour and showed a fine piece of work done by the children under the direction of the following teachers: Miss Romena Grimes, Beginners Department; Mrs. C. K. Roach, Primary Department; Mrs. Forrest Templin and Mrs. Herbert Fulton, Junior Department; and Mrs. R. S. Dixon, the Intermediate Department. Mrs. Jim Redfield served as dean for the school. A good number of children was awarded certificates. The W. S. C. S. sponsored the Bible School.

For a good fresh vegetable salad, try this recipe: Select a small, firm head of cabbage and remove the outside leave. Cut one the center carefully, leaving the outside shell. Shred the cabbage which has been removed, mix with shredded carrots, green pepper, and thin slice of tart apple. Mix lightly with French dressing and refill cabbage shell.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION SEPTEMBER 15

Although there is no opposition to the Municipal Ticket for Mayor and Councilmen in Columbiana this year, every citizen should go to the polls and extend the "City Fathers" the courtesy of a "vote of confidence."

The fact that there is no opposition bespeaks, in a way, that their altruistic endeavors to make Columbiana a better and a more progressive town in which to live, have been satisfactory, but if all the eligible voters in this town were to take just a little time out, and vote, I feel sure those chosen to continue directing the affairs of Columbiana, would appreciate it.

In looking thru some of the weeklies last week, I came across an article written by Earl Tucker, editor of Thomasville Times and here is what Editor Tucker has to say regarding his tenure in municipal service. We quote Mr. Tucker:

"I spent fifty years of my life, over a period of four years, serving as a member of the City Council. Brother, let me tell you something: It was awful! When an opportunity presented itself I handed in my resignation, but even now, after thirteen years of freedom I still shudder to think what I went through and get into a rage when I remember the many insults that were heaped upon my head. People blamed me if their garbage wasn't carted off. They expected me to climb a pole and replace a burned-out street light. They undoubtedly thought I should get a broom and sweep the streets.

"It was during that four-year period that I discovered that people found cows and mules eating their flowers and shrubbery at 1 A. M., or just after the break of dawn. They called me and the things they said were most unkind. It so happens that I am not overly fond of cows and mules anyhow, and the things I said back to the parties that called me cannot be printed herein. Maybe it was a good thing I resigned, but I simply refuse to be a night-time cowboy.

"If the water pressure got low they called and wanted to know what I expected to do about it. Far too many people demanded over-drive progress with low-gear taxation."

(Thomasville Times)

Holding any public office is no "bed of roses"... brickbats as well as bouquets are strewn along the way, but, we believe the present administration has done an excellent job, and that they have enjoyed the full cooperation of the citizens of this town, or definite achievements would not have been possible.

So, let's unite our efforts again and complete the many fine things now under way, and promote others not yet on the agenda for 1953... and on September 15, go down and vote your O. K. on the public spirited fellows who are willing to again shoulder the responsibilities that go with this civic distinction.

ALABASTER - WATCH US GROW

The most appropriate slogan we know, and one that is being "lived up to" is: "Alabaster - Watch Us Grow". To this writer's way of thinking, this area in Shelby County is going forward by leaps and bounds and we want you to keep your eyes on this paper, for, at an early date, we are going to be "more specific" regarding this section of Shelby County and we are sure, if there are any skeptical readers among us who doubt the above statement, the factual evidence we shall present, will be most convincing! Just watch for this information!

We are proud of Alabaster and of the men who are undertaking its forward movement in all directions. When one part of our county takes a step up into the realm of permanent development, thats news, in which the whole county should proudly share, and no one thing pleases us more than the privilege we have in recording these current happenings. Watch for it!

First National Bank Starts Tree Fund

The Tree Club, launched in Columbiana to beautyfy streets and gardens was organized this week with the election of a president and appointment of certain working committees.

James I. Harrison, president of the First National Bank, who was one of those recognizing Columbiana's great need of trees and shrubs, and who was a leader in promoting the idea of a Tree Club to further this need was unanimously elected president. A procurement and planting committee was appointed, with Luther Curlee chairman and Mrs. Fay Miles Benton, Mrs. John Green and Elvin Hill as members. Leon Meyers chairman, and Miss Myrtle Miles compose a placement committee which, under advice of property owners will select trees appropriate to locations. Mrs. Hugh Sims was named chairman of the finance committee, members of which are B. F. Hatchett and Hugh Sims.

Through the generosity of the First National Bank, a fund has been started toward purchasing trees for distribution this fall and winter. The Bank gave $50.00, a check for which is in the hands of Mrs. Hugh Sims, treasurer, who will receive contributions to be added and will announce names of the givers in the Reporter-Democrat.

It was brought out that, while a gift of several hundred pines promised for the Conservation Department by Hap Hatchett, can be counted on and other gifts of trees from various agencies will be secured, money will be required with which to buy nursery trees, of flowering varieties and those with distinctive foliage. The procurement and planting committee will make an effort to supply individual needs. A number of persons have, for example, expressed a wish to replace crepe myrtle plants, some of which have died. The beauty of these remaining young plants, however, has been remarked by everyone this season, as they have given splashes of beautiful color in every part of the town.

The cooperation of all civic-minded Columbiana people is urgently needed to make this venture a success. It is expected that the civic clubs will be leaders in this move that is so definitely in line with their ideals and purposes, and it was announced that they will be approached on the subject as soon as the fall meetings are under way.

H. D. C. LEADERS ATTEND TRAINING MEETING

OVER MILLION YARDS COTTON DUCK MADE

A new post-war record of 108,000,000 linear yards of cotton duck were produced in the first quarter of 1952, according to the National Production Authority.

The last record year of cotton duck production was in 1943, when 150,000,000 linear yards were produced.

DAN HARPER

DAN J. HARPER, USN RECEIVES COMMENDATION

July 10, 1952

From: Commanding Officer

To: Dan J. Harper, 276 43 91, ETI, USN

Subj: Commanding Officer's Commendation

1. On the night of 26 June 1952, under darkened and adverse conditions you were instrumental in greatly assisting in the salvage operation of the LCPL belonging to this vessel.

2. Your wholehearted willingness to perform this diving, such duty not considered a part of your normal assignments, constitutes an act above and beyond the call of duty and is in the highest tradition of Naval Service. For this you are highly deserving of this commendation.

3. This shall become a permanent part of your service record.

J. Van Osdol
Commanding Officer

Congratulations from classmates and friends we feel sure will be winging their way to "Somewhere In The Pacific" where gallant Dan Harper is stationed. MWW.

VILLA BENTLEY WINS COUNTY MAID OF COTTON CONTEST

Carrying the hopes of Shelby County into the state Maid of Cotton contest this year is Miss Villa Bentley, 24, social worker and graduate of Alabama College.

Miss Bentley was named Shelby County Maid of Cotton Friday night, August 29th in a special cotton program at the Shelby County High School, Columbiana.

Alternate Maid of Cotton is Miss Marcia Buck, 19, of Chelsea.

Miss Bentley, five feet, five inches tall, weighs 120. She is the daughter of E. W. Bentley, Columbiana.

She has blue eyes and brown hair. She graduated from Alabama College, where she majored in biology and chemistry. She became a hospital technician, taking her training at St. Margaret's Hospital, Montgomery. However, at present, she is employed in Columbiana as a case worker by the Department of Public Welfare.

She was sponsored by the Columbiana Kiwanis Club in the Maid of Cotton contest.

At Alabama College, Miss Bentley participated in Elite Night, was treasurer of the junior class, a member of the student senate, and was a "Purple" for four years at College Night. "And", she adds proudly, "the Purples won each year." She is a member of the choir of the Columbiana Baptist Church.

The Alternate Maid, Miss Buck, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray S. Buck, Chelsea. She is five feet, seven inches tall and weighs 128. She has brown eyes and light brown hair. A junior at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, she is majoring in secretarial sciences.

Judges were O. V. Hill, Talladega county agent; Miss Irby Barrett, Jefferson county home agent; and Luther Fuller, TCI, Birmingham.

Other contestants were Miss Peggy Perry, Miss Faye Wilson, Miss Martha Morrow, Miss Doris Edwards, Miss Hazel Davidson, Miss Ida Joe DeVaughn and Miss Willie Garrett.

Mrs. J. Frank Baker conducted the program and introduced each contestant. Organ music was by Homer Walton, Jr. The contest details were handled by a special Maid of Cotton Committee composed of Mrs. J. Frank Wyatt, chairman; H. A. Pauly, Mrs. Douglas Kent, A. C. Adams, Mrs. E. B. Hughes, Mrs. J. H. Crawford and W. Royce Morris.

NEW WELFARE BUDGET MAY OFFER AID BOOSTS

A new budget for the State Welfare Department for the fiscal year beginning October 1 may provide increases for those on public assistance.

It will be submitted to members of the State Welfare Board when they meet in Montgomery during the week beginning September 24.

Welfare Commissioner Bill Dorrough declined to estimate how much the increase might be. He said some 12,000 cases have been dropped off welfare rolls this year.

That will leave more money to be passed on to others, if the board approves.

REGISTRAR LISTS WHO MAY RECEIVE BALLOT BY MAIL

Please don't write for an absentee ballot unless you're a soldier, a soldier's wife, or a disabled veteran in a hospital.

That was the word recently from Registrar Pauline Bird, of Chancery Court which handles absentee ballots here.

"Any other person may come to the office between Oct. 15 and 30, and we'll give them a ballot," said Mrs. Bird. We're allowed to mail ballots only to those named.

Those who may write for the ballots must write between 40 and five days before the election. A certificate from commanding officer is necessary when the person is in the armed services.

P. T. A. MEETING NEXT TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9

'UNCLE HARMON' DAVIS DIES

"Uncle Harmon" Davis, a familiar figure on the streets of Columbiana for many years, died at his home in the Davis settlement Sunday morning at the advanced age of 88 years. Up to a short time before his death, Mr. Davis was active and hardly a week passed that you did not see him in Columbiana with a load of cross ties, stove wood or kindling wood for sale.

Funeral services were held Monday. He is survived by his wife and seven children. Interment in Rocky Ridge Cemetery.

PLANS MADE FOR STATE FAIR

A. A. Lauderdale is making preparations for exhibits from Shelby County. The Fair will be held September 26, and if all county exhibits are in place on time, a bonus to the County Manager will be awarded amounting to $100.00. This bonus is awarded by the Fair Management.

FANCHER AND SIMS HELD WITHOUT BOND

In the preliminary trial of Walter Fancher and J. C. Sims of Straven, charged with the killing of Simon T. Eddings, before Judge J. M. Leonard Saturday, both defendants were remanded to jail without bond. A large number of witnesses were heard and the trial consumed practically the entire day.

GOODWIN-LEE POST 138 ERECTS LEGION HUT

The American Legion, Goodwin-Lee Post No. 138, has constructed a Legion Hut which is located just one and a half miles West of Alabaster, on Smokey Ridge, at a cost of $7,000.00. The building measures 55 x 90 feet and is large enough to accommodate any party or dance the Legionaires might stage.

Meetings are held on the first and third Sunday afternoons at 3 o'clock, and any member of any Legion Post is cordially invited to attend these meetings.

The Legion is making a drive for new members, and 350 is their goal. If you are eligible to join this splendid patriotic organization, go to your nearest Post and you may be assured that any member will be glad to introduce you to the personnel and urge you to participate in these meetings.

At the Goodwin-Lee Post No. 138 you will find Lester Atkisson as Commander; Wesley Reach as Vice-Commander; and R. M. Woodard as Adjutant.

The next big event on this calendar of activities is a Bingo Party which will be staged October 3, but, every Friday night, if you will visit this new Legion Hut, you will find congenial parties engaged in playing games, and entering contests in which awards are given, and always delectable refreshments are served to members and their guests.

Any Legionaire will be warmly welcomed. Join the Post nearest you today.

WATER COOLER FUND STARTED FOR THIRSTY, NEEDY CHILDREN

A little fellow about three years sat on the floor and looked unhappy through the gateway into an outer hall. His face was streaked with tears.

His throat was dry and he wanted some water, but the water spigot was on the other side of the gateway. So was the nurse.

She couldn't hear his call over the din of the other children.

When she returned she saw him there and she knew what he wanted although he couldn't tell her. She got a cup, filled it with the warm water that the drinking system provided, nd took it to him. He gulped it down greedily.

This is no fairy tale; It's the true story of conditions at Partlow School in Tuscaloosa where some 1700 children, some unable to help themselves, until recently had only two spigots from which they could obtain drinking water, and its coldness was near atmosphere temperature. With summertime temperatures of 104 degrees in Tuscaloosa this is a condition almost unthinkable.

Patrons of Partlow State School, a newly formed organization, have realized the situation and hope—with the help of their fellow Alabama citizens to do something about it.

Raymond H. Carr of 1508 South 14th Street, Birmingham, a retired naval officer, has been designated chairman of the drinking fountain committee.

After a careful survey, Mr. Carr said it was determined by the board of survey that nineteen coolers would be needed at the school.

He is out on a statewide crusade now trying to raise an estimated $3500 to buy and install the coolers, which can be bought at a wholesale cost of about $162 each. Over $500 already has been contributed. Four new electrically cooled water coolers have already been installed and are in service at the school.

He said he hopes different civic clubs will each contribute enough for a cooler, or sponsor half a cooler in conjunction with another club. He would like to receive donations—no matter how small from individuals.

The Birmingham newspapers are aware of the conditions at the school and understands the need for these coolers, as each paper has printed several articles regarding their desireability.

Just make your check or money order out to R. H. CARR, The Water Cooler Fund, Partlow School, and mail to him at 1508 South 14th Street, Birmingham 5, Alabama. It will help a thirsty unfortunate child get a good cool drink of water these hot summer days.

The first term of the Alabama Supreme Court was held at Cahaba. This initial session began on the first Monday in May, 1820.

Hamilton, the county seat of Marion County, was named in honor of Captain Albert J. Hamilton, the man who donated the site upon which the town was built.

STATE OWNED LITTLE WHITE HOUSE INVITES GROUPS TO VISIT SHRINE

INCREASED NUMBERS of groups from this and other nearby states have been visiting The Little White House (above) at Warm Springs, Ga., this summer and many more are expected. These groups include 4-H clubs, FFA, Home Demonstration clubs, Junior Safety Patrols, Scouts and church and Sunday School groups. The Little White House, where President Franklin D. Roosevelt lived part time and where he died, has become a national shrine with visitors from all over the world. Here may be seen the famous "Unfinished Portrait," which was being painted when he was stricken and which is now owned by the state of Georgia, as is The Little White House property. The painting is valued at $50,000. The management invites groups to visit the grounds and cottage and makes a special admission rate to the— ●

Bible Comment:

Get the Most Out Of Life by Keeping God's Great Laws

HOW can one get the most out of life? This is a question that has agitated many minds as far back as man became a thinking being. Some haven't given much thought to it and have drifted through life, without much thought about plans or goals.

But among those who have pondered it, and to whom some choice is possible in determining what sort of lives they would live, there have been varying decisions. To many the chief aim has been to get as much enjoyment out of life as possible.

Other goals of life have been the acquiring of wealth often without much regard for its essential value and use; the acquisition of power, with the mastery and sway over great empires.

Gentler souls have made contemplation their chief quest, retiring into some form of cloistered living. Some have made knowledge their deepest satisfaction, often without much wisdom concerning its essential value and use.

The Hebrew prophets and poets had much to say concerning these various quests. If the writer of the Book of Ecclesiastes seems an incurable pessimist, declaring that all is vanity, it should be remembered that he is exploring the futility of what he deems false and unsatisfying quests, but is setting over against them what he considers man's proper goal.

His "conclusion of the whole matter" is: "Fear God and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man."

What does that mean? God, to these Hebrews, was the creator and upholder of the universe. To His laws governing the earth and the heavenly bodies they found a parallel in the moral law, governing man and his relationship to his fellowmen. Hence the conception of uprightness became dominant of all thought of the best in life. To keep the commandments was, therefore, the means and goal of the true life. In characters that need reforming, and a world that needs rebuilding, it may well be asked, is there any other way?

Sidney Lanier, the famous Georgia poet, once worked as a desk clerk in Montgomery's old Exchange Hotel. The hotel was owned by his grandfather.

NOTICE OF SALE

The Housing Authority Of The Town of Columbiana, Alabama, New Housing Authority Bonds (First Issue)

Sealed proposals will be received by The Housing Authority of the Town of Columbiana, Alabama (herein called the Local Authority), at its office in Mountain View Apt. No. 1, Alabama Avenue, in the Town of Columbiana, Alabama until, and publicly opened at One o'clock P. M., (C. S. T.) (three o'clock P. M., E. S. T.), on September 23, 1952, for the purchase of $560,000.00 bonds of the Local Authority to be known as "New Housing Authority Bonds (First Issue)" (herein called the "Bonds"), being issued to aid in financing its low-rent housing projects designated as Projects Nos. Ala.-72-1 and 72-2.

The Bonds will be in the denomination of $1000 each, will be dated September 1, 1951, will mature serially on September 1, each year commencing September 1, 1953, and ending September 1, 1992, and will bear interest from September 1, 1952, payable semiannually on March 1, and September 1. Both principal and interest will be payable at the office of the Fiscal Agent of the Local Authority appointed pursuant to the Resolution authorizing the Bonds or at the option of the holder at the principal office of an alternate paying agent in the City and State of New York as may be prescribed by the successful bidder for the Bonds. The successful bidder may also prescribe an additional alternate paying agent for the Bonds.

Each proposal must (1) be submitted on a form prescribed by the Local Authority which will more particularly describe the Bonds, the terms of optional redemption thereof, and the conditions of the contract to purchase the Bonds, (2) prescribe a single rate of interest which shall be a multiple of one-eighth (1/8) of one per cent (1%) per annum to be borne by all of the Bonds, (3) prescribe a schedule of annual maturities on the basis prescribed in the Annual Contributions Contract between the Local Authority and the Public Housing Administration relating to the Project, (4) offer to purchase all of the Bonds at a price of not less than par and accrued interest to the date of delivery and payment therefor, (5) be accompanied by a certified or cashier's check payable to the order of the Local Authority in the amount of $11,200.00 as a good faith deposit, and (6) be enclosed in a sealed envelope addressed to the Local Authority which should be marked on the outside "Proposal for Bonds."

The award will be made to the bidder complying with the terms of sale and offering to purchase the Bonds at the lowest rate of interest, without reference to premium; provided, however, that if two or more bidders offer to purchase the Bonds at the same lowest rate of interest, then such award will be made to the bidder offering the highest premium. The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals.

Schedules of annual maturities, on the basis prescribed in the aforesaid Annual Contributions Contract, at various interest rates and prescribed proposal forms will be furnished to bidders upon request addressed to the Local Authority or to the General Counsel of the Public Housing Administration, Longfellow Building, Washington 25, D. C., or to the Field Office Director of the Public Housing Administration in the cities of New York, N. Y.; Atlanta, Ga.; Fort Worth, Texas; Chicago, Ill.; San Francisco, Cal.; Boston, Mass.; Richmond, Va.; and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The Bonds will be general obligations of the Local Authority secured by a first pledge of annual contributions unconditionally payable pursuant to the aforesaid Annual Contributions Contract in an amount which, together with other funds of the Local Authority which are actually available for such purpose, will be sufficient to pay the principal of and interest on the Bonds when due, and bidders may condition their proposals upon receiving the unqualified approving opinion of bond counsel designated by them to that effect and whose fees or charges they will be obligated to pay.

NOTICE OF TIMBER SALE

Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be called for and received until 2:00 P. M., September 10, 1952, at the office of the Department of Conservation, 7 North Bainbridge Street, Montgomery 4, Alabama, by the Director of Conservation, acting by and for the State of Alabama for all merchantable timber on seventy-six acres, more or less, of a proposed lakesite on Oak Mountain State Park, Shelby County; said lakesite lying in parts of Sections 13 and 24 T 19 S, R 2 W and part of Section 18 T 19 S, R 1 W.

Composition of the timber on this area has been estimated by Scribner Rule as follows: These volumes are estimates only and are not guaranteed. The Scribner volumes ordinarily saw out ten percent more than the estimate:

Pine 843 trees	105,760 bd. ft.
Poplar 59 trees	8,550 bd. ft.
White Oak 60 trees	5,400 bd. ft.
Red Oak and Post Oak	5,510 bd. ft.
Hickory	2,100 bd. ft.
Beech	1,530 bd. ft.
Grand Total	128,850 bd. ft.
Pine pulpwood	App. 100 cords

These figures include all trees inside the water line, which is surveyed and marked, and trees standing within five feet of the water line. Trees tallied outside of the water line and marked with a spot of yellow paint at 4½ feet above ground and stump height are also included.

The pine is approximately 98% loblolly, containing approximately 1% each of longleaf and shortleaf. Logging conditions are good over most of the area.

The purchaser will be required to remove the timber by the Cahaba Valley road, which passes within a few hundred yards of the area, in order to eliminate a hazard to traffic on the State Park roads. The purchaser may remove all merchantable timber, but must leave no stumps higher than six inches from the ground. All trees occurring near the water line, the stumps of which will be under two feet or less of water, must be cut at ground level or not over two inches from the ground.

An area of approximately five acres making up the dam site and borrow pit must be cleared of all merchantable timber by October 1, 1952. The remaining area must be cleared of all merchantable timber by November 1, 1952.

Terms of Sale, Cash, with a ten percent deposit in the form of a certified check made payable to the Director of Conservation, to accompany the bid. The deposit will be applied toward the purchase price of the timber, except in the case of the unsuccessful bidders, whose deposits will be returned.

A performance bond of not less than $2,000.00 (two thousand dollars) will be required of the successful bidder to insure compliance with the contract of sale.

A sample timber sale contract may be obtained by writing the Alabama Division of Forestry, Department of Conservation, 607 Monroe Street, Montgomery 4, Alabama.

The envelope containing bid should be marked Timber Bid so it will not be opened prematurely as ordinary mail.

The right to reject any and all bids is reserved by the Department of Conservation.

ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

B. F. Hatchett and G. C. Starcher

R. W. Kent, Siluria, is one of a number of farmers over the North Central Soil Conservation District who is trying out a new forage crop for the S. C. S.

Mr. Kent planted several acres of Tombigbee grain sorghum at the same time he planted regular higera (high-gear) grain sorghum in the same field.

Last week there was a striking difference in appearance between the two. There is a much heavier growth on the "Tombigbee", which is 6 feet tall and branching quite a lot. For grain production the higera is in the lead, having herds of only 3 feet tall. Since Mr. Kent expects to harvest the crops for silage we expect him to like Tombigbee.

The final place this improved reseeding chicken corn will take in Shelby's farm program is not clear. Its reseeding qualities may cause it to fit in well with reseeding crimson or button clover.

In the meanwhile we have our work cut out for us getting sufficient ground prepared for fescue-ladino, rescue-crimson clover, oats-crimson, button clover, and other crops needed to help feed cattle and hogs this winter.

The veterans, 100 per cent cooperators with the S. C. S. had a booth at the fair listing 1952 accomplishments of the 35 men on training now. It is a remarkable record. We like the heavy acreage in sericea, pasture and winter grazing.

When cooking rice, add two tablespoons vinegar to the boiling, heavily salted water. It gives the rice an indescribably delicate flavor and encourages fluffiness.

Growth of a Soul

Lesson for September 7, 1952

AFTER A MAN IS DEAD, and indeed while he is still alive, we ought to remember the best about him and forget the worst. That is how we want to be treated, ourselves. But human beings are so perverse that we often do just the opposite. We remember the worst, forget the best. This is so in the case of the great King David.

Dr. Foreman

A novel was once written about him in which his lie was pictured as a curve high in the middle, bending down sharply at both ends. After his great sins of adultery and murder, so the story went, he went on down and down hill to the end. This is not the picture we get from the Bible. In many ways his later days were sad; his fortunes declined, as we say. But his soul did not decline. The latter days of David show us how even a man who has sinned can rise again; how even an ageing man can grow in soul.

Signs of Growth

NOT THAT a man has to sin as David did in order to grow. In order to be healthy it is not necessary to be half-dead with ever first; yet even after a long stay in the sanitarium it is possible for a man to make his way to full health and strength.

Now David, though he fell, "did not blind his soul with clay." The experience struck down his pride; he realized with shame what he had done. Some men must wake bitterly to the fact of their own weakness before they can begin to take hold of God's strength. At any rate, we can see signs of growth in David's soul.

One of these signs is humility before God. Take the story of his flight from his capital, for example. He could have hardly been in a worse state. His loved son Absalom had become a rebel, his throne was in danger, his friends were turning against him, even his life was not safe. Another man might have committed suicide, or sat in his deserted palace bitterly awaiting the end. Another man might have returned Shimei's foul language, curse for curse.

But David moves through all this as a man who realizes he deserves his troubles, knows it is God who is bringing these hard things to pass, and bows humbly under whatever God sends. His kingdom was shrinking, but his soul was growing again.

Is the Young Man Safe?

ANOTHER plain sign of inward growth was David's attitude to his bad son Absalom. That young man had ceased to be a son, but the old man did not cease to be a father. The young man would have stopped at nothing, he would have killed his father without hesitating, in order to gain the kingdom for himself. But David was willing to lose the kingdom, if by so doing he could keep from losing his son.

General Joab, a professional killer, could see no point in David's generosity. He believed David should be a king first and a father afterwards. It was Joab who against David's strict orders finally killed Absalom.

But in death as in life, David loved that wild young man. No more tragic scene is found in history than David's lament, "Would God I had died for thee, A Absalom, my son, my son." It does not sound like a lament for a dead enemy, and it was not; it was a father's grief for his son. The grief came late; David should long before those days have remembered his duty as a father to Absalom. But late though it was, David's tears show that in him his soul still grew.

No Cheap Sacrifice

ONE OTHER sign of soul-growth comes to the surface: a single sentence from David on the day when he bought the land where the temple was to be built. The owner Ornan (Araunah) would have given the land free; but David insisted on paying the full value. "I will not offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God which cost me nothing," he said.

No one would have blamed him for taking advantage of the owner, cutting the price a little. When david was a younger man he might have done it; but not now. No one else would know it, perhaps; but God would know it.

It was a sign that David was no longer the half-grown soul he had once been. For a man never really grows up till he does what he does, not because of fear, or ambition, or reputation, nor for any reason but because he knows how God is going to look at it.

Veterans' Column

State Dept. of Veterans' Affairs

R. J. SULLIVAN, VSO

Officials of the Alabama Department of Veterans' Affairs, the Veterans' Administration and the State Department of Education have had their heads together this week trying to work out some plan whereby veterans eligible for education or training under the Korean GI Bill, will be able to get some good sound advice on the best way to use their entitlement.

Veterans enrolling in a course of education or training under the bill, will be permitted to make one change, once the course is started. That means that unlike veterans of World War Two, who were permitted to make several changes, Korean veterans are going to have to be very careful in selecting the type of education or training they want.

In order these veterans may be prevented from getting in the wrong field of Education or Training. Officials of the VA, Department of Veterans' Affairs and Department of Education feel that they can devise some plan to allow these prospective Trainees to find out in advance what course they should follow which will be in keeping with their particular Talents. Of course, the Veterans' Administration has a Guidance and Advisement Board which will help you to select a course for which you would be Best Suited.

However, in order to take advantage of this advisement, it is necessary to travel to Montgomery and pay your own expenses while there. In many cases this might cause an undue hardship. Efforts are being made by these officials to allow eligible veterans to have the advantage of advisement and guidance in their own communities. Just what they'll turn up with, is something we do not know at the present time. However, we do appreciate the fact that some progress is being made to assist the Korean veterans in every way possible. My advice to those of you are starting at the leash to get your education or training started under the new bill, is just take it easy for a while and be sure yuo know exactly what you want to do and what you can do before you sign up.

Of course, if you know your own capabilities and are thoroughly convinced, after careful thought that you are selecting a course that you are best suited, then you should certainly have the GREEN LIGHT in applying for education under the Korean Bill.

We have had quite a number of questions put to us by Korean veterans concerning some of the details of the bill. First, of course, they want to know how much money they can count on from the Veterans' Administration when they enroll in a course of education or training. This is a very important question, and certainly the answer must be known in order for the veteran to make his plans, especially those who desire to go to college and are married.

A veteran without dependents, taking a full time course in a college or institution will receive $110 a month. If he has one dependent, he will receive $135 a month and if he has more than one dependent, his rate will be $160 a month. Now, out of this pay the veteran must meet all of his expenses, including Tuition, Books, Supplies, Room and Board and all other incidentials.

If you are On-Job-Training and have no dependents your subsistence check will be $70 a month; if you have one dependent, $85 a month and if you have more than one dependent you will receive $105 a month.

If you are On The Farm Training you will receive $95 if you have no dependents; with one dependent you will receive $110 a month and if you have more than one dependent you will receive $130 a month.

ALABAMA POWER CO. SPONSORS RESEARCH PROJECT

Alabama Power Company has announced the sponsorship of another coal research project in addition to that being conducted at Gorgas in cooperation with the U. S. Bureau of Mines. The new project, to be carried on by Southern Research Institue, is designed to determine whether or not Alabama coal is suitable for carbonization at low temperatures. If so, this will mean that not only will valuable by-products now lost be recovered but the remaining part of the coal, known as char, will be a more efficient boiler fuel than the raw coal.

Alabama Power Company's interest in sponsoring the research project, officials say, is twofold. One is to discover, if possible, a more economical fuel for the generation of electric power. The other is to determine whether or not Alabama's coal fields can become the basis of an almost brand new chemical industry in Alabama. If the research proves that these aims can be accomplished, it will mean new life in the coal areas of mean new life in the coal areas of course be felt in adjoining areas

When preparing an omelet, fol toward the pan handle and it wil come out nicely.

FORTY YEARS OLD and STILL GOOD

Alabama Power Company issued in October, 1913, a bulletin to employees which stated, in part:

"The Alabama Power Company is operating a system to supply service to the public and the success of the Company will depend on the manner in which this service is given and on the treatment which consumers or prospective consumers secure from our employees."

After nearly forty years, that is still our policy, more recently stated as follows:

"We recognize a triple responsibility — to the public, to our employees and to inve s—and our obligation to try to maintain a just balance among these three interests.

"We recognize that it is a duty and a privilege to participate as a good citizen in the development of every community within our service area through the payment of taxes and otherwise, and to this end we pledge the services of the men and women of our organization."

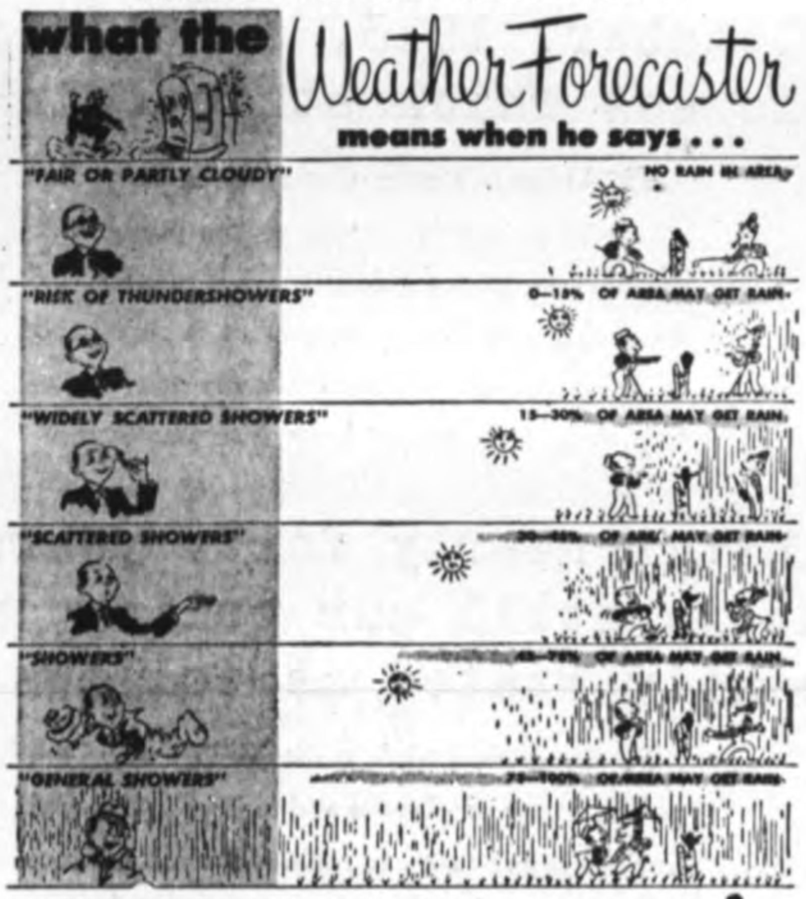
WEATHER FORECAST TERMINOLOGY



what the Weather Forecaster means when he says . . .
"FAIR OR PARTLY CLOUDY"
NO RAIN IN AREA
"RISK OF THUNDERSHOWERS"
0—15% OF AREA MAY GET RAIN
"WIDELY SCATTERED SHOWERS"
15—30% OF AREA MAY GET RAIN
"SCATTERED SHOWERS"
30—45% OF AREA MAY GET RAIN
"SHOWERS"
45—75% OF AREA MAY GET RAIN
"GENERAL SHOWERS"
75—100% OF AREA MAY GET RAIN

This descriptive guide to the meaning of various weather terms has been prepared by the National Cotton Council to bring up-to-the-minute information to the farmer. Knowledge of such conditions as temperature, humidity, wind velocity and rainfall is particularly helpful to cotton farmers in such operations as cotton insect control, fertilization, chemical weed control, irrigation and defoliation.

COTTON FARMERS URGED TO USE WEATHER DATA FOR EFFICIENCY

Listen frequently to radio broadcasts of probable weather conditions and use this information in planning application of insecticides or defoliants.

That's advice to cotton farmers from the National Cotton Council.

Advance knowledge of weather not only may help the cotton farmer avoid waste of materials, but also may increase efficiency of insecticides or defoliant applications, the Council reported.

In cotton insect control, weather conditions may determine the farmer's choice between dust or spray insecticides. By becoming acquainted with weather terminology and utilizing this weather data accordingly, farmers can better judge the best time to apply insecticides.

In some cases insect infestation may warrant the farmer's taking a chance on poisoning despite the fact that rainfall may be indicated. Such a choice rests with the individual farmer, the Council stressed.

Some defoliants are activitated by dew or moisture on the leaf. In several of the more arid areas, probable dew conditions are indicated in weather broadcasts, thus providing a guide for efficient defoliation.

CERTIFIED COPIES SHOULD BE MADE OF DISCHARGE

Veterans Administration recently advised all veterans to have photostatic or certified copies made of their original discharge or separation papers for use in applying for veterans' benefits.

Veterans with service since June 27, 1950.... the start of the Korean conflict... should have these copies made immediately if they plan to attend school under the Korean G. I. Bill this Fall, said Harley A. Smith, Alabama Regional Office Manager of the VA.

Post-Korea veterans can avoid delay in receiving their education and training benefits if they have their report of separation (Form DD 214) papers, which are acceptable to VA, copied before the original is sent to the armed services for mustering-out payments. Mustering-out payments are handled by the individual services and NOT by VA.

For most VA-administered benefits, photostatic or certified copies of discharge or separation papers are acceptable. One exception is the VA-guaranteed G. I. loans.

Veterans apllying for certificates of eligibility for G. I loans must present their original discharge or separation papers which will be endorsed and returned to the veterans.

VA also asked veterans to make sure that in submitting photostatic or certified copies of discharge or separation papers that they submit copies of both sides of the document and not just the front.

Veterans who have been released to the reserves since June 27, 1950, should submit their report of separation or certificate of service, since they do not get discharge papers.

1952 EASTER SEAL CAMPAIGN TOTALS REPORTED

A total of $126,000.00 was contributed to the Alabama Society for Crippled Children and Adults in the 1952 Easter Seal Campaign, according to an announcement made today by Carl A. Morring, Jr., of Huntsville, President. This sum, he stated, compares with $116,000.00 contributed in 1951.

These funds will be used during the next twelve months to provide hospitalization, medical treatment, speech therapy, artificial appliances, transportation and other services for crippled children and adults of the State.

For the second successive year Chambers County led the State, on a per capita basis, by raising $5,175.00. Other counties, either reaching or exceeding their goal, were, in order: Baldwin, Bibb, Madison, Cherokee, Fayette, Morgan, DeKalb, Monroe, Geneva, Barbour, Walker, Pickens, Conecuh, Covington, Tallapoosa, Butler, Houston, Marshall, Sumter, Hale, and Winston.

Shelby county under the Chairmanship of Supt. W. W. Elliott, of Columbiana contributed a total of $1,598.81.

President Morring reported that the Society provided hospitalization, treatment, artificial appliances, speech therapy, and transportation for a total of 3,406 crippled children and adults last year. These services, for the most part, were provided through the State Crippled Children's and Rehabilitation Services.

COLLARDS

Planted in early September, collards will produce good greens in a short time. To get rapid growth however, plenty of fertilizer and insect control are necessary.

When making cream of tomato soup, add a pinch of soda to the tomatoes before combining them with the hot milk. This way they will not curdle and milk.

CARNIVAL CONOVERS

The last notes of "Goodnight-Ah-rene" have passed into the limbo of yesterday, and is no longer news interest, yet, memories of the third Annual County Fair linger. For instance, no one who attended the Fair can forget hundreds of eager-eyed youngsters as they waited for the "Merry Go Round" to stop so they could mount their favorite steed and get going! And who can ever forget Clarence Abbott as he carted Helen Glass, his shadow, around by the hand, and carried the other little fellow (Clarence), who is named for him, in his arms, so that these nights would always be a memorable occasion for them, or Milton Bird, with five little ladies in tow, taking all the rides in, and Milton having a better time than anybody "spending his kale", making tiny tots happy. No wiser investment was ever dreamed up! Naturally, the pop corn, cotton candy, and kewpie dolls on a stick, went with all these carnival capers.

I know you can't forget those P. T. A. folk who made and served the very best Hot Dogs anybody ever thought up, and a Sold Out sign every night rewarded their efforts.

A trip thru the Booths was truly eye-opening, but for my O. K., the most attractive display was the Recreation Department's offering and that of the Band Mother's, who made many useful articles and baked countless cakes and pies in an endeavor to raise money for this all important phase in school life. The S. C. H. S. Band members, I know will be grateful for this personal interest.

The Livestock Parade caused many favorable comments, especially from those who know their Ferdinand's and Bossie's, and how to grade future T-Bones and what have you. These animals were indeed a credit to hard working folk like A. A. Lauderdale, Buck Clark and others.

The Conservation Department had an attractive booth, and Mr. Southern Bell Telephone had a pictorial "show-how" we obtain lightning speed service with the Dial System.

Friday night furnished the high spot, when Shelby County's Maid of Cotton, Villa Bentley, took down the house with a spontaneous ovation which left no doubt in the minds of those present about who, the universal choice for this honor was, and Villa Bentley will bring additional credit to her native county and can certainly worthily meet all requirements for this distinction.

Pretty Marcia Buck of Chelsea won second place, and if, for any reason, Villa cannot go, then, Shelby County still is "on top" with a splendid representative.... Congratulations to both the winner and alternate!

Saturday night, was "all out night".... and never have we seen such a crowd as thronged every stand, and the Bingo Tables! Rarely ever have we seen so many folk having such a good time together. The scene was heartwarming, and as far as we are personally concerned, we can hardly wait for the Fourth Annual County Fair to open up.

To those of you who, like the "Little Piggy" stayed at home, all we can say is, you truly missed something very special, and we hope you will regret it enough to make a resolution to join us next year, when the Kiwanians, who deserve much credit for this successful event, say that their slogan, "Bigger and Better than the year before" will again be justified! More power to them!

. . . Renol Walton of Vincent Route, while in town Thursday transacting business, decided to join the ever lengthening line of readers and personally attended to that little matter during his sojourn on Main. (We are always delighted to welcome new friends, on our list, and certainly, we want to keep the old ones. So, better check that label and see how you stand with the fellow who weilds the "cut-off" unless the two dollars is paid. It is a postal regulation and when Uncle Sam says it has to be done, who are we to argue with him!)

. . . Mrs. Felix Chapman III, of Birmingham, spent the holiday week end with her parents.

CHRISTMAS CANTATAS

Christmas Cantatas have become a tradition in Columbiana and at least one cantata has been presented each year for the past eight years. The writer has just received a query regarding the "time" that should elapse between each number.

This is usually a matter left to the discretion of the Director, but as far as we are concerned, we have attempted to allow enough time for the singers to sit down, get their breaths, and relax, but, never so long as to miss the continuity of the story in song.

"The Chorus In The Skies" by Fred B. Holton, is the Cantata we have chosen as our offering for the Yuletide Season this year. The first reading will be held early in September. The date of presentation will be announced later by the Baptist Choristers.

UNION SERVICE AT BAPTIST CHURCH DRAWS FULL HOUSE

The Baptist Church, August 31, was the scene of Columbiana's second "Union Service", which takes place each Fifth Sunday night, alternating preachers and churches. The Rev. A. D. Wilson of the Methodist Church brought the evening message last Sunday and this minister is as popular among the Baptists, as he is among the Methodists. Conrad M. Fowler, offered an impressive Invocation, and Robert Holliman and Barbara Horn, with their Youth and Junior Choristers, presented the special music. Martha Bentley, a pupil of Robert Holliman's, was the pianist.

The large crowd attending this service was a tribute of appreciation to the Rev. A. D. Wilson and the Rev. Curtis Bean, for again bringing these two friendly congregations together on these occasions. For the first time in years these two churches are setting an example of "coming together, working together, singing together and sticking together", which is as it should be!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Wales W. Wallace Jr., Shirley Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Ozley and Grace Carter Ozley left Columbiana Wednesday for a vacation in Biloxi, Miss., and New Orleans.

. . . We see a lot of folk on Saturday afternoons which we would likely miss, if we "took off" as the boys do. Last Saturday we had the pleasure of meeting and including in our long list of new friends who avidly read this "home paper" each week. Miss Rena Carlson and Mrs. G. E. Archer, who were down from Birmingham enjoying the County Fair, and meeting old friends on Main.

CRAWFORD-SIMS WEDDING SOLEMNIZED

Immediately following the morning service at the Methodist Church last Sunday, conducted by the Rev. T. K. Roberts, the congregation was asked to "remain seated" and two of Columbiana's most popular young people, Lt. James Crawford of the U. S. Air Force, and Miss Grace Sims, daughter of Mrs. Effie Sims, surprised the congregation by walking up the aisle to Mendelsohn's famed melody, played by Homer Walton, Jr., and were met at the altar by the Rev. A. D. Wilson who read the wedding vows.

Preceding the ceremony, Fay Wilson, accompanied by Homer Walton, Jr., sang "I Love You Truly"....

The youthful couple left immediately for California, from which point Lt. Crawford will be assigned to the Far East Air Force Command. Lt. Crawford is a Jet Pilot and former graduate of Shelby County High School and a Pre-Med Graduate of University of Alabama. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. James H. Crawford of Columbiana.

Miss Sims is a student in Alabama College and a former graduate of Shelby High.

For travelling, Miss Sims wore a grayish, blue tweed suit, with navy accessories.

Congratulations were mingled with best wishes from their friends who will follow with keen interest the future of these outstanding young people now so braevly meeting the "inevitable separation" caused by this ruthless and apparently, endless struggle to maintain our freedom.

CALERA CIVITAN BARBECUE DRAWS LARGE CROWDS LABOR DAY

Calera Civitans sponsored one of the most delectable Barbecues we have ever attended on Labor Day. These civic-minded members of this alert organization went "all out" to make this Labor Day celebration one long to be remembered, and each member who greeted the guests made one feel he was truly welcome in this progressive town now alert to its many advantages.

We saw bankers, town officials, commercial representatives, and professional men, all working harmoniously together on this occasion and this team-work doubtless assured the success that was scored.

There were approximately 200 people served during the time we were there and more were "on their way" as we left.

Baseball games during the afternoon furnished the fans satisfactory entertainment.

The proceeds from this Labor Day celebration were donated to the fund now being raised for School Improvement.

We saw lots of Columbiana folk enjoying the above mentioned Barbecue. For instance: Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Stinson, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Ozley and Grace Carter Ozley, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad M. Fowler, Conrad Jr., and Randy Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Jones and family, Judge W. W. Wallace enjoying his "favorite dish" under those age-old oak trees. Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wallace Jr., and Shirley Wallace, Judge L. C. Walker, Supt. Woodrow Elliott, and many others.

Maybe you know likable Roy Downs, as a "Banker only". You should have seen him on this occasion with his sleeves rolled up "serving that roasted pig" and throwing in his famed smile and breezy chatter for good measure. Or, if you chanced over by the Punch table, you would have found well known Cecil Cowart dishing up some of his own concoction, which, he refused to name, but assured me it would, at all times, be available at his Drug Store. So, for that "Cowart Cocktail", the best I have ever tasted, just see Cecil!

Mayor R. E. Bowdon Jr., who has done so much during his administration to make Calera grow and expand in a permanent development program second to none in this section, was on hand to greet the guests, and we were so happy to learn that "Mr. Bob" Bowdon is improving satisfactorily following surgery at Highland Baptist Hospital.

On and on we might go, naming our good friends, W. N. Minor, Zollie Cowart, Carl Hokanson and many more, but, space is limited and we must remember this fact. Just suffice it to say, that we hope Calera makes Labor Day, an annual event, and that Ben Smith is on hand to barbecue the meat, served with Mrs. Eddins famed "sauce" and that "we" may be numbered among those there to enjoy it!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Ehney A. Camp Jr., Ehney Camp III, Patsy Camp Mary Gene Camp and Margaret Beck spent the week end as guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Christian. Columbiana will not be as lively this week as it was last week, while Mary Gene, Patsy and Margaret were here to brighten it. These three "teen agers" are as attractive as they come. We wish we could claim them "for keeps".

. . . Ben J. Butler is now a seasoned Navy man. His next assignment is Norman, Okla., but Jack will keep in touch with all his friends in Shelby county, no matter where he goes. He ordered the Home Paper before checking out!

. . . Ralph Jones left Columbiana Tuesday, to enter Howard College. Ralph is the son of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Jones and an outstanding athlete, possessing one of the most pleasing personalities we know anything about. Ralph will be missed at school, at church and in the "Yellow Front" store where he has been employed during the summer, but the good wishes of his many friends in Columbiana attend him, wherever he may go.

. . . Mrs. Perry McCormack and Mrs. Pat Mansfield of Birmingham spent Sunday with their mother, Mrs. Eula Carter.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Rhinehardt, Mr. and Mrs. Marshal Newlin of Nashville, Mrs. Joe Young and Jon Young of Winchester, Tennessee and Miss Billie Jean Young of Birmingham were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Young. Mrs. Young and her baby son will leave New York by plane September 13, to join Lt. Young who is stationed in Frankfurt, Germany, and Miss Billie Jean Young will fly to Germany for a visit with them about the first of November.

. . . Sgt. Paul Walton is returning from overseas having completed his required number of months service for Uncle Sam and will be home within the next few weeks "for keeps"!

. . . I am told by Mrs. J. E. Franks, who was a recent guest of Mrs. Luther Bozeman's, that an urgent need for pajamas, bedroom (slides) slippers, bath robes, and other personal supplies, are badly needed in the T. B. wards of Kilby Prison. Mrs. Franks states it has been her privilege to visit among these patients and talk with them, and she believes if an incentive to get well (other than being returned to a cell), can be brought to their minds and hearts, that rehabilitation is possible in a number of cases.

If there are any citizens in Columbiana or clubs, that would like to contribute these items mentioned, please send to Mrs. Luther Bozeman, Columbiana, and she will forward to proper authorities.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ferris and children Judy and Bob, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Ferris and Sandra Ferris, of Chattanooga, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Chandler and family of Birmingham were holiday guests of Mrs. Myra Chandler.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Riddle, Jr., Ray Riddle and Mrs. Jeska Fort and Emily Riddle were Sunday guests of Judge and Mrs. L. B. Riddle .

. . . Watch this paper for a resume of the Recreation activities which have been held thru ths summer months. Plans for the winter activities will also be announced at an early date by Coach Roy Mann, thru this paper.

. . . "Coach" Matthews of Scottsboro was the week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson. Mr. Matthews has accepted a position as Principal of The Brent High School this year.

. . . Realizing that the best way to keep abreast of happenings in Shelby county, is thru the "Home Paper", M. S. Buck, who resides in Chelsea, but who has a host of friends in Columbiana, came by the office Thursday and ordered a renewal subscription sent to his home for 1953. A courtesy we deeply appreciate.

. . . There is nothing on this earth that grates on my nerves like the tunes now cluttering up the Juke Box library of popular offerings. The lyrics are a reflection on anybody's intelligence, no matter how low the I. Q. may be! And, the melodies, repetition as regular as water on a rock and, equally as impressive. Never has the taste in American music been at such a low ebb, over radio, television or juke box. However, the people have little say so regarding what is fed thru these channels. They are selected, and handed down just grist for the mill. The radio once offered outstanding entertainment. Top notch artists presented the programs. Now there is a different story, and fewer folks are listening, too!

. . . Inez Bird, who has been a student at Alabama College this summer and whats more, passed every test successfully, came by the office Thursday morning for a social chat, and while here, gave us the required $2.00 to assure the Reporter-Democrat's continued presence on her reading table thru another year, for which evidence of loyalty we remain grateful.

. . . Tuck's Place, Columbiana's newest "Drive-In" is rapidly expanding to take care of the crowds that daily visit this hospitable place to join their friends and eat the delectable Barbecue served. The front of the building is now being closed in and more tables will be placed in this new addition making it an even more inviting place to go and carry your friends. Mr. and Mrs. Tucker will be delighted to have you stop by and we are certain you will return.

A CORRECTION

We inadvertently stated in last week's paper, that Travis Shelton was going to Texas A. & M., what we meant to say was Southern Methodist University. (I had the Fair on my mind, I guess). Beg Pardon "Dr. Shelton".

. . . Lloyd Harris, Jewel Box owner and operator is making friends and customers just about as fast as he can chalk them up in his attractive shop on Main. Today, Loyd came by and gladdened our day by having his name placed on our weekly subscription list, and we are delighted to welcome him and his lovely wife as members of our reading circle.

. . . Jack Holcombe lives on Montevallo Rt. 1, and he is very much interested in having the Reporter-Democrat on his reading table each week, and that suits us just fine. So, beginning this week, thats where you will find us, on the reading table, right by Jack Holcombe, where he won't have to "hunt for it."

. . . Polio cases in the State now total 144.

. . . Sgt. Joe Foster has been stationed for the time being at Ft. Belvoir, Virginia, with the U. S. Army Engineer Corp. The young Sergeant is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Foster of Columbiana, and before entering the army was employed in a Printing Shop in Birmingham. He is also a former employee of the Democrat, and if his work is as satisfactory in the Army as it was in this office, we shall be looking forward to an outstanding record.

. . . Mrs. Dick Martin spent Friday in Columbiana as the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. H. Bearden, and Mr. Bearden. During the day Mrs. Martin came by and asked that we continue the Reporter-Democrat for another year, which pleased us muchly! We, in fact, would feel lost without a visit in Dick and Amy's home each week, so long have we enjoyed this privilege thru these columns.

. . . Sen. Tom Phillips was numbered among the distinguished guests who visited the County Fair Thursday evening and we have never seen him looking better than on this occasion. The Senator has spent practically all the summer at his home on Laguna Beach, and has a fashionable Florida Tan which exactly matched that snazky sports outfit he wore. njoyed our chat with him immensely, but that part of it is not news. Sen. Tom is good company anytime, anywhere, and is always assured of a warm welcome when he comes to Columbiana.

. . . Mrs. Marianna Davis left Columbiana this week to resume her teaching position in Munford, Alabama, and before leaving ordered the "Home Paper" sent to her address in Mumford.

. . . Mrs. J. E. Franks spent Friday night in Columbiana as the guest of Mrs. Luther Bozeman. Saturday morning she came by the office and ordered the paper sent to Annette Franks, who is a member of the student body in Judson College this year. Annette was one of the most popular students of S. C. H. S. and wants to keep in touch with her former classmates and a host of friends she made while here. Mrs. Franks will continue her teaching in the Pike Road School in Montgomery, and good reports continue to come regarding the outstanding record the Rev. J. E. Franks is making as Chief Chaplain of Alabama Prisons.

. . . Waylon Davis, Jack Butler and Bobby Martin of the U. S. Navy are home for a few days from San Diego, California. These three "Blue Jackets" were getting a welcome royal from their friends and "buddies" on Main when we saw them Monday. All "salty-seamen" looked splendid and are most enthusiastic over the U. S. Navy.

. . . Harry Gilmore of Marion Junction and Harry Gilmore Jr., and family of Montgomery, were holiday guests of Mrs. May Gilmore and Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lauderdale.

Luther Fewell returned to his home in Phenix City Wednesday after spending two weeks with his aunt Mrs. Luther McGiboney and family.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Alton Davis, Glenda Davis, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Davis, George, Davis, Arlon and Myra Sue Davis, Mr and Mrs. Fred Davis and Larry Davis, Mary Bradberry, Kate Crawford, Arthur Davis and Waylon Davis, were members of a family reunion staged in Pell City Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Glenn (Jewel Davis) in honor of Waylon Davis who is home for the first time from a "hitch" in the Navy. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davis returned from Florida Sunday afternoon to join them.

. . . The Rev. Curtis Bean is assisting in a Revival Meeting in Bessemer this week.

. . . Edwin Rush is vacationing in Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, this week and will be numbered among those enjoying the annual presentation of The Messiah at this famed spot.

. . . The Rev. Ezell brought the morning message at the Baptist Church Sunday, August 31, and while commending the Baptists on their determination to build a new church, he chided them a bit, about the apparent delinquency, and stated that Columbiana was the only county seat that did not have a creditable Baptist Church building. We learned, that this statement was almost, but not quite true, as Moulton, is in about the same shape we were! Thank Heaven the Baptist members, in Columbiana, are now doing something about this record, and the Finance Committee is out in an attempt this week to garner more dollars, so that work may continue to go forward. The Building Committeemen and Finance Committee, are doing a wonderful job, and if you have not done your part, won't you, without further insistence, help build your own church? I somehow, believe you will!

SCHOOL TIME, NEXT MONDAY

School bells will tingle "Taps" for summer good times next Monday, and more serious days lie ahead for Johnny and Mary. We feel a sympathetic heart-throb for the little fellows who will leave their homes for the first time, to begin their "school days". It will be an entirely new world for them, and teachers having these young charges under their supervision, should be most "understanding", regarding the heretofore narrow confines of their homes, where doubtless Mommie and Daddy have been lovingly engaged in answering everything their little hearts desire. It truly is a step, and a big one for tiny first-steppers, but, we feel sure these fragile beginnings of a mighty end, will soon learn "mass living" and whats more, probably adjust themselves, into liking it!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. John Jones announce the arrival of a baby boy who was born Friday, August 29 in Birmingham.

A Day In The Life Of An 'Angel In White', Joyce Creel

Mildred White Wallace

Joyce Creel is a graduate of Shelby County High School and the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Creel.

Joyce is, at present, a student nurse in Birmingham Baptist Hospital ,and is making a brilliant record. Fact is, Joyce has finished the first year's prescribed course of study and rated third from the top in one of the largest classes ever recorded in Highland Baptist Hospital.

We read with interest an article about our own Joyce Creel in "The Rebel Review"— a bulletin published from the Hospital, and it featured Joyce Creel in a splendid article presenting a day in the life of a student nurse. We immediately asked permission to present these interesting facts regarding one of Shelby County's own, and they granted it. We take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation to them for this courtesy and proudly present Joyce Creel, and "One Day" in the life of this pretty student nurse, believing this factual evidence will prove an inspiration to those seeking a nurse's career, and we feel sure it will be both entertaining and enlightening to those who have been "patients" and who have personally realized just how vitally important these "angels in white" are and how very much we all owe them.

It is indeed a privilege to introduce to you Joyce Creel, who beautifully portrays the life of a student nurse in the Birmingham Baptist Hospital.

"Just one more wink of shut-eye, please! says Joyce, but the insistent alarm alerts the pretty Miss to the duties incident to another day.

Joyce joins other students in a few moments morning devotional before beginning the work-a-day world.

Head nurse Wynona Stringfellow looks on as Miss Creel mends traction applied to left arm of Clarence Etheridge.

Ward Class: The "angel in white" holding the chart of Mrs. James E. Wrenn, Sr., is Joyce Creel and Mrs. Wrenn (in the wheel chair) joins the class discussion in evaluating care she has received, while a patient in "The Land of Counterpane."

Meal-Time at noon, time out for a cup of java, and a social chat with co-workers. Miss Creel is shown filling her tray at the Cafeteria.

It is Class Time and "Uncle" Bob Early tells Joyce to "hurry-up"— Soon she is on her way to Highland Baptist.

In preparing daily lessons, Miss Creel utilizes the library for quiet study and research work.

"Did my letter come today?" inquires pretty Joyce Creel of house-mother Miss Florence Brooks. The smile on Joyce's face indicates that "he" did not forget to remember.

Conference with Laurene Gilmore, Educational Director, smooths out the class schedule for Joyce.

Playtime — Joyce and three other student nurses, finish a fast set of tennis.

Date-Time — "It has been a lovely evening," says Hamilton Reid, Jr., as he says "Goodbye For Now" to Joyce.

Tired and sleepy, Joyce sets the alarm clock before "lights out" and dreamin'-time begins preceding a new dawn, a new day, a very busy day in the hospital routine, but never monotonous, and Oh, so worth while!

HD CLUBS HAVE EXHIBITS AT FAIR

Six Home Demonstration Clubs entered exhibits in the Shelby County Fair. Columbiana won first prize with their exhibits on "Making Cakes". Second place winner was "Renovating Inner Spring Cushions," was shown by making a Television Chair from an old automobile seat by West Calera Club. Helena Club placed third with their exhibit on "Textile Painting". Fourth place was awarded Spring Creek - Valley Grove Club on "Secrets to Smart Sewing", fifth place to Ebenezer on "Painting Figurines", and sixth place to Wilsonville on "Make It Of Plastic."

These clubs will receive $10.00 expenses for the exhibit and the following prizes - Columbiana, $12.50; West Calera $10.50; Helena $8.25; and Spring Creek-Valley Grove, Ebenezer, and Wilsonville $6.25 each.

HOW TO ENCOURAGE PRODUCE GROWERS

The serious drought this summer could very well cause Alabama food producers to lose interest in growing much needed crops in the future.

Austin Ezzell, API Extension distributor marketing specialist, warns that this could mean shorter supplies of foods normally found in food markets during the "home-grown" season, resulting in higher food prices.

"Therefore," says the specialist, "if you are a food distributor, chances are you can help your producer friends over this bad year with a friendly word of encouragement. Better still, help them make a profit on whatever they were able to grow during the dry weather. This interest will encourage them to grow bigger and better crops next year.

Ezzell adds that if you are a consumer, perhaps your greatest help may come in the form of a sympathetic understanding of the farmer's loss and a willingness to buy his crops at necessarily higher price levels.

COWS ON POOR PASTURE MAY NEED EXTRA FEED

Be sure cows on pasture get enough to eat, advises Pete Turnham, API Extension dairy specialist.

He says this precaution is more important now than ever before, since most pastures have suffered from the drought.

Turnham warns that it is a mistake to pasture dry cows on poor areas until they freshen. Cows won't reach peak production unless they are healthy and strong at calving time.

POULTRY MANAGEMENT IN FALL AND WINTER

Although there were two per cent more layers on farms June 1 than a year earlier, a seven per cent smaller crop raised this year will not provide enough young pullets to off-set normal culling this fall, according to John Weeks, API Extension poultry specialist.

Therefore, he advises farmers who have pullets going into the laying house to give them the best possible care.

And the specialist reminds farmers to turn lights on pullets now to provide them with a 14-hour day. Many yearling hens will lay for about two more months if they are provided with all-night lights and a good management program. Keep such hens as long as they produce profitably, but sell them when they go into a molt and out of production.

OAT VARIETIES

The best oat varieties for grain production in Alabama are Anderson, Arlington, DeSoto, and Victorgrain 48-93.

KLEIN OUTSTANDING HDC IN COUNTY

Klein Club recently added to its title, Shelby County's Outstanding Home Demonstration Club. Columbiana placed second in the contest and Ebenezer was third. The contest was sponsored by The Farm Bureau Insurance Company. Judges were: Miss Dottie Walton, Shelby County Nurse; Miss Anita King, Elementary School Supervisor and Miss Jeanette Niven, Alabama College.

The Klein Club boasts of 21 active members and an average monthly attendance of 15. Five new members were added during the year. The members enjoy a luncheon meeting each fourth Thursday. Mrs. J. Frank Wyatt is the energetic president of this industrious Club.

The club is 100 per cent in Farm Bureau Membership, has improved 62 mailboxes, cleaned, improved, and planted the cemetery, sold $200.00 in ads for The Council Cook Book, sent cookies to Veterans Hospitals at Tuscaloosa and Montgomery, assisted Negro P. T. A. with programs in sewing and gave them two demonstrations on "Making Nylon Corsages." Made and sold quilts and sold flavoring to add to Club treasury, sent flowers and cards to families of club members in case of sickness or death.

Two parties were given for 4H-ers and a Chicken Fry for 37 Vincent FFA boys. Leaders directed two Summer 4-H Meetings, a picnic, 4-H Sunday and arranged transportation for Vincent 4-Hers to Annual 4-H Rally.

Subject Matter Leaders have attended every Leadership School and conducted all demonstrations. All Chairmen and he Club president have attended workshop and council meetings. All club members have worked on increasing membership. All Chairmen, Farm Bureau, Rural Youth, Citizenship, Community Activitiesand Defense Chairman, have made brief reports at each meeting and presented at least one program during the year.

PELHAM-KEYSTONE HDC SUMMER ACTIVITIES

Activities of the Pelham-Keystone Home Demonstration Club for the summer have included regular club meetings of both the ladies and 4-Hers. An annual family picnic, a joint spend the day for crafts and picnic of the Pelham and Paramount 4-Hers.

The annual family picnic was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mason Cumberland on Saturday night, August 16. Horseshoe pitching was the chief attraction other than the social aspect enjoyed by the ladies. A sumptions supper was spread on tables on the lawn and enjoyed by the 45 persons attending.

At the special 4-H crafts day at the home of Mrs. Herbert Pool the 4-Hers learned to make a foot scrapper, novelty belts of button and boat lace, belts assembled with corks and novelty braid, and a unique one of door springs and hinges.

Recreation in the form of singing, horseshoe pitching and folk dancing were indulged in with a quiet hour after lunch with several 4-Hers entertaining with piano solos and in group singing.

Lunch was spread on tables on the cool shady lawn with the following attending: Judy McGuffie, , Frankie McGuffie, Betty McCoy, Sharon Poole, Richard McCoy, Ray Brashier, Patsy Pendergrass, Shirley Bearden, Margaret Pool, Myra Loy Bentley, Myra Maske, Eddie Bentley, Roger Bentley, Shelba Shelton, Ida Powers, Gloria Moore, Jane Cumberland, Raymond Jones, Billy Joe Ashworth, Gladys Hester, Emma Jean Hester, Billy Cumberland, Leaha Maske, Jack Sheldon, Tonnie and Ronnie Maske, Ronnie Johnson, and Tommie Johnson.

Adults attending were: Mrs. Herbert Pool, Mrs. Finis McCoy, Mrs. Mason Cumberland, Mrs. George Bentley, Mrs. Lonnie Maske, Mrs. Harry Jones, Mrs. R. L. Johnson.

Notice From Probate Office

All Business, Professional, and Store Licenses will be renewable October 1st, 1952, and will be delinquent on November 1st. Automobile tags will be delinquent on November 16th.

The price of the tags will be $3.75 for all passenger automobile regardlessof the time of year the tag is purchased. All truck and trailer tags will be the same price as in the past. During the busy season, we will not be in position to handle many tags by telephone or mail, as it takes quite a bit of time waiting in line to get the cars assessed, paying the tax to the Collector, and wrapping and mailing the tags and receipts. Please keep this in mind and come or send by your neighbor some time during 6 weeks period you have to get these tags.

The Driving Test is given here all day Friday and Saturday until noon of each week, except State holidays. If you have lost your 1952-53 Drivers License, you may secure a duplicate license by mailing an application to the Department of Public Safety, Montgomery, Alabama, with 25c.

We are not permitted to issue a Learner's Permit until the written test is given by the Examiners,

The law exempting veterans of World War Two from the payment of privilege licenses provides that a veteran may be exempt up to $35.00 to the State and $35.00 to the County for a period of consecutive years from the date of the passage of the law (July 6, 1945) or for a period of 6 years from the date of his discharge, whichever is later. A veteran of World War II discharged on or before September 30, 1946 will not be exempt from the privilege license this year. A veteran discharged on or after October 1, 1946 will be exempt for the full license year. It is important that the exact date of discharge be known when purchasing license. Thanks.

L. C. Walker,
Judge of Probate

HELENA CLUB HOLDS PICNIC

The Helena 4-H Club held their Club Picnic at Kiddieland Park on Monday August 18th.

Twenty-six members and leaders attended. Rides and picnic baskets were enjoyed.

The series of lakes, which have been backed up by the TVA's hydro-electric system, stretch for 700 miles through the state. These inland lakes are fast becoming one of the leading recreation areas in the South.

Buckets used for carrying water by early Alabama pioneers were commonly referred to as "piggins".

B. F. VINSON YOUNG STANDARD OIL EXECUTIVE

B. F. Vinson, a young executive from Standard Oil Company (Ky.), Birmingham, Alabama, has been named Vice-Chairman of the State Committee of the Alabama Oil Industry Information Committee, D. R. McCallum, Chairman of the organization, announced today following a meeting of the State Executive Committee.

As Vice-Chairman, Vinson will assist the Chairman and the State Committee in planning and conducting the activity of an Oil Information Program in the State of Alabama.

McCullum said that at today's meeting plans for OIL PROGRESS WEEK were discussed and a tentative program agreed upon. Oil Progress Week will be staged this year from October 12 to 18 by oil men all over the nation who will tell the story of oil to their freinds and neighbors through every available media.

Ben F. Vinson, a native of Louisville, Barbour County, Alabama, has spent more than half of his life as a career employee with Standard Oil Company. His experience and oil background peculinary fits him for the important post in OIIC. Vinson now holds the position of Assistant to the Alabama Division Manager, in charge of Service Stations.

OUR ANNUAL PLEA FOR THE 'WEE ONES'

"They are so small, dear God!
The school is blocks away—
Their steps so prone to lag,
At bits of color down the street.
Make keen the eyes of drivers,
Stay the grinding wheels of trucks
Spare us from tiny splintered bones
From flesh like blossoms,
Crushed upon the stones."

We hope every automobile owner and TRUCK DRIVER in Columbiana will "slow down" long enough to re-read the above poem with its poignant appeal for the "little ones".

Perhaps because our desk faces one of the most dangerous corners in Columbiana, we are ultra cautious in our repeated remarks urging the drivers of automobiles and delivery trucks to be more careful in rounding this particular main corner, for we daily see many accidents narrowly averted. The STOP signs, it is true, are plainly visible, but are seldom read, or if read, are not heeded. It is a wonder to the writer that these little "living miracles" ever make it safely across the street and home alive. However, we personally believe these "tiny tots" deserve a chance to take a part in this "speed-mad" world if they want it, but while happily swinging their books along an epitaph is likely to be written, reading something like this, A LIGHT OR A LIFE, and it won't be as long as it has been, if YOU don't watch out!

"They are so small, their steps so prone to lag at bits of color in the street, Guard well their safety Mr. Auto Driver . . . PLEASE SLOW DOWN . . .

SEN. J. T. PHILLIPS MENTIONED AS LIKELY GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE

A gentleman who travels statewide in his business dealings, came by our office one day last week and stated that when the next gubernatorial race got under way predictions were being made that Senator J. T. Phillips, would be found in there pitching for the honor.

We later saw the Senator, and attempted to get a definite statement from him regarding this rumor. About all we could get him to say, "At this time", was that "he was seriously considering it, after receiving numerous letters from friends and colleagues throughout the state regarding this race...." but he had not definitely made up his mind.

However, we noticed that certain "political ambitious sunbeam" in his eye, and my experience with politicians has been when once they get that political bug buzzing, they usually come up with the statement "I am a candidate and I solicit your vote and influence". So, we will not be surprised if, and when, the Senator makes his announcement.... in the affirmative!

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS TO BE HELD SEPTEMBER 15

In the incorporated towns of Alabama, Monday, September 15, will be a decisive day for candidates for Mayor and Councilmen. In some towns, there are a number of candidates seeking this distinction, causing widespread interest. In Columbiana, however, there is no opposition to the incumbents, Mayor Wales W. Wallace, Cecil Duke, Arthur Wood, Elvin Hill and the two new candidates, Fancis Leonard and Bruce Alverson, but I feel sure, these gentlemen will appreciate a large vote next Monday by citizens whom they will attempt to worthily serve during the next four years. Let's give them our vote and our cooperation as Columbiana moves forward toward a more progressive place in which to live.

"HERE WE REST"

Though many people believe "Alabama" to mean "Here we rest", the late Rev. Allen Wright, a highly educated Choctaw, translates the name at "Thicket-clearers", compounded of "Alba", a thicket, and "amo" to clear, to collect, to gather up.

SERGEANT SHAW RECEIVES COMMENDATION

The Reporter-Democrat joins other friends in the county this week in proudly saluting Sergeant Shaw, and reprint the wording of his commendation received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Shaw of Wilsonville Rt. 1. Sgt. Shaw is a member of a Battalion engaged with the apprehension of Five Korean Blackmarket Operators.

The reason for this distinction is as follows: "Sergeant Shaw was offered 500 dollars by the operators if he would allow them to drive a truck load of petroleum products out of the supply point. Sergeant Shaw agreed to the proposition and immediately notified Capt. Carl V. Schomburg of G. M. C. and a trap was arranged.

Capt. Schomburg states in a letter to Sergeant Shaw's family as follows: "It is a pleasure having your son in my command. He is courteous, aggressive, and performs his duties in an excellent manner. He appears to be in good health and is cheerful in the performance of his duties."

"The officers and enlisted men of this company join me in wishing you the best of health and happiness and hope that we all may soon be with our loved ones."

The above excerpts are quoted from the letter and signed by

The Baptist Church of Columbiana now has the full time service of their Pastor, the Rev. Dean, who is entering his third year as pastor of this church. The church in conference unanimously adopted this plan last Sunday.

HIGH SCHOOLS IN COUNTY DOUBLE ENROLLMENT

There are more than twice as many high school students enrolled in the accredited schools of Shelby County as were enrolled at this time last year. Montevallo High School has an enrollment of over 200 as compared to 75 last year. Thompson High at Siluria has 150 as compared with ...... last year and Shelby High has an enrollment of 200 as compared with 100 last year.

This is the result of the effort to group the high school students so as to bring them together in large numbers under competent teachers so that genuine high school work may be done. This is the first time in the history of Shelby County that this has been done.

Mrs. Edna Roberts Passes Sept. 10

Funeral services will be conducted from the Methodist Church in Columbiana, Thursday morning at ten-thirty o'clock for Mrs. Edna Roberts, former resident, who passed away at the Sylacauga Infirmary Wednesday morning. Mrs. Roberts had been sick for several weeks, but developed pneumonia several days ago which caused her death.

Mrs. Roberts for a number of years was identified in offices in the Courthouse, and in the Bank of Columbiana. For the past several years she has resided with her daughter, Mrs. Fred Pickett, in Childersburg. She was widely known in club circles in Sylacauga, and was a charter member of the Garden Club, and other civic organizations. In Childersburg, where she was making her home at the time of her death, Mrs. Roberts was prominently identified in musical circles and sponsored many artistic achievements in this town.

A host of friends in Columbiana will regret to read this sad news, which has just been received in the office as we go to press.

Mrs. Roberts is survived by two sons, Harry Mims Roberts of Columbiana; Keener Roberts of Tuscaloosa, and one daughter, Mrs. Fred Pickett, of Childersburg and six grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements are in charge of Bolton-Walton in Columbiana. Interment will be in Columbiana Cemetery.

FOUR CONSTITUTION AMENDMENTS TO BE DECIDED NOV. 4

On November 4, the electorate will decide by their ballots the fate of four Constitutional Amendments. One amendment, if it should pass, would stretch the terms of sheriffs from four to six years. The other general amendment proposes any diversion of Highway funds from their designated roadbuilding. The other two amendments are applicable only in Blount and Fayette counties. They would, if passed, allow municipalities in these counties to use tax revenue to promote industry.

County Teachers Enjoy Pre-School Conference

A three day pre-school work conference was held on the campus of Alabama College last week for the classroom teachers and administrators of Shelby County.

The purposes of the conference were to provide opportunities for teachers to discuss common problems in special interest groups, in grade and departmental meetings, and in local school groups; to provide opportunities for teachers to play together, as well as work together, and make social contacts with one another.

To carry out those purposes, meetings were planned for morning, afternoon and evening. Many took advantage of the new college pool for swimming; square dancing, group singing, and other group games were enjoyed at night. A large number enjoyed a picnic on Thursday evening which was held in the Faculty Club House overlooking the 25 acre lake.

Mr. W. W. Elliott, Superintendent of Shelby County Schools, presided at the opening meeting on Wednesday morning and introduced the Rev. Minor Triplett, Pastor of the Montevallo Methodist Church, who delivered an inspiring message based on Paul's letter to Timothy (I Timothy 6:20) "O, Timothy, guard what has been entrusted to you." Rev. Triplett said, "I would lift these words out of the Scriptures and make them my message to you. O, teachers, guard what has been entrusted to you! We entrust you with our most valued, our most precious possessions. We commit unto your our children.... Guard that which is entrusted to you. Be diligent to teach the truth; faithfully endeavor to create the right attitudes; by word and deed teach reverence, and, so walk before our children that you will not be ashamed to see them walk in your footsteps. Thus shall you be true to the sacred trust which is yours!"

D. W. M. McCall, of the State Department of Education gave the keynote address on The Place Of In-Service Education in a Good School Program. Dr. McCall said, "In-service education is the conscious job on the part of teachers and administrators to do a better job.... An organized study program for teachers and administrators in each local school, and on a county-wide basis, is one of the techniques of a good in-service program.

"Some of the results that may be expected from a good in-service program are the growth of teachers as individuals, as well as professionally; more democratic leadership on the part of administrators; an improved instructional program in the classroom; and more use of community services agencies, and lay groups."

Dr. Louis E. Armstrong, President of the Indian Springs School, addressed the group on Thursday on the subject, The Role of The School Principal in an Instructional Program. Dr. Armstrong said that progress in education depends upon invention just as in industry. He thinks a principal can be of much help to teachers by helping them to analyze what they want to do, providing opportunities for them to discuss their ideas and problems with one another, and by releasing them to do creative teaching.

Educators from different sections of the state served as consultants in the study groups. Besides Dr. McCall, who is continuous consultant to the Planning Committee, there was Mr. E. S. Van Cleve, Supervisor of Music Education, State Department of Education, Miss Lucille Mixon, Supervisor of Marion County Schools, Hamilton, Ala.; Miss Bernice Dilworth, Consultant for the Birmingham Paper Company; Miss Dottie Walton, Shelby County Public Health Nurse, and Mrs. Watts, Consultant for Scott-Foresman and Company.

Music was part of each program. The entire assembly participated in group singing several times under the leadership of Mrs. Gertrude Cobb, and Miss Mary Mims. Mr. Van Cleave played several violin numbers on Wednes

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: Will Morgan fell in love with a girl from Carolina who passed through Pittsburgh bound for the Miami Indian lands. He pursues her heavily, hoping to win her hand before she settled with her family in the dangerous territory so near the savage camps. Only after her family has settled did she consent to marry him. He left her at the settlement, promising to come back as soon as possible. Then he, and his friend Bull Kirby have a strange meeting with Scout Tobe Ansley in the woods and watch seeing St. Clair's ragged army under attack. When it appears that defeat is inevitable, the two head back to the encampment.

CHAPTER XI

They found matters there in a state of bloody bedlam. The guns had been taken and retaken many times, the ground around them covered with the dead and dying. On the right the Indians were fighting within the camp itself while on the left the troops were driving the savages across the creek in one of those useless and costly bayonet charges. Kirby glanced around him and pulled Will close enough so that he could make himself heard above the thunder of gunfire.

"Let's git outa here. Them damned yaller militia ain't comin' back to help and there ain't enough reg'lars to hold."

Apparently he was not alone in his opinion. Already several officers were trying to form their units for withdrawal. The guns had already been spiked. They could not be held and there were no longer gunners to work them. Wounded were being moved to the rear and it was quite apparent that St. Clair had given up hope of holding the position.

Then, to add to the dismay, a party of Indians pressed in from the rear, blocking the only line of retreat.

Hasty Retreat to Fort Jefferson and Confusion

It was hand to hand for a moment. Will shot an Indian almost at the muzzle of his rifle, then he took the savage's hatchet and fought with that until the enemy was driven from the road. Then he kept going, aware that the panic-stricken army was on his heels, pouring through the gap in a wild scramble while the path was clear.

He could see Indians among the trees and he kept firing as fast as he could load. Then Kirby was beside him again, shouting once more. "Git movin'! Let the troops fight the rear guard action. We got no call to risk our scalps in this mess any more'n we have to!"

Will could see St. Clair shouting orders to another mounted officer, apparently trying to stop the rout, but it was too obviously hopeless. Men were throwing away guns and equipment in their desire to run faster, becoming helpless refugees to be cut down as the Indians overtook them. The few who were lucky enough to have horses were riding down the unfortunate wretches who were in their way. Men, women and horses — wounded or otherwise—choked the narrow trail in a frantically struggling mass of terrified humanity.

It was difficult to keep cool under such conditions but Morgan and Kirby seemed to steady each other. They picked up discarded powder horns and bullet pouches until their supply of ammunition was replenished and continued to fight their way along, keeping on the fringes of the mob. Somewhere along the line they were joined by the packer Van Cleve and the trio continued to work along in the brush where the going was better than in the choked road. They were fighting all the time now but it was better than getting tangled in that helpless mass of terrified fugitives.

Presently Van Cleve managed to catch a horse which had come plunging away from the road but before any of them could mount they came across the riverman, McBirney. He had been shot through both hips and was completely helpless.

Van picked him up bodily, ignoring his groans, and threw him across the animal's back. So fast was the mass of refugees moving now that the delay put them almost with the rear guard.

By that time Will was fighting with a grim resolution to survive. He knew that this disaster would mean a plague of triumphant savages all along the border; he had to get back in time to warn the Boldens and get Mary away!

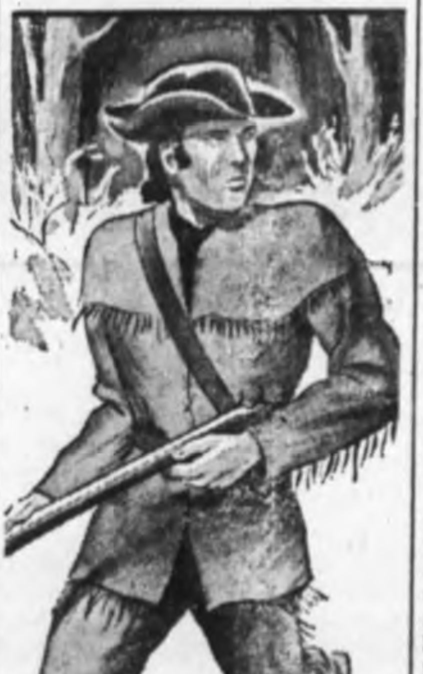
He was running as he fought now. It seemed certain that no considerable force of Indians could be ahead so he put less and less time into fighting and used his energy to run. The wounded and exhausted were falling by the roadside every few yards now but their fate helped the others. As the savages stopped to take scalps it permitted the stronger refugees to draw away.

"Gone back to loot the camp," Kirby panted as he slowed to a walk. "I reckon the worst is over now."

At Fort Jefferson they found a scene of wild confusion. Wounded men lay on the ground outside the little fort which was far too small to accommodate so many. Exhausted fugitives dropped beside them, all trying desperately to keep warm as nightfall came on. The cold was continuing and there were almost no blankets. Men had even thrown clothing away in the stampede. They had fled on foot in a few hours the distance it had taken the army ten days to advance. Now they shivered in their exhaustion.

Old Sam turned up safe and sound, having left the fight with a load of wounded before the panic started. Two members of his crew had been killed but Sam was grimly philosophic. "Lucky it was Injuns we was up against," he growled. "Any other kind of army woulda cleaned us out proper but the heathens was in too big a hurry to git back and loot."

In the morning a more orderly retreat was begun toward Fort Washington and by noon the camp was pretty well cleared. Then Will broached the subject which had been uppermost in his mind. "Want to hit for the Boldens' with me, Bullhead?" he asked. "There won't be any time to lose with the Indians coming through the way they are. I'm afraid they'll try to clean out all the settlements while they've got us on the run."



He realized he was drawing away from the worst of it. The firing in the rear had stopped entirely.

"Take it easy a bit," Kirby advised. "They'll plunder the army stores before they start anything new."

Will shook his head. "I'm done with waiting," he declared flatly. "For a year I've walked around helplessly, worrying over things I couldn't do much about. This time I can take steps to help myself instead of being idle. I've got to go!"

"Easy," Kirby warned. "I know it's hard but there's things a man can't do much about. We'd cave in if we started today."

Morgan Is Determined To Get to Bolden's

"But there's no time to waste."

Kirby's voice was purposely sharp. "Use your head, Will. I got more aches and blisters than a greenhorn after his first bout with a axe. You ain't no better even if ye won't admit it. We'll git there sooner by restin' than we will if we start out and have to quit."

Will's own weariness was the argument which won him over to Kirby's way of thinking. Still it was hard to rest with the black fear upon him. He worried through the afternoon, sleeping enough so that he was ready to travel at dawn. Kirby also seemed well recovered and they struck eastward over the trail they had taken two weeks previously.

"It won't do yer friends no good fer us to run into a scalpin' party," he insisted practically. "We can't be a speck o' help to 'em if we're dead."

Nightfall found them some distance short of where they expected to strike the Big Miami and they camped in the forest without venturing to light a fire. It was safer to remain away from the stream as there was always danger of hostiles using the watercourse as a trail.

During the night it began to snow and the two men huddled together for warmth. Muscles sore from the exertions of the battle seemed to twist into knots as the cold struck through their clothing and several times during the night they had to get up and stamp around as cramps tore violently into leg muscles which had already taken a pounding.

Morning found three inches of snow on the ground and the storm continuing unabated. At dawn they were on the move, munching cold rations as they floundered through hidden drifts. Two hundred yards from their camp they came across the trail of a large force of Indians which had been headed north. Kirby examined the partly covered trail with infinite care, announcing that twenty-odd warriors had passed during the night. "Lucky we didn't come a bit farther," he said. "It woulda been jest too bad if that gang had stumbled on us."

They backtracked the war party, presently passing through a pine grove where the thick branches interlaced above had sheltered the needle-carpeted ground below. Here the Indians had apparently halted for some time and the two men covered the ground systematically. At the edge of the bare ground there were distinct tracks in the snow where a shift of wind had kept more snow from falling after the party had passed.

Kirby studied the spot grimly before he spoke. "I don't like to skeer ye, Will, but them varmints had a white woman with 'em. I reckon they've already done their dirty work."

Two days before Will thought he was learning the real meaning of fear and horror but now he felt an emotion which made the other seem superficial and shallow. He had fought well enough when hardened soldiers were flying in panic but now his knees threatened to buckle under him.

They moved at a dog trot now, following the faint trail toward the settlement. Gradually the traces disappeared, indicating that the snow had been falling longer on these tracks. The Indians must have passed here before the snowfall or shortly after it began. Finally they broke out into a clearing which had been an outlying cornfield and Kirby swore aloud, pointing to the sky ahead. Above the trees on the far side of the clearing smoke rose from several points while buzzards wheeled in the rapidly clearing sky. "Looks bad, Will," he said shortly. "Take it easy; there might be some o' the devils still around."

Massacre and Buzzards Circling High Above

They skirted the clearing and slipped through the little strip of woodland to where they could look across what had been the main part of the settlement. Not a building remained standing, five smoking heaps of embers indicating where the pioneers had so laboriously constructed their home.

They had no more than emerged from the trees when Will stumbled over a snow-covered mound which he suddenly realized was a human body. In spite of the violent death he had been witnessing it brought a feeling of nausea that he had come within inches of stepping on someone he had known. Kirby read his feeling and stooped to uncover the face of the victim. It was Patterson, the hole in the top of his head indicating clearly the nature of his murderer.

Almost callously after that first revulsion Will stepped around the corpse and hurried on. At the side of the heap of ashes which had been the Bolden cabin he paused, sniffing the air. Kirby came up quickly. "Smell it too, do ye? Some pore devil got burnt up in the cabin. I hope he was daid first."

They made the rounds of the clearing in silence, trying to get the full story of what had happened. Kirby finally offered an opinion. "It happened yesterday afternoon or sooner. Anyway it was over before the snow started and the varmints left here before they made any trail. I'd guess they struck shortly after noon and spent the rest o' the day lootin'. They wasn't in no hurry but when the storm came up they headed out. How many folks can ye account fer? Ye knew 'em better 'n I did."

Will shrugged hopelessly but made an effort to rally his thoughts. Anything was better than standing around in the silent misery which had gripped him. He stared about him at the smoking masses of ruin and the silent forms which he and Kirby had inspected.

All of the settlers had died in or close to their homes, the Bolden cabin being the only one in which the owners had been burned. Kirby had said that he figured the others had been killed and dragged out before their homes were fired but the Boldens must have fought until the flames caught them. Young Dan Bolden and his father had been mutilated almost beyond recognition but no bodies could be identified from Mary's family.

"Near as I can figure," Will said after a while, trying to keep his voice steady, "we can account for all but two. The Patterson boy ain't around and there's one body missing here." He jerked a thumb toward the wreckage of what had been Mary's home.

He felt weak and sick at thought of one of those charred corpses being the girl. That her smooth round body should have become burnt flesh revolted him to the point where he had trouble in controlling his stomach. It was better to believe that she was one of the missing pair. Maybe she had even escaped before the attack.

Kirby scratched his head thoughtfully. "I reckon there ain't nothin' we can do about it now. It's tough on ye but it was tougher on these poor critters. Let's travel."

They followed the Big Miami for a matter of something over a mile, cutting back into the timber when the winding course of the stream led off to the southeast. Neither had spoken since leaving the scene of murder and desolation, Will stumbling along as though in some sort of horrid dream while Kirby respected his friend's grief and refrained from comment. They made good progress, nightfall finding them several miles from the ruined settlement.

Coffee Frosting Adds Tang to Chocolate Cake

By Dorothy Maddox

NOTHING like a good chocolate cake to make the family happy. When made with economical, nonfat dry milk, it carries first-class nutrition at a lower price. When covered with coffee frosting, your cake will have even further appeal.

Nonfat dry milk, which is milk with only the fat and water removed, is an excellent source of protein, calcium, riboflavin and lactose. A one-pound package yields five quarts of nonfat milk for only about nine cents a quart. It will keep almost indefinitely on a cool, dry shelf if the package is closed carefully after each using.

Chocolate Cake
(Makes two 8"x1½" layers)

One and one-half cups sifted flour, ½ cup nonfat dry milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ teaspoon baking soda, ½ cup cocoa, ⅓ cup shortening, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 eggs, slightly beaten, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 cup water.

Sift together flour, nonfat dry milk, salt, baking soda and cocoa. Cream shortening; gradually add sugar and cream until light and fluffy. Add vanilla and eggs; beat until well blended. Combine vinegar and water, stirring only enough after each addition to blend well. Grease and line with waxed paper, two 8 x 1½-inch layer pans. Pour mixture into pans. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes until cake springs back when lightly pressed with finger. Remove layers from oven; allow to cool in pans 5 minutes. Turn onto cooling rack.

Coffee Frosting

One-quarter cup nonfat dry milk, 2¾ cups sifted confectioners' sugar, 1 tablespoon instant coffee, ⅓ cup butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 to 2 tablespoons water.

Sift together nonfat dry milk powder, sugar and coffee. Cream butter. Gradually beat in half of dry ingredients. Stir in vanilla and 1 tablespoon water. Stir in remaining dry ingredients. Add remaining water if needed to give a good spreading consistency. Beat until fluffy.

Coffee and cake make a delicious snack-time combination, → especially when the rich, dark coffee flavor is repeated in smooth cake frosting. Serve this mouth-watering ensemble to your guests dropping in on a Sunday afternoon. Better yet, whip up this delicious icing and surprise friends with coffee-iced cake and hot coffee after an evening at bridge or the theater.

R. W. Kent, Siluria, is authority for the statment that his fine Guernseys prefer to stand in their stanchions, chew their cuds, and dream about their day's grazing rather than eat their store-bought feed.

Doubting Thomases will become believers if they cross the road and stroll through the foot deep Ladino, Orchard grass and Fescue pasture, with its liberal addition of annual wild grasses.

One and one-half cows per acre on this field have been grazing three weks and are getting left behind by theluxuriant grass.

Mr. Kent's fine grazing is due in some part to one irrigation, but Mr. Kent is giving most credit to the mixture of grasses he is using. He has a good supply of seed produced on this pasture, and is selling these to other farmers who want to try the mixture.

Mr. Kent is also a booster of Sericea, which sustained his production when the drought stopped all his other grasses and legumes. He is ready to fill silos, plant a large acreage of oats, and put Chapel Hill Rescue seed on all his sericea.

Mr. Kent has done a great deal of pasture development and adopted several new crops since becoming a cooperator of the North Central Soil Conservation District.

BATTLE OF HORSESHOE BEND MAY BE FILMED

A movie of the Battle of Horseshoe Bend which was fought in 1814, may be filmed soon at the actual site in Talladega county near Alexander City.

It was this battle in which the forces of Gen. Andrew Jackson ended the reign of the Creek Indian Nation.

Talladega County Probate Judge C. J. Coley, an authority on the battle said that Universal-International Studios was preparing a script on the event. The script is entitled "The Long Hunters". Both Davy Crockett and Sam Houston were injured in the bloody fighting on March 27, 1814.

This battle shattered the power of the Creek Confederacy, probably the largest and bestorganized Indian alliance in America, and opened Alabama and adjoining territories to white settlers.

WILSONVILLE

ELIZABETH WELDON

Good luck to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Smith in their business venture. They have bought the Kaplan Store.

We are glad to have a visitor in our town from Sahananpur, India. She is Miss Clara Loyd who is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Gould.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Clinkscales and boys moved to Talladega, where Mr. Clinkscales is pastor of Spring Street Baptist Church. We hope he will be happy and successful in his new work.

We regret to report that Mrs. J. F. Helms is very ill. We hope she will soon be better.

School opened Monday with much enthusiasm from pupils, teachers, parents and other citizens. We hope it will be a successful year. We know of no town that is more cooperative with their school than Wilsonville.

Two of Wilsonville's attractive and promising young girls left for Birmingham where they will start training for their careers. They are Betty Ann Vardaman and Maggie Lou Garrett who has started Nurse's Training at St. Vincent.

We welcome Mr. C. H. Curtis back with us. He has been in Missouri for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Tony Daniels were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Daniels.

Edwin Ingram who is stationed in Maryland was home for a visit. Durwood Ingram, who is also in service, was home.

Mr. and Mrs. James Wallace were here for the week end. James is stationed at Fort Gordon.

James Campbell, who is stationed at Montgomery, was here during the week end.

Mrs. Harold Parker from Birmingham was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Baker.

Charles Stevenson, Edwin Ingram and Bud Smith visited Fred Clinkscales in Talladega.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Stevenson and family spent Sunday in Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. Omy Reinhardt of Nashville, and Mr. and Mrs. Seale Reinhardt of Columbiana, were guests of Mrs. Effie Reinhardt.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Vardaman from Thorsby visited Mr. and Mrs. John Vardaman during the week end.

Mrs. Rena Ware of Chattanooga and Mrs. Bertie Lindsey of Wilton were guests of their sister, Mrs. Ethel Tinney.

Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Gould have returned from a visit with Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gould and family in Chattanooga.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Kermit Baker's father, who has been ill, is improving.

Miss Renna Taylor has been visiting in Columbiana with her sister Mrs. W. W. Carter.

Mrs. C. E. Carlson spent several days in Birmingham with her daughter, Rena Carlson.

Mrs. Si Nalls is visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. A. McEwen.

Mr. J. E. Franks who is Chaplain at Kilby prison gave a very inspiring sermon at the Baptist Church Sunday.

A. D. Grimes and children from Leeds visited Mrs. F. F. Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Biddy Lovett and family, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Richardson (Mamie Lovett), from Wetumpka, took a trip to Texas recently.

Mr. and Mrs. James Curtis, Mrs. Don Beavers, Mrs. Hamilton Cosper, Mrs. Horton, Misses Mayme Hill, Aileen Pope and Elizabeth Weldon attended the teachers workshop and institute at Montevallo last week. It was enjoyable as well as profitable. Miss Aileen Pope was chairman of the planning committee for this conference.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal Crumpton and sons, Gary, Donald and Bufford visited in Chattanooga and Fort Oglethorp.

Mrs. Opal Bowdon of Dunnavant visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Ray.

Miss Barbara Edwards has returned to Alabama College for her senior year. She is majoring in music and is very talented.

Edward Cunningham has returned to Howard College to his training in engineering.

CAMP BRANCH

CAMP BRANCH CHURCH

Dr. B. F. Tingle, dist. supt., preached at the eleven o'clock hour bringing an inspiring message. At the noon hour lunch was served in the church basement. Immediately after lunch, Dr. Tingle held the 4th Quarterly Conference of Camp Branch Church, with a number of delegates from each church. On this occasion, we were glad to have a number of former neighbors with us, among whom were: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dismukes of Central Park, also the Rev. Charles Howard of Birmingham Southern College, who will take over as our pastor for Rev. Newton Maloney who leaves September 15 to enter Yale Divinity School. Newton has done a fine piece of work as our pastor and has endeared himself to each of us who wish for him God speed as he goes to new fields of service.

The Sub-District meeting of M. Y. F. held the regular monthly meeting with the Camp Branch group Monday evening, Septem- 8. A social hour and refreshments were enjoyed in the church basement after the program.

ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

B.F. HATCHETT & G.C. STARCHER JR

Preparing land for Ky. 31 Fescue and Ladino, Calera's J. J. Reeves was pulling a "Clod-buster" behind a bush and log harrow. This new-to-us tool was leaving a finely pulverized seedbed. Mr. Reeves had called us for preliminary surveys on a large fish pond site, and a siphon system to carry water from a smaller pond oevr a hill to his barn.

Cattle and sheep-man Bob Russell plans a pond just out his back door on his Shelby Springs farm. A National farm magazine last month had color pictures of a similiar pond, but the Russells had their idea prior to that. Mr. Russell showed us his very heavy re-seeding stand of rescue grass.

A heavy porportion of cooperators with the North Central Soil Conservation District was seen in the long line at the local P. M. A. Fall opening Tuesday. The P. M. A. materials and seed are a great deal of help in getting Shelby County soil improved and saved for the future. In spite of the rush we were impressed with the courtesy and care with which Oland Smith was helping each farmer work out his needs and his farm allowance.

W. W. Watkins deserves a great deal of credit for his single-handed clearing and preparing a perfect seedbed on that several acre wilderness along Highway 25 near Wilsonville. He is planting several recommended winter grazing combinations, including several acres of Chapel Hill Rescue to produce seed on a share arrangement with the "District".

Farmers planting Rescue for the first time should not expect it to come up quickly like oats, as the hard seed must soften gradually. Reseeding stands come up early due to softening in contact with the soil during the summer.

A glaze should be added to a ham about an hour before the total baking time for the ham is over. And be sure to remove the rind and score the fat beofre you spread the glaze over the meat.

Under The Study Lamp

By William Crowe

WHEN A PERSON SPEAKS TO A PERSON

"Stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee" Ezekiel 2:1

These words were spoken by the Lord to a young Israelite named Ezekiel, whose noble-minded response thereto resulted in his becoming the principal figure in a national crisis. The record of his obedience to that command has been an inspiration to God-fearing people through the succeeding ages.

Some men have exceedingly vague notions about God. In the minds of some He is a mere creature of the imagination, a mystical sentiment; to others, an impersonal force, the combination of the laws that are manifested in the existing universe; and so on. But arrogant human reason has never yet succeeded in blinding the eyes of the open-minded to the personality of God as He reveals Himself in the inspired Word; which revelation declares that, "He is, and is the rewarder of them that seek Him."

Back of the unavailing efforts to disprove the personality of God, is the unwillingness to admit ones responsibility to a being higher than himself. "We will not have this one to rule over us," is the defiant announcement of the unbelieving world; and for the reason that acknowledgement of the personality of God creates a sense of obligation. Therein lies the secret of rebellion against the divine will. Therein also lies the victory of faith.

Daniel Webster was present one day at a dinner party given at the Astor House by some of his New York friends, and in order to draw him out, one of the company put to him the following question: "Would you please tell us, Mr. Webster, what was the most important thought that ever occupied your mind?" The distinguished guest merely raised his head, and passing his hand slowly over his forehead, said: "The most important thought that ever occupied my mind was that of my individual responsibility to God". Then upon that subject he spoke eloquently for twenty minutes.

God calls to real men to stand upon their feet, and listen, and obey. "The Lord spake unto Moses"; and the history of humanity was changed! "Lord speak, for thy servant heareth"; and Samuel's nation, menaced by ruthless oppressors, survived.

J. W. THAGARD NEW CIRCUIT JUDGE

Gov. Gordon Persons has named Senator T. Werth Thagard, 48-year old Greenville attorney, as judge of the Second Judicial Circuit, succeeding Judge Arthur E. Gamble.

Thagard had served in the 1951 Alabama legislature from the 17th District, Butler, Conecuh and Covington Counties. Previous to that he had represented Butler County in the Alabama lower chamber.

Gamble, 78, had occupied the bench since 1910. He died last week following a stroke. The appointment was effective immediately.

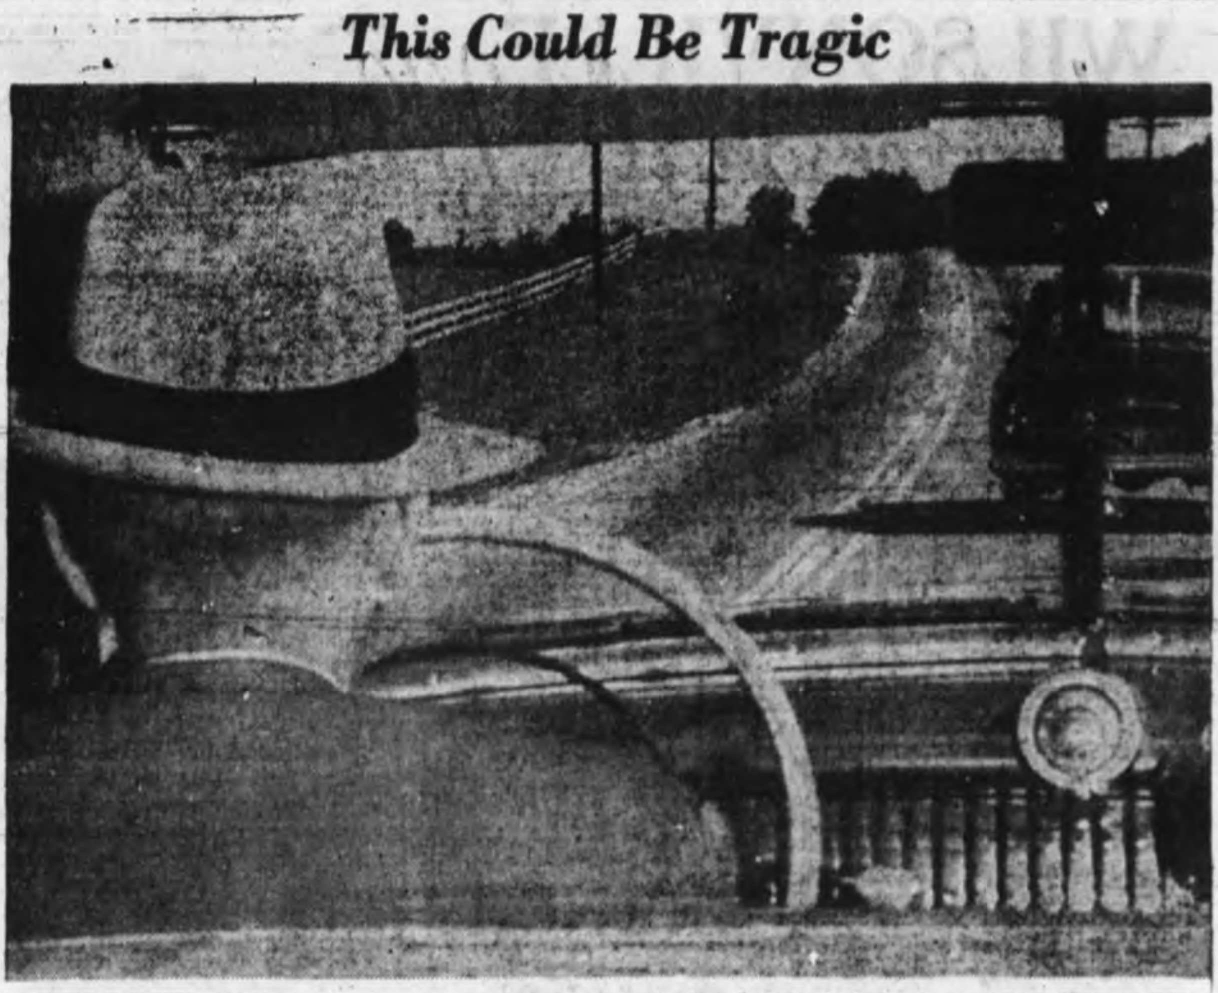
This Could Be Tragic



THIS DRIVER is attempting to pass another car despite the fact that there is a yellow line in his lane. The roadway scene here shows yellow lines in both lanes, which means it is unsafe for oncoming as well as going traffic to pass. You have at least 800 feet of sight distance to pass in IF there is no line in your lane. But this does not mean you can pass if cars ar- meeting you, and neither does it mean to exceed the 60-mile-per-hour speed limit in passing other vehicles. The patrol is arresting such motorists and charging them with reckless driving.—(Statenewsfoto).

Start The Day Right

The importance of starting the day with a good breakfast to fortify our bodies with the needed energy for the tasks of the day is now well recognized by housewives and meal planners. But what of the importance of a spiritual tonic to give inspiration and stamina for the mind and soul?

Thousands of families have found that breakfast time is the ideal occasion for a brief period of meditation and prayer which gives a spiritual touch to the whole day. With the aid of a devotional guide and the Bible, any family can have a meaningful, inspirational, and helpful family worship. It proves to be an important factor in strengthening family ties and in giving a feeling of family unity to have father and mother or one of the children read a Bible passage, a devotional message, and a brief prayer.

Dr. J. Manning Potts of Nashville, Tennessee, editor of The Upper Room, the world's most widely used devotional guide, points out that any family can easily arrange to share the few minutes that such a program requires. The experience of countless families showing the importance of starting the day right—giving each member of the family a sense of well-being and a renewed faith to help them meet the problems of the new day—is the result of morning devotions.

In children the establishment of the basic habit of daily renewal of their spiritual strength will be a resource that will aid them throughout their lives. The Upper Room, which provides a daily meditation for each day, is available through 50,000 churches in the United States.

HOT MUSIC BOX—This electrically heated clothes dryer gives with a wail when wet wash is dry, thanks to inventiveness of William A. Wasemann of Mansfield, Ohio. The 30-year-old laundry-equipment creator rigged up the device that plays "How Dry I Am" at the arid end of each drying cycle. Wasemann earned his mechanical-engineering master's degree with a thesis on harmonics of vibrating strings, was assigned development of the musical attachment at Westinghouse's Electrical Appliance Division.

WELFARE BOARD TO MEET

Dr. Bill Dorrough, State Welfare Commissioner, says that the State Welfare Board will meet during the last week of September to adopt a budget for the fiscal year beginning October 1.

Dorrough said that it might be possible to increase welfare payments to individuals because about 12,000 cases had been taken off the welfare rolls.

SOCIAL SECURITY RATE CHANGES IN EFFECT NOW

Robert Westlake

Important changes in the social security program went into effect the first of September. It was another in a long series of steps revising and improving the program since it was begun in 1935. Today some 47,000,000 persons are paying social security taxes — which their employers match—in the biggest insurance system in the world.

Since 1937 the federal government, administering these taxes on salaries and payrolls, has paid out nearly $7,000,000 in old age and survivors benefits. It has at the same time built up a bookkeeping fund amounting to $16,500,000,000 as a reserve.

Surplus Necessary

This surplus, invested in the government's own bonds, is needed. In another 50 years, experts estimate, the system will be paying out $13,200,000,000 a year and taking in only $1.,700,000,000. And this in spite of the fact that, unless congress changes the present law, social security taxes are scheduled to double before then.

"Social security isn't charity," says Arthur J. Altmeyer, federal social security administrator. "It is a retirement system paid for by workers and their employers."

One of the most important changes in the law beginning in September is the provision that any worker who earned as much as $50 during each of six three-month periods since social security began will be entitled to a minimum pension check. The minimum pension paid is $25 a month to a retired worker 65 or older, plus $12.50 for his wife if she, too, is past 65.

Maximum Payment

A worker paying the top social security tax—that is, at present, one and a half per cent on the first $3,600 of his income—can retire with $85 a month, plus $42.50 for his wife, if both are past 65.

Also, social security pensions are increased by $5 a month or 12.5 per cent, whichever is the greater amount.

Retired persons can earn up to $75 a month without losing their pensions, while the self-employed can earn a maximum of $900 a year. The law formerly put a ceiling of $50 a month on permissable earnings.

Anyone 75 or older still can earn any amount without loss of his or her benefit.

Beginning in September, also, the federal government will increase contributions it makes to state funds to provide financial assistance for the needy, the blind, the disabled, dependent children, and some elderly persons not eligible for benefits.

All of these changes are expected to increase social security payments about 20 per cent—from the present $2,000,000,000 a year to about $2,400,000,000.

Even under the increased benefits, however, the retired worker and his family cannot get a check monthly for more than 80 per cent of his average monthly wage before he retired.

My wife is one of the most entertaining women I've ever known. And all she does is just sit there and listen.

ALABAMA TAX COLLECTIONS

State Revenue Commissioner Joe M. Edwards says Alabama tax collections for August were up almost $2,000,000 over the same month last year.

August collections for the first 11 months of this fiscal year total $120,791,494, Edwards said. This is more than $22,000,000 over the same period last year. He added that collections thus far this year are more than $13,000,000 above the record $107,671,656, collected in the entire previous fiscal year.

The sales tax accounted for $16,072,079 of the total, he said. During the first 11 months of this fiscal year, the sales tax has netted $47,440,143, compared to $31,368,064, during the same period last year.

Use tax returns brought in $338,971 in August, compared to $174,555 the same month a year ago.

Other major revenue producers: Gasoline tax - $3,412,428, compared to $3,216,292 in August, 1951; Income tax - $320262, compared to $341,705 in August 1951, and Tobacco tax - $662,728, compared to $740,970, last August.

FRANCES ROBINSON NAMED MEMBER OF PAROLE BOARD

Mrs. Frances R. Robinson, of Prattville, has been named a member of the Alabama Pardons and Parole Board.

Mrs. Robinson, 42, succeeded James N. Bloodworth, who resigned to return to his Decatur law practice. She was one of the three persons recommended by a nominating board set up by the 1951 legislature. The board included Chief Justice J. Ed Livingston, of the State Supreme Court, Chairman; Lt. Gov. James B. Allen, and Presiding Judge R. B. Carr, of the Alabama Court of Appeals.

Others recommended for the post were M. R. Joiner, Talladega, and O. N. Claborn, Gadsden.

Mrs. Robinson, a native of Birmingham, first entered state employment in 1929 and served until 1937 with the Alabama State Tax Commission. From 1938-39, she was with the old Agriculture Adjustment Administration in Auburn. From 1939 to 1941, she was with Gordon Persons and Co., Inc.

From 1943 to 1950, she was confidential assistant to Persons when he was president of the Alabama Public Service Commission. She had been administrative assistant to the governor since 1951.

"Mr. Bloodworth has made a great contribution toward restoring public confidence in the Pardons and Paroles Board," Governor Persons said.

Legend has it that the ostrich sticks his head in the sand when he's annoyed or frightened. Whether this is the truth or not, it certainly can't be denied that many people do just about like the ostrich when the radio or television set goes on the blink. It's foolish to put up with a poorly operating set when expert repair service is as near as your phone.

REMINISCENCE

School days happy days, tiny ladies and men,
Wonderment upon a face, who will lose or win?
Recess, report cards, proud heads nobly held.
Sympathy and sorrow for someone who failed.

School days, happy days, the teacher you love best.
Concentration on a brow preparing for a test.
Apples for the teacher, roses for her too.
Pencils, writing paper, a bottle of sticking glue.

School days, happy days, vacation in the offing,
Tiny boys, sparkling eyes, little caps a doffing.
Little tots off to school bent on knowledge seeking,
Meeting teachers in the hall, voices shyly speaking.

School days, sweethearts, little hearts a-thumping,
Blackboards shiny black, little hands erasing.
Footprints upon the floor, where little feet are pacing.

School days, children's voices rising in crescendo,
Swelling voices rend the air and float out through the windows.
Memories! Memories snatches here and there,
When the smell of chalk dust faintly scents the air.

School days, new school books and far-away places,
Foreign lands, geography interested faces,
Asia Minor, Belgium, foggy England, sunny France,
Promotion, vacation sees one more year's advance.

School days are happy days, far away they seem,
School days of long ago, ink spots on the floor,
Oh, to turn back the years and go to School once more!

—Lola Smith Barnett

We thought of the above poem this morning (Monday) as we watched hundreds of children pass our window on their way back to school. I feel sure the poetic description above recorded is familiar to all of you, but, how many are there numbered among you who would like to turn the hands of Daddy Time's clock back to "Little Red School House Days" and relive them all over again?

. . . Myrtle Miles is optimistic over the prospect of Tree-lined streets for Columbiana since "The Tree Club" thought up by Jimmy Harrison, Myrtle Miles, and others got off to such a good start. We again urge every citizen to contribute to this Tree Fund so that proper planning and placement may be carefully worked out, making a more beautiful town in which to live. Send all contributions to Mrs. Hugh Sims, Columbiana, who is Treasurer. We know of no one thing that has been started which would add more lasting beauty to "Your Little Old Main Street And Mine", than the realization of this proposed civic improvement.

. . . Miss Ruth Gantt of Birmingham was the week end guest in the home of Mrs. W. F. Davis.

. . . Mrs. George Baker of Wilsonville Rt., came in to see us Monday, and reserved a ring side seat in our ever lengthening line of weekly readers for 1952, for which courtesy we are indeed grateful.

. . . Dr. Milton Park, former M. D. of Columbiana, now residing in Nashville, Tennessee, is the guest of Mrs. Nelle Davis, and other friends in Columbiana. Dr. Park was receiving a warm welcome back on Main when we joined the group and had the pleasure of greeting him.

. . . Mrs. Inez Bird and Mrs. Jordan spent the week end in Birmingham, Alabama.

DR. JIM. H. DAY
OPTOMETRIST

9-5 Thursday Columbiana
1-5 Saturday Alabama

There is some curbstone chatter this morning to the effect that the Doctor might consider returning to Columbiana, but, that is only a "rumor" and not factual news. The Doctor looks splendid and expressed sincere appreciation for the cordial welcome accorded him on this return visit.

. . . Mrs. Murphree and her distinguished son, Claude Murphree, famed Pipe Organist, and widely known instructor of Music in the University of Florida, were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Fowler. Friends of Mr. Murphree's were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Walton following the evening service at the Methodist Church Sunday, where Mr. Murphree graciously consented to give an impromptu recital. Those fortunate enough to hear him on this occasion tell me this morning that the versatile artist played everything from "Bach to Boogie" and the program of songs and well known classics played as only Claude Murphree can interpret them will not soon be forgotten.

. . . Alvin Bird, Jr. (Buddy) will return to Columbiana this week from Grand Island, Louisana, where he has been employed during the summer months with the Humble Oil Company. He will reenter Auburn the latter part of September.

. . . Mr. Wade Lawless and daughter Alice Nelson and Kay Ballard of Tallassee spent the week end with Mrs. Pauline Bird.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Stumpf and son Andy of Birmingham, spent last week end with Mr. and Mrs. Amos Holman.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Brasher of Leeds, visited Mr. Brasher's sister, Mrs. Claudia Cox, Sunday afternoon.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Luther Curlee, and Mr. and Mrs. V. J. Sullivan have returned from a delightful week end at Ft. Walton, Florida. They were joined there by Dr. and Mrs. George Barrow (Mary Curlee) and family.

. . . Friends of Mrs. Claude Heaton will regret to learn that her condition remains critical at her home in the Fourmile Community.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Stinson, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Ozley, Grace Carter Ozley, Mr. and Mrs. Wales W. Wallace, Jr., and Shirley Wallace have returned from a delightful week end spent in Mobile, Biloxi, and New Orleans.

. . . Judge L. C. Walker, Cecil Duke and Tom Nash of the Board of Revenue and Control have returned from a meeting of the Commissioners and Probate Judges which took place in Mobile.

. . . Mrs. Nelle Wallace, Mrs. Rosa Teague, Mrs. Dan Cosby, Sallie and Janet Cosby of Wilsonville, were welcomed guests in our office Monday.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Miller of Tuscaloosa, Mrs. Douglas Malloch, Mrs. John Collins of Chicaga, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Spivey. Mrs. Malloch and Mrs. Collins are sisters of Mr. "Curly" Miller, who is a former resident of Columbiana. Mrs. Malloch is widely known for her successful achievements in the literary world.

. . . To Lloyd Blackerby go our thanks for coming by the office Monday and telling us he had "truly missed my Home Paper since it ran out".... and whats more, the genial gentleman pulled out two long greens and said, "Put my name back on that list", and only a Jet-propelled plane could have attended to that little matter quicker than we did!

. . . W. W. Sewell of Columbiana Rt., pays us a visit and "thinks" his paper, the Reporter-Democrat is out in September, but, he does not know the date and rather than take a chance of missing an issue, pronto gives us two crisp one dollar bills and up goes W. W. Sewell's name for another year with us. Thanks Mister!

. . . Joe Raines, prominent lumber dealer of Sterrett Route, was in town Wednesday and decided to line up with the Reporter-Democrat readers for 1952-53, for which courtesy we are duly grateful.

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARIES

Sue Ann Fiquette shared birthday honors with the Labor Day celebration last Monday; Mrs. J. L. Isbell was honored in her home by her children, and friends when they celebrated the passing of her birthday September 2; On September 4, Charles Henry Moon, John Walter Sims and Tommy Minor walked off with "Many Happy Returns Of The Day" wishes; Saturday, September, 6, Betty Ruth Watts, Horace Vansant, George Holcombe were honorees at birthday celebrations; Monday, September 8, Edward Cunningham, Bill Seale, and Dow Bozeman had birthday cakes all their own and on September 9, W. C. Billingsley, Elbert Jones, Jay F. Falkner, and Arnette Davis had "happy Birthday to You" sung throughout the day.

Larry Wayne Pearce is busily engaged celebrating his birthday, today, Wednesday, September 10, and everything is topsy-turvy down our way this week for "Small Fry" is on tiptoes regarding September 12, which will be "Her Day" down our way (as if every day isn't). This date also holds significance for Ida Carden as far as birthdays go, and for the Shelby Hi Football boys, they will be "Holding That Line" (we hope) when they meet Childersburg in their first tilt for the Oval Pigskin.

Saturday, you may step right into the Columbiana Leader and wish for Norman Lefkovits, Sr., many happy birthdays; E. J. Sullivan will be "at home" in the Veterans Office to receive good wishes coming his way, and the third citizen to claim September 13 for a birthday is Sybil Davis.

COLUMBIANA SCHOOLS OPENED SEPTEMBER 8

Shelby County High School opened Monday with an enrollment of 365 pupils. The Elementary School booked in 410 students, making a total of 765.

Roy Mann, Athletic Coach is giving his boys a thorough workout every afternoon getting ready to meet the Childersburg team on Friday night, September 12.

Mary Mims, Musical Director is enthusiastic over the talent she has found in the two schools this year. Miss Mims received her Masters Degree from Columbia University's School of Music this summer and Columbiana is more than "just fortunate" in retaining this versatile artist for another year.

THE END OF A STORY ABOUT A DOG NAMED 'JIM' ALIAS FIDO

"Where O where is my little dog gone?" was the theme song sung by L. H. Ellis "Up and Down Main", for several days week before last, before he thought of the "Reporter-Democrat" as the magnet holding the answer to his canine's location. Finally, the idea clicked, and the alarm was sounded thru the display ad section of this widely read periodical. The dog, immediately after the issue of August 21 was released, was found, and Herr Bell's invention put into use to spread the glad tidings to his owner.

Mr. Ellis, elated over this information, came by the office to express surprise and delight over such "quick action", but, he was as "mad as a hatter" at this humble Scribe for incorrectly calling this aristocratic high brow-pedigreed-hound pup "Fido". His correct moniker, it seems, is JIM; of the royal blue blood tribe known as Jungle Jim! Just how this Disciple of Blackstone thought we would automatically arrive at the correct name for the dog, we have not yet figured out, but just as we were supposed to know that one of Lauderdale's prize cows had "quarters" instead of "Drumsticks", and for this mis-nomer, we were barred from all further cattle reporting, so it is that now, we are condemned for "no intuition or tact in handling this dog situation". Mr. Ellis states his dog's feelings are hurt, and he has suffered great mental anguish over the wide publicity used in announcing his (Jim's) return, by calling him "Fido". The man actually chewed up his cigar while delivering an oration on this outrage. Fact is, we have looked every day for a suit to be filed against us for this mis-nomer.

But today, a letter from Mr. Ellis is in our box, and possibly if we publish this "correct statement", we can save the county some money from a law suit, and, more important than this, take definite action to alleviate the "inferiority complex" Jim, alias, "Fido", has developed, so that he may again return confidently with his kennel mates and engage in tracking down innocent little coons.

So, going on the theory that "Every Dog Has His Day", and desiring to be fair to all animals, dumb and otherwise, and also desiring that a satisfactory adjustment be made, as far as further imaginary reflection on "Straying Jim's" character, we reprint the letter received from L. H. Ellis, which is self-explanatory. And if we are not fired for taking up so much "time and space" on this 'Dog-Gone' matter, we will B. C. N. U.... next week!

THE LETTER

September 6, 1952

Mrs. Mildred White Wallace
Columbiana, Alabama

Dear Mrs. Wallace:

In the issue of the Shelby County Reporter-Democrat of August 28th you had a very nice human interest story in reference to losing and finding Jim, my registered redbone coon hound. There were some inaccuracies in your story but they really do not detract from the human interest angle. However, I want to get the story straight as I do not want my dog reflected upon.

The most egregious error was the fact that you call my dog Fido.

A Fido connotes a small dog, of mixed ancestry, whose forbears in their love life, did not adhere strictly to the moral code, and carries in his veins blood of feist, a fox terrier, beagle, cur dog, a cocker spaniel, a bird dog (either pointer or setter), etc., et cetera.

I have no quarrel with nor prejudice against the Fidoes of the world and the millions of boys who own and love them. In fact, I owned a Fido when I was a boy and loved him very dearly. One day when I was away at school some neighbors came, took him away and killed him, claiming he was running with a band of marauding sheep killing dogs. This I did not believe and do not believe, and I have never quite forgiven the neighbors who caused his demise.

Now my dog, whose hunting name is Jim, is a royally bred dog whose kennel name is "PR" Crammers Jungle Bess Rock, No. C 506814. In fact he is Purple Ribbon bred, as his ancestors before him were, and among them are some of the greatest coon hounds the world has ever known. His Sire is my Rock, whose kennel name is "PR" Crammers Jungle Rock, UKC No. 4971074. His Dam, which I own, goes by the hunting name of Texas and her kennel name is "PR" Harris Bess, UKC No. 79174.

I could furnish you a twenty generation pedigree of this dog, which would take practically all your paper to publish it, and that would not be feasible.

Suffice it to say that in Jim's veins flow the blood of McGills Jungle Jim, UKC No. 57151, one of the most famous coon dogs of all ages.

So you will see that Jim is not a Fido but a Purple Ribbon bred redbone coon hound.

I make this statement to clear the record and to see that no shadow rests on his ancestry.

Please do not call my dog Fido.

I am,

Respectfully yours,
Handy Ellis

VILLA BENTLEY

SHELBY'S MAID OF COTTON

Shelby Winner - Miss Villa Bentley, daughter of E. W. Bentley of Columbiana, recently named 1952 Shelby County Maid of Cotton.

Miss Bentley, is five feet, five inches tall, weighs 120 pounds. She has blue eyes and brown hair. She graduated from Alabama College, where she majored in biology and chemistry. She became a hospital technician, taking her training at St. Margaret's Hospital, Montgomery. However, at present she is employed in Columbiana as a case worker by the Department of Public Welfare. She is sponsored in the Maid of Cotton Contest by the Columbiana Kiwanis Club.

Miss Bentley will be entertained in Birmingham with other contestants from Alabama's 67 counties. These girls will appear on the stage in front of the Grandstand on Thursday night, October 2nd, during the Alabama State Fair, when the winner for the state will be announced. Miss Bentley is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Columbiana.

The winner in Birmingham will go to Memphis in December and compete with other girls from all other cotton growing states, for the honor of being the National Maid of Cotton. The Maid of Cotton Contest is sponsored by the Alabama State Fair; The Shelby County Farm Bureau in cooperation with the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation; Extension Service of A. P. I. and the five other segments of the cotton industry which are—cottonseed processors, warehousemen, buyers and shippers, ginners and manufacturers; Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, wholesale and retail merchants; Birmingham News and Birmingham Post-Herald.

. . . Mrs. L. P. Dycus states she has "missed" the Home Paper for several weeks, and asks that we again place their names on our weekly readers list, which we happily do! Thanks too, for all those nice things she had to say regarding our efforts to please an ever whimsical public!

KINDERGARTEN OPENS TUESDAY

Mary Nell Skelton's Kindergarten is by far the most interesting place in town for the writer, for within its bright walls there are some twenty-five wee little ones who furnish plenty of sunshine in this old world for all who know them.

Mrs. Skelton has modernized her upstairs apartments into an ideal place for these Tiny Tots, and everything imaginable has been placed there for their comfort and entertainment. All summer long the Skelton's have been engaged in planning for these firststeppers on the educational ladder, and the entire back yard has been turned into a playground with equipment designed for the recreational periods. Tuesday morning found them all ready and eager to be on their way, and who wouldn't be, with pretty Mary Nell Skelton waiting to greet you with her cheerful little ear-ful of "Good morning to you!"

Fortunate, most fortunate, are these little fellows, and never will they forget these "first school days". On the other hand, they will, long years after, always be happily remembered.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Elliott are in Columbiana this week taking an inventory in the Yellow Front Store. Always a pleasure to greet the "Elliotts" during their periodical visits.

. . . Frank Head, prominent attorney in Columbiana, says the most beautiful sight he has seen on Main recently was the rhythmic tempo of the "hoes" as the "Ladies" weilded them Tuesday in an endeavor to beautify the grounds around the Methodist Church preparatory to the Home Coming Sunday. We mentioned the fact to several masculine specimens standing by, that a little cooperative connection between the "men and the hoes' might be more helpful than the "apple sauce" being handed out so generously regarding the "beautiful sight of glamourous ladies at work." Anything is liable to happen, and often does, on the Main Drag.

. . . Sue Fiquette and Nancy Horn left for Alabama College Tuesday where they will enter the Freshman class. We are sure there are others, but we did not happen to see them.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS ASSIGNED WORK

The Selective Service System in Alabama has started the program of assignment to civilian work of young men who are classified as conscientious objectors.

Colonel J. T. Johnson, Jr., Acting State Director of Selective Service, announced that the first assignments were made to The Alabama State Hospitals in Tuscaloosa on September 2. Johnson says that this program was established by the Universal Military Training and Service Act. This Act provides that young men who are classified in I-O by reason of religious background making them conscientiously opposed to participation in the armed forces, shall be ordered to perform appropriate civilian work for a period of two years.

Colonel Johnson added that civilian work to which conscientious objectors are assigned must contribute to the National health, safety, or interest. They are paid at a sacrificial rate of pay.

The determination of eligibility for I-O classification is made by the various Selective Service Local Boards throughout the State. In order to classify properly, Local Boards throughly investigate the background of the individual and in some instances, have the benefit of F. B. I. investigation reports.

The first five (5) men ordered for work assignments reported to Bryce Hospital Tuesday and they are to perform duties as attendants and male nurses. They come from various counties as follows: Crenshaw County, James A. Duncan; DeKalb County, J. D. Graves; Montgomery County, William E. Kearley; Jefferson County, Norman H. Ray and Oscar Garrett. These men are all under twenty-six years of age and are the oldest who are classified as conscientious objectors in Alabama.

. . . Bobby Martin and Waylon Davis of the U. S. Navy, returned to California, after a few days leave at home with their parents.

. . . A large crowd is expected to go to Childersburg to witness the football game between the Shelby High Wildcats and Childersburg Friday night, September 12. This is the first game of the season for both teams. Let's support the Wildcats.

INSURANCE DIVIDENDS

Back in the early part of the year, you were supposed to have received a card from the VA District Office that handles your insurance account. For most veterans in Alabama, that's the district office in Atlanta. On this card, there was a place for you to indicate whether you wanted your dividend paid to you in cash or applied to your account to pay for future premiums. This card was to be mailed back to the VA district office. If you signed the card expressing your choice to get the cash, and it is 60 to 90 days AFTER THE ANNIVERSARY DATE of your policy, you should have already received your dividend for 1952. On the other hand, if you did not return the card, your dividend will automatically be credited to your account. When this credit is made, the VA will send you a notice to that effect. Most of the veterans who have inquired about their 1952 dividend state that they never received the card. If this is true in your case, all you have to do is come by this office. We'll take care of the matter for you.

If you entered the service before April 25, 1951, the chances are you applied for and received National Service Life Insurance for which you had to pay a premium every MONTH. You kept this insurance in force until about June or July, 1951, at which time you decided to take advantage of what's commonly known as FREE GI INSURANCE, that is, you were fully protected for $10,000 without having to pay for it. At this time, you were given the opportunity to place your other insurance under a Premium Waiver. Now, under these circumstances, just what happens to your insurance when you are discharged from service. In the first place, after you are discharged, you are still covered for $10,000 for a period of 120 days.

If you should die within 120 days after discharge, even though you don't pay a cent on your insurance, the Veterans' Administration will pay your beneficiary a total of $10,000. If you want to keep your insurance in force after that 120 days period, and for the years to come, just what must you do? Before that 120 day limit expires, you must apply to the Veterans' Administration to have you insurance continued and you must start paying premiums. In the case of a veteran having insurance before the FREE INSURANCE law went into effect, and whose premium payments were under a WAIVER, he can RE-INSTATE his original policy. Or, if he prefers, he can apply for Term Insurance under the 1951 insurance law. And comes the question, what is the difference between the two?

If you re-instate your policy which was in force before April 25, 1951, your monthly premiums are going to cost more than twice as much depending on your age, as they will cost for the NEW type of insurance. On the other hand, your OLD insurance pays dividends, while the NEW type insurance does not. Also, your old N. S. L. I. term policy may be converted to any one of several different plans, such as ordinary life, 20 or 30 year pay, 20 year endowment, endowment at age 60 or endowment at age 65. The NEW type can never be converted to any such PERMANENT plan, unless you have a SERVICE-INCURRED DISABILITY of at least 10 percent.

Legacy of a King

Lesson for September 14, 1952

DAVID did not mention you in his will. But if you are a Christian, you are one of his heirs all the same. The gold and silver he owned have long since been spent; of his palace not one stone is left upon another; his vast holdings in land have gone to strangers far outside his family. But the most valuable part of what he left us is still with us, imperishable: his legacy of religion.

Dr. Foreman

Experience of God

ONE THING every one will think of: the Psalms. Bible students realize that the titles of the Psalms are not part of the original psalms, but represent later editors' beliefs as to the authors. However, scholars are agreed that David did write some Psalms and may in fact be called the father of the psalmbook.

Now the chief importance of any Psalm is not that it is a hymn or has been the basis of other hymns (as most of them have); it is not simply that it is beautiful and unforgettable poetry, The main point is that it is a first-hand record of first-hand experience of God.

We do not always realize how much of our own religious experience grows out of the experience of others. We would lack much of our interest in God and knowledge of him if we had not been waked up, so to speak, by some one else first. Think of the millions of readers of the 23rd Psalm, for instance, from David's time to now,—the millions who have been inspired and comforted by it. How much we owe to David!

Singing Faith

WE CHRISTIANS owe to David also that blending of beauty with religion which is a mark of our faith. Beauty apart from religion can drag men down and destroy them. Religion apart from beauty is usually a harsh and cold affair. There is a great deal of irreligious beauty and unbeautiful religion in the world, and neither of them does the world much good.

But for David religion and beauty flowed into each other, or rather beauty found its highest level in the service of God. It was not only in the words and music of the Psalms.

While David did not build the Temple, he dreamed it, and before a stone was laid he could see in his mind's eye the fine carvings, the gold inlays, the cypress and the fir, the brilliantly woven hangings; all the gorgeous gleaming Temple that he never lived to see, was in his mind and heart. He it was who gathered singing men and singing women for the worship of God the Lord. Whatever beauty there is in our church buildings, in our hymns, in our services, we owe much of the original inspiration of it to David.

"Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life"

RELIGION that cannot be applied to daily living, religion that is a purely solitary affair, has never been typical of the best in Christianity. Christianity has something to say to the world, our word, our world, something to do in it. Christianity in retreat, in hiding, is not full Christianity.

Perhaps we owe more of this ideal to David than we realize. For when he came to the throne, the ark—sacred symbol of the presence of God—was in a little out-of-the-way place where few could know of it. David took that ark and brought it to the nation's capital. Shrine and city must be united.

So wherever today the church stands literally or figuratively at the crossroads of life, challenging, inviting, winning men, a constant reminder of God, we should be thankful to David, who set the symbol of his religion in the very center of his nation's principal city.

Faith Faces Forward

ONE MORE thing must be mentioned, which we owe at least in part to David. It is a characteristic of both Jewish and Christian faith: Hope.

Some religions are religions of regret. Their golden age is in the past; as they see it the world is either going around and around in meaningless circle or in hopeless decay.

But any one who will read the Psalms with a penetrating eye can see how bright the future is to the Psalmist's mind. Bright, because it belongs to God. If Paul can say that hope is one of the things that endures, along with faith and love, he was not the first to think it. David long ago sang his songs of hope, and for this legacy too we may be grateful.

Dear Sandra:

The fair hit Main last week. And the lovelies hit Skillet, right between the eyes. I guess I never saw so many breathless ways of floating through the air, and I know I never saw so many pretty girls around to help you do it. I rode the horses with Jane Joiner. She took my breath. She was so pretty and so exhilarating I've felt about five years old all day. We rode everything in sight. Then her Pop came and took her away. Neither of us wanted him to, but he did anyway. Next year we'll be older and maybe he'll let us ride more. I hope so.

When Jane left I made eyes at Pat Dupree. Pat laughs a lot. Her eyes laugh as well as her mouth. Instead of noise they issue little twinkling lights that stab you inside. We rode the horses too. And then Pat was gone. So I latched on to Yoby Sims and Helen Harrison. Then we picked up Loretta Oakes and Helen Glass. And Lana Joy Jones. We rode the ferris wheel and stopped on top. We could almost reach the stars with our hands. I was scared but they were so unafraid and so happy I didn't let on. Then we rode the whirly-scooter. It mixes your insides up in a wad. I got sick. But what could I do. There were a thousands guys out there watching us, waiting for a chance to latch on to my lovelies if I slipped up.

It was a great fair. The horses and the ferris wheel and the whirley-scooter were. That's all I saw. I guess if I had tried I could have seen the bingo tables and the exhibits and the pitch games. But there wasn't time. There is only enough time for laughter and delight when you're up to your neck in calico and dimples.

But you do see the little things, as you pass from one thrill to another. Once I saw Bolin Cooper and his grand-boy, Larry Dorough. Larry was snug in a blue car. He was going round and round and when it stopped he didn't get out. When we came back by he was still riding. I don't think Bolin cared. I think if Larry had managed to wind up at home with the car it would have been all right too.

And I saw George Holcombe with Scooter on the horses. Scooter was riding and George was watching. Scooter's eyes were like stars early in the evening. He looked sort of solemn until he passed George and then he would cackle out loud. I looked at them for a long time, but couldn't decide who was having the most fun.

Donna Pierce was riding the horses with Stephen. Stephen was like a cowboy, tall and straight in the little saddle with the short stirrups. But Donna was like a ray of bright sunshine in the pale light. She made your eyes hurt.

Once I stopped at the fish pond. You picked up a fish with a little net and if you had the right number on it you got a doll. The dolls were mighty pretty. I saw Janet and Terry Bradley fishing. I think they both got dolls in the end. But they were lovelier than the dolls. They were lovelier than most anything you can think of, with their bright eyes and long silky hair.

Dell and Mary Edmondson were there too. They were just like Terry and Janet. You forgot about the dolls. The ones on the shelf with numbers on them. The real dolls were with Gene and Whit. But you couldn't buy'em if you had a million dollars. You couldn't if you had a million million.

I stopped by the pitch games to see Joe Stewart. She had her little brother with her. Joe was standing under the light and her eyes sparkled. We tried to lodge nickles in the dishes and bowls and ashtrays. But our nickles bounced out.

Yep, it was a great fair. I still haven't decided who had the most fun. Maybe it was all the little folks with bright eyes and laughing faces. Or maybe it was the old folks like me who just watched mostly and felt mighty good inside. Or maybe it was a tie game and we'll play it off next year. I guess that was it.

But the fair is gone now and school is starting this week. I don't know whether I want to go with Jerry Monday and sit behind Jay Francis Falkner, or whether I should go with Jerry Falkner and study spelling across the aisle from Betty Hatchet. I've got an idea I'll wind up at Mary Nell Skelton's house, learning to read and write and play games with Anita Sloan and Dawn Fulton and Harriett Young. Mary Nell and Eloise Williams brought their class down one day last year, and they packed the lobby with so much radience and bright loveliness I went around for weeks wondering why they had planted crepe myrtle trees in a post office.

It won't be long until Santa comes to town. Maybe you will be home by then and we can get an apple and an orange again. I remember how pretty you were last year at the Christmas Party. I'll write Santa a letter tonight, too. And ask him to let you be home by then so we can go to the Christmas Party. Tell your mommy and Daddy and little brother I say hello.

Bible Comment:

Intolerance Should Find No Advocate In Bible Dispute

IN the King James version of the Bible the Epistle to the Hebrews is attributed to Paul, but from early days in the church there has been much questioning regarding its authorship.

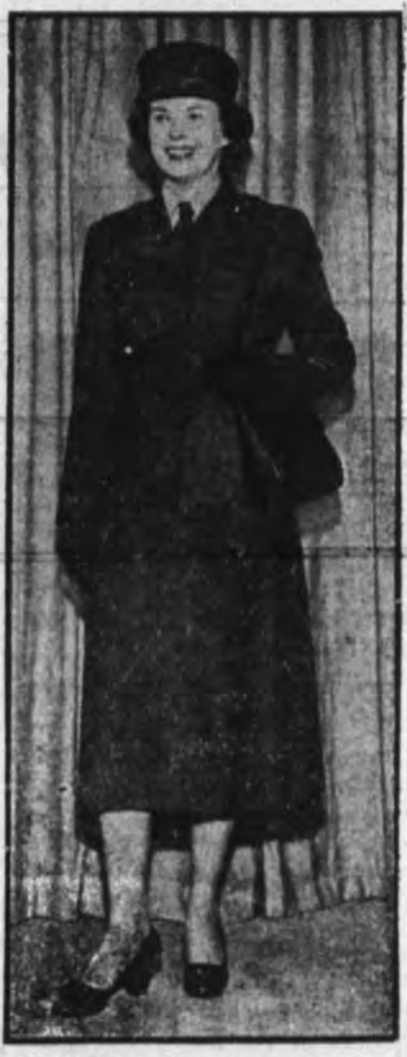
But one fact concerning the Pauline Epistles, those by James, Peter and John, which Paul certainly did not write, and the Epistle to the Hebrews, is that they are all agreed in a common faith in Jesus as the Messiah, in belief in his saving power, and in their conception of the Christian life.

James, for instance, emphasizes works as evidence of faith, where Paul puts more emphasis on faith, but in Paul's more extensive writings one would find many passages that, as strongly as James, stress the practical nature of Christian life. So, also, though John is the apostle of brotherly love, all that he says only strengthens what Paul wrote of love in I Corinthians 13. And when Peter writes of believers as "partakers of the divine nature," it is precisely what Paul was written in Ephesians 3:19.

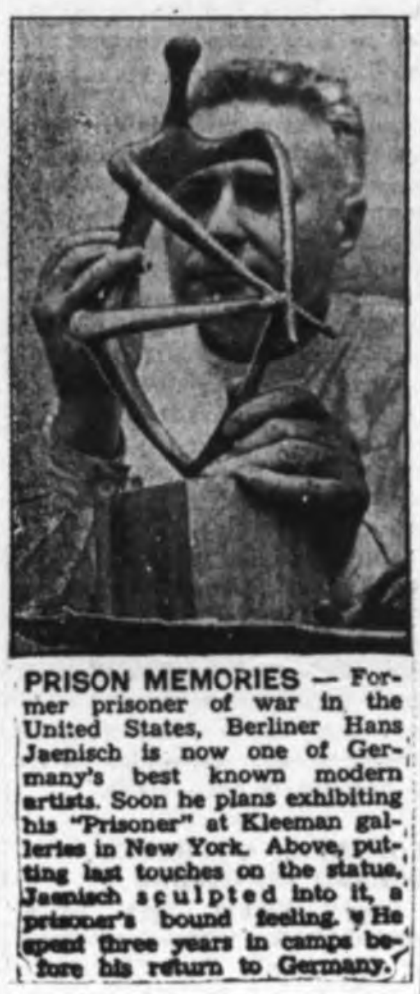
This unity is emphasized in the conception of God's better revelation in Jesus, as presented by the writer of Hebrews, and as presented by Paul. Both are intense in their conviction that Jesus is the fulfillment of the Messianic hope. But Paul is chiefly concerned with doctrine, while the writer of Hebrews emphasizes the priestly character of Jesus, and the fulfillment of the ritualistic side of the Old Testament heritage.

Belief in Jesus as the Messiah is dominant in the Christian church; and it is here that the devout Christian and the devout Jew differ. The devout Jew may regard Jesus as a great teacher, a view now more widely held than formerly, but he looks still for the coming of the Messiah and the fulfillment of the prophecies.

It is a difference of belief that is not unimportant, but it should not in any sense occasion intolerance or unbrotherliness. If the Jew lives up to all that is good in the Old Testament and the Christian to all that is best in the New, the spirit of both would make intolerance and prejudice impossible. It is in ideals of peace and good will that Judaism and Christianity both find their highest expression.



NEW DRESS—Lady leathernecks will be prettier in new green winter-service uniforms seen above. It is highlighted by more-feminine jacket, skirt, blouse and tie. The new blouse is pale green broadcloth. The redesigned tie is really an ascot-shaped, green fieldscarf matching the color of the outfit.



PRISON MEMORIES—Former prisoner of war in the United States, Berliner Hans Jaenisch is now one of Germany's best known modern artists. Soon he plans exhibiting his "Prisoner" at Kleeman galleries in New York. Above, putting last touches on the statue, Jaenisch sculpted into it, a prisoner's bound feeling. He spent three years in camps before his return to Germany.

A pessimist thinks all women are bad, whereas an optimist only hopes they are.

BIG LIFT
to Better Farming

Better farming, new methods and machines, better livestock, and improved marketing are helping bring about a new era of progress and prosperity in Dixie.

Rural telephones (they tripled in number since World War II in the area served by Southern Bell) are bringing a big lift to farm work and farm living. During the first eight months of this year, we installed more than 92,000 rural telephones.

We'll keep on putting them in as fast as we can—because we know how much they mean to prosperity on the farm and in town . . . and to a strong, well-fed America. More farm telephones also mean more valuable telephone service for everyone.

NEW HOPE

COUNTY CLUBS HOLD ANNUAL EVENT

Two of the New Hope Clubs held joint picnics on the lawn of the Presbyterian Church on Cahaba Valley Road. The affair was a delightful event, with members of the Home Demonstration and Community Clubs and their famalies enjoying a picnic at twilight.

This year, guest speakers were invited to participate in a Rural Life Program. The first talk was a most interesting feature, "God's Earth, Keep It," by B. F. Hatchett, Soil Conservationist. The next address was the Progress of Education in the County, by Mr. Elliott, Superintendent of Education. He mentioned that in 1912 there was only one High School in the entire county, whereas, there are a number over the area at the present time.

The program was concluded by Rev. Daniels of Birmingham when he spoke on how the Church serves the Community. He emphasized the importance of the church in the community, and how it influences and enriches the lives of it's citizens.

Mrs. Jessie Allen spent several days in Chattanooga, recently, when she was the house guest of her daughter, Mrs. C. B. Armstrong and family.

Cpl. Robert Cross returned to Camp Rucker after a week end visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jones came down from Gadsden for a visit with their daughter, Mrs. L. M. Hilley and family.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. DeShazo of Bessemer were Sunday guests of Mr .and Mrs. J. M. Denson and other relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Bishop were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Odell Wright in Leeds Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. C. E. Bishop and children are guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. McClellan and other relatives in the community this week. Mrs. Bishop makes her home in Meridianville.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Davis and son Boyd, were guests of the R. L. Davis' in Oak Grove recently.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. White and Mrs. Bill Freeman of Birmingham visited the J. W. Mahans here Sunday.

HAY AVAILABLE TO FARMERS IN DROUGHT EMERGENCY

Hay will be made available to farmers to replace hay and pasture lost or damaged by the drought at prices ranging from $28 to $36 a ton, depending on the kind of hay, H. C. McDanal, Chairman of the Shelby County Agricultural Mobilization Committee, said here today.

Prices of hay to be supplied under the drought disaster hay program are: $36 a ton for alfalfa or clover hay; $32 a ton for mixed grass and legume hay; and $28 a ton for timothy or other grass hay of recognized feed value.

These prices are for hay received at the car at any railroad distribution point selected by the County Agricultural Mobilization Committee for Shelby County farmers. Cost of hauling the hay from the rail distribution point will be borne by the farmers.

No additional charge will be made for the hay, however, even if the purchase price and handling charges exceed the price quoted.

The hay will be purchased in North Central states, largely in Iowa, Wisconsin, and Michigan, by PMA committees in those states, acting as agents of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Requests for the hay may be filed in the county PMA office. A deposit of $5 a ton will be collected when the hay is ordered and the balance will be collected when the hay is delivered at the rail distribution point.

The County Agricultural Mobilization Committee will determine the quantity of hay to be supplied under the program and the eligibility of farmers to purchase the hay, basing this dtermination upon current needs to avoid liquidation of livestock.

Farmers purchasing hay through the program will be required to certify that the hay is needed to feed their own livestock and agree not to sell the hay except upon approval of the county PMA committee.

The county PMA committee will designate persons to receive, weigh and distribute the hay to farmers when it arrives.

Specifications for the hay to be purchased and supplied under the program require that it be sound, of reasonably good color, and well cured.

Legume hay, to sell at $36 a ton ,shall be alfalfa or clover (excluding sweet clover) and may contain not more than one-forth timothy or other grasses of recognized feed value.

Mixed hay, to sell at $32 a ton, shall be alfalfa or clover with timothy or other grasses of recognized feed value, containing more than one-third but less than three-fourths legums.

Timothy or grass hay, to sell at $28 a ton, shall be timothy, broome, or other grasses of recognized feed value.

Distribution of hay purchased by Commodity Credit Corporation under the program is limited to major disaster areas designated under Public Law 875, 81st Congress.

HOMEMAKERS SET OWN CLEANING STANDARDS

Every housekeeper has her own standards of cleanliness. When her home falls below these standards, she is upset.

Alice Peavy, API Extension home management specialist, points out that the pressure of other jobs may make it impossible for her to keep her home as clean as she would like.

When this is the case, usually a definite but flexible plan will help. Remember that a thin layer of dirt is easily and quickly removed, but an accumulation is hard to remove because it cakes and requires extra time and equipment for cleaning.

"Enlist the cooperation of all family members," advises the specialist. "A cheerful attitude on th part of the housekeeper makes it easier to get other family members to help. Give children repsonsibilities suited to their ages. Even a very small child can hang up his clothes if low hooks are provided."

When measuring syrup, honey, molasses, etc, if you grease the measuring cup first, the ingredients will not stick to the cup.

DROUGHT-HIT FARMERS ATTEMPT A COME BACK

The problem uppermost in the minds of many farmers hard hit by the summer's drouth is how they can best over-come their loss and keep as much produce going to market as possible.

Steps that may help solve the problem are given by W. A. Jones, API Extension marketing specialist. They include cutting corn for forage where no grain developed and saving all food and feed crops produced, even though size or quality may not be as good as usual.

Jones urges farmers to get back into production as quickly as possible. This means planting extra acreages of fall and winter crops, such as collards, cabbage, turnips, kale, carots, spinach, and onions. Most farmers will want to seed and fertilize more fall and winter grazing crops. In other words, every effort possible should be made to keep production and sale of farm products as near normal as possible.

GROW ENOUGH FEED FOR MILKING HERD

Dairymen who go to the extra effort of providing ample winter grazing will be doing the best thing they can do to feed their milking herds, according to J. R. Parrish, API Extension dairyman.

"For example," says the specialist, "a milk cow that gets 70 pounds of green grazing a day will get three pounds of digestible protein. And it requires only 1.31 pounds of digestible protein to supply body needs and produce 20 pounds of four per cent milk a day."

With last summer's drouth in mind, Parrish says that careful planning for ample winter crops along with sound grain feeding practices and judicious culling should make it possible for all Alabama dairymen to stay in business.

OUTSTANDING 4-HER

An outstanding 4-Her, Iris Helen Martin, will represent Shelby county in The District Dairy Maid Contest at Bessemer. The contest is a part of the District Dairy Show program Friday and Saturday.

Iris Helen has been active in 4-H work for five years. She has been president of the Heelna club two years; Secretary-Treasurer three years; Neighboraide five years; and Vice President of The County Council. She also participates in many school activities.

She has completed 5 years in Sewing Projects, Personal Improvement, 4 years; Foods, 2 years; and she is carrying a Poultry Project this year.

Joe Mooney will be Iris' escort at a Buffet supper, a Square Dance Friday evening and to a Barbecue on Saturday morning. Maids will be judged Thursday at 4:00 P. M. They will participate in a program and the District Dairy Maid will be announced at The Bessemer High School at 8:00 o'clock Friday evening. Maids will be presented at The District Dairy Show at 900 o'clock Saturday morning.

Iris is the daughter of J. R. Martins, Route 1, Maylene.

TIPS ON RETAINING HIGH EGG QUALITY

Jarring eggs is one way of lowering their quality, according to Lavada Curtis, API Extension food preservation specialist.

She advises homemakers to chose a location in the refrigerator where eggs will get as little jarring as possible.

ALLOW MORE TIME WHEN COOKING FROZEN MEATS

Unless plenty of time and moderately low heat is allowed for frozen meat ,the outside of the piece may be overdone while the inside is still frozen.

Lavada Curtis, API Extension food preservation specialist, says that this may happen not only to large pieces like roasts but even to steaks which are broiled at high heat.

Remember that unthawed meat needs considerably longer to cook and always a moderately low temperature so that the meat can thaw in the first part of the cooking and cook to the desired tenderness during the last part.

PRETTY PIGLETS—Two potential baby pig-beauty contest winners squint at the world on a New Jersey farm. Three-year-old Shirley Couch shows off her nine-hour-old Poland China shoats which she will enter in the New Jersey State Fair contest. at Trenton. The fair celebrates its 207th anniversary this year.

ACHIEVEMENT DAY PLANS TO BE ANNOUNCED

Plans for Achievement Day will be released following a Committee Meeting Thursday, September 11. The Committee will meet with Mrs. J. Frank Baker at 2:00 o'clock.

In addition to planning the program the committee will also set the date. The following committee members plan to be present: Miss Lois Alexander, Mrs. Charles Cordes, Mrs. Sam Knowles, Mrs. Nathan Frost, Mrs. Douglas Kent, Council President and the hostess Mrs. J. Frank Baker.

SMART TEEN-AGERS NEED A GOOD DIET

American teen-agers, noted for their interest in science, seem generally to have overlooked a subject that could be most valuable to them. It's nutrition.

Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionit ,says that by the time modern children reach their teens, they are making many of their own decisions, including what to eat. Therefore, they need to take an interest in "scientific eating", in what food can do for them and especially in the foods they require at this age of rapid growth and development.

"Yet," says the specialist, "a review of dietary studies of recent yars indicates that the contrary is true. Teen-agers generally tend to have poored diets than younger children, and adolescent girls fare worse than boys."

Miss Hulsey adds that among 30,000 school children in one study, those aged 12 to 17 years came out shorter on milk, green and yellow vegetables, and citrus fruit than younger children. Again in studies of children in Tennessee, New York, and Maryland, older children were less likely to get their quotas of calcium and vitamins A and C than those under nine years of age.

EBENEZER H. D. C. NEWS

Seven members of the Ebenezer Home Demonstration Club spent 3 days at Camp Helen, Panama City, Florida, through the courtesy of Avondale Mills. Four counties were represented by the sixty-six women attending. Leaving on Wednesday, they spent Thursday, Friday and Saturday just enjoying themselves. Swimming sailing, and evenings spent in the Recreation Hall playing games were on the program.

The highlight of the trip and the event most enjoyed by our group was a two hour cruise on the gulf aboard the Avondale Mills Cruiser. Mrs. W. A. Jones landed a nice fish during the cruise.

Members from the Ebenezer club making the trip were: Mrs. N. T. Frost, Mrs. Doc Cupp, Mrs. Jimmie Spain, Mrs. Hillman Johnson, Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. Dewey McDonough and Mrs. J. H. Wyatt.

The first act that marked the inauguration of the Civil War of 1861-1865 was the firing upon the "Star of the West," a staunch merchant steam vessel chartered by the government to convey supplies and men to Sumter, on January 5, 1861. The vessel withdrew without returning the fire, and there were no casualties.

Prevent Diseases In School Children

Dr. E. F. Sloan

The past school year was marked by an unusual incidence of the common communicable diseases especially Measles, Whooping Cough, and Chickenpox.

Through the 1951-52 season there were 307 cases of Measles, 95 cases of Chickenpox and 48 cases of Whooping Cough.

Whooping Cough can, in the vast majority of cases, be prevented by giving the child vaccine at the age of 4 months.

Measles can be modified or prevented, if the time of exposure is known, by having your doctor give Gamma Globin.

Little can be done to control Chickenpox.

Shelby county had one case of Diphtheria in 1951 and no case in the first 8 months of 1952.

One case of Typhoid was recorded in 1951 and one case in 1952.

Preventive inoculation and improved sanitation will prevent the rather widespread occurrence of these diseases as was experienced only a few years ago.

There have been four cases of Polio in the county this year. Three of these have entirely recovered with no residual muscle weakness. One is in the Crippled Children's Clinic at present.

With the opening of schools for another year, the possibility of exposure to the communicable diseases is, of course, increased.

Parents are urged to be sure that their children have had their immunizations or "boosters" against the preventable diseases at this time.

MALARIA KILLED 13 PEOPLE IN STATE IN 1950

Malaria killed only 13 people in Alabama in 1950, according to a booklet being issued by the State Department of Health. It adds that, in spite of the much smaller population, this same disease killed 500 Alabamians in 1915. The 1950 figure is provisional.

The booklet, titled The Health of Your State, gives the state's 1915 malaria death rate at 22.2 per 100,000 population and the 1950 (provisional) rate at 0.4 per 100,000 population.

WAKE UP DEMOCRATS!

The "Voice of Democracy" issues a clarion call this week to all Democrats in Shelby County, to "Wake Up" and actively, individually and collectively rally to the Democratic colors, lest over confidence or a lethargic attitude toward the election to be held on November 4 prove disastrous to our Party.

Parties are an essential part of representative governments and can be effective only thru organization. We are not sounding the "Alarm Clock" thru fear of the ultimate out come on November 4, if the Democrats can be made to realize the gravity of the situation we are now facing in the coming election.

It is difficult to estimate the cost of a Presidential campaign or its effect. It might be measured by millions of dollars, apart from the loss involved in the general destruction of business.

It has been said that frequent elections have their value in keeping alive public affairs and in educating the people upon the great questions yet to be solved. But when we count up the expenses of a campaign, badges, buttons, motor processions and other appeals to the imagination and sensation rather than to a calm and intelligent reason, it seems probable that a large part of this expenditure is valueless, as, far as education of the people is concerned, and is really spent to divert their intelligence from the vitally important issues now facing us.

France was overly confident, unprepared, and lost!

We may be unduly "agitated" over the apparent non-interest manifested by our fellow Democrats in Shelby county, but we do know that no organization has been perfected, nor has the Democratic Executive Committee met and endorsed the ticket, and we also know that "I Like Ike" clubs have been organized and are energetically making some headway into Democratic circles in Shelby county. So, we mention briefly these facts which were brought to our attention by staunch Democrats and those interested in the success of The Democratic Ticket on November 4. At least the warning and admonition to "Wake Up" can do no harm. We hope you will hear the "Party Call" and enlist your name for immediate service so that Democracy will continue to rule in Shelby county. It is up to you!

PHILLIPS AND HARRISON CO-CHAIRMEN FOR DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN FUND

Governor Gordon Persons has designated Senator Tom Phillips of Siluria and Representative Karl Harrison of Columbiana, as Co-Chairmen for the drive for funds to finance the Democratic Campaign Fund to be used to back the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket.

Governor Persons is State Chairman for the Fund Drive, with Milton K. Cummings, Huntsville, co-chairman.

STATE WELFARE BOARD CALLED

Members of the State Welfare Board have been called to Montgomery for a meeting next Tuesday morning. A budget for the next fiscal year will be presented and other matters incident to the new laws regulating those receiving assistance from this agency will be brought up for discussion. Commissioner Bill Dorrough has issued the call having been directed to do so by Governor Gordon Persons, who will preside at this meeting.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION

There was no opposition to the Municipal Ticket in Columbiana, therefore, very few people took the trouble to vote. This lack of interest however, was not the rule in other sections of the county where competition for the civic honor was taken.

The following officials will serve Columbiana during the next four years; Wales W. Wallace Jr., Mayor; Councilmen: Cecil Duke, Frances Leonard, Bruce Alverson, Elvin Hill and Arthur Wood.

Bloodmobile To Make Return Visit To Columbiana

The National Blood Program will soon be launched in Shelby County and an intensive campaign giving the people information of its importance is essential in making the citizens aware of this urgency.

Dr. John R. Steelman, Acting Director, Office Defense Mobilization says:

"Regardless of the situation in Korea or any trouble spot overseas, we have thousands of wounded men in our military hospitals still fighting for a chance to live. Other thousands in our civilian hospitals require blood if the home front is to remain strong and secure in support of our fighting men."

In addition to the above mentioned need, blood plasma must be maintained in the Blood Bank as insurance against a national emergency. However, the mission of the National Blood Program at present is to obtain sufficient quantities of blood to continue to meet the immediate needs for blood of the armed forces and civilians, and, at the same time, build a plasma reserve large enough and mobile enough to see us through any national emergency that might possibly arise.

This program, if successful, demands the full cooperation of all individuals. The responsibility of coordinating the National Blood Program has been assigned by President Truman to the Office Of Defense Mobilization.

The American National Red Cross, the Department of Defense, and the Federal Civil Defense Administration have joined forces to conduct the new program.

The officials of the Red Cross have the responsibility of collecting the blood for this national Blood Bank.

Virginia Fowler, Director of Field activities in Shelby county, states to the writer that a date will soon be announced when blood donors will be called upon to meet the proper authorities in charge of the Bloodmobile which will be in Columbiana within the near future. Columbiana citizens went "all out" for this patriotic duty when the last call was made, and Mrs. Fowler feels sure, that only the date is necessary to be made known and this record of 100 per cent and then, more, than our quota, will be gladly repeated.

Watch this paper for definite date and further articles on this most important "Blood For Defense" drive.

HELEN SLOAN X-RAY CLINIC

Realizing the magnitude of the Tuberculosis problem in Shelby County and the urgent need for facilities to aid in the solution of this problem, Mrs. Helen Sloan, in September 1944, donated the funds necessary to purchase a combination x-ray and flouroscopic unit in order to establish a chest x-ray clinic at the County Health Department.

This machine with the necessary appurtenances cost approximately $2000.

In addition to this donation, Mrs. Helen Sloan has devoted her time and talents to the Tuberculosis Clinic for 8 years without financial remuneration.

It is considered appropriate by this Department that, in appreciation of her financial support and her untiring efforts, this Clinic be named for its' founder and it is our desire that the Clinic be hereafter known as the "Helen Sloan Clinic".

The Board of Revenue and Control purchased for the Clinic a pneumothorax machine of the best design, which has been invaluable in this work.

The Clinic has averaged 65 to 70 x-rays a month and 25 to 35 "refills" for patients under pneumothorax and pneumoperitoneum treatment.

In 1951 twenty-seven new active cases of tuberculosis were found and so far this year twenty new cases have been discovered.

Tuberculosis is the major communicable disease problem and one of the major Public Health problems in the county because of its' prevalence and its' far reaching conequences.

JOHN HORNE, FORMER TEACHER HERE RECEIVES NATIONAL RECOGNITION

John E. Horne of Clayton, Alabama has been appointed to one of the top executive jobs in the federal government.

President Truman nominated him to be administrator of the Small Defense Plants Administration, a position that pays $17,500 a year.

For the past several months, Horne has been deputy administrator of this agency. Created by Congress early last year its main job is to aid small business men in getting defense contracts.

Horne has been on leave from his post as administrative assistant to Sen. John J. Sparkman. He joined Sparkman's staff in 1947.

He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and a World War II veteran.

At the Small Defense Plants Administration, Horne will succeed Telford Taylor of New York, who several weeks ago asked President Truman to be permitted to resign, effective September 15.

Horne, 44 is married to the former Miss Ruth Kleinman of Birmingham. They have two daughters, Linda, 11, and Susan, 6.

Mr. Horne has a host of friends in Shelby countty who will remember him as one of the teachers in the Shelby County High School during its early progressive years, and will join us in extending congratulations on this merited recognition.

Methodist Church Has Home Coming Services

The annual Home Coming at the Columbiana Methodist church, held Sunday September 14, drew a large number of former members and friends of the church to join with the home folks to fill the church for a memorable service.

The program for the day included the singing of the old hymns of the church, readings from the Bible, an address of welcome to the visitors by Rux Carter, and an inspiring sermon by Rev. Omar R. Burns, a former pastor of the church.

Mr. Burns selected for his text, a passage from the writings of Paul: "I am indebted both to the Greek and to the barbarian" and his subject was The Responsibility of Christians. It was a sincere sermon from the heart of a goo man and it seemed to reach th hearts of the people.

Mr. Burns is one of the bes loved of all the men who hav served as pastors of the Columbiana church in recent years. H lived in Columbiana as a boy an attended the local schools durin the pastorate of his father, th late Rev. S. N. Burns. His ow pastorate was during the years 1928-1932. The late J. W. Letson county superintendent of education, was chairman of the Boar of Stewards and Taylor H. Kirby now superintendent of schools i Opelika, was superintendent o the Sunday school. This period o Mr. Burns' pastorate was a tim of genuine activity in the churc with a fine spirit of cooperatio between pastor and people.

Mr. Burns said at the beginnin of his sermon Sunday that of al the churches in the North Alabama Conference in which he ha served, to no other could he hav come back with a more genuin feeling that he was himself coming back home.

A feature of the homecomin service was the dedication of th seven memorial windows, recently installed. This was a simpl but beautiful service made ver impressive. It was conducted b Dr. J. M. Gibbs, District Superintendent, with the assistance o the pastor, Rev. A. D. Wilson.

One window was given by th Nelson family and dedicated t H. S. and Sarah Ann Nelson, Hudson W. and Alice E. Nelson, Jenni M. Nelson and Alvin Bird.

Another was given by member of the Milstead family and wa dedicated to Henry M. and Oliv P. Milstead; H. Arthur and Onze V. Milstead.

A third was given by Mr. an Mrs. W. L. Christian, long-tim loyal members of the Columbian Methodist church.

A fourth window was given b the Woman's Society of Christia Service, a group of loyal women members of the church, who ar responsible for much of the progress that the church has mad and is making.

A fifth window was given b the sons and daughters of M and Mrs. J. W. Letson in memor of their parents. Appropriately this window is installed in the part of the church where Mrs. Letson sat for so many years as member of the Sue Roberts Bibl class.

Another window is dedicated t Mrs. Ruby Harrison Lovelady, loyal member of the church during her whole life.

The seventh window is dedicate to Arthur Wayne Lauderdale, so of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Lauderdal and Samuel Robert Lester, so of Mr. and Mrs. Roy B. Lester; two of Columbiana's finest boy who gave their lives in Worl War II.

During the service Mr. and Mrs. Perry Letson of Atlanta brough their infant daughter and Mr. an Mrs. Jack Letson of Columbu Georgia brought their infant so to the altar to be baptized. Thi service was performed impressively by the pastor who was assiste by Rev. T. K. Roberts, Brothe Tom. It was the same altar t which Perry and Jack had com in their boyhood days to become members of the Columbiana church.

Below are given the names as many of the visitors as a available. It is to be regrett that not all the visitors took th opportunity to write their name

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

HE STORY SO FAR: All signs pointed to all-out war. Will lorgan knew the militia was not capable handling the uprising Indians, and, r this reason, he was happy that Mary olden had finally consented to marry im. He could take her away from the ilderness to Pittsburgh where she ould be safe. Before he could fetch er back from the Bolden settlement, owever, he and his friend Bull Kirby e the militia under attack and realise e uprising has started. Dashing back the settlement, they find it the scene a massacre and Mary's body is not und in the ruins. They move fast, ping to be out of Indian country be- re being discovered.

CHAPTER XII

The long night passed eventually. ill knew that Kirby had huddled oser during the night as the cold ecame more intense but otherwise e riverman slept soundly. Mor- an, on the other hand, slept little, e black despair in his heart mak- g sleep impossible. He thought of ary being carried off to the Miami llages or he visioned her lying iff and cold somewhere in the rthern woods. Perhaps even one those charred bodies in the cabin d been hers.

They started before dawn, several utious miles had been covered fore they slackened the pace. hen at Kirby's suggestion they parated a few paces, hopeful of cking up some berries to serve as eakfast. Will had little enthusi- m for eating, his mind too full of e horror he had left behind him. owever, he remained sufficiently ert to pull up sharply when Kirby ave the partridge whistle. The riv- rman was still in sight so it seemed ear that it was a warning.

Refugee from Hell, ound in the Snow

He saw that Kirby was crouching ightly, peering ahead into the oods. Will could find nothing amiss t he remained motionless, alert r the danger which Kirby seemed sense. For some moments there as no sound on the morning air t then a soft swish of movement me from a snow-covered bush st ahead and to the left. Immedi- ely afterward a rifle barrel slid to view, its muzzle swinging to ver Kirby.

Will went into prompt action. His n weapon came up just in time r him to see a gaudily painted ce over its front sight. He steadied nd squeezed, deliberate even ough he knew he had to shoot be- re the Indian could line his sights Kirby. The weapon bucked ainst his shoulder.

Will was already bounding for- ard, reloading as he ran. Kirby eded no further explanation. He me up as Will stood over the fal- n savage. "Ye got him all right," assented—"lucky fer me. But w we'll have a war party after . Let's get movin'."

Morgan seemed heedless of the ords. "That's one," he said short-

Kirby frowned and pointed in the rection in which they were to avel. "This devil came from the rth so I reckon his partners are at way. We'll keep on toward the uth. They'll be after us anyway hen they find the late departed."

They broke into a dog trot at ce, covering nearly a mile before faint whoop sounded from the ar.

"They've found 'im," Kirby unted. "Wonder if we kin keep ead 'til we make the fort?"

Will made no reply. He found it rd to think of anything except the hing emptiness of his stomach d the worse ache in his heart. It d not make much difference hether they ran or not; it would be st as well to wait and take some ore revenge on the murderers.

Then they sighted a trail which t in diagonally across their line flight.

"Little feller," Kirby panted. They followed the tracks without rther comment. It was perhaps e safest plan since the unknown rved as an advance guard. Will ew a sudden hope. The tracks ere small. Could it be that Mary d escaped the massacre?

Then it became clear that Kirby's ess had been correct. The stran- r was staggering as he struggled ong, once falling over a log. The all there sent Will's hopes down ain. The fugitive was not tall ough to be Mary.

Kirby seemed to note only another int. "He's got a gun," he grunted ith satisfaction. "See where he opped it? Hope he's got powder d ball. We kin use him."

They covered another painful ile before sighting the stumbling gure ahead. "It's young Patter- n," Will gasped. "Look out! He's ing to shoot."

The boy identified his pursuers al- ost at the same moment, lowering e rifle which he had half raised. ill ran ahead, his eyes hard as asked, "What happened to ary?"

The boy shook his head doubtful- but Kirby gave him no time for more complete answer. "Keep in'," he snapped. "Injuns close hind."

The youngster tried but it was ob- ious that he was all but exhausted. irby took the rifle away from him d clapped him briskly on the oulder. "I'll tote this fer a spell, n. Ye look done out."

"I've been . . ."

"Don't talk. Save yer wind fer runnin'."

Will restrained himself as long as he could, finally blurting out his question once more. "What happened, Pat? Is Mary . . . dead?"

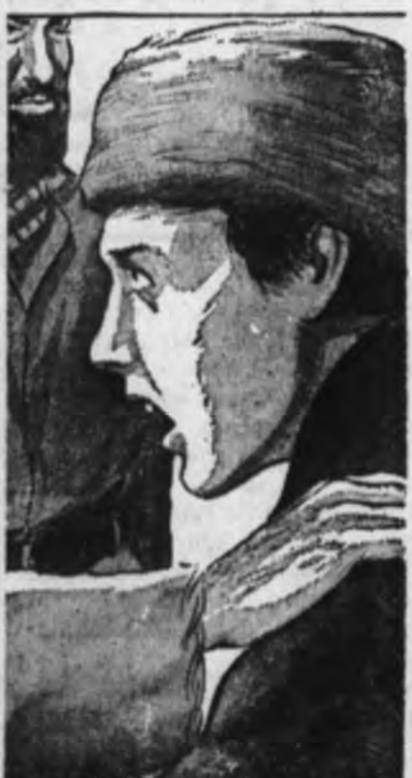
"Shut up and keep goin'!" Kirby panted. "Don't make the boy talk."

"Go ahead," Patterson gasped. "Leave me . . . maybe I'll git one or two."

"Not yet," Kirby said grimly. "Keep yer feet now and make yer trail look like ye was feeling' better. Mebbe we'll fox 'em yet."

He led the way through the underbrush toward the stream, turning down the bank a few feet before breaking the skim ice at the edge of the water. "Git yer pants off," he ordered briskly. "Wrap 'em around yer gunlocks and tie yer powder horns to 'em. Then hold 'em high and foller me."

"We'll freeze to death," Will said, shivering already.



"Go ahead," Patterson gasped. "Leave me . . . maybe I'll get one or two."

"Shut up and help the kid outa his pants!"

"We'll make it look like we're headed downstream," Kirby said, breaking the ice in that direction before reaching open water and turning about to move against the current.

Imprint In Snow Causes Discovery

The others followed silently, trying to work out the cramps which had knotted weary muscles almost with the first shock of the water. They struggled up against the frigid current, keeping to the middle of the stream where the water was waist deep, finally reaching a point some fifty yards above the spot where they had entered the water. Here a clump of laurel overhung the creek at a place where the current had kept the ice from forming near shore. Kirby took advantage of this combination of circumstances and led the way ashore, explaining between chattering teeth, "They'll figger we went down and they won't see any place where we broke ice to come ashore. Lie low and mebbe we kin git our breath while they go by. Then we'll circle off toward the fort."

He had no more than slipped into his breeches when there was a shout from the other side of the stream. The savages had reached the spot where Patterson had taken his last fall. The three men hugged the snowy ground, as motionless as their shivering bodies would permit, and almost at once a pair of warriors appeared on the opposite bank. They looked both ways along the creek, then spoke to others who remained out of sight in the brush.

Will listened intently, then muttered. "They're goin' downstream all right! . . . But they're leaving a couple of guards where the trail ends."

Kirby nodded his agreement at the way Morgan had interpreted the talk. "Which pins us here!" he growled.

"Here they come!" Will murmured. "When they come out in the open at that next clear spot I'll take the first one. Kirby, you get the other. I'll let yours get in the clear before I shoot."

Will held steadily on the chest of his selected victim until he could see the other Indian out of the corner of his eye. Then he squeezed the trigger, Kirby's shot coming almost at the same time. At the distance there was no chance of a miss but Will's shot did not prove fatal. The Indian rolled as he fell, bringing his musket to bear on the laurels.

Kirby yelled a warning but a third shot cracked before the Indian could fire. This time the savage went down for keeps.

Will grinned a little ruefully. "Nice work, Pat. I guess it takes two of us to do what Kirby can do alone."

"Come on," Kirby growled. "We got to git outa here!"

A hail from down the bank testified to the value of the advice but Will shook his head. "I've got a better idea. We can't keep running and they'd only get us sooner or later. Let's fight it out here where we've got a chance."

"Ye're crazy as hell!" Kirby snapped. "There's nine or ten of 'em in that crowd. We can't fight that many!"

"Two less now," Will reminded him. "Sit tight and we'll cut the odds some more."

Kirby shook his head doubtfully but refused to argue. They waited breathlessly until another shout told them that the party was returning. Then Will surprised his companions by replying to the hail. A few seconds later voices came from the spot where they had entered the creek and this time Will replied at some length in the Miami dialect. Kirby looked astonished but a smile played around his blue lips as he heard the words.

"Ready, son," he muttered to Patterson. "Will's playin' that he's one o' the Injuns. He told 'em the white men had all been killed. They oughta come up here kinda careless."

As he spoke a warrior came out to the edge of the stream and stood peering up the creek. Others were apparently moving through the brush while one remained to watch.

"I'll take the one below," Will whispered. "You fellows get the first two who come into sight. The beans will be spilled when they see the dead ones."

Morgan's Skill Leads The Way to Freedom

He sighted steadily on the Indian downstream, steadying himself against the tendency to shiver. It seemed ages until Kirby and young Patterson fired almost in unison. Then Will sent his slug on its way.

Bullets crashed around them as other Indians fired at their rifle smoke. Will reloaded carefully but with all possible speed. "Any luck?" he asked.

"Both hits," Kirby chuckled. "Better odds all the time."

Will poked his rifle through the laurels and waited. No movement betrayed the presence of other enemies but after some minutes Kirby blazed away with another shot. Instantly he was answered by three separate puffs of smoke. Behind one of these Morgan caught sight of an Indian. Drawing a quick bead he squeezed the trigger and was rewarded by the sound of frantic threshing in the brushes. A grunt at his side, however, caused him to look around as he reloaded. Kirby was bleeding at the shoulder.

"'Tain't nothin' but a scratch,' the riverman growled. "Load my rifle fer me and I'll shoot 'er."

Will complied quickly and turned to the job of stopping the blood

For a long time there was no action at all. Evidently the Indians had been taken aback by running into an ambush so much like the ones they were accustomed to set Now it was likely they would try a flanking movement to dislodge these persistent defenders. Will and Kirby discussed the matter in whispers, then Morgan started to work his way upstream to a point where a bushy bend made possible a flank attack without the savages having to cross the creek.

He lay in alert readiness for some twenty minutes of shivering misery but no sound came from the far side of the brook. Then he poked his cap up on the tip of his ramrod. Nothing happened.

"Party's over," he called to Kirby.

Kirby grunted acknowledgment as Will came toward him. "Time to move on," he said briefly. "We'll get warmed up and then build a fire. We've got to keep warm and a fire won't bring no more trouble than all this shootin'."

A fast pace was maintained through the thick brush, all of them too numb with cold to be aware of the way they were getting scratched. Two hundred yards of it brought back the deadly fatigue, however, and Patterson began to lag. Kirby made an effort to encourage him, anxious to get some distance from the creek before camping.

"Ye've got the stuff, son. Here i thought ye was all done out and what'd ye do but rally yerself around and shoot a redskin or two. I bet there ain't many young rascals in the territory kin git theirselves chased all over hell's half acre on an empty stomach and still have spunk enough left to wade in ice water and shoot Injuns."

The boy forced a tired smile. "Thanks," was all he said. He was traveling on courage alone and he practically fell to the ground when Kirby halted beneath some thick pines. Will had not said a word since leaving the scene of the fight but he had enough energy left to get a fire going in short order. Kirby tried to keep up some sort of conversation as they dried the clothing which had begun to freeze on them but he had no luck in getting Morgan out of the black mood which was upon him.

Finally he lost patience. "What the hell's eatin' ye, Will?" he demanded. "I'm the one what ought to be grouchy—me with this hole in my flipper. Instead I have to do all the talkin' while ye sit and sulk."

ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

Maurice Poe, at his farm in the Kingdom community, showed us a fine reseeding stand of button bur clover and another of "Ball" white clover. He has saved 20 pounds of Ball clover from a handful given him for test two years ago. Maurice likes its vigorous growth and bee keepers will especially like its long blooming season and many blooms.

Mr. C. B. Kirkpatrick is planting two acres of Chapel Hill Rescue on some choice land on his river farm.

William L. Hollis bought the last surplus Rescue seed from the second crop at the Columbiana High School patch.

The 625 acre farm of W. C. Butler, of Vincent, was planned this week under agreement with the North Central Soil Conservation District.

Terraces were planned and laid out on two large watersheds of B. B. Mooney's farm this week.

These farmers have also made conservation farm plans on their farms recently:

F. G. Wright, H. H. Maske, H. W. Maske, Sam Sharp, R. M. Byrd, Clarence B. Sydes, D. H. Richards, J. H. Kincaid, L. T. Bounds, E. W. Hare, Ned Cary and A. W. Baker.

At latest report there was still a supply of Chapel Hill Rescue seed available from Columbiana seedmen and in Sylacauga, at varying prices.

For some years farmers have wanted a source of Grandiflora Vetch seed. Seed is difficult to harvest, often quite expensive. However, it is best of all vetches for reseeding winter legumes. Work Unit Conservationist, Soil Conservation Service, Fort Payne, Alabama, can put you in touch with the farmers who have seed for sale. We have no prices.

WAY TO REMOVE GREASE SPOTS ON HOME WALLS

Many unsightly grease spots on walls can be removed by one of the following methods, according to Alice Peavy, API Extension home management specialist.

She says to apply fullers earth or magnesia to the spot. Let stand over night, then brush off powder.

The specialist adds that a clean blotter placed over the spot and pressed with a warm iron may remove the spot. The blotter should be changed often.

Pies and pastry often fail because of over-mixing flour and fat.

Savings like this

Machines like this enable Southern Bell to salvage about three million feet of copper wire a year by splicing leftover lengths together and re-insulating the joints.

MEAN SAVINGS ALL ALONG THE LINE

Saving every usable bit of wire, each pound of lead, aluminum and steel that can be salvaged for re-use, is just one of many ways Southern Bell keeps down the cost of telephone service.

Making every practical economy, working our facilities to the utmost and constantly improving our methods and equipment help keep telephone service one of today's best bargains. Day and night, a well-trained, capable and courteous team of telephone folks is working to provide good service at the lowest possible cost . . . for National Defense, for industry, and for you. — Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Telephone service takes a smaller part of the family budget than it did ten years ago . . . and most subscribers can call twice as many people.

Best Possible Service . . . Lowest Possible Cost

WILSONVILLE

ELIZABETH WELDON

People of Wilsonville are looking forward to our annual fair, which will be held the 26th and 27th of this month. It is a time when we learn more about our neighbor's hobbies, skills, collections and interests. We enjoy visiting with each other while we view the many interesting exhibits, and take part in the entertainment provided for all ages.

The juniors will be interested in the news that there will be contests especially for them in cooking and sewing so that they will not have to compete with more experienced cooks and seamstresses.

We are all anxious to see how the men come out in their cake baking contest. We have heard that there must be no help from the women. Perhaps I should not tell this, but I heard it rumored that the judges would probably forget to ask the men if they used a prepared cake-mix.

Be getting your exhibits ready and contact Mrs. Arthur Mitchel, Mrs. Ina Jean Templin or Mrs. Jesse Barnes about canned foods; Mrs. Grady McEwen, flowers; Mrs. A. A. Thornburg, needlework; Mrs. C. E. Boyles or Mrs R. G. Stevenson, hobbies, and Mrs. Jim Batson if you have old fashioned clothes, especially baby clothes to exhibit.

This Fair is sponsored by the P. T. A.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gardner on the arrival of a new daughter. Mrs. Gardner and baby are in the Sylacauga Hospital.

We are glad to have Mrs. Bob Laird and son Pat move to our town. They have moved into the Gould Apartment. Mr. Laird is a Chief Commissary Steward with the Coast Guard and will leave this week for Honolula.

William Frederick Miller is spending a few days with his mother, Mrs. Fred Miller. Frederick is attending the University of Alabama again this year.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Blankenship this week were their daughter, Mrs. B. B. Armstrong, Bill and Tony Noland from Kingdom.

The P. T. A. will have the first meeting of this school term Tuesday. We have an unusually active P .T. A. and are especially proud of the interest manifested by the fathers.

Mr. T. O. Smith, Jr., and Mr. I. M. Watson attended the Civitan Convention in Fairfield Friday.

Mrs. Flora Spearman is in Bessemer with her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Hill, who has recently undergone an operation.

We regret to report that Mrs. J. F. Helms continues ill in Jefferson Hospital.

Mrs. Dewey Bolton's brother, Mr. Neal Stinson, is ill in Highland Baptist Hospital.

Visiting Mr. and Mrs. Byron Lindsey were Mr. and Mrs. Spear Kytle from Birmingham and Mrs. Kytle's sister, formerly Johnny Mason, and her husband from California.

Mrs. Blenard Smothers from Vincent was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grady McEwen.

Friends and relatives of Mrs. Nona Payne entertained with a dinner honoring her on her birthday.

Mrs. Norvel Revis who won in our county's dressmaking contest, went to Auburn Monday to compete in the contest there.

Mr. Prickett, one of our former Methodist Pastors, is vacationing on Yellow Leaf Creek near here.

Mrs. John Vardaman left Monday for a visit in Birmingham.

Miss Rena Taylor visited in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Josh Baker visited in Rockford. Their daughter, Mrs. Tom McEwen returned with them for a visit.

Mr. I. M. Watson gave two inspiring sermons at the Baptist Church Sunday.

Miss Maggie Lou Garrett from Birmingham was home for the week end.

BUSY BEAVERS WATER THIRSTY THORSBY TREES

George Starcher, Soil Conservationist

On a tiny stream wandering through the Thorsby Nursery a colony of beavers has made its home for several years. At times their energy and determination to expand their private lake has almost provoked their human neighbors to exterminate them.

In 1952, with its exceedingly dry summer, the nurserymen have found the beaver colony to be allies instead of enemies.

Millions of pine seedlings suffering from the drought must be irrigated regularly. The small concrete resevoir for the irrigation system is exhausted early each day.

When this happens men cut the beaver dam to allow water from the three acre lake to flow to the big irrigation pumps.

At night fall, after the human vandals have left, the beavers repair the leak in their structure of mud and brush, and overnight collect about three acre-feet, or more than 300,000 gallons of water.

Workers at the nursery rarely see the beavers. Mr. Gwin has seen some young ones swimming about. Mr. Cargile volunteers information that they graze a nearby stand of Kudzu, eating the most tender vines.

All about the lake is evidence of their filling trees, eating bark and building their island homes. Once threatened with depossession, it seems likely now that the beavers help in this drought year have paid their rent for son time in advance.

Summer Recreation Programs Close

ROY MANN

Mildred White Wallace

The Citizens of Columbiana have just shared the last Community Night sponsored by the Recreation Department, closing one of the most successful seasons since this program began.

In talking with Director Roy Mann, and expressing our gratitude for his tireless efforts to make this program versatile and entertaining enough for all groups participating, Mr. Mann stated as follows: "Whatever success has been achieved has been due to my co-workers, Dot Lefkovits, Margaret Ann Hatchett, the Town Officials, and the perfect cooperation of each member of the Park and Recreation Board who include: Ross Bob Mullins, Chairman; Virginia Fowler, Paul O. Luck, Mrs. Yeager Horn and W. B. White."

We then asked him, "What about the winter months ahead and next summer?" He replied: "Plans are now being formulated for a bigger and better program of activity for next summer as well as clubs sponsored entertainments thru the winter months."

The programs are designed, and will continue to be planned, in an endeavor to provide wholesome recreation for all age groups in Columbiana. The athletic activities this summer consisted of baseball teams and soft ball contests for both white and colored citizens. Equipment was provided for the colored teams for the first time, and their appreciation was marked by a most successful season. They also had facilities and equipment provided for basketball, horseshoes, volley ball and weekly picture shows.

The concrete area at the High School furnished the setting for friendly contests in all the above named sports for the white people. And the Kindergarten group were well taken care of with Sand Piles, Jungle Gyms, Swings, and other games.

Soft ball games were always a big night with the men and women of the town. This game was played two nights each week.

Other amusements were available during the afternoon hours which included Tennis, Badminton, Shuffle Board, etc. The indoor game room was always filled with teen agers and the younger set who enjoyed Monopoly, Checkers, Rook, Dominoes, etc. A picture show was presented once each week. These activities were directed by Roy Mann and Margaret Ann Hatchett.

The Arts and Crafts classes were conducted by Dot Lefkovits and some beautiful art work was displayed which won favorable acclaim in the Recreation Booth at the County Fair. Many pupils enjoying this diversion last summer are already signing up for next year.

Roy Mann, concluding our interview, stated, in summing up his ambitious plans for another summer: "I am thoroughly convinced that every community should turn to providing wholesome recreation for its children. If they do this, there will be less desire on the part of their children to seek the highways, byways, and the Honky-Tonk places, which unwholesome influence can, and often does, produce a large amount of juvenile delinquency."

Roy Mann has won the hearts of this community with his untiring efforts to sponsor good sportsmanship and clean and wholesome recreation. He, and his gracious wife, and baby Jane, immediately upon arriving in Columbiana, identified themselves with the best in community life, churches, schools and civic activities. The "Manns"... in other words, are numbered now as vitally important citizens in Columbiana, and we all hope they will remain with us for many years to come.

'POLITICAL PIFFLE'

An "I Like Ike-er" by the name of Will Page, stopped us on our way to the office this morning with the following remark: "Well, Lady, you will have to admit that General Ike got there firstest"! (Referring to his visit in Birmingham.)

"Thats true, sez we.... but, did he bring along the mostest?" That is the important issue now facing all of us!

True, General Ike received a splendid and a most generous sample of Southern hospitality. We are glad the General came to Birmingham. We are glad so many people saw and heard him. We regret we did not have the privilege of seeing him. We did hear him, and enjoyed his talk. We have enjoyed also Adlai Stevenson's talks over radio, but for both presidential candidates, as far as I am personally concerned, there are many controversial isues that need clarifying, in order that the electorate may vote intelligently for the one whom they believe can best cope with this world crisis. So far, only generalities have been given, and an abundant supply of "political piffle" which has only confused both Democrats and Republicans. No concrete plan has been offered, by either side that warrants a satisfactory solution to countless problems now confronting the next President of the U. S. A.

What will Stevenson or Eisenhower do about "TOMORROW" is what we want to know, not what somebody else did about "YESTERDAY"!

. . . Ray Bruner, of Sterrett, and his friend (Mr. Cosper) came by our office Saturday, and brought a bit of breezy chatter centering around the Presidential candidate. Both past and future happenings were freely discussed, and "settled" as only discussions of this kind can be settled (around an Editor's desk). However, it's lots of fun sitting here on Main, disposing of world shaking events with the flick of a finger, pointing to past administrations and what may be expected of future Chief Executives, under present conditions. But for a complete analysis of this situation, just talk with Ray, and enjoy the good old American custom of free expression, whether you agree with him or not, you will have a diversion from a daily routine that, to say the least of it, is entertaining.

. . . Mayor Ed Howard had about as many Shelby county folk pulling for his re-election as Mayor of Sylacauga as he had "constituents" in the Marble City voting for him to retain his present position as Chief Executive of this up and coming city. Now that the "people have spoken" and have wisely returned Mr. Howard to this important post of civic duty, his Shelby county friends join their Talladega county neighbors in sending to the handsome and capable fellow, congratulations on past achievements and best wishes for future accomplishment during his next term of office.

. . . Mrs. Gene Edmondson has accepted a secretarial position in the County Engineers office.

REV. WM. CURL CONDUCTS SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL

The Methodist Revival which closed Friday evening, was one of the most successful ever held in Columbiana. The Rev. A. D. Wilson, Pastor, invited the Rev. William Curl of Oxford, as guest minister; and the Rev. Monroe Lewis, of Alexandria, was Music Director for the week. Both ministers were outstanding in their particular field of work, and the entire community enjoyed these inspirational messages so forcefully brought by Mr. Curl. The musical program, under the direction of Mr. Lewis, preceding the sermon, was equally as helpful to all those privileged to attend these services.

There were seven additions to the church during this five day period set aside for worship. The morning hour, which began at 7:30 o'clock was even more widely attended than the evening hour. In fact, many citizens are now suggesting that each Wednesday morning, the churches hold Prayer Meeting Services at this hour, rather than Wednesday evening. Judging from the number of people who say they are interested in changing the mid-week prayer hour from 7:30 P. M. to 7:30 A. M., it might be worth trying!

. . . Judy Horn has to furnish the "life around the George Horn home" now that Nancy Horn is in Alabama College and Barbara Horn, at University. However, Judy is equal to the occasion and life is a happy merry-go-round for these attractive three Horn sisters when the girls come home from college each week end. In the meantime, Barbara and Nancy keep informed on whats happening on "Main" thru the columns of The Reporter-Democrat.

. . . It was good to see our life long friend Robert Holcombe, of Calera, in town Thursday, and his visit proved profitable, as well as pleasant, especially when he opened that snappy bill fold and came up with two dollars for a reserved seat in our ring side section of readers of the "Home Paper". (Thanks Mister!)

SHIRLEY WALLACE ENTERTAINS KINDERGARTEN CLASSMATES

Friday afternoon, September 12, Shirley Wallace entertained at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wales W. Wallace, Jr., marking the passing of her fifth birthday anniversary.

Games and contests on the lawn occupied the Lilliputian guests, until paper hats were donned, and they were called indoors for the traditional lighting of the birthday cake, and serving the "ice cream" to go with it.

Sixty-four little folks and their Mommies shared the occasion with teacher, Mary Nell Skelton as an honor guest.

. . . Well, those youthful Football Players of Shelby High who played their hearts out against an experienced team from Childersburg last Friday night were defeated, as far as the score board goes, but won the admiration, not only of the citizens of Childersburg, but the acclaim of their townsmen who will continue to give them their cooperation and support as they build up a splendid team for the future. Years like this come to all High School and colleges when seasoned players graduate and an entire new team has to be molded into a preciosion machine, and if we don't miss our guess, these boys under Coach Roy Mann will, in the not too distant future either, be a formidable aggregation in any pigskin contest.

. . . Adam Wyatt, Owner of "Lakeview", popular Shelby County Playground and Swimming Poll, spent Thursday in Columbiana and reports the "best season he has ever had". "Lakeview" is now open only on week ends where Turkey Shoots are staged which draw much interest for sports loving folk.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Yates were week end guests of their parents, Judge and Mrs. W. W. Wallace.

MARGARET ANN HATCHETT

Margaret Ann Hatchett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hap Hatchett of Columbiana, and a Senior at A. P. I. this year in the School of Science and Literature where she has made an enviable record scholastically, and in the extra-curricular activities. Miss Hatchett is a member of the Delta Zeta Sorority and a charter member of the Alpha Lambda Delta National Freshman Sorority and a member of Oracles (Freshman) Owls (Sophomore), and is Secretary of the Sphinx (Junior and Senior).

In addition to the above honors, Miss Hatchett is a member of the Freshman Advisory Council: a member of the Wesley Foundation and Glee Club; and an "A" grade student.

The above collegiate activities occupy Miss Hatchett's attention during the winter months, but, during the past sumer vacation period, this personable little lady found time to accept a position with the Park and Recreation Board in Columbiana, and was Assistant to Director Roy Mann, of the Athletic Department of the High School who is also City Recreation Director.

The season in Columbiana for recreational activities has just been brought to a close and Miss Hatchett has chalked up an enviable record in planning and directing Playground presentations for the children and teen agers, indoor and out of doors, which included: Square Dancing, Softball, Tennis, Badminton, Horseshoes, Checkers, operating the Movies, and other games and contests designed to hold the interest of the younger groups.

Miss Hatchett is a member of the Methodist Church, and takes an active part in all worthwhile phases of religious, cultural, and educational life of the town. She is a social favorite, and has a wide circle of friends who will be watching with personal interest her success in her chosen profession, whatever it might be.

. . . Friends of John Shaw's will regret to learn he is critically ill at the home of his son L. E. Shaw on Wilsonville Rt. 1. Mr. Shaw is 80 years old, and a former member of the Board of Revenue for Shelby county. His friends and neighbors tell me he is being sincerely missed in church and Sunday School where he has always been a regular attendant until his present illness. "Mr. Shaw is a blessing to the Union Community".... writes one of his neighbors, and states Mr. Shaw enjoys reading "Get Well Cards" from his friends. (Those of you who know Mr. Shaw, I feel sure will hasten to write him and wish for him a speedy recovery.)

Miss Vivian Letson left Thursday for Atmore where she goes to teach.

Mrs. J. L. Stone and her son Emmett Stone and Hugh Stone, of Houston, Texas, and Miss Margaret Stone of Easonville, spent a day last week with Rev. and Mrs. T. K. Roberts.

Frank Davis, Rt. 1, Siluria, while in town Monday told of killing a snake that had 17 rattlers. The rattler seemed to be on his way in search of water.

H. M. Neal and Earl Wood spent Tuesday in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal Stinson and little daughter Sara Neal, of Bethel, are visiting Judge and Mrs. George Weaver.

. . . No one thing starts the day off on a more pleasant note than receiving letters from old friends who follow thru each week as they "keep up" with happenings in their "Home County". This morning was one of those fortunate mornings, we had a lovely letter waiting for us from Mrs. Lida Wood, Talladega, renewing her subscription for 1952-53 and stating, among other things, that she reads everything in the paper each week.... "even to the ads"! We are sincerely grateful for her continued loyalty and personal interest.

. . . It is regrettable, but, a fact, that many of our most cherished friends are not seen except when sorrow strikes, and they return to pay a last tribute of respect and love to those who have passed on. So, came Thursday, when friends came to attend the funeral services for Mrs. Edna Roberts. We had the privilege of greeting widely beloved "Miss Essie" Christian, Tony Hebson, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Roberts, Tom Lane, Mrs. Carolyn Luttrell, Mrs. J. H. Lane, and Earl Roberts of Sylacauga. It was good to see them, and realize that no matter how many years nor how far the distance, when sorrow strikes in the hearts and homes of former residents of this community, old friends return to share it.... understandingly.

. . . Mrs. Oden Luttrell (Carolyn Lane of Sylacauga), now serving the D. A. R. as State Regent, is interested in organizing a Shelby County Chapter in Columbiana. If anyone is interested in undertaking this organization, call me, and I will immediately get in touch with Mrs. Luttrell regarding it.

. . . We are numbered among the friends of Mrs. Edmund Ewing's who are missing her this week from her office in the Gordon-White Real Estate building. Mrs. Ewing however, is enjoying a vacation in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

. . . Paul Walton of the U. S. Army is receiving a warm welcome home this week from Germany, where he has been for the past year. Paul has been released from further obligation to Uncle Sam, for the time being anyway, and will resume civilian life in Columbiana. A round of applause greeted his appearance in the Bass section of the Baptist Choristers Tuesday evening. His return to the Choir brings this particular section up to one of the best we have ever heard. For instance, when you hear O. G. Dexter, Ed and John Rush, Woodrow Elliott, Ross Bob Mullins, Paul Walton and Roy Mann, Boy, you know you have really heard seven bass voices. They furnish a wonderfully fine foundation for this group of singers.

. . . Carolyn Evans has accepted a position in Bessemer and is making her home with Mr. and Mrs. Bill Evans. (Best wishes for future success. M.W.W.)

. . . Members of the Baptist Church heard an encouraging financial report Sunday, which assures the continuance of the construction work now in progress on the new Education Building. Ross Bob Mullins, who has been in charge of the Construction work, buying supplies, etc., has done a splendid piece of work, and this statement might also be said of many others who have so beautifully cooperated with him. The Finance Committee: Hugh Sims, N. A. Jones, Woodrow Elliott, Barney Isbell, Myrtle Miles, Arthur Wood, and many more, who have tirelessly gone about raising this money, will, we feel sure, feel fully rewarded for their efforts when this gigantic, but, O so necessary, building, has been completed. For years to come, this building will stand as a memorial to a courageous band of Christian workers who not only "dreamed" about this long needed expansion, but got up and did something about it. Naturally, the "dream" came first, but a "dream" without "action" might just as well not ever have been. The Baptists in this town have been "Rip Van Winkle-ing" it long enough. However, they are now wide awake, and not one thing is going to stop them, for they have what it takes, faithful hearts and willing hands!

. . . "I wonder if you have any idea how many people read a single copy of our "Home Paper in the Birmingham area?" writes a subscriber from the Migic City. As far as my paper goes, she continues, here are just a few people who "can hardly wait" for me to finish my copy. Mr. and Mrs. Theo Elliott. Mr. Elliott is 86, and reads every line of it; Mr. John Nall of Wilsonville, Mrs. Mary Cody of Alabaster, Mrs. H. W. Nelson and others read it, then they return it, and I clip many fine articles that I keep in my "Memory Book". Now, if thats not an encouraging letter, and one to make me "get on the beam" I have never read one.

(Thanks a million. Sorry you requested that your name not be used. It was such a wonderfully fine letter. Believe me when I say, we are all grateful for this expression from a former Shelby county resident now making her home in the big town.)

. . . Friends of Boyd Sims, brother of Hugh Sims, who was seriously injured in an automobile collision Monday, eagerly await news from the Alex City Infirmary concerning him. Mr. Sims is a member of the Highway Patrol.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Templin and Mrs. Kate Lee of Birmingham visited their aunt, Mrs. Claudie Cox Sunday.

. . . Mary Ann Dorough is recuperating in a hospital in Birmingham from injuries received in an automobile wreck last Friday night.

. . . Friends of Neal Stinson will regret to learn that he was carried to a hospital in Birmingham Saturday following a stroke which has partially paralyzed him.

. . . Burns Bennett, is not only a splendid member of the "Reports and Records" Department in Montgomery, but a fellow with a talented and an original penpoint which he utilizes to a good advantage in his regular column appearing each Sunday in the Advertiser. Now, Burns Bennett, is the life of the "Capitol Cloakroom" in Montgomery, and without his bright and breezy comments, that Public Relations Department would be a dull and uninteresting feature.... To make things even more lively, this week Burns steps out, not only with "Alabama Highlights", but with an additional page of "Bennett's Lowlights", and some of these "Sparklets" will possibly be found among our fillers each week, that is, those suitable for "Home Reading". By the way, this fellow, in personality and looks, to a certain degree, is a dead ringer for Red Skelton. Burns has this to say regarding "Saucers in the Clouds". We quote: "Whats the use worrying about those saucer people? After they get one look at the shape things are in down here, they'll get back in their flying bowls and go back into space where they came from in a hurry."

. . . Attention Dr. Shafferman: We mail your paper each week to your home address as directed. Check the mail man, and see what he does with it.

. . . Thanks to Mrs. Frank Lyon for lovely flowers brought us Tuesday which have added a radiant color to an otherwise rather drab office.

Jesus, the Superior High Priest, Offers Himself for All

THE writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews has a deep sense of the spiritual heritage of Israel "God," he writes, "at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets." He is convinced of God's promise, and of His covenant with the people

But his faith and outlook as an earnest Israelite is dominated by the conviction that God has spoken "in these last days" through his Son, Jesus Christ, "the brightest of His glory," and the "express image of His person"

Holding, thus strongly, a belief in the divinity of Jesus, what is remarkable about his Epistle is the clarity with which he presents the fact of Christ's humanity

With all the greatness of the past religion of Israel, it is the writer's contention that there was something incomplete, and a promise unfulfilled Saints and prophets "obtained a good report through faith, but have received not the promise God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

It seems evident that the Epistle was addressed to Jewish Christians, subject to persecution To the charge that they were untrue to the religion of their fathers, the writer asserts the realities of the new covenant, and nature and mission of Christ as the minister of better things

The key passage is in the second chapter. Though greater than the angels, the Son of God made Himself lower than the angels, taking upon Himself human nature, and being made "like unto His brethren that He might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people"

But what of priestliness and sacrifice in the Jewish religion? The writer's answer is that Jesus is a superior high priest, inasmuch as He has offered Himself a sacrifice, once for all

How much of religious faith and practice of today is in the realm of unfulfilled promise, awaiting the supreme experience of Christ Himself as the Minister of better things?

A King Prays

Lesson for September 21, 1952

KING SOLOMON is not best known for his prayers; yet they are among the most remarkable features of what we know of him. If we can know what a man prays for, we know the heart of the man. The higher a man's place in life, the more he stands in need of prayer, the prayers of others as well as his own. King Solomon's reputation for wisdom based on one rather fantastic court decision, or on the splendor of the Temple, which he did not design; still less on those legendary powers such as being able to converse with dragonflies and demons. He was never more wise than in his prayers.

Dreams Give You Away

THEY SAY that when one is learning a new language, one can be sure one is making progress when one starts dreaming in the new language. Dreams, psychologists believe, show us what our minds are like, beneath the smooth surface. We should not take all our dreams too seriously, because, after all, it is the conscious mind that is at the wheel during our waking lives. But still a dream may show the kinds of wishes and desires and fears which lie deeper than our usual consciousness.

Now when a man dreams about praying to God face to face, you may be sure he is really a God-fearing, praying man. So the young Solomon's dream of his interview with God is a good indication of the depths of his mind and intentions at that time.

It was not a silly dream; it was quite serious. We may well believe that the young king often thought about it afterwards, and that God actually took this way of speaking to Solomon.

Ask for One Thing

IN THAT dream Solomon is invited to pray, and God guarantees to answer the prayer, whatever it is. It is remarkable what Solomon did not ask for.

Considering the fact that his father had been such a warrior, one might expect Solomon to ask for victory in war. But the young king, even in his dreams, did not picture himself as a conquering hero. Then again, he might have been expected to want to be rich. He came of a race that rated property very highly indeed. In the Hebrew language, the expression "a great man" often meant simply a very rich one. But it was not money that Solomon desired most of all. A third blessing too might have been in Solomon's mind; something that every man of his time looked on as a sure sign of the blessing of God: namely, long life. But this too was not what the young man most mished to have.

Instead, he prayed for wisdom. Knowledge is knowing; wisdom is knowing how to use what you know. And he wanted this wisdom, not in order to be rich, powerful or long-lived, but in order to become a good leader of his people.

One cannot help believing that Solomon already had in him the seed of wisdom, or he would not have offered that prayer. Only the wise know what a jewel wisdom is.

Prayer of a Mature Mind

ANOTHER prayer of this famous king is recorded at the dedication of the Temple. Solomon had grown older by that time, and we can see in this prayer that he had grown wiser as well. For good as his dream-prayer was, this later one was deeper, higher, wider.

By this time his idea of God is higher than it was. He is aware now that God does not live even in the most gorgeous of temples; his dwelling place is in heaven, and his care is not for the nation of Israel alone.

Then again, in the earlier prayer Solomon's horizon was bounded by the limits of his native land. His prayer was unselfish, indeed, but it took in the welfare of his own subjects—no others. Now at the Temple he prays for "the stranger . . . all the people of the earth.

Furthermore, if in his earlier prayer young Solomon was aware of his and his people's weakness and ignorance, now he feels something deeper, more serious: the burden of human sin. He prays for many blessings, but above all for this: forgiveness for every heart that turns to God. When we ourselves pray, are our prayers mature? How high is our thought of God? For how wide a circle of persons do we pray? And do we pray first, and most of all, for things, or for power, or to be in harmony with God?

Good Morning

Milton Bird

Lt. Oliver P. Head
Fort Benning, Georgia

Dear Oliver:

News this week is about cotton, and the pretty girls from all over the county who've really put the white stuff on the map. They picked out the prettiest girls in a cotton dress at the school house recently. I think they called her The Maid of Cotton. The place was alive with pretty girls but they finally decided Villa Bentley was the loveliest. I think I did too. But they didn't ask me. I'm glad they didn't. I never was much in picking out the prettiest in anything. Especially one pretty girl in a whole covey of 'em. A guy can look at a bunch of pretty girls until they run together, like pink clouds in a late afternoon sky. I like to climb the mountain, late in the afternoon, and watch the clouds. They have more color than a dream has. When you're sixteen. And she's sixteen too. And rose-colored glasses are hanging from every bush.

I wish you had been there with your mustache. It would have been just the thing with my new fangled hair-do. Maybe we could have attracted some of the attention. And there wouldn't have been so many guys along Main the next day with dark glasses on. Arthur Davis looked like he had been hit by a truck. And Bill Martin too. Bill Seale was almost as bad. They used up enough energy looking to fight a pretty fair battle. But one battle doesn't win or lose a war. And by Saturday night they were back in there pitching, with puh-lenty on the ball.

Some of the guys are leaving for school. Tiger Jones has gone. He's gonna play football at Howard this fall. Sue Averytt has come in to work with us at the P. O. She sort of flits about the lobby, like a butterfly in a daisy patch, until the mail is up. Then she leaves and we don't see anymore of her until time for another letter.

Bill Rasco is entering Birmingham Southern. I don't understand his course exactly, but it must be a dilly. He takes everything but his major there, and they mail this in from Judson. It's a new approach to an old problem. Pete Goodwin is having the same trouble in England. His major assignments are still being mailed from Columbiana Route Two.

Ted Riley is the new Tom's peanut and candy man here. Sometimes when business is booming Theodore helps him. Theodore is a lot like his old man. He's great help on dishing out the sweet stuff. He came in for days looking for mail. Everyday he got mail too. A whole bundle of it that smelled like the stuff bees gather while the grasshoppers are sleeping in the shade. I supposed it was some kind of candy, but I didn't know. Then one day he quit coming in. And the next day pretty Peggy Stokes came in from Oklahoma where she had been visiting. So the candy wasn't candy at all. It was just that ecstatic concoction the air is filled with, along about the tenth grade in a guy's life, when his words first begin taking wings and winging their way toward a mail box somewhere with some lovely's name on it.

I remember the sensation well. I had my first suit with long breeches. My legs felt like my eyes do when I put my glasses on. But that was yesterday. And yesterday is a far piece. She went away after that and married some gink I didn't know. I don't recall his name. But I remember the concoction the air was filled with. And the way my words took wings.

Miss Mary Peters is back at the High School again. Santa came early for all the kids who will study English up there. I don't know of a better present the town could have left in their stockings. She is a great lady and a splendid teacher. They will find it out this year. But in the years to come they will really understand. As I, and hundreds of others have.

We lost another fine lady this week. Mrs. Edna Roberts. She was living with Alice in Childersburg, but we still claimed her for our own. The funeral was at the Methodist Church. The place was like a flower garden, and in the middle was Brother Tom talking to God about this fine lady he and God loved so much. The one was giving her up, and the Other was claiming His own, in a still hour of utter and absolute faith.

Professor Rogers came in this week and asked me to write up the ball games at the far corner. It looked like a good thing. I think we'll have a swell team, with guys like Chuck-a-luck McGhee and Birddog Holland toteing the beef around, and other guys like John Averytt and Carbide Hatchett hustling the shoat-hide up and down the dewey grass.

But there was one thing wrong with the deal. Nobody had got around to telling this fellow that Skillett didn't see anything except that one spot where the cheerleaders prance. I can tell you the first name and middle initial of every cheerleader who ever scattered her talents and her charms over the place, but for the life of me I couldn't tell you the name of a single guy who made any particular touchdown up there since Leon "Goat" Kidd hung up his cleats and called it a day.

A thousand times I have been up there. And I have tossed posies, riotously, in my fashion. And a thousand times I have asked the score on the way home. It saves having to sleep in a little house outside and eating horsemeat out of a can. So, I'll just watch Emily Mitchell and Cathy Walton and Anne Shaw and Mary Pool and Peggy Stokes, and surely some young fellow will tell an old geezer the score on the way home. And if they won't, and I have to crowd up with Dot and Buck in the little house outside and eat my meat raw out of a can, then it'll just have to be.

This is the end of my paper, Oliver. I see Frank and Loretta every day. They're fine.

Stop Taking Harsh Drugs for Constipation

End Chronic Dosing! Regain Normal Regularity This All-Vegetable Way!

Taking harsh drugs for constipation can punish you brutally! Their cramps and griping disrupt normal bowel action, make you feel in need of repeated dosing.

When you occasionally feel constipated, get gentle but sure relief. Take Dr. Caldwell's Senna Laxative contained in Syrup Pepsin. It's all-vegetable. No salts, no harsh drugs. Dr. Caldwell's contains an extract of Senna, oldest and one of the finest natural laxatives known to medicine.

Dr. Caldwell's Senna Laxative tastes good, acts mildly, brings thorough relief comfortably. Helps you get regular, ends chronic dosing. Even relieves stomach sourness that constipation often brings.

MONEY SAVING ROAST FOR SMALL FAMILIES

Meat roasts, which often come cheaper by the pound than chops and steaks, are sometimes overlooked by the woman who cooks for two or just for herself.

"For example," says Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, "a small pork loin roast of two and one-half to three and one-half pounds can provide at least three different pork dishes. The butcher might be asked to cut off a chop or two from the end of the roast. The chops can be placed in the freezer tray of the refrigerator for longer keeping. And the roast itself provides savory roast pork in moderate amount plus 'scraps' for pork chop suey, salad or some creamed dish, or gravy."

Miss Hulsey further states that a one-rib beef roast suits very small family needs. Weighing three to five pounds with bone in, it will roast well when turned often and basted frequently.

When making fruit pies, make the slits in the top crust near the center, and the juice will not run out inside the stove.

CLOVER-GRASS PASTURE NEEDS FERTILIZATION

Clover-grass permanent pastures pay off too well not to be properly maintained by annual fertilization.

"For example," says D. R. Harbor, API Extension agronomist, "a clover-grass permanent pasture not limed and fertilized produced only 3,940 pounds of green material per acre over a four-year period at the Tennessee Valley Substation. During the same time, a pasture that was limed and fertilized with phosphate and potash produced 7,622 pounds of green material per acre. In other words, the lmed and fertilized pasture produced more than twice as much grazing as the unlimed and unfertilized area.

Harbor adds that pasture fertilization increases quality of grazing too. This means that livestock grazing fertilized pastures receive more of the minerals and nutrients needed for producing high-quality, profitable products.

KEEP TRACTOR CLEAN FOR BEST OPERATION

Keep a tractor clean, and it'll keep running, advises J. T. Gaillard, API Extension farm mechanization specialist.

He says it's a simple job to service the air cleaner. Just clean it according to instructions in the operator's manual, then fill with new oil. Of course, any material that has been sucked up against the air intake screen should be removed.

"Also," adds Gaillard, "care of the oil filler or breather cap is an easy but important chore. Merely dip it in a solven or kerosene to wash dust and grime off the filter screen inside."

PUREBRED CATTLE AID STATE DAIRY PROGRAM

Less than 10 percent of Alabama cattle are so-called purebred. "But," says J. R. Parrish, API Extension dairyman, "most cattle in the state are directly influenced by purbred animals."

He calls attention to a recent study of Dairy Herd Improvement Association records on purebred cattle. The survey shows that the purebred registered cow produced an average of 360 pounds of butterfat compared with 337 pounds produced by grade animals.

Parrish says there are a number of excellent purebred breeders in Alabama. And any farmer wanting information regarding such purebred cattle as Jerseys, Guernseys, Brown Swiss, Holsteins,, Ayrshires, and Milking Shorthorns should see his local county agent.

"Any purebred breeder is a big help in Alabama's dairy program," adds the specialist.

A can of condensed milk boiled for three hours in the can makes a delicious caramel pudding. After boiling, chill, slice, and serve with whipped cream topped with pecans.

STEEP, ROLLING LANDS ADAPTED TO SOD CROPS

Too many farmers are still waging an up hill fight by trying to grow cotton and corn on very rolling and steep lands, declares S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist.

He points out that such lands are not adapted to growing row crops because the erosion hazard is too great. However, these lands may be used to grow sericea, kudzu, and grass-legume mixtures. And the forage grown can be harvested by cattle and sold in the form of beef and dairy products.

Doughty adds that sod crops provide the most economical source of feed for cattle. Also, they produce a ground cover that protects the soil from erosion, and they supply organic matter to increase the water holding capacity of the soil and its fertility.

DRY COWS

It is a mistake to pasture dry cows on poor pastures until they freshen. Cows on such areas might fail to build up proper body reserves for a healthy calving condition. And cows won't reach peak production unless they are healthy and strong at calving time.

Much time can be saved by making up a larger quantity of pastry than you will need at one time. Keep by wrapping well in waxed paper or placing in a covered dish in the refrigerator for a few days.

MORE GRAZING FROM SERICEA FIELDS

Many Alabama farmers have found that sericea fields may be grazed over a longer period if a reseeding winter legume is planted in them in the fall. A mixture of sericea and reseeding crimson clover or Caley peas will furnish grazing from around January 1 to October 1.

TEXTILE WORKER TO BE HONORED IN BIRMINGHAM

An Alabama textile worker with a unique distinction, and he may be from this or a nearby community, will be signally honored at an unusual program in Birmingham October 3.

Details of the exceptional program have just been announced by Joe L Jennings, executive vice president of the West Point Manufacturing Co., Lanett, and president of the Alabama Cotton Manufacturers Association.

The worker to be honored by this state's largest industry will be Alabama's oldest textile employee from the standpoint of service. His name will be kept secret until he is presented at a meeting to be sponsored by the association's Public Relations Committee October 3, in connection with State Fair Week.

Honoring of this employee will be only one of several highlights of a varied program prepared by the Committee. Another highlight will be the presentation of "The Key to the Cotton Kingdom" to Alabama's 1953 Maid of Cotton, who will be chosen October 2 at the Alabama State Fair. Presentation of the key will be made by Miss Catherine Bailey, of Anniston, Alabama's 1952 Maid of Cotton.

The program itself will open on the morning of October 3 with a panel discussion by Alabama high school students. This will be followed with the premiere showing in this state of the film, "The Greater Goal," depicting the modern story of textiles in dramatic sequence. This film was produced by Lou Louft for the Textile Information Service, public relations arm of the textile agency, and much of it will show the drama of the industry in Alabama.

A highlight of the afternoon session will be an address by Dr. J. L. Brakefield, director of Public Relations, Liberty National Life Insurance Co., Birmingham, distinguished author, lecturer and business man.

H. D. C. YEARBOOK READY FOR APPROVAL

The Home Demonstration Club Yearbook is ready for the approval of Council Directors.

The Committee, Mrs. J. Frank Wyatt, Chairman, Mrs. Nelson Archer, Mrs. C. H. Naish and Mrs. Lois Farmer set dates for Leadership Schools, programs by Youth, Citizenship, Community Activities, Farm Bureau and Defense Chairman and reminders for monthly meetings.

The Directors will meet at a Luncheon Meeting Monday October 6th to complete plans for the 1953 Programs of Work to be included in the yearbook.

BF WITH MATCHED TOOLS MEAN BETTER CULTIVATING FOR YOU

AVERY

More modern farmers are learning that the quality-tested MM Avery BF tractor and the Hi-Klearance RC cultivator are a natural together. Here's a cultivator that offers higher crop-clearance and complete coverage between rows. The RC was built especially for all Hi-Torque BF front end styles. The many crop-getting features of the RC cultivator include:

Paralleled construction for instant, positive, even depth penetration . . . Gangs enter, stay, and leave the ground in level position. Parallel lift and spacing of the sweeps permits you to work right up to the row end.

Front mounted for full-view construction. Cultivator gangs are mounted just behind the front axle where it is easier to see, easier to dodge out of line plants.

Uni-Matic Power controlled for ease of operation, lifts and lowers quickly returning sweeps to the depth you've set them for . . . at a desired depth or height.

Get more work done every hour; more efficiently and faster. Come in and see the powerful MM Avery BF and matched cultivator today.

PEN POINT PARAGRAPHS

Mildred White Wallace

LET'S HAVE AN HONEST SHOW DOWN

Influential dailies throughout the nation, and potent penpoint wielders, are now engaged in placing a "Nix" on Nixon (vice presidential nominee on the Republican ticket), as a result of his acceptance of contributions, amounting to thousands of dollars, from "interested friends" during his tenure of office in Washington as U. S. Senator from California. This fund, according to the Senator's statement, was used by him in his "fight against communism and corruption in government".

We, along with other confused and bewildered voters, await a full and complete analysis of this situation, without which the political arena (in which we had hoped would be staged a dignified discussion between distinguished Americans, seeking the highest offices in the nation), will present only a slug fest centering around the "pot calling the kettle black". The old Elephant war-cry "A change is needed in Washington" which now sounds like a broken record, will have to be revised, and new tactical maneuvers designed in an endeavor to outwit "Old Man People!

Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public have the right, after listening to this fantastic fan-fare, to ask for an explanation of the difference between accepting "mink coats" and "deep freezers" and thousands of dollars, contributed by wealthy individuals to the young Senator from California.

To make the political picture more confusing.... On the Democratic side, we find the "Huntsville Times", John Sparkman's own home town paper, refusing to endorse his candidacy for vice president, and comes out whole heartedly for the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket.

Usually, a man is best known in the community in which he resides, and unless there is some mighty good reason for his rejection, his "home town paper" loyally goes to the bat for him. The Selma Times calls our Senator-friend, a "turn-coat", "opportunist", and a "traitor to the best interests of the people who have elevated him to high office."

These are serious charges and they should be substantiated, modified, or clarified with indisputable evidence.

We are lothe to believe this indicitment against Senator Sparkman. Whether we agree with him or not, he has certainly brought national recognition to Alabama for the first time in one hundred years as a vice presidential nominee.

It would seem, judging from these "head-liners" in the papers, regarding our vice-presidential candidates, that Governor Stevenson and General Eisenhower have drawn liabilities instead of assets, but we are not yet convinced that this is true.

Therefore, a complete showdown and an honest-to-goodness facing of all these highly publicized reports should immediately be verified or denied. The people, who will express their preference for these candidates on November 4, have a right to this consideration. If an unwise choice has been made in the vice-presidential nominees, NOW is the time to know about it. If the delegates whom we elected and sent to Chicago to reprensent us in this matter, knew what they were doing, then, a repudiation of these startling newspaper stories, now streaming across the country, should be made. If, as some would have us believe, they are, "the usual unreliable campaign thunder", then, they should be ignored by intelligent voters, but will they be? People as a rule, are prone to more quickly believe the worst, and never, in the history of this nation, has a restoration of faith in our leaders been more necessary. These "straws in the wind" are not helping matters. So, let's have an honest show down. If this is not done, and these cahrges remain unanswered, and the candidates now before us are elected, then, we shall continue wondering, day in, day out, where do we go from here—? With Whom? And why?

County Teachers Enter Child Study Program

Educators are beginning to realize, more and more, that in order to provide the best school program possible for boys and girls they need to better understand the basic facts underlying child growth and development.

As a result of this felt need, teachers in three school systems in Alabama, Shelby county, Cullman county and Cullman City, have entered into a three year study of child growth and development under the guidance of Dr. Daniel A. Prescott, a world famous specialist in this field.

Last June, ten Shelby county teachers, the Supervisor of Instruction, and the Superintendent, along with the teachers from Cullman county and city, attended a two-week workshop under the direction of Dr. Prescott. These teachers were trained to serve as leaders of the child study groups in their respective school systems.

The teachers participating in the study will meet twice a month in small groups. They will study literature in the fields of biology, sociology, anthropology, and psychology. They will discuss the relationships of these sciences to the study of the growth and development of boys and girls at different age levels.

The leaders of these groups will meet every week; twice as leaders of their respective groups, and twice to study the techniques of group leadership. Teachers who will serve as child study group leaders are: Miss Elizabeth Mays Mrs. Bertha Cosper, Mrs. Margie

PENPOINT POST-SCRIPT

Since writing "Penpoint Paragraphs" last Monday, and leaving town Monday evening, Nixon has made a report to the nation regarding contributions amounting to $18,000, and it is now up to Eisenhower to make final decision regarding whether Nixon remains on the Republican ticket, or resigns.

Developments are falling so thick and fast and re-actions so varied it is difficult to write a timely news article regarding the political proceedings. However, we hope, the chaotic eruption will soon subside, and the best men to lead this country thru the crisis ahead, may be chosen. As far as we are concerned, we are still "gladly for Adlai" and the Donkey.

COLUMBIANA METHODIST CHURCH

Last Sunday was another great day at the Columbiana Methodist Church. We were honored with the presence of Rev. E. B. Paul, associate pastor St. James church in Montgomery. Rev. Paul once lived in this community. He was here until he reached the age of 17. He was a classmate at Southern University of Rev. T. K. Roberts. It was indeed good that those two great Christian gentlemen could worship together again in the same building of years ago.

Rev. Paul spoke complimentary of the progress the Columbiana Methodists have made in their building program the last few years.

The guest speaker for the morning was Mr. Lee Roy Ussery of Montgomery. Mr. Ussery is president of Guaranty Savings Life Insurance Company. His subject was "Spiritual Returns From Tithing". Said Mr. Ussery, "God will bless an individual Tither. He will also bless a tithing church . . . the biggest church grumblers are those who pay the least to their ability . . . tithers are easy to please in church organization and its promotion . . . the same bible which tells of the virgin birth of Jesus also requests tithing of Christians . . . I accept the teaching of the virgin birth of Jesus and I also follow the bible suggestion of tithing, I could not accept one teaching without accepting the other."

The congregation was wonderfully blessed with the message of Mr. Ussery and hope to have a return message in the near future. We were delighted with the presence of several other visitors.

Tax Assessing Methods Changed

Beginning October 1, 1952, the method of assessing taxes on real property has been changed.

In order to relieve the taxpayer from coming into the Tax Assessor's Office each year and giving in his real estate, Luther Fowler, Tax Assessor for Shelby County, has set up a different system whereby a property owner who does not sell, buy, build or change his property in any way, will not have to come in and assess his or her property until there is a change made by them.

If the owner has been living on his property and has been claiming Homestead Exemption, and moves off the property, it should be reported to the Tax Assessor. This also applies to the person who moved on to a place and wishes to claim Homestead Exemption. If new buildings are erected on the property, this should be reported. In other words, any change made that may affect the taxes, then the tax payer would need to give in his taxes between October 1st and December 31st of that particular year the change was made.

This system does not relieve those people who have personal property of assessing their property each year. This would apply to people with stock of goods, office equipment, gins, saw mills, tractors, etc.

If anyone desires more information about this new method of assessment, they may come to the Tax Assessor's office and he will be glad to explain it to them.

All people who have bought real estate should bring their deeds with them so that a correct description may be obtained of the property to be assessed.

Kiwanis Club To Have Radio Speaker Author At Meeting

Coming to Columbiana as guest speaker for the Kiwanis Club tonight for his second appearance here is Dr. Ian Stuart, native Irishman, who elected to come to America and become a citizen of this country only a few years ago, says G. C. Moore, Jr., Chairman of the Boys and Girls Committee, which is sponsoring tonight's Ladies Night program.

Dr. Stuart, not only is a radio artist and author, but is one of the most fluent and enjoyable afterdinner speakers ever heard by many members of the club. Since his last appearance was when only the men were present the club members are taking their wives or fiancees so that they may hear what Dr. Stuart will say concerning American Youth and the Great Heritage that the youth of America have here to enjoy.

At the last appearance of the visitor to Columbiana, in 1950, he was at that time on a committee of three trustees charged with the responsibility of locating a site and building the New Boy's School at Indian Springs, Alabama, located in Cahaba Valley, Shelby county.

Dr. Stuart may be heard over Station W. A. P. I., Birmingham, at 10:15 every Sunday night on a 30 minute program entitled "Thoughts For Johnny." He also has published a book of the same name, now on sale.

The Kiwanis Club is happy to have Dr. Stuart with us.

1953 ACP SIGN-UP SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

From October 15, to December 31, 1952 farmers of Shelby county will have an opportunity to sign up to cooperate in the 1953 Agricultural Conservation Program, H. C. McDanal, Chairman of the county PMA committee, announced today.

This year the "Farm-by-Farm —First-things-First" procedure which was tried out in at least one county in each state this year is being made available to all farms in all counties for the 1953 program. The purpose is to center conservation efforts on the most needed practices on each individual farm.

Chairman McDanal explains that just as farms differ so do conservation problems differ. In the farm-by-farm effort, the local PMA committeemen will visit each farm in the county to help the farmer determine the conservation needs on the farm. Farm plans prepared for the farm by the Soil Conservation Service or other agricultural agencies will be considered in setting up the conservation program for the farm for 1953.

To assure the most effective use of assistance provided under ACP, a field-by-field check should be made to determine the conservation needsand to select the most urgently needed practices. Practices selected will be submitted to the county PMA Committee for approval. Before the committeemen visits the farms in his district, he will have thoroughly reviewed the conservation problems in his area and the conservation practices which will be most effective in meeting conservation needs. Representatives of the Soil Conservation Service, Extension Service, Forest Service and other agricultural agencies will cooperate in this review.

Chairman McDanal explains that every farmer in Shelby county is eligible to participate in the 1953 ACP. Assistance provided under the program covers only about half of the out of pockets cost of the approved conservation practices.

THOMPSON PRINCIPAL ADDRESSES SILURIA PTA

Dr. R. H. Johnson, Jr., Principal at Thompson School addressed the P. T. A. at the first meeting of the year on Monday evening with the subject "Living Useful Lives". Dr. Johnson told of the importance of the home influence on the child and pointed out that home training is reflected and magnified in the child at school. "Parents, educate your child by educating yourself. Then with a sharing by church, school and home, all phases of the child's life, results will be desirable."

Mrs. Garnet Lacy presided in the absence of President, Mrs. W. J. Mathis. The devotional was given by the Reverend E. B. Ogburn, pastor of the First Methodist Church.

A reception for teachers concluded the meeting.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: A dynamic chain of events changed Will Morgan from a young river boat packer to a hardened frontiersman. First, he refused the attentions of Ann Randall and then saw her push off downriver into an Indian ambush. Secondly, he pursued and won the love of Mary Bolden, getting her consent to marriage only to see her entire family destroyed by savages before he can claim her. Not finding her body in the ruins, he assumes she is a captive. He uses a bold plan to free himself and two companions from an Indian trap, then vows to find Mary. His friend Kirby questions him about his moodiness. But Morgan has little to say.

CHAPTER XIII

Will did not raise his head. "Sorry," he muttered. "I keep thinking of what we saw . . . back there. The only time I've had it out of my mind was when I was killing Indians."

"Don't let it git ye," Kirby warned. "I never seed a feller yet what made a hobby o' killin' Injuns who didn't go crazy on the subject."

He turned to the boy. "Son, ye've lost as much in this as anybody. See if ye can't make this pore galoot come out of his glooms."

The boy swallowed hard as his grief was brought back to him but he managed to tell the story between gulps. He had been out hunting when he heard shots at the clearing. By the time he had gotten to where he could see what was going on he knew that the worst had happened. He had hidden in the bushes and watched the last stages of the massacre, helpless to do a thing while his friends were being tortured and murdered. He described with horror the way in which Dan Bolden and his father had been dragged alive from their burning cabin. The other men had apparently been killed in the defense while two women and most of the children never had been seen by him at all, apparently having been killed earlier.

Will Learns That Mary Is Prisoner of Indians

Will broke in anxiously. "But what happened to Mary? Did the Indians take her?"

The boy nodded. "They pulled her out of the cabin when they shot her pappy—and they tied her where she had to see poor Dan bein' cut to pieces. She fought like a wildcat but they didn't seem to hurt her none." He paused before adding with a sob, "I never did see any o' my folks. I guess they was dead before I got there."

Will laid an arm across the boy's shoulders as he broke down entirely. "Keep a stiff upper lip, Pat," he said in a strained voice. "You and I have something to do in life. By God, we'll do it, too!"

The boy looked up startled. "You mean we'll go back after her?"

"Not just yet. What I mean is that we've both lost a lot because our people couldn't learn that there's only one way to fight Indians. We'll do it the right way. Maybe we won't recover what we've lost—but we'll make it easier for other folks to enjoy peaceful homes!"

When Morgan and Kirby moved on to Fort Washington with their new comrade they found the same air of confusion and recriminations. Everyone was trying to lay the blame on someone else for St. Clair's defeat—and no one was making any effort to improve the situation. Obviously there would be no immediate steps taken to strike back at the triumphant savages.

Supplies had to be handled, however, and within a few days Old Sam was ready to start upriver in a keelboat. Will refused to go. "Save my share of the business," he said shortly. "Maybe some day I'll come back to claim it."

Sam tried argument but Will paid scant attention. "I'm going into the woods," he said, his voice expressionless. "A man ought to be able to make himself some money trapping—and maybe take care of a few other matters at the same time."

Kirby spoke sharply. "Ye're not figurin' to scout the Injun towns durin' the winter, are ye? That's suicide!"

"When would be a better time?" Will demanded. "The Indians don't move around much when the snow's on the ground. It's the best season to go."

"It don't make sense to go at all," Old Sam told him.

"Maybe not—but I'm going. If there's any chance of finding Mary I'm going to do it!"

Old Sam swore but Kirby merely smiled.

The keelboat left next day and the two hunters began to make their preparations for the winter. Ammunition, food and other supplies were selected carefully, both men realizing that their very lives depended on the materials they took along. They were going to spend the next few months in country that was completely under Indian domination. It would be no time for mistakes.

On the day before their departure there was a flurry in the fort and Kirby came in to report the cause to Will.

"Execution," he said shortly. "Them deserters what left the army jest before the battle."

Morgan said nothing and Kirby went on slowly. "I reckon ye remember the feller what's supposed to be the leader. Name is Ed Bareford. He was in that first batch we brung down the river. Mighty chummy with Tobe Ansley."

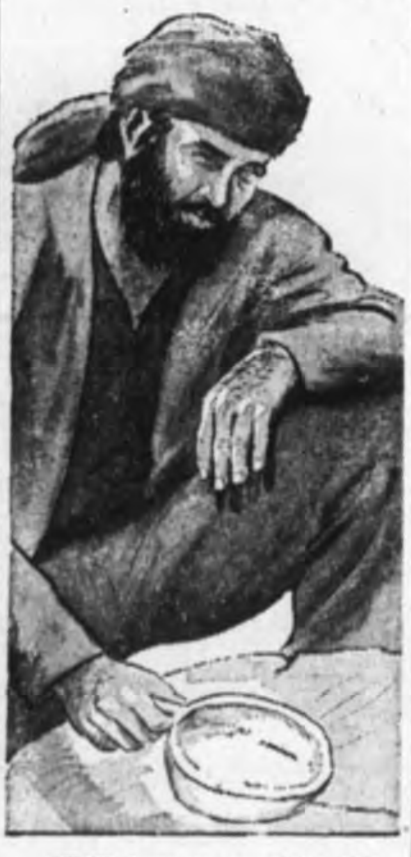
Will had plenty of reason to remember the man but he said nothing and let Kirby talk.

"Somethin' always made me suspect that turkey. Him and Tobe was too thick. They was both with Harmar, too, and there was talk of dirty work there."

Will nodded. "You think Tobe warned him of the attack so he could get away?"

"What else? Remember how Tobe lied about Injun sign? And where is Tobe now?"

Will turned without replying and went to the door, watching with troubled eyes while men filed into their places on the parade ground. He could see Bareford and three other miserable wretches being blindfolded. Then the firing squads took their positions, sharp commands rang and there was a rattle of muskets.



"Ye'll have to go alone this trip," Kirby retorted. "I'm kinda like the government. I'll take a risk for profit, but not just for the sake o' shootin' Injuns."

The thin-faced boy in the blue muffler had almost reached the village when he noticed the raft being poled across the Allegheny.

"Hi Will! Kirby! Where've you been all winter?"

Kirby grinned through a bushy mass of whiskers as he shoved the raft in under the bank. "Howdy, son," he greeted. "How come ye're in Pittsburgh? Old Sam fire ye?"

Young Patterson almost stuttered in his anxiety to tell his story. "Fired nothin'!" he retorted. "I'm in charge here while the old man's down the river. Not much doin' though. All the emigrants's goin' to Tennessee. Ain't likely to be no trade or travel to the Ohio country unless Major Trueheart and Colonel Hardin get this treaty fixed up."

Seeking Vengeance, Will Becomes Indian Nemesis

"Treaty?" Morgan echoed. "Where's the army that was to avenge the St. Clair mess?"

Patterson's face clouded. "No army," he said shortly. "At least not yet. General Wayne is coming out to take over but he won't have any army, I reckon."

The two men exchanged disgusted glances and turned to pick up their bales of pelts. The boy hesitated a moment, then asked shyly, "Did—did you find her?"

Morgan shook his head silently. Then he slung a bale of furs across his shoulder and started up the bank. "Crawling to the damned red weasels for terms!" he muttered. "If that ain't about the smallest thing the government could . . . !"

Kirby lingered briefly. "Better not ask him about the girl," he cautioned. "It's eatin' him up that he ain't been able to find her. Lord knows he kept our scalps loose all winter while he tried it!"

"Then you've been into Indian territory?"

Kirby grinned at the boy's excitement. "We been everywhere," he grimaced. "Never spent a more excitin' winter in all my born days!"

"But you didn't find any prisoners?"

The big man lowered his voice, his tone almost weary. "Hundreds of 'em," he replied. "Looks like the Injuns have been holdin' on to the youngsters fer the last couple o' years. There's white lads and girls in almost every village. One place we almost had ourselves a peck o' trouble. Will saw a girl what looked like somebody he remembered. I almost had to fight with him 'fore I got him away from that part o' the country."

He broke off as Morgan turned, waiting for them to catch up. The younger man seemed none the worse for his winter's hardship but there was a real grimness in his voice as he spoke to Patterson, apparently just replying to the boy's earlier question.

"No luck, Pat," he said. "Some day I'll find her, though."

Will listened to the talk without having much to say. A week after his arrival in town he suddenly declared his intention of going back into the forest. Kirby tried to dissuade him but the younger man was determined.

"I've got a job to do," he declared flatly. "Maybe I'll find her—and maybe I won't—but in the meantime I'm striking where it will do the most good. There's other ways to fight Indians besides raising an army."

"Ye'll have to go alone this trip," Kirby retorted. "I'm kinda like the government. I'll take a risk fer a profit but I ain't riskin' my skelp jest fer the sake o' shootin' Injuns."

When Will had taken his pack and disappeared across the river Kirby roamed the village worriedly. "I should have gone along," he growled. "That boy's goin' to run hisself into trouble. All winter he spent more time huntin' Injuns than he did walkin' trap line. I don't know yet how we ever got through. Mostly it's because he's turned out to be about the slickest thing in the brush that ever I seed. I hope he kin keep it up."

Three days later General Wayne arrived and plunged immediately into the work of organizing an army or "legion" as he preferred to call it. Staff officers were sent to Fort Washington to reorganize the remnants of St. Clair's command while Wayne remained behind to collect a corps of scouts. Word spread quickly that here was an officer who understood his business but was still willing to accept advice from men who knew the country. Idle hunters and trappers rushed to join the detachment which seemed to offer a promise of real action.

Phantom Killer Becomes Tradition on Frontier

Kirby was one of the first to enlist in the new scout battalion and as a result was frequently consulted by the general on a number of matters relating to personnel and organization. One day Wayne called him in and asked about Will Morgan. "I hear you have a partner, Kirby," he said. "I haven't seen him around here. Don't you think he'd be interested in joining the Legion?"

Kirby smiled almost bitterly. "Not 'til there's somethin' goin' on. When ye git ready to move, though, I warrant he'll be on hand and rarin' to go."

Wayne seemed curious and partly informed on the subject of Will Morgan so Kirby told him the whole story. The general smiled grimly at the conclusion. "Not pretty," he commented. "But not unusual. Keep an eye on him if you can."

The summer passed with a slackening of Indian activity on the river itself. The army was shaping up well but the government in Philadelphia was not yet ready to permit an offensive movement of any kind. They were still hopeful of some good coming out of the Trueheart-Hardin mission—and the delay suited Wayne who had assumed command with the understanding that he would make no move until he had a trained army on hand.

For some weeks no report came regarding the commissioners. They had been met by friendly Indians as they moved northward under a flag of truce, the agreement being that they would be taken to the Miami chiefs. Then, in late August, a Chickasaw scout brought word that both men had been murdered by the supposedly friendly Indians. Two weeks later the story was confirmed when the Miamis sent a message to the Great White Father, complaining about the encroachment of settlers on Indian land and casually mentioning that two sons of the White Father had been killed by warriors who objected to them coming into the territory.

Wayne hastened his preparations at this report but the Philadelphia government seemed willing to sacrifice more messengers instead of making an overt movement. Wayne was ordered to continue his training schedule without giving offense to the Indians. Meanwhile another group of commissioners was going out to treat for peace through the Iroquois.

Accordingly the valley settled down to another winter of defensive waiting. Morgan appeared in Pittsburgh late in the fall, purchasing a load of supplies and ammunition.

Another spring rolled around and the Ohio country was still waiting for something to break. Trappers were coming in from their lines, getting out of the forest before the savages should start on the trails. Farmers planted crops close to the river and there was a general air of guarded activity.

Business was dull in Pittsburgh but the White Crane tavern behind the blockhouse of Old Fort Pitt had its usual quota of free-spending trappers. Whiskey and conversation flowed freely, most of the talk dealing with the mysterious character who was rapidly becoming a tradition on the frontier. One trapper after another related some adventure—real or imaginary—of the white man who had roamed the Indian country for the past two winters.

NOTICE

Notice Of Sale of $285,000 Principal Amount Of 4% Gas System Revenue Bonds Of The Town Of Columbiana, Alabama.

The Town Council of the Town of Columbiana will meet at 11 o'clock, A. M. on October 7, 1952, in the Town Hall of Said Town for the purpose of conducting a public sale at auction of $285,000 Principal amount of 4% Gas System Revenue Bonds of the Town of Columbiana, said bonds to be dated June 1, 1952, and to mature on June 1 in each of the following years in the following amounts: $5,000 in each of the years 1955 to 1957, inclusive; $6,000 in each of the years 1958 to 1961, inclusive; $8,000 in each of the years 1962 to 1965, inclusive; $10,000 in each of the years 1966 to 1969, inclusive; $12,000 in each of the years 1970 to 1976, inclusive; and $15,000 in each of the years 1977 to 1982, inclusive. Said Bonds shall bear interest at the rate of four per cent (4%) per annum, payable December 1, 1952 and semi-annually thereafter on June 1 and December 1 in each year until paid. The Bonds which mature in 1963 and thereafter shall be redeemable, at the option of the Town of Columbiana, on June 1, 1962, or on any interest payment date thereafter, in whole or in part, but if in part, shall be in the inverse order of maturities and identification numbers, latest maturities and highest numbers first, any any redemption shall be at a redemption price equal to the par value thereof, plus accrued interest thereon to the redemption date plus a redemption premium which shall be equal to ¼ of 1% of the par value of each Bond to be redeemed for each year or fraction thereof from the date fixed for redemption to the date of each Bond to be redeemed, provided, however, that said redemption premium for any Bond redeemed shall in no event exceed 4% of the par value of such Bond.

Each bidder will be required to deposit $5,700 in cash or a certified check for $5,700 payable to the order of the Town of Columbiana, with the Town Treasurer to assure his purchase of and payment for the Bonds if awarded to him. All deposits will be returned at the conclusion of the sale except that of the successful bidder. Should the successful bidder fail to purchase and pay for the Bonds as required, his deposit shall be retained by the Town of Columbiana as liquidated damages.

The Town will furnish printed Bonds, legal opinions and pay other expenses connected with the issuance and sale of the Bonds. The Town Council shall have the right to reject all bids. The Bonds are to be subject to the legal opinion of Thompson, Dumas, O'Neal and Hayes, of Birmingham, Alabama.

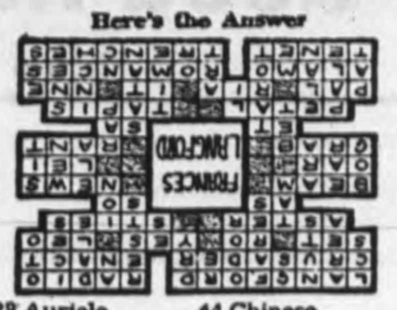
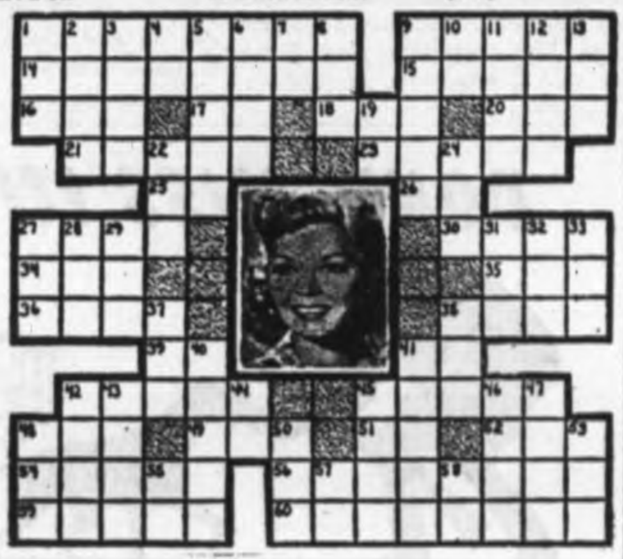
Here's the Answer





Veterans' Column
State Dept. of Veterans' Affairs

E. J. SULLIVAN, VSO

Regulations recently issued by the Labor Department make it clear that unemployed Korean Veterans will not follow in the path of a comparatively few World War Two Veterans who rode the 52-20 CLUB GRAVY TRAIN. Veterans are not eligible to collect the Federal unemployment pay until they EXHAUST any STATE unemployment benefits due them

The Korean GI BILL allows unemployment pay of $26 a week for 26 weeks for veterans who are unemployed through no fault of their own. Now here are some of the RESTRICTIONS placed on eligibility for unemployment pay; No benefits may be drawn for weeks of unemployment beginning before October 15. To be eligible for Federal benefits, a veteran must be unemployed, able to work, AVAILABLE for work and willing to accept just about any job offered to him. Any waiting period required by state law must be served by the veteran before he becomes eligible for Federal benefits. Veterans discharged after July 16 must wait from 30 to 90 days before becoming eligible for unemployment benefits, depending upon the amount of mustering-out pay they are eligible to receive.

A veteran eligible for $100 mustering-out pay must wait 30 days; if he gets $200 in mustering-out pay, he must wait 60 days and if he receives $300 mustering out pay, he will have to wait 90 days. To be eligible for unemployment pay, the veteran must have served 90 days on active duty, some part of which was after June 26, 1950. If he can answer all the requirements, it still isn't just a question of walking in and picking up the unemployment checks. He must register for work with the local Employment Service, and keep his registration active by reporting to the office at required intervals.

Now if you are planning on signing up for these benefits, listen carefully to these instructions: When you file your INITIAL CLAIM for Federal unemployment benefits, you must have with you, your discharge papers, Separation form DD 214, your Social Security Card, if you have one, and a list of employers for whom you worked during the 18 months before you entered the service and the time following your discharge.

WILSONVILLE

ELIZABETH WELDON

We are all looking forward with great pleasure to Friday and Saturday of this week, because that is when we have our Fair. Remember what good meals they serve for only seventy-five cents and what good times we have together?

The Boy Scouts will have their Code of Honor at the Methodist Church Monday at seven o'clock. The public is invited so let's show our interest in them by being present.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Cosby and Sally will leave Friday to spend the winter in Sarasota, Florida. We shall miss them while they are away.

We are proud of the new homes that are being built. The homes of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Cosper and Mr. and Mrs. George Vansant are near completion. Mr. and Mrs. Hall's home is fast nearing the finish and Mr. and Mrs. Revis have started their new home. We heard that Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gardner are planning to have a new home, too.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. J. F. Heims continues seriously ill in the Jefferson Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Gardner and daughters from Birmingham visited Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gardner this week end.

Mrs. Mollie Taylor and Mrs. Houston Blankenship from Gadsden visited Mr. and Mrs. Amos Daniel and Mrs. Ola Taylor.

Miss Ann Bell of Vincent was the guest of Miss Sally Cosby this week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Whitten had as their guests recently, Mrs. Whitten's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Taylor of Hattisburg, Miss.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. Morrison from Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Charles Taylor and son, Wayne, from Macon, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Leon Boddie from Chattanooga, Tenn.; and Miss Sara Nell Whitten from Birmingham.

We welcome Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burnette and Danny who moved here from Clanton. They are living in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell.

We also welcome Mrs. Frank Martin who has moved to Mrs. W. E. Riddle's home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ocie Ray and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Nivens and daughter spent Thursday and Friday with Mr. and Mrs. John Vardaman.

Mrs. Clarke Crawford of Anniston visited Mr. and Mrs. Grady McEwen.

Rev. Beck and family of Howard College were guests of Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Gould this Friday.

Mrs. Bud Hebb and son George, visited in Gadsden and while there George underwent a tonsilectomy.

The Civitans met Thursday at the School lunch room. Messers Roy Downs, Julius Pilgreen and W. H. Minor of Calera were their guests. Mr. Downs was the speaker of the evening. He spoke on industries for small towns.

Congratulations too Mr. and Mrs. Lee Reinhardt. They have a little daughter, named Rose Marie.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Story, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Weldon, Mary John and Elizabeth Weldon were dinner guests of Mrs. Juanita Williams Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Sharbutt of Vincent visited Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Cosper Sunday.

Mrs. Evelyn Weldon from Columbus, Ga., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jack Story and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Weldon and family.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION TO HOLD EXAMINATION

The U. S. Civil Service Commission today announced an examination for Scientific Aid (Cotton) for filling positions paying from $2,750 to $3,410 a year in various Federal agencies in Washington, D. C., and vicinity. To qualify, applicants must take a written test and have had appropriate experience or education.

Applications must be filled by October 7, 1952 with the Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners for the Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C. Further information and applications may be obtained from Mr. George M. Bird, located at United States Post Office, Columbiana, Alabama or from the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. BIG LIFT
to Better Farming

Better farming, new methods and machines, better livestock, and improved marketing are helping bring about a new era of progress and prosperity in Dixie.

Rural telephones (they tripled in number since World War II in the area served by Southern Bell) are bringing a big lift to farm work and farm living. During the first eight months of this year, we installed more than 92,000 rural telephones.

We'll keep on putting them in as fast as we can—because we know how much they mean to prosperity on the farm and in town . . . and to a strong, well-fed America. More farm telephones also mean more valuable telephone service for everyone.

RESOLUTIONS

A RESOLUTION

Whereas God in his infinite wisdom has called from our midst our friend and brother, Howard L. Cobb Sr., and

Whereas Brother Cobb was a faithful member of Mt. Tabor Methodist Church, Westover and

Whereas he was a loyal member of the board of stewards of our church and served this church faithfully in other capacities when called upon, and

Whereas we shall ever remember his services to this church and his many admirable qualities as aChristian gentleman will ever cherish his memory.

Whereas, be it resolved that we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

Be it further resolved, that we extend to his family our heartfelt sympathy, and pray that God will sustain them in their sorrow.

Church

W. C. Chappel, Curtis Moore, David Miller, J. C. Robertson, J. D. Carroll, Alfred Alverson, H. J. Goode, Oscar Robson, H. J. Goode, Oscar Robertson.

A RESOLUTION

Whereas, Robert Kaplan, who was born 44 years ago, and lived a devoted, unselfish life, was an upright and honorable citizen, a faithful husband and father, often going out of his ordinary way to help suffering humanity by giving, not only helping advice and encouragement, but also freely of his material wealth to help the less fortunate, and whereas; Brother Kaplan was not only a good citizen, but also a useful man in the temple and the community. He was, also, a Master Mason and a member of this Shelby Lodge No. 140, and a builder of "good and sound character."

Now therefore; be it resolved:

(1) That Columbiana and Shelby County has lost a very useful man and citizen; but his family is bereaved by the loss of a devoted husband and father; the church an active supporter; and Shelby Lodge No. 140, F and AM, a faithful member.

(2) That we bow humbly before the Great Master of the Universe, and pray— "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." That we extend to the family of Brother Kaplan our sympathy and our prayers; that we command them to, "Our Father in Heaven" for comfort and solace.

(3) That a copy of these Resolutions be spread on the minutes of our lodge; that a copy be given to the family of our dearly beloved Brother; that a copy be given to The Shelby County Reporter-Democrat for publication.

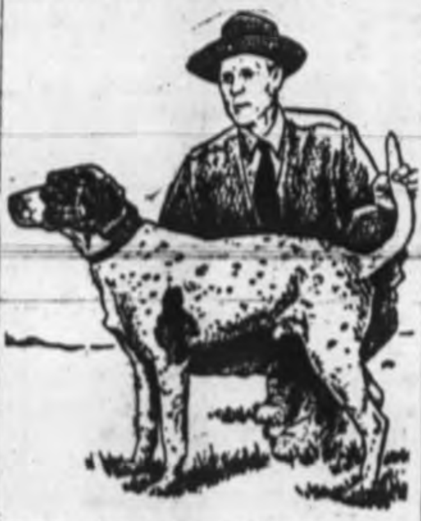
Free Movie Coming To Wilsonville And Columbiana



'THE SEDGEFIELDS STORY' TO BE SHOWN

"The Sedgefields Story," a color sound motion picture, will be shown to sportsmen and others interested in dogs and hunting, at the Wilsonville School Auditorium Monday, September 29, at 7:30 P. M., and at the Courthouse in Columbiana Tuesday, September 30, at 7:30 P. M., it has been announced by Sammy McEwen, Wilsonville, and Frank Fulton, Columbiana, Purina feed dealers.

The movie, featuring Clyde Morton, only dog handler and trainer to win the National Field Trials Championship nine times with dogs he has trained, and "Paladin," which won the Championship in 1951 and 1952, etc., was a year and a half in the making.

Portions of the film are devoted to training and handling techniques demonstrated by Morton, while many field trial scenes show the dog in action, particularly "Paladin" in winning the 1952 Championship.

The 30-minute film was produced by the Ralston Purina Company and is being shown for the first time in this area at this sportsmen's meeting.

Invitations have been sent to many hunters and dog owners, and since the meeting is open to the public, anyone interested in seeing this feature film should come to Wilsonville School Monday night, or the Courthouse in Columbiana, Tuesday night in time for the show which will start promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

From Misery To Bliss— What Divine Compassion Can Do

And Jesus put forth his hand and touched him, saying, "I will; be thou clean". Matthew 8:3

Here was a man afflicted with the most frightful of all human diseases. leprosy. By the law of the land he had been pronounced an outcast. No one was permitted to go near him. He was listed as a beggar, depending on generous passers-by to throw him scraps of food over a hedge fence. Abandoned by his own family, he was doomed to a hopeless outlook and could only await the outcome of his incurable disease, which was death to his rotting flesh.

It is probable that some friend of other days had one day called to him from a safe distance, informing him of a strange person, Jesus by name, who was doing amazing things for people in need; that Jesus was traveling on foot from village to village, and might possibly pass that way.

That is where our story begins. Sure enough, on a day never to be forgotten by that wretched sufferer, he hailed a passing crowd and asked wherefore of it. On being told that the commotion was due to the presence of Jesus of Nazareth, he called with frantic earnestness, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.' You know the rest. If you will read the entire record of it in that chapter in Matthew, you will be ready for the following conclusions:

1. Jesus will boldly attach any trouble submitted to him by a sincere petitioner. He actually touched that leper! In doing so, he disregarded all sanitary precaution. But he got results!

2. If we are convinced that God is really interested in us, we will reveal our needs to him. The Bible gives us every assurance of divine interest. Acting upon that assurance invariably brings results.

3. "Thou canst make me clean." No doubt was in the mind of that man that God was able to do for him far more abundantly than he could ask. There must be entire confidence in the ability of our Lord. That necessarily follows the faith that one must have that God actually cares.

To us moderns, leprosy is pictured as sin with its destructive power. We all have it, and we all need the sympathetic touch of the hand of Jesus of Nazareth. To Him alone can we go for restoration. Beggars and outcasts we otherwise will be, regardless of material condition.

An old Gospel song has it:

"The great Physician now is here
The sympathizing Jesus."

OLIVER HEAD MADE 2ND LIEUTENANT

2nd Lt. Oliver P. Head of Columbiana, Alabama has graduated from The Infantry Center Chemical, Biological, and Radiological Defense Course at Fort Benning, Georgia.

During the three weeks course Lt. Head learned the latest Army-approved methods of detecting and combating the effects of the many agents which could be used in Chemical, Biological, and Radiological Warfare.

After graduation Lt. Head returned to Company F, Infantry School Detachment stationed at Fort Benning, Georgia.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Head, live at Columbiana.

CULTURE CLUB HAS PARTY

Fun and hiliarity prevailed on the evening of September 3, when the Columbiana Culture Club had its annual Husbands Night, which event, this year, was in the form of a "Tacky Party".

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Buck Clark were dinner hosts at this meeting, serving delicious barbecued chicken and all the fixings at the High School lunchroom.

After dinner, there was a parade of contestants and the judges performed the arduous task of selecting the "tackiest" lady and man present. Mrs. "Hap" Hatchett and Dr. Crawford won top honors with Mrs. Luther Curlee and Norman Lefkovits getting honorable mention.

Prizes suitable to the occasion were given.

Several new and fun-provoking games were conducted by versatile Miss Marian Cotney, local Home Agent.

Good Morning

Milton Bird

HERE COMES THE BAND

By Louellen Sims, pinchhitting for Milton Bird this week.

Boom! Boom! Here comes Shelby County High's band. Headed by the dancing, prancing and strutting majorettes. This year great pleasure was taken when Miss Mary Mims, our band director, announced Flora Mae Bozeman, head majorette; Merle Meyers, Drum Majorette, Nancy Harrison, Myra Bentley and Betty Jo Knowles, and Betty Ruth Watts as the '52-'53 majorettes. These girls are not strangers to many of us. The preceding year Flora Mae and Merle were majorettes. Betty Jo and Nancy played the drum and cymbals, although Myra is new she has caught on quick for she is now strutting and keeping time and step with the rest.

These cute majorettes will lead the band in the parade next Friday, September 26th as they play cheerful marches in honor of the football team.

Be watching for them.

AUTUMN SPLENDOR

"Filter the strain of summer's reddest petals,
Distil the dews that August moons have wept,
Rob the May sky of sunset's varied metals
Filch the rich greens from lawns where June has slept.
Harvest the ripened grain's dull gold and yellow,
Borrow the blue and mauve of July dusk,
Suffuse your rainbow-loot with fawn and mellow,
Amber and tan of withered leaf and husk—
Soften the reds with dust from beam and rafter,
Blend them with flames a fallen star has lost,
October's gem is Summer's tears and laughter,
Inclosed in crystal globes Autumn frost."

The above poem from the pen of Don Blanding, marks the passing of the prettiest season of the year. The splendor of its color appeals to every lover of nature, for those who have hearts to feel and eyes to see. No more glorious pictorial charm can greet the eye, than the crimson gold of the sunset, and the silver disc of the harvest moon as it rises, soon after Old Sol has gone to sleep. Did you happen to view this splendid occurence last week? Did you happen to watch the moon rise above the brow of a solitary hill top, or peep from behind a scattered group of trees? No lovelier picture has been painted than the ascendency of the Harvest Moon which we viewed last week as we topped German Hill— Homeward Bound!

CLUB YEAR BOOKS STRIKE SERIOUS NOTE

We have been especially impressed with the timely note that has been struck by the "Women" this year, evidenced by the programs contained in the Club Year Books. More serious consideration is being taken by the women this year, than ever before, as far as exercising the "right to vote" in concerned. Glad to note the Home Demonstration Clubs are leading this "crusade" to get out the women vote. Leaders in this most worthy organization, are urging all Home Demonstration members to register and vote on November 4. Other clubs and women's organizations should follow this example.

Did you know if all the women, who are of "ballot age" were to cast their votes on November 4, the "women", and not the "men", would name the next President of the United States? Perhaps if the women would assume this responsibility, or if they had done so since being allowed legally to participate in elections, the story of graft, corruption, and dishonesty in government would not be factual evidence today. We sincerely hope the "crusade" to get out the vote will be a successful one. Too often we have taken these priceless heritages for granted and someday, if we continue in this indifferent attitude, the right to vote, or even perhaps the right to worship as we please, may be taken from us by ruthless leaders determined to destroy the last vestige of our democratic way of life. It has been done in other countries, and many things in recent years, have come to pass in our own country, no one ever dreamed "could happen here."

As stated above, this movement, started by the Home Demonstration Clubs, should extend to every organization as a mutual objective and one worth working diligently to achieve.

AUTO TAGS FOR SALE OCTOBER 1ST — $3.00

On and after October 1st, long lines of automobile owners will be crowding the courthouse to purchase a bright, new white license plate with blue numerals on it, for the price of $3.00, the result of a promise made to the people by Governor Gordon Persons during his campaign for the Chief Executive's job. All well and good, but.... lest you arrive here with some extra change, you are liable to have to return home without your "$3.00 tag".... Here's why.

Although passenger car tags will sell for a flat $3.00, instead of a graduated scale ranging from $5 to $18, that is not all you have to pay to procure the right to drive along Alabama's colorful-autumn-lit highways. First, there is a little matter of 75 cents issuance fee, which goes to the Probate Judge; then comes another little matter of ad valorem tax, which must be paid before you can attach this little tin plate to the family puddle hopper and be on your way. However, $3.75 plus advalorem tax is much better than the higher rate passenger cars have heretofore carried. Just did not want you to be short of change when you came to town to attend to this matter, so I mentioned it, early!

Now, if you own a truck, the above "bargain" does not apply.

It is estimated that 775,000 tags will be issued in Alabama in 1953, about 50,000 more than were bought in 1952.

BOOKMOBILE PROJECT FOR SHELBY COUNTY

Many citizens are interested in availing themselves of the opportunity of participating in a coordinated program which will assure Shelby County sharing in a Bookmobile Program.

Visitors at the County Fair had the privilege of viewing the Bookmobile sent up from the State and inspected the excellent books covering everything from history to fiction suitable for readers of all ages and for reference work.

Now as we understand this plan, Shelby county, has the opportunity to go in with Chilton county, and procure one of these Bookmobiles free for 18 months, with a trained librarian in charge at all times. Shelby County's Board of Revenue and Control now contribute only a nominal sum to this project, and will be asked to increase this allotment so that this Bookmobile, may be made available to all communities in Shelby county.

Mrs. Karl Harrison is Chairman of Shelby County's Library Board, and has been asked to contact members of the Board of Revenue and Control, and talk over the advantages this educational unit offers. It is hoped the "powers that be" will see fit to increase the present allotment sufficiently to allow Shelby county to participate in this far reaching program.

If this project is approved, a trained librarian will be placed in charge working full time and will travel thru the county to various communities where these excellent facilities may be enjoyed by all the people.

Jefferson county has long realized the importance of this Bookmobile project and has purchased two units which are in daily use. We hope a plan may be devised between Chilton and Shelby county so that both counties may profit from this coordinated effort.

. . . It is a pleasure to welcome into our ever widening rank and file of readers, Gordon Ruffner, who is a comparatively new citizen in our midst, but fast making his way around as an A Number One painter and interior decorator. We have had an occasion recently to work with Ruffner and Henry Moon, on seperate jobs, and we have found these two versatile workmen absolutely reliable and efficient. They are truly "on their jobs" and have merited our wholehearted thanks, and O. K. too! If you have any work requiring this type service, you can not beat them for efficiency and reliability. In this day of shoddy workmanship, this is something to remember.

James R. Fulton, son of Mr. J. F. Fulton, Columbiana, was graduated Friday, September 12, as a member of class 52-C, USAF Officer Candidate School, receiving a second lieutenant commission in ceremonies at Lackland Air Force base, San Antonio, Texas.

The new second lieutenant was among 396 class members to win Air Force gold bars at conclusion of the graduation exercises. Thirty three of the group were Women in the Air Force. It was the largest graduation in the history of the Air Force OCS.

All of the class members will begin extended duty tours at bases throughout the Air Force upon leaving Lackland. Many will enjoy a brief home leave with friends and families before commencing their new duties.

. . . Nothing like a "new pair of shoes" to make "Small Fry" happy, and little Jennie Lou Gates, down town shopping with her Dad, Dr. John Gates, last Wednesday, was about the happiest little girl we have seen when she came by my office to show me, not only new shoes, but sweaters, and all sorts of toys. Jennie Lou had made a trip from Helena to see her "favorite dentist", Dr. Ralph Hunt, and Jennie Lou and I agreed on this fellow, too. Columbiana is most fortunate in having Dr. Hunt in this town. Fact is, I don't know what folk would do without him, when a molar becomes obstreperous.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Gray Goodwin and Charlie Ann Goodwin spent the week end in Dothan as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Felton Goodwin.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Wales W. Wallace, Jr., George Horn and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Stinson were among the football enthusiasts who attended the Alabama-Mississippi Southern game played in Montgomery Friday night.

. . . L. E. Shaw of Wilsonville Rt., is a new subscriber to the "Home Paper" whom we are delighted to extend a cordial welcome this week. Mr. Shaw is the father of Sgt. James H. Shaw, who was featured recently in this paper, and if all goes well, it won't be as long as it has been before this brave soldier-man will be at home for keeps. We share this good news with his friends in Shelby County and assure the young Sergeant that the "Welcome Home Mat" is out, just waiting for him to step on it.

. . . Ralph Jones who is attending Howard College spent Sunday at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Jones.

. . . Leonard Rogers, popular and well liked principal of Shelby County High School is enthusiastic over the scholastic year's outlook. Mr. Rogers says he has the "Best faculty he has had in eighteen years of teaching". Now, take a bow, teachers!

. . . It won't be many years before Rose Kaplan will have an A Number One Salesman in little Gary Kaplan, not yet two years old. A man walked in Eagles one day last week, and little Gary sidled up to him in his own inimitable way, and pointing with pride to the stock of shoes, said, "Man want shoes today?" And with this inquiry proceeded to lead the way to the place to try them on, determined to please him with a "correct fit."

VILLA BENTLEY

VILLA BENTLEY, COUNTY'S MAID OF COTTON

Villa Bentley, "Miss Maid Of Cotton", from Shelby county, is eagerly looking forward to her trip to the Magic City next week, where she will meet contestants from all over Alabama. A host of friends will also be following this personable young lady, with an armful of good wishes, as she seeks the distinct honor of representing Alabama in Memphis, Tennessee in December.

Miss Bentley will be accompanied to Birmingham by Mrs. James Crawford, and when Villa steps before the spotlights at the Fair, for final choosing, the Kiwanians, who sponsored her entrance, will be seated with their wives in the grandstand cheering section, 100 strong. A block of 100 tickets has been ordered reserved for this occasion by the Kiwanis Club.

Miss Bentley appeared before the Club last Thursday night and expressed her appreciation to them for making this honor possible, and for the generous gifts presented her by this organization and her many friends.

Miss Bentley has chosen for her first appearance before the judges, a two-piece suit of Thames Cotton featuring contrasting checks of light and dark grey. The skirt is pencil slim. The jacket form fitted, with belted back. The collar and cuffs are of black velveteen. With this suit she will wear a black velour hat, white short gloves with tiny pearl buttons at wrist, and will carry a black fabric bag. Black suede pumps complete this striking tailored outfit.

When Shelby County's Maid Of Cotton steps before the floodlights for her second appearance, she will be wearing a most becoming red cotton velveteen dress, which is a beautiful model. It is made Princess style featuring a number of gores which form a flared skirt. The waist has a simple round neck line, and long sleeves, slightly pointed at wrist. Miss Bentley chose a three strand Richlieu pearl necklace and earrings for her jewelry accessories. With this jewel tone costume she will wear Black suede slippers, trimmed with tiny strips of leather at the vamp.

For evening dress, Miss Bentley chose a white nylon net posed over white taffeta, very full skirt. At the waist is a rosette of nylon, centered with pink fabric rosebuds. With this dainty Cinderella "dream of a dress" she will wear white satin slippers and white net mitts.

Win, lose or draw, Shelby county has in Villa Bentley a charming contestant in which all Alabamians may take pride when she is presented by the master of ceremonies on September 29, at the State Fair in Birmingham.

SOLDIERS MEMORIAL

A project undertaken a long time ago, seems still longer reaching successful achievement. We are thinking about the Soldiers Memorial, sponsored by the American Legion. If the amount raised for this all important recognition has not been attained, let's do something about it. I doubt there are few towns in the U. S. A. which have not, long before this time, had a marker of appreciation placed on its public square or Courthouse grounds honoring those who gave so much that we might remain a free people. This tribute, or some recognition— (we have long preferred living trees, to a cold piece of marble with names on it), should no longer be delayed.

TREE CLUB

We are numbered among a lot of Columbiana citizens who want to assist Jimmy Harrison, Myrtle Miles, Mae Sims, and others, who are working tirelessly to promote the purchase of trees to be planted in our town making it a more beautiful place in which to live.

Have you talked with them about this far reaching plan for lasting beauty along our streets? If not, contact them, or, better still, send your donation to Mrs. Hugh Sims, who is Treasurer. Fall Time is planting time, and it is just around the corner.

. . . Miss Doris Colvin of Livingston is the new Physical Education teacher this year and we hear she is doing a splendid job. We also hear that Sara Nell Lightsey has so many girls desiring to take Home Economics that two sections will possibly have to be arranged. We do not blame pupils for wanting this course under so lovable a personality as Sara Nell. Naturally, "Miss Mary" Peters was greeted with a round of applause as she returned to the English Department, and those hard working instructors who have so conscientiously devoted their days to teaching young America namely Mrs. Frank Head, Miss Mamye Hill, Miss Aileen Pope, Mrs. W. Y. Johnson, Roy Mann, Elvin Hill, Inez Bird, Miss Gertrude and Irene Bishop, Mrs. Lessie Niven, Mrs. Lillie M. MacKnight, Mrs. Woodrow Elliott, Mrs. Leonard Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Mary Mims, Kathleen Turner, and all other teachers throughout this county, deserve a big hand of appreciation.

. . . Mr. McGhee of the Southern Railway Company, states that the longest train he has seen since being a depot agent, passed thru Columbiana one day last week. It carried 147 cars and was over a mile in length.

. . . Believe it or not store managers in Columbiana are busily engaged in unpacking Christmas goods. It won't be long now until all will be ready for the approval of early shoppers who refuse to be caught in the last minute Christmas rush. Lay-a-way plans will be generously allowed by all merchants.

. . . Mrs. Lonnie Brown is cordially greeting and serving visitors in the Varsity and with homemade chicken salad sandwiches, and that yum-yum-yummy good Maxwell House cup of java. If you have not sampled these delectable sandwiches, better not lose any more time about it.

. . . A near tragedy was averted in the N. A. Jones home last week when Ralph Jones, a student at Howard College, decided to "surprise" his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Jones, and slip in the rear door, late the night he arrived, and greet them at the breakfast table next morning. Due to the recent precaution taken in every home in Columbiana, loaded pistols and guns have been ready to bang-bang any "prowler" who decided to make further nocturnal calls on Columbiana citizens. Mr. Jones hearing someone step up on the porch about midnight, got up, cocked the gun, and went to open the door. Ralph happened to hear the gun click on, and hastily announced his "identity" just in time to arrest the trigger-pulling. However, all day, the day after this occurence, Mr. and Mrs. Jones state they could think of little else, than what might have happened had Ralph failed to "yell" at the proper split second. This case of mistaken identity could have been a tragic happening. So, keep your guns loaded, Folks, but know your target!

. . . H. M. Gordon of Wilmington, Delaware, and A. D. Gordon, of Gadsden, spent Thursday in Columbiana, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Luck.

GOODGAME-BROWN WEDDING ANNOUNCED

Mrs. Nellie Leota Brown has announced the approaching marriage of her daughter, Ruby Nell, to Mr. John Frank Goodgame. The Wedding will be solemnized on Saturday, October 4, 1952, at three o'clock P. M. at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Allen Nance in Newport, Tennessee.

Mr. Goodgame is the son of Mrs. L. P. Dycus in Columbiana.

. . . A long time ago, it is said, Diogenes took his lantern and went forth in search of an "honest man". We do not know if he found him or not, but, a little light on some very shady episodes in our present presidential race might be advisable before proceeding with further negotiations.

. . . Congratulations to Gene Edcondson who has accepted a lucrative position with Liberty Motors in Birmingham. Mr. Edmondson was formerly employed by McDow Motor Company, and his friends and former patrons will be glad to learn of this promotion.

. . . Mrs. George Landrey and little daughter, Tommie Sue of Oklahoma City, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Edmondson.

. . . The representatives of the American Legion Auxiliary are requesting that all eligible wives, mothers or sisters of a veteran, join them in their work with and for the veterans. If interested, contact Mildred Harrison or Thelma Glenn.

. . . Friends will be interested to hear that Rev. G. W. Riddle is speaking every morning this week over station WJAD, Gadsden (1400 on dial).

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARIES

Sunday, Mrs. J. W. McGiboney received good wishes from a number of her friends. The occasion being a birthday anniversary. Monday, Leonard Joiner and Dixie Tinney were honorees in their respective homes. Wednesday, Gina White, F. E. Williams, Mrs. Della Tidmore, Mrs. Gerald Fulton and Jack Armstrong shared birthday greetings from friends and loved ones.

Thursday, Merle Meyers, Roger Vincent, Leula Barnette, and Mike Seale had birthday cakes to make the passing of their happy anniversaries. Friday, September 26, will be a big day for Football fans at S. C. H. S. On this day, Thompson High comes over to play our Wildcats, and Linda McGiboney, B. B. Lyon and Jessie W. Barnes will be found looking forward to birthday celebrations, staged in their honor. Saturday, September 27, Buddy Day will have "his birthday", and Sunday Dick White will be candle-puffing; September 30, the last day of the month, is the birthday of Jimmy Webber, Rudolph Tidmore, and Clarence Faulkner. Happy birthdays everybody, and "many happy returns" of the day that brought you our way.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: I Kings 4:20-34; 7:1-8; 9:10—11:43.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 125.

Glory Is Brittle

Lesson for September 28, 1952

CALL the roll of the dead nations, name any kingdom or empire you know of, that once knew glory and now is but dust. You will observe, if you know their history, that their ruin began just after a period of special brilliance. It is as if the old proverb were reversed, and the brightest hour came just before the dark. Why is this? One reason is that the glamor and the glory were not what they seemed to be. Beneath the glittering surface of things, the foundations were rotting away. Glory, personal or national, is a brittle thing.

Dr. Foreman

Bang! Want the Empire

YOU do not have to poke about in large volumes of history to find this out. For a small sum you can buy a book that tells the story of the most famous nation of all time,—namely, the Bible, giving the history of the nation called Israel.

Israel was a remarkably short-lived nation. Three kings' reigns spanned its whole history from beginning to end. After, that, Bang! it split into two pieces, indeed into more than two. For not only did it divide into the two kingdoms of the north and of the south, but it disintegrated everywhere.

All the conquests of David were undone. The Empire of Israel (for empire it was) simply went to pieces at every seam. What had been, for a time, the greatest and only empire between the Nile and the Euphrates, fell to pieces fearfully fast. And all that crash occurred immediately after the death of Solomon, that king whose reign is still remembered for its wealth, glamor and magnificance. How could such things be?

Glamor for the Few

PART OF the answer is that the glory didn't spread around very far. There was no middle class, and the gap between Solomon and his crowd at the top, and the peasants on the bottom, was enormous.

Solomon's only known son, Rehoboam, told a mass-meeting of citizens shortly after Solomon's death, "My father beat you with whips." Rehoboam was not trying to blacken his father's memory; he was stating a simple fact. The common man had indeed taken a beating under Solomon.

To build the king's great public works cost money, and needed (in those non-mechanical days) armies of laborers. There was the immensely costly Temple, and then there was the royal palace, larger than the Temple, requiring nearly twice as long to build and no doubt correspondingly expensive; there were other temples, public buildings, pools, water works, fortifications, royal stables at Negiddo and what not. King Solomon found it necessary to work thousands of his people, without pay, one month out of every three.

The fact that about nine tenths of the people were ripe for rebellion within months after Solomon's death, shows that, to say the least, they were not contented and happy. Nations often do die, or blow up, just after periods of "prosperity," but it will generally be found that the prosperity was quite badly distributed. There is little true glory in a nation where a few grow rich upon the poverty of the many.

High Income Bracket

BUT THAT is not the whole story. Even if every one in the country were equally wealthy, it might not be good. Strange as it seems, the Bible is full of warnings, not so often against poverty as against wealth.

The truth about Israel is not that Solomon and his friends prospered while the rest of the nation decayed; the fact is, Solomon and his set were decaying too, not in spite of their wealth but because of it.

The king's annual income has been computed at some nineteen million dollars of our money. We hear that he built temples to other gods besides the true God, all because of his wives' influence. If he had been a poor man, he could not have married those expensive imported princesses. A man with excess income will often mis-spend it, ninety-nine times out of a hundred; and Solomon was not the hundredth man.

Today in America every dollar spent on drink, on gambling, is a surplus dollar, an uneasy dollar. Not that you can in any way wipe out sin by eliminating excessive wealth; but you might remove a lot of temptations.

FARM MORTGAGE DEBT CONTINUES TO RISE

Alabama's farm mortgage debt continued to increase in 1951 for the seventh consecutive year, and on January 1, 1952, totalled $96,164,000, the largest volume in the history of the State.

This statement was made this week by A. S. Miree, Secretary-Treasurer of the Mount Olive National Farm Loan Association. Mr. Miree said this was an increase of 6.7 percent over the size of the farm mortgage debt the previous year.

The Federal Land Bank of New Orleans made 3,669 loans for $13,420,845 in the fiscal year ending July 1, 1952, reported. He said this compared with 3,917 loans for $10,488,133 during the previous year.

The Mt. Olive National Farm Loan Association closed 84 land bank loans during the past year for a total of 772, the secretary-treasurer revealed.

He said more than 61 percent of land bank loans are now being used to refinance debts, while less than 3 percent are used to finance the severe drouth and its effect on farm cash income, he expects to see a further increase in the number and volume of land bank loans.

Mr. Miree said that in view of the purchase of land. About 12 percent are for building and soil improvement.

STATE LIQUOR PROFITS ARE DOWN

State liquor profits were down again last month compared with August, 1951, despite increased sales in the ABC liquor stores.

However, net earnings for the 11 months of this fiscal year are well ahead of those for the comparable period a year ago. Profits through August totaled $11,962,000 compared with $11,976,000 in the previous 11 months.

Last month's profit was $883,555, down $49,169 from $932,725 earned in August, 1951.

Sales at the state stores, however, amounted to $3,150,000, compared with only $2,926,000 in August of last year.

CONTROL INSECTS ON FALL-PLANTED CROPS

About this time of year home gardeners get the urge to plant such crops as turnips, cabbage, collards, rutabagas, and beets.

And worms, plant lice, and many other insects heartily approve— especially if the grower doesn't know about the Auburn-approved garden dust that contains one per cent rotenone.

W. A. Ruffin, API Extension entomologist, says the turnip webworm is one of the worst pests that attacks these crops in the fall. They feed in the buds of beets, cabbage, turnips, and collards. And since they spin a web in which they hide, the worms are not usually noticed until after they have caused serious damage.

Ruffin adds that aphids may attack cabbage and turnips, and large green worms may cause damage to cabbage leaves. All of these pests can be safely and effectively controlled by using the Auburn-approved garden dust. It must be applied every seven to ten days from the time plants are up until cold weather.

SAVE AMPLE SUPPLY OF COTTON PLANTING SEED

Cotton growers who planted breeder or certified seed of recommended varieties should save a good supply of seed for planting next year's crop, believes O. N. Andrews, API Extension Cotton specialist.

He advises farmers to keep seed from getting mixed with other varieties in picking, handling, and ginning. A good plan is to save two bushels for every acre to be planted next year. Seed not used will be better for planting the following year since many seed-borne diseases die in a two-year period.

Rub the inside surface of molds with salad oil before making a gelatine dessert and it will slip out easily.

IMPORTANCE OF LAND CONSERVATION WORK

Land conservation practices are used to get a larger amount of production over a longer period of time, according to S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist.

He further points out that conservation is in sharp contrast to getting maximum production from land in a short period. Therefore, the purpose of conservation is not just the preservation of the land, it's land use that assures a continuous supply of food, fiber, and services from the land.

"In other words," says the specialist, "good land use and conservation consists of using and managing land in such a manner that it will be kept permanently productive."

TRACTOR SAFETY

Tractors are involved in over half of the nation's farm machinery accidents. Safe operation of the three million tractors now used on farms could save hundreds of lives and thousands of serious injuries each year.

MORE PROFIT FROM BERMUDA SOD

Profits from an established Bermuda sod will be increased if the crop is properly fertilized and a clover added.

FREE COTTON SAMPLING

All ginners in the county have made bond and qualified for free sampling of cotton under the Smith-Doxey Act. These gins are Bolton Gin Company, Wilsonville; Parker Gin Company, Harpersville, and Coosa Villey Gin Company, Vincent.

Now that all ginners are cooperating in this worthwhile program we should make full use of the program by getting each bale of cotton sampled. Ask your ginner to sample your bale of cotton. It will help you to know how good a job he has done in ginning your cotton and also what grade and staple you are offering for sale. If you want to put the cotton in the loan you will have the necessary grade for pooling.

SOIL BUILDING

The research of the Alabama Experiment Station covers a period of more than a half century, with the experience of thousands of Alabama farmers show that winter legumes for soil improvement pays off in a big way.

The materials for farmers to do a big job with fall seeded crops appear to be adequate. These include the seed of winter legumes, small grain and ryegrass. It is also expected that there will be an adequate supply of lime, basic slag, and phosphate-potash mixtures for pastures and legumes. Farmers can go along way toward overcoming the drouth by planting these crops for winter grazing, soil building and a grain and hay crop next spring. The rains have come at a good time to get these crops planted. When the grazing crops are up to a good stand they should be topdressed at the rate of 100 pounds of ammonium nitrate per acre.

HOMEMAKERS SET OWN CLEANING STANDARDS

Every housekeeper has her own Standards of cleanliness. When her homefalls below these standards, she is upset.

Alice Peavy, API Extension home management specialist, points out that the pressure of other jobs may make it impossible for her to keep her home as clean as she would like.

When this is the case, usually a definite but flexible plan will help. "Remember that a thin layer of dirt is easily and quickly removed, but an accumulation is hard to remove because it cakes and requires extra time and equipment for cleaning," says Miss Peavy.

"Enlist the cooperation of all family members. A cheerful attitude on the part of the housekeeper makes it easier to get other family members to help," continues the expert. "Give children responsibilities suited to their age. Even a very small child can hang up his clothes if low hooks are provided."

NITRO-NURSED CORN IS NICER — Moniteau County Agent Marvin Fisher holds up two ears of corn grown in the same Missouri patch. Pure sand-soil fertilized only with nitrogen made ears bigger as seen at left. Scrubby ear at right was fed no nitrogen, is thus stunted. Sixty pounds of the chemical was spread over each acre of test ground. Fisher estimates corn at left will yield 45 bushels per acre, rows fed no nitrogen will give only 15.

DIFFERENT TIMES TO ADD SALAD DRESSING

When to add the dressing depends upon the kind of salad being served.

Since French dressing tends to wilt salad greens, Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, recommends that dressing not be added until salad is ready to serve.

One exception to the rule is when meat or a cooked vegetable, mix makes up the salad. When this is the case, many housewives prefer to marinate ingredients in French dressing an hour or two for added flavors.

Perspiration stains on clothing can often be removed by soaking in a strong salt-water solution before the garment is laundered.

FEDERAL LAND BANK LOANS

Interest paid on the farm mortgage debt in the United States in 1951 totalled $284,000,000, or about 9 per cent more than in 1950, A. S. Miree, Secretary-Treasurer, of the Mt. Olive National Farm Loan Association, reported this week. He said the larger amount of the farm mortgage debt outstanding was the main cause of the larger amount paid for interest charged.

Mr. Miree said the average rate of interest for farm mortgage loans held by all lenders was 4.7 percent. The rate of interest on land bank loans is 4 percent.

Because of the low interest rate on land bank loans, Mr. Miree said many farmers who have more short-term obligations than they can conveniently meet are converting their short-term debts into long-term land bank loans.

The index numbers of the average value per acre of farm land in Mississippi increased from 90 in 1935 to 312 in 1952, or nearly 3½ times.

For the same period the gain in Alabama was from 110 to 321, and in Louisiana it advanced from 103 to 260.

Land values are now at the highest level in the history of the country, Mr. Miree stated.

1953 MAID OF COTTON CONTEST OPENS; FINALS IN DECEMBER

The 1953 Maid of Cotton contest is open, according to the National Cotton Council.

Search for the 15th fashion and goodwill ambassadress for King Cotton is under by the Cotton Council, which sponsors the annual contest in cooperation with the Memphis Carnival Association, the Memphis, New York and New Orleans Cotton Exchanges.

The 1953 Maid of Cotton will succeed brown-haired, blue-eyed Pat Mullarkey, 21-year-old Southern Methodist University senior, of Dallas, Texas, who toured more than 65,000 miles on three-continents during seven months this year.

She visited 30 major American cities; Paris, France; Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and Santos, Brazil; Lima, Peru; Panama City, Panama; and was the first Maid of Cotton to tour Canada, visiting Toronto, Quebec and Montreal and Hamilton.

Contest Requirements

The contest is open to girls between the ages of 19 and 25 years who were born in cotton producing states. Contestants must be at least 5 feet 5 inches tall and must never have been married.

Judges will select King Cotton's next flagbearer on the basis of personality, intelligence, poise, background, ability to meet people and appearance.

To enter the contest a girl must first secure an application blank from the National Cotton Council, P. O. Box 18, Memphis 1, Tenn. She must fill out the blank and return it to the Cotton Council with two photographs, one a head and shoulders portrait and the other, a full-length picture. Applications must be post-marked no later than midnight December 1, to be eligible.

Contest Finals

All contestants will be judged by a preliminary committee immediately after the close of the contest. From the entries judges will select approximately 20 finalists.

Contest finalists will then come to Memphis, Tenn., December 29-30, 1952, for personal interviews and appearances before an audience at Ellis Auditorium. A seven-member judging committee, made up of cotton industry leaders with a famous national personality as chairman, will announce the selection of the 1953 Maid of Cotton and her two alternates.

Training Period

Immediately after selection of the Maid, she will go to New York City for a month's intensive modeling training. A group of 25 of the nation's leading designers will create for her a wardrobe of exciting cottons—from bathing suits to evening dresses, for summer and winter wear. The Maid's cotton wardrobe is designed to show the latest trends in high-fashion cotton fabrics for year-round wear.

When her month's training period is completed, the Maid will set out on her exciting six-month tour. She will visit 30 leading American cities, appearing as feature model in all-cotton fashion shows and delivering goodwill greetings from the cotton industry's 13-million members to governors, mayors, city and civic officials wherever she goes.

Report Made On State Tax Study

A report drafted for a special legislative tax study committee is against any attempt to get the state out of the ad valorem (property) tax field.

This is one of the major findings of a report prepared by the Legislative Reference Service for the committee set up by the 1951 Alabama legislature to study the state's taxing system. It had been suggested the state abandon the property tax altogether and leave it to the cities and counties.

There was much speculation along this line during last year's legislature but no definite action was taken to change handling of the levy.

The report recommends Alabama stay in the ad valorem (property) tax field because:

"The state would lose both a considerable amount of revenue and a source of revenue that is elastic and dependable.

"It appears necessary that the state retain some financial interest in the property tax field in order to work diligently and effectively toward a good assessment."

The Reference Service found that: "There is an unwarranted confusion of responsibility for fixing assessments between the tax assessor and the board of equalization."

SLIGHT BOOST IN SOCIAL SECURITY CHECKS NOW IN EFFECT

Congress has raised payments to retired workers, realizing that the dollar is now buying much less than it did when the pension system was set up. For instance, a widower with no children under 18 who earned $3000 or more a year for some time before he retired (his former check was $68.50 will now receive $77.10.

If his wife is still living and is also over 65, they have likely been getting $102.80 per month. Now they will receive $115.70.

The maximum raise is about $8.60 per month. Average $5.00 per month.

These increases, while small to the individual, will total 325 million dollars during the year 1953.

SUPT. WOODROW ELLIOTT IN MONTGOMERY

The Alabama Board of Education met in Montgomery, Wednesday, to allocate the 1952-53 public school appropriations. Sup. Woodrow Elliott, alertly on his job, is in the Capitol City to look after the schools of Shelby county for which cause he has given so many years of his life. No one can think of "educational advantages for the children of Alabama" without associating the name of Woodrow Elliott. The terms are synonomous.

Shelby Countians are more fortunate, than perhaps they realize, in having so worthy an advocator for the advancement and improvement of school facilities and the procurement of capable instructors, as Woodrow Elliott who is making an outstanding record in his official capacity as Shelby County's Superintendent of Education.

HOW MANY PEOPLE WILL VOTE ON NOVEMBER 4?

According to the last compilation of figures in various countries regarding the number of eligible voters who participated in general elections, we find the United States in the lower brackets in comparsion with other countries. Voting percentages given are as follows:

Belgium	90%
Italy	89%
Great Britain	83%
Sweden	80%
France	75%
Canada	75%
Japan	71%

While interest in elections has gone up in Europe, it has gone down in the United States. Here are the figures on the per cent of eligible Americans who have voted in the last half century, in representative election years:

1896	83%
1916	71%
1940	62%
1944	56%
1948	51%

Is the performance in the United States going to drop below 50% on November 4 — or are we going to do at least as well as the Japanese?

I AM A DEMOCRAT—BUT!

We have recently heard the phrase "I am a Democrat... BUT", which could mean anything or nothing. The phrase does not ring true! How much more pleasing to the ears would be the statement, "I Am A Democrat.... and proud of it"!

I have no apologies to make to anyone for my affiliation with the Democratic Party. I shall, like thousands of other Alabama Democrats, unashamedly, with no "ifs" "and" "or buts" cast my ballot for the Party I have all my life believed in, and see no plausible reason for changing. A fellow who takes an interest in politics, usually bases his interest on the principles advocated by the party of his own choosing. The Democratic Principles have proved the best for all the people. It is my Party, and when November 4, comes around, I hope all Democrats will reaffirm their belief in the Democratic Party and vote a straight Democratic Ticket. I fail to see how he or she could do less for a Party which has done so much for the South. Certainly, no one can point to one single consideration the South ever received from a Republican administration.

DR. RICHARD POWERS NEW DEAN AT ALABAMA COLLEGE

Dr. Richard Powers, a 36 year old Virginian, has been chosen to succeed Dean T. H. Napier at Alabama College and will assume his official duties October 6. Dean Napier is now Regional Economist of the Office of Price Stabilization for four Southeastern states and the District of Columbia. He is a graduate of University of Virginia, and held a Rockefeller Fellowship in Economics at Clemson College in South Carolina during 1946.

Formerly an associate professor of Business Administration at Wake Forest College in North Carolina, the new Dean also spent two years on the faculty of Clemson College.

Mr. and Mrs. Powers and young son have arrived in Montevallo where they will make their future home.

VERMAN KIMBROUGH GETS ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION

Verman Kimbrough, formerly of Columbiana, who is now studying voice in Milan, Italy made his debut July 30. Below is the account taken from one of the largest papers in Italy:

"An enthusiastic reception was given Ermano Monti (the name under which Mr. Kimbrough sings) as Conte di Luna in Il Trovatore. He is a young artist blessed with a most beautiful voice which is both powerful and sonorous and which is already well versed in certain phases most difficult, and today most neglected. He was applauded most heartily throughout the evening."

(Mr. Kimbrough is now residing in Sarasota, Florida and director of music at the University.)

He was the winner in a preliminary contest held at the University, September 23. The winner of the state contest will go to Atlanta for final contest.

YOUR NEWSPAPER LIGHTS THE WAY OF FREEDOM

"Your Newspaper Lights The Way of Freedom" blazes across the 40-foot public service display sponsored jointly by the Alabama Press Association and Alabama State Fair authorities for the benefit of visitors to the State Fair September 29 through October 4 in Birmingham.

The display, stressing the right of the citizens to know about their government, is located in the Conservation building beside the grandstand and will be open all through the fair.

The first panel: In Alabama 132 Weekly Newspapers, 17 Daily Newspapers Are Your Eyes and Ears; Reporters of Action and Plans. Signature is "Members of The Alabama Press Association."

The white square is a screen, upon which up-to-date minute news, as received by teletype on the spot from AP, will be projected for the benefit of fair visitors.

The two panels to the right of the screen give the first amendment to the Bill of Rights, U. S. Constitution, and Thomas Jefferson's statement "were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers or newspapers without government I should not hesitate to prefer the latter."

Background for the two end sections of the display (small portions can be seen at the edge of the photo) is made up of enlarged photos of the mastheads of all of Alabama's daily and weekly newspapers. The two panels on the end sections further stress the theme of the people's right to know.

In addition to the pictorial display, copies of all of Alabama's daily and weekly newspapers will be available at the display for all visitors to the fair to peruse.

Bishop Purcell To Dedicate Church At Lester's Chapel

It will be a great day in Chelsea next Sunday, when members of Lester's Chapel, and their friends, gather for the dedicatory service of this House of Worship, which will be conducted by Bishop Clare Purcell.

The occasion will also feature a Home Coming celebration, and all former pastors and members of this historic church, are cordially invited to come, spend the day, and participate in the joy the day holds for those who have worked tirelessly and earnestly for this achievement.

Lester's Chapel was organized and the first service held on this spot where this lovely Chapel now stands, in 1818. This was 134 years ago. Ministers then rode thru the country at various intervals, and could not set a definite day for worship, but, when they arrived in a community, immediately services were held.

The people of Chelsea, thru the years, have preserved this sacred spot, and the present Lester's Chapel building is the third chapel to be erected on this same location. It stands today a beautiful memorial to the courage and the faithfulness of the Methodist members and their friends.

Sunday marks the completion of the building, and all its furnishings have been bought and paid for. The interior of this building is beautiful, presenting a quiet and restful atmosphere. No one entering this building could do so without feeling a reverent attitude. The pews are of natural pine, beautifully finished. The walls are painted a soft shade of blue. The carpeted floors give a luxurious finish to this modern Chapel where each week church school and the worship hour is observed.

Lester's Chapel has approximately 50 members, and Sunday, October 5, will mark the realization of the dream thru the years, which has been kept alive by the wholehearted cooperation and team work exemplified by these loyal members.

The Chapel and the new parsonage have been appraised at $25,000. All indebtedness has been cancelled. The Chapel will be dedicated Sunday, and these valiant soldiers of Christ who have been so generous in their contributions and consistent in their faith have every reason for being justifiable proud of this accomplishment.

A special program is being arranged. A picnic dinner will be served at noon and friends and former members are cordially urged to be present to share with the membership of Lester's Chapel this memorable occasion.

DR. IAN STUART TO ADDRESS COUNTY TEACHERS

Shelby County teachers will visit all of the junior and senior high schools in the county this year. Each of the monthly teachers meetings will be held in a different school.

The meeting on October 2, will be held in the Helena Junior High School. Religious Emphasis Week will be observed in the general assembly program. Dr. Ian Stewart, lecturer and author, will be the guest speaker.

FRED RALEY

Mrs. Mary Lucille Raley
c/o Post Office
Vincent, Alabama

Dear Mrs. Raley:

As your son's Commanding Officer, it gives me great pleasure to inform you that he has been selected Honorman of his Company.

The Honorman is selected by the company from five candidates whose outstanding work in recruit training has been recognized by the company commander. Factors considered for the Honorman are leadership, sportsmanship, military bearing, initiative, response to orders, cleanliness, a good shipmate, and an outstanding individual in all phases of recruit training.

The Honorman certificate is awarded with appropriate naval ceremony at the brigade parade by the Commanding Officer or a visiting dignitary.

I know you must feel a justifiable pride in your son's achievement and I wish to extend to you my personal congratulations. Your son has proven that he has all the qualities of a good citizen and is a credit to the Naval service and his country.

D. I. THOMAS
Captain, U. S. Navy

ALABAMA COLLEGE CONVOCATION SPEAKER

Speaking to the Alabama College students at convocation Tuesday morning, Mrs. George P. Dean, Montgomery civic leader, urged college educated people to take their places as leaders in their communities.

"We who would maintain our intellectual vigor must become aware that we cannot depend upon the movement of the crowd to carry us along," Mrs. Dean said.

In defining the title of her talk, "The Good Life," Mrs. Dean referred to "the good life of the mind, the rewarding adventure of learning, the seeking out of those deep sources of strength and happiness which have fed the human spirit through the ages."

Mrs. Dean served three years as national president of Alpha Omicron Pi, and in this capacity gained experience in working with college women. A Phi Beta from Northwestern University, Mrs. Dean is the second speaker on the Alabama College Convocation series for the 1952-53 school year.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR:

Will Kirby had reasons for hating Indians. The two women in his young life had both fallen victims to the savages. Ann Randall, who loved him, was ambushed while floating downriver with her family. Mary Bolden, who had promised to marry him, was either killed or taken prisoner after her family and an entire settlement was massacred. He is a hardened frontiersman when he leaves the settlements for the backwoods, intent on killing Indians whenever possible, and searching their camps until he finds Mary Bolden and gets revenge. The trappers passing in and out of Pittsburgh bring in more stories about the strange woodsman.

CHAPTER XIV

All agreed that he was something of a genius in the uncanny knack he had developed of raiding Indian camps. One old fellow claimed to have met him in the woods. "Jest a younker," he said. "Nice feller to talk but dead sot on killin' Injuns. Does a right handsome job of it, too. The redskins call him Silent Death. They claim he can go into a redskin camp durin' the night and knife the whole party—even when they got guards posted."

There was more in the same vein, interrupted only when a lean man in buckskins pushed in through the doorway. At once an alligator-horse howled his recognition. "Hi-yah, Will! Where in hell ye been keepin' yerself?"

Morgan smiled slowly and stepped across to shake hands. There was a moment of silence and then the old trapper whispered loudly, "That's the feller. Old Silent Death himself."

Will frowned troubledly and faced the older man. "Don't talk like that," he said quietly. "You don't think I enjoy this sort of thing, do you?"

The Law Closes In On the Indian Killer

A strained silence filled the room and the boatman rose to the occasion. "Kirby's been lookin' fer ye, Will. He told me to bring ye down to camp if I met ye."

Will nodded. "Sure. I've just got time."

At the pack camp Morgan spent a pleasant evening but he was firm in his decision to return to the woods. "I just came in for ammunition and supplies," he said soberly. "Now I've got to get back. Double job on hand now."

At Kirby's questioning glance he explained. "Remember that yellow-haired girl we saw in the village near Lake Erie? Well, I worked back that way and saw her again. I'm sure she's Ann Randall. I was going to get her away but I was running out of powder and I didn't dare try anything unless I was sure I could fight my way out."

Events moved slowly at the forks of the Ohio after Morgan went back into the forests. It was known that Wayne had moved his army downstream during the spring floods and had established a new camp outside Fort Washington. Since it was the only bit of land above water when he arrived he dubbed the place Hobson's Choice. There with the aid of his drill masters, notably an able young lieutenant named William Henry Harrison, he was whipping up a crack force of some twenty-five hundred men. The army had to remain idle, however, as the government made another attempt to secure a treaty.

Already an agreement had been reached with the Wabash and Illinois tribes, giving renewed hope of some sort of treaty with the Miamis. Also a commission had gone to Niagara where they hoped to work through the Mohawk chief Joseph Brant. Pending results from either venture Wayne was to make no moves except those necessary to defense of the settlements.

Then there was a lull with no news at all. Finally Kirby arrived at Pittsburgh once more, carrying a special pass from Wayne and ostensibly on official business. He took up his quarters at the pack camp, however, and proceeded to know exactly nothing.

Word came that the Niagara commission had failed completely. Brant and the English were encouraging the Miamis to stand firm in their demand that the Northwest Territory should remain Indian land. The commissioners even brought back an insolent demand that Wayne should be instructed to cease his operations against war parties and that certain white trappers should be arrested for their violation of Indian rights. One white man in particular was described as having committed numberless murders of peaceful Indians. The tribes insisted upon his arrest and punishment.

Frontier disgust rose to a new peak when this ultimatum became known and Kirby dropped some of his reticence about his own duties. "The General knew it was comin'," he told Patterson. "That's why he sent me. I'm supposed to git hold o' Will before some shirttail politician tries to use him to soothe the redskins."

A week later a United States Marshal arrived at the forks bearing a warrant for the arrest of an unnamed trapper. With him was a courier carrying orders that Wayne should cease all operations which might affront the Indians.

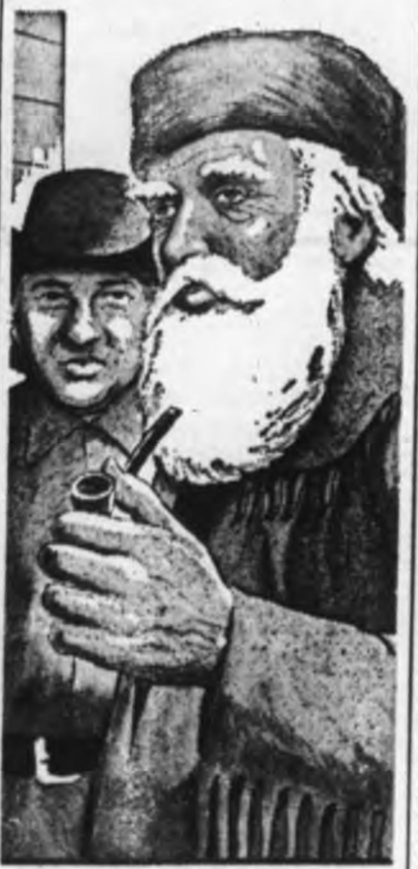
It was evening of the following day when Morgan arrived in town. Kirby had gone out to the pack camp and received word from one of his friends. He headed for the White Crane promptly but the marshal was even more prompt. As Kirby strode up to the door he heard the officer's voice ask, "Are you the man they call Silent Death?"

"Don't tell him!" Kirby yelled as he rushed into the inn. It gave him a start to see what the summer had done to Will Morgan. The young man was gaunt and weary-looking, his eyes showing signs of strain and suffering. Evidently he had not conducted his private campaign without damage to himself.

Will did not seem to hear the warning. He merely smiled thinly at the marshal. "I suppose I am," he said quietly. "It's not a pretty name but . . ."

"Then I arrest you by order of the President of the United States."

Morgan's smile faded. "Arrest?" he repeated. "Why?"



One old fellow claimed to have met him in the woods. "Jest a younker," he said. "Nice feller to talk, but dead set on killin' Injuns."

"Murder of friendly Indians—at the request of the Northern Confederacy of Indian Tribes."

Will stared unbelievingly for a moment. Then the officer stepped forward. At the same moment Kirby jumped in with a yell. "Look out, boys! He's goin' to hit the marshal. Help!"

The other men seemed to understand. There was a wild scramble, half a dozen men putting on a show of protecting the bewildered marshal while Kirby pretended to overpower Will and force him toward the door. Will went readily enough, the ardent protectors having a glorious time defending the hapless official.

Will Morgan Escapes By Joining Gen. Wayne

Kirby led the way to a small boat which he had provided for just such an emergency and they were well downstream when the marshal appeared on the bank behind them. Only when they were completely clear of the town did Kirby ask the question which had been bothering him.

"What happened to ye this time?"

Will shook his head. "Everything—and nothing. I couldn't find any trace of Mary and when I worked back to the Lake Erie country I was just as unlucky. They've either killed Ann Randall or taken her to some other part of the territory. I stayed around too long and almost got taken."

He displayed a newly healed knife wound across his lower ribs. "It was a close one," he said grimly.

"Ye've had enough o' that business," Kirby told him earnestly. "I got a better proposition fer ye." He outlined Wayne's plans as he knew them, stressing the fact that a well organized scout troop might succeed where a single scout had failed.

Will heard him through and nodded wearily. "I'll go," he said simply. "It's still a hope."

When they entered the new camp after a brisk jaunt northward Morgan's eyes widened. Here was something different.

Kirby saw the appreciative glance of his companion and remarked proudly, "Looks sorta different from the huddles o' sick greenhorns what passed fer a army with St. Clair, hey?"

Will eyed the pacing sentinels and watched the maneuvers of a couple of squads being put through their paces. "Those men know how to drill," he said with an admiring nod.

Kirby smiled condescendingly. General Wayne spoke seriously to Morgan. "I've been hearing great tales about you, young fellow. It seems to me that a man of your talents should be employed where he can do himself and the country more good. The Legion needs men who understand Indian warfare. Will you join us?"

Will nodded quickly. "That's why I came," he replied. "I still owe the Indians plenty and I want any kind of service that will give me a chance to get into Indian country."

"That's where we're all going," Wayne smiled. "Sign your name on this paper and we'll call it a deal."

He settled back on a crude chair as Will signed the paper and returned it. "Good. Now let's get down to business. I presume you know something of our situation now. We may get orders permitting an advance at any time but when the time comes we must know something of the strength of the enemy. Where are the Indians concentrating their strength? Will they get help from the western tribes or will it be just the Miamis we will face? Will the British supply them with munitions? I'm particularly worried about that English post at the point of Lake Erie. It bids fair to be a real trouble spot if the campaign goes in the way I expect."

Morgan smiled thinly. "I've been around their villages more than I like to think about. I've made it a point to hear their talk—because I always hoped to learn something that would help me. I didn't have much luck on my own account but I did pick up some facts that give me some ideas about their campaign plans."

He hesitated briefly and went on, "I'll scout back and work on that matter if you want me to."

A Dangerous Adventure Begins to Take Shape

"That's a terrific risk," the general began. Then suddenly he turned toward a dispatch case which hung on the wall. Failing to find the object of his search in it he shouted, "Orderly! Send Peters in with the papers he'll find in my greatcoat pocket."

"I'm taking your offer," he told Will briskly. "I want you to see our maps so you can observe the things that I want most to know."

There was a scuffle of feet outside the hut and they could hear someone approaching who evidently walked with considerable trouble. Then the door opened and a man in the uniform of a Legion private entered. He was hideously scarred about the face, red welts under the eyes attesting to painful injuries there while one ear was entirely gone and the other was horribly mangled. He walked with one foot dragging quite badly and there were fingers missing on either hand.

He advanced to the table and deposited a bundle of papers before the commander, apparently paying no attention to anyone. As he turned to go, however, he came face to face with Will Morgan. Instantly the battered features were contorted into an expression of hatred which baffled description. "It's him!" he gasped, almost strangled by his emotions. "What's that devil doin' here?"

Wayne raised his voice to a shout, making allowance for the crippled man's deafness. "What's wrong, Peters?"

"It's him!" the man repeated. "It's the devil what done all this to me."

"Did what? Who do you mean?"

"White Panther. I know the dirty butcher!"

Wayne looked uneasily at his new recruit. This man was known to disappear frequently into the wilderness where no other white man could remain alive. Was it possible that the raiding stories were a clever blind for some Indian espionage?

Kirby had also started uneasily, remembering the result of a previous incident like this. When it became apparent that Will was merely disturbed and sorry for the soldier he turned his attention to the general, apparently reading the suspicion in his eyes. "Look alike," he said shortly. "We heard about it before. Where did this feller see White Panther?"

Wayne did not seem completely convinced but he replied readily enough. "Peters was on picket duty with Harmar's force and was captured. He was being tortured in one of the St. Mary's villages when Harmar's second attack came, rescuing him before the savages could kill him. You can see what they did."

The soldier pointed again at Will Morgan. "That's the chief what did it," he insisted. "I seen him without his war paint jest before they started cuttin' fingers off. He told me in plain enough English that he was goin' to kill off every white man in the territory."

Kirby grunted in satisfaction. "That lets Will out, sojer. He was at Fort Washington with me when Harmar hit the St. Mary's towns. Likewise he was with St. Clair's army all the time when we know White Panther was leadin the Injuns."

Wayne nodded excitedly, a strange light in his eyes. "Morgan," he said sharply, "do you think you could manage to pass yourself off as White Panther among the Indians? It would be the finest way in the world to get the information we want."

Will bowed an affirmative, ignoring Kirby's, "Finest way in the world to git killed, ye mean!"

It was decided that Morgan and Kirby should do a little distant foraging in order to get the mission under way before the winter came on.

Bible Comment:

The Golden Rule Means World Peace Is Not Impossible

STANDARDS, when used in the discussion of Christianity, can refer to either one of a pair of very vital things. One is the standard of conduct laid down by Christian principles. This is best revealed in the "Golden Rule."

Other standards used are banners and signs designating the church itself and its principles. During the crusades when many European Christians fought and died in the Holy Land, these standards were often the inspiration for many heroic deeds.

They are also mentioned in the line from a famous hymn: "Raise high the royal standard, it must not suffer loss."

Jesus put much stress on the other standard, pointing out a rule of conduct when he urged us to: "Be perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect."

But true standards of conduct are not applicable to people alone. They extend to the nation, even to the whole world: How different history might have been if these principles of human conduct had been applied in every case where avarice and greed ruled instead.

The standards of Christian conduct could well serve as the foundation of a new and better world. Nor are these standards different than those stressed by the other great religions of the world. Basic concepts of goodness and justice are the same everywhere and each religion has its variation of the golden rule.

Truly, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," is the best way to insure international harmony and peace. We should put this standard into action today.

In the late 1890's and early 1900's, the splendid success of the cultivation of sugarcane in the Wiregrass led to the prediction that this section would become a great sugarcane area, surpassing even the can fields of Louisiana.

George Richard Harless, Complainant,

Vs.

Mary Harless, Respondent,

In this cause it being made to appear to the Register by affidavit of George Richard Harless, Complainant in this cause, that the Respondent's place of residence is unknown and that he has made diligent inquiry and search trying to locate her but has been unable to do so and it is not known whether she is a resident of Alabama, or a non-resident; and further that the Respondent is over twenty-one years of age; it is therefore ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Shelby County Reporter-Democrat, a newspaper published in Columbiana, Alabama, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring the said Mary Harless to plead, answer, or demur to the bill of complaint in this cause by the 23rd day of October, 1952, or in thirty days thereafter a decree pro confesso may be taken against her.

This the 23rd day of September, 1952.

Pauline Bird, Register

Sept. 25, Oct. 2-9-16, 1952

The growth of mining and manufacturing and the building of railroads were the outstanding developments in Alabama's economic history between 1880 and 1900. Coal was being mined in Alabama at a lower cost than in any other state, and iron ore was being produced at 82 cents per ton, as compared to $1.10 in Pennsylvania.

NOTICE

Notice Of Sale of $285,000 Principal Amount Of 4% Gas System Revenue Bonds Of The Town Of Columbiana, Alabama.

The Town Council of the Town of Columbiana will meet at 11 o'clock, A. M. on October 7, 1952, in the Town Hall of Said Town for the purpose of conducting a public sale at auction of $285,000 Principal amount of 4% Gas System Revenue Bonds of the Town of Columbiana, said bonds to be dated June 1, 1952, and to mature on June 1 in each of the following years in the following amounts: $5,000 in each of the years 1955 to 1957, inclusive; $6,000 in each of the years 1958 to 1961, inclusive; $8,000 in each of the years 1962 to 1965, inclusive; $10,000 in each of the years 1966 to 1969, inclusive; $12,000 in each of the years 1970 to 1976, inclusive; and $15,000 in each of the years 1977 to 1982, inclusive. Said Bonds shall bear interest at the rate of four per cent (4%) per annum, payable December 1, 1952 and semi-annually thereafter on June 1 and December 1 in each year until paid. The Bonds which mature in 1963 and thereafter shall be redeemable, at the option of the Town of Columbiana, on June 1, 1962, or on any interest payment date thereafter, in whole or in part, but if in part, shall be in the inverse order of maturities and identification numbers, latest maturities and highest numbers first, and any redemption shall be at a redemption price equal to the par value thereof, plus accrued interest thereon to the redemption date plus a redemption premium which shall be equal to ¼ of 1% of the par value of each Bond to be redeemed for each year or fraction thereof from the date fixed for redemption to the date of each Bond to be redeemed, provided, however, that said redemption premium for any Bond redeemed shall in no event exceed 4% of the par value of such Bond.

Each bidder will be required to deposit $5,700 in cash or a certified check for $5,700 payable to the order of the Town of Columbiana, with the Town Treasurer to assure his purchase of and payment for the Bonds if awarded to him. All deposits will be returned at the conclusion of the sale except that of the successful bidder. Should the successful bidder fail to purchase and pay for the Bonds as required, his deposit shall be retained by the Town of Columbiana as liquidated damages.

The Town will furnish printed Bonds, legal opinions and pay other expenses connected with the issuance and sale of the Bonds. The Town Council shall have the right to reject all bids. The Bonds are to be subject to the legal opinion of Thompson, Dumas, O'Neal and Hayes, of Birmingham, Alabama.

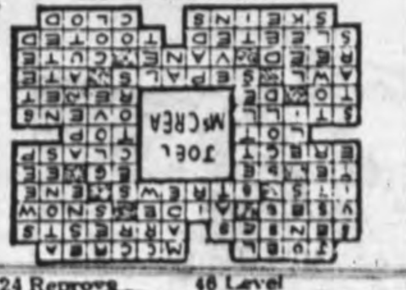
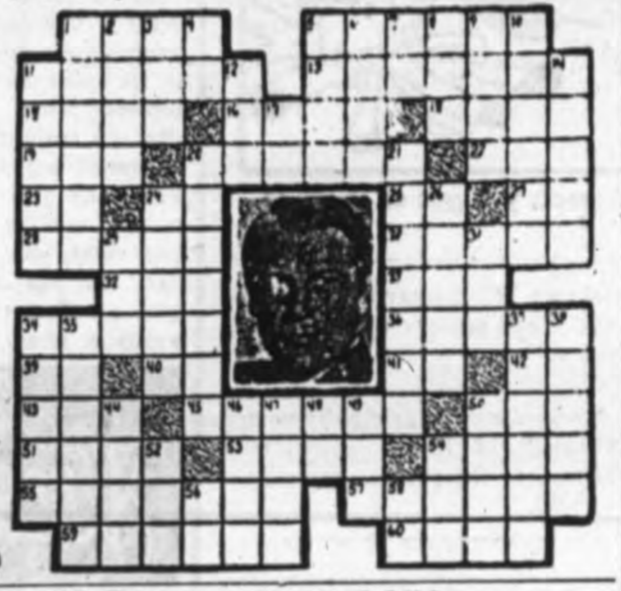
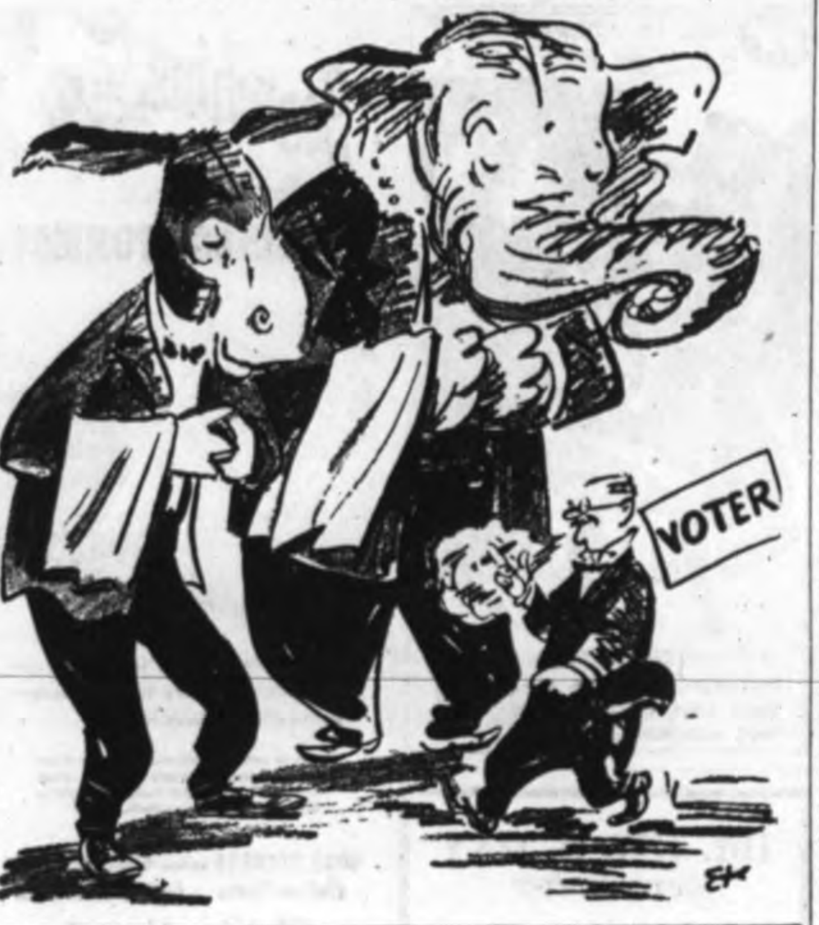
Here's the Answer





Man of Distinction—1952



ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

B.F. HATCHETT & G.C. STARCHER JR

We don't know anyone who says that his new auto is NO GOOD because it quits running when its first tank of gas gives out.

Neither do we know anyone who refuses to use a checking account for the sole reason that he has to PUT MORE IN if he wishes to continue drawing money out.

WE DO KNOW some people who expect certain pasture crops to furnish continuous grazing without replacing plant foods and minerals.

One Ky. 31 Fescue pasture we wrote about nearly three years ago in this column is an example. At that time dairy records showed good milk production on fescue, and the dairyman was well pleased.

The next year, still unfertilized, results were fair.

This year, although the fescue is making good growth, the dairy records show a decrease in milk production when the cattle are grazing the still unfertilized (though slagged) fescue.

The farmer has ignored the fact that nitrogenous fertilizers make proteins, and proteins are necessary for milk production.

The suggested solution: Replace used up nitrates and minerals just as you refill your gas tanks, directly in proportion to the amount of use.

The checking account comparison is a little inaccurate, as we draw a little less from accounts that we put in, due to various charges, but, thanks to the miracle growth, water, sunshine, bacteria, and some natural soil fertility we can draw from the land far more than we put in, as long as we help maintain the proper balance.

WILSONVILLE

ELIZABETH WELDON

Everyone seemed to enjoy the fair. The needle work was beautiful and so was the flower exhibit. We thought the old fashioned baby clothes were especially interesting. The hobbies and scout exhibits were too. In fact, they all were. We were proud of our canned foods. Then we all had so much fun at the home talent program Saturday evening.

Sonny Helms and his wife, formerly Wynona Richards, have returned from Hawaii. Sonny was called back because of the serious illness of his mother, Mrs. J. F. Helms.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lyon on the arrival of a son.

The W. S. C. S. will hold a rummage sale Saturday at the former J. F. Pope Co. building. There will be many good used clothes.

The Baptist congregation recently visited the Methodist Church and we enjoyed a joint service.

Mrs. O. F. Lokey is visiting relatives in Hattisburg, Miss.

Mrs. S. T. Darrell of Mobile is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Story.

The M. Y. F. met with Mrs. A. B. Gould for a picnic supper and program in the pine grove at Mrs. Gould's home Sunday evening.

Miss Maggie Lou Garrett was home for the week end and brought a friend, Miss Barbara Roberts, with her.

Walter Carlson, Allen Revis, Don Whitten, Jerry Cross and Tommy King attended the scout leadership school in Tuscaloosa.

We are glad to have Don Beavers home again. We understand that he can now stay at home, and drive to his work.

Miss Lightsey and Miss Collins from Columbiana attended our fair and assisted Mrs. Juanita Williams and Mrs. John Vardaman in judging our exhibits. We appreciate their help and enjoyed having them with us.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Addison of Birmingham were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Wolf Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Whitten are enjoying a ten day vacation in the Smokies.

We welcome our new teacher, Mr. Bill Hollis. Mr. Hollis is a resident of Bethel and has recently graduated from Auburn.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Nath Mooney, father of Mr. B. B. Mooney.

Don Roberson, who is stationed at Patrick Air Force Base, Cocoa, Florida, was hurt recently and spent some time in the hospital, but is better now.

The Baptist Young Men's Bible class met at the school lunch room and enjoyed a steak fry. We heard that they have some good cooks in their class.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Lokey of Birmingham were here and attended our fair.

We are glad to have Mr. Kelley Stone who has been in Germany back home again.

Mr. and Mrs. John Vardaman Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bennett Vardaman of Selma were here for the week end.

We shall miss Mrs. Roy Moore and children who have moved to Camp Lejune, N .C., where Mr. Moore is stationed.

Mrs. Will Bentley and Mrs. Margarette Smith and daughters were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Story Sunday.

The young people of the Methodist Church had an ice cream supper Friday.

Mr. John Vardaman has gone to Chicago on a business trip.

Mrs. Annie Smith has returned from a visit with her sister, Mrs. Hunt and Mr. Hunt in Memphis, Tenn.

Rev. Palmer from Howard College brought enspiring messages at the Baptist Church Sunday morning and evening.

TEN RULES FOR LIVING ACCORDING TO N. E. A. MAGAZINE

1. Keep skid chains on your tongue. Always say less than you think.

2. Make promises sparingly and keep faithfully, no matter what it costs you.

3. Never let an opportunity pass to say a kind and encouraging thing to or about somebody. Praise good work done regardless of who did it.

4. Be interested in others, interested in their pursuits, their welfare, their homes and their families. Make merry with them that rejoice, and mourn with those who weep. Let everyone you meet, however, humble, feel that you regard him as a person of importance.

5. Be cheerful. Keep the corners of your mouth turned up. Hide your pains, worries, and disappointments under a pleasant smile.

6. Preserve an open mind on all debatable questions. Discuss but don't argue. It is the mark of superior minds to disagree and yet be friendly.

7. Let your virtues, if you have any, speak for themselves and refuse to talk of another's vices. Discourage gossip. Make it a rule to say nothing of another unless it is something good.

8. Be careful of other's feelings. Wit and humor at the other fellow's expense are rarely worth the effort and may hurt where least expected.

9. Pay no attention to ill-natured remarks about you; simply live so that nobody will believe them.

10. Don't be too anxious about getting your just dues. Do your work, be patient, keep your disposition sweet, forget self and you will be respected and rewarded.

MARINE WANTS SHOES

Postal regulations are the cause of one Marine's troubles in Korea and he can't complain about them. Pfc. Ronald W. Clarke of Long Island, N. Y. wrte home for a pair of leather boots.

His father purchased the boots, wrapped them and took them to the post office for mailing.

A two pound limit on airmail packages to Korea made a rewrapping job necessary.

The Marine's Dad finally mailed the boots, one to a package. Sofar only one package has arrived. Clarke now has a new boot for his left foot, none for the other.

He can't complain at the mail tent as other Leathernecks do, for his job is - mail clerk, 1st Battalion, Fifth Marines.

HOW TO PREPARE CHRISTMAS PACKAGES FOR OVERSEAS MAIL

The period Oct. 15 to Nov. 15 has again been designated for the acceptance of Christmas parcels for members of our Armed Forces serving outside the continental United States with the concurrence of the several Departments of the National Military Establishment.

It is expected that many parcels will be mailed this year and the following instructions have, therefore, been issued with the view of assuring delivery of the gift parcels on time and in good condition.

1. Foodstuffs subject to spoilage and breakage should not be sent overseas since military personnel are well supplied with food by the Armed Services.

2. The regular size and weight for domestic surface parcel post are applicable to Christmas parcels for the Armed Forces except that a limit not to exceed 50 lbs. has been established for parcels addressed for delivery thru A. P. O.'s 22, 120, 124, 125, 125-B, 147, 179, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, and 755, care of Postmaster N. Y., N. Y.

3. Boxes for overseas transmissions must be strong construction. It is absolutely necessary that all articles be packed in boxes of metal, wood, solid fiberboard, or strong double faced corrugated fiberboard. Each box should be securely tied with strong cord, preferably by four separate pieces, two length and two cross, knotted at crossing. Boxes should contain sufficient cushioning material so that the contents will be tightly packed to prevent any rattling or loosening of the articles within the parcels. Unless completely packed and tightly filled, boxes are likely to be crushed. It is also deisrable that all fiberboard boxes be securely wrapped in heavy paper, which strengthens the package. They should be tied as above suggested before and after applying the heavy paper.

4. Matches of all kinds and lighter fluid may not be mailed overseas. Cigaretts and other tobacco are prohibited if addressed for delivery in certain military post offices. Inquiry should be made of your local Post Office before including these in any package.

5. Addresses must be in typewriting or ink. It is preferab that the outside address be har printed directly on the wrappe of the boxes rather than on labe pasted to the wrappers, since t labels frequently fall off. The a dress should show in addition the name and address of send the name including the full fir name, middle or initial, grad service number, branch of servi A. P. O. number of the addresse and the post office through whi the mail is to be routed.

G.I.'S GET CASH

American frontline fighting men in Korea get a look-see at their first combat pay. Warrant Officer Jasper Holliday of Greenwood, S. C., checks PFC's John Badger and Howard Greenbaum of Philadelphia, Pa., and New York City, off the Army payroll as the pair become first to get the extra $45 due them under new regulations. Any soldiers in the Korean main line of resistance for any six days of a month under direct enemy artillery fire are entitled to the bonus. "It looks good," agree Badger and Greenbaum. Below, a smart-looking squad of Egyptian G.I.'s get candy as they pay a holiday call on their leader, Egypt's Premier Gen. Mohammed Naguib. In honor of the visit, the general passes out choice English chocolates to the boys who seem every bit as happy at the handout as the Americans above.

CANDY TO EGYPTIANS

'AND DARK AND TRUE AND TENDER IS THE NORTH'

Tennyson's lines seem apt in describing this graceful stranger from the cold, far north sighted from U. S. Coast Guard cutter Eastwind. The heavy-duty ice breaker spotted the berg as the ship crunched her way through ice fields to the Canadian-American weather station at Alert on the northern tip of Ellesmere Island. Bergs like this one break off their mother glacier, drift down to threaten North Atlantic shipping lanes.

CARD OF THANKS

To Our Friends:

May we take this opportunity to thank each of you for the countless courtesies extended us during Mr. Stinson's recent illness. Your many cards expressing personal interest; the lovely flowers, and phone calls at the hospital will never be forgotten.

We desire especially to express our gratitude to the Rev. A. D. Wilson, who kept constant vigil with us during the long and anxious hours.

Assuring you of our hearts deepest appreciation, we remain,

Sincerely yours,
Bertie and Neal Stinson

ALABAMA * * * * HIGHLIGHTS

Though many people believe "Alabama" to mean "Here we rest," the late Rev. Allen Wright, a highly educated Choctaw, translates the name as "Thicket-clearers", compounded of "Alba", a thicket or mass of vegetation, and ~~"amo" to clear to collect~~, to gather up.

John Anthony Winston, the fifteenth governor of the State of Alabama, was the first native Alabamian to hold that office. Prior to the election of Winston as the state's chief executive in 1853, Alabama's governors were natives of other states. Virginia contributed six of the 14 governors before Winston. North Carolina was next with three. Tennessee and South Carolina each gave two. One of the 14 before Winston came from Georgia.

Lamar county was originally named "Jones" county, was later changed to "Sanford" county and finally wa changed to Lamar county February 8, 1877, in honor of L. Q. C. Lamar of Mississippi.

The Flag of the Confederate states legally established was the "stars and bars" which was adopted by the Convention of Confederate States at Montgomery, Ala., on March 4, 1861, the same day Lincoln became President of the United States. It was designed by Major Orren Randolph Smith of Louisburg, N. C. and was reported to the convention by William Porcher Miles, president of North Carolina College. Later this design was changed since it resembled the national flag.

Confederate coinage was a silver half-dollar which was produced at the New Orleans mint in 1861. Only four pieces were minted. On the obverse was the Confederate shield with a Liberty Cap with a wreath of sugar cane and cotton branches. On the reverse side was the regular United States die.

Geneva County was named in honor of Geneva, Switzerland.

PERSONS NAMES OCTOBER PTA MEMBERSHIP MONTH

Gov. Gordon Persons has designated October as Parent-Teacher Membership Month in Alabama.

Mrs. D. D. Black, president, and Mrs. Guy Ray, state membership chairman, have set up plans for an intensive campaign in 896 Parent-Teacher Associations in every county of Alabama.

Dr. W. J. Terry, state superintendent of education; Miss Frances Nungester, president Alabama Education Association, and Mrs. Elizabeth McFadden, president Alabama Elementary Principals, have urged parents of school children to join.

Morgan county, originally named "Cotaco", of Indian origin, was changed to the present name June 14, 1821.

SHOPPING

I needed a new frying pan,
I needed a new crock,
I needed very much a new
Plain gingham frock.

I took my silver in my hand
And started in to town:
I planned to buy the crock and pan
And the gingham gown.

The shops were glittering with things
Of beauty and of grace:
I saw a little silver fan,
I saw a golden vase.

I did not reach the counter where
They kept the crocks and pans;
I could not pass the vases by
I could not leave the fans.

I bought the little golden vase,
I bought the fan and went Home again, within my hands
Not a single cent.

And still I need a frying pan,
The other needs are there;
But I have two such lovely things,
And I simply do not care!

I do not know who wrote the above poetic description of a "shopping trip", but it so closely resembles all of mine, it holds personal appeal.

For instance, I had an occasion to take a "day off" last week to purchase some "essential things for the house". The shops were filled with such intriguing things, I failed to see how anyone could think of practical kitchen "pots and pans". All the new costume jewelry gadgets. The colorful dresses, coats, sweaters, blouses, etc, temptingly displayed, all heralding the approaching Fall Season.

The men are growing fashion-wise, too, and they have not been forgotten. The old saying that "a man's wearing apparel changes, but little from season to season," is no longer true. I talked with the head buyer of one of the largest haberdasheries in Montgomery last week, and he showd me a selection of the new Fall suits for "the well dressed gentleman". The top coats were of soft shades of tweeds, checks, featuring russet leather buttons. The lines match the new "slim-look" in the two-button coat suit styles. Gray and Brown seem to be predominating colors. The ties, too, are "slim". They range in width from 2½ to 2¾ inches to conform with that clean, sharp look in men's clothing. Wild spiraling designs have replaced the smaller and more conservative patterns. The Dior models we saw, were exclusive patterns and retailed for $10.00 per! Many of them had white backgrounds, providing a dramatic emphasis to dark suits now being shown. Soft shades appear in this neckwear featuring copper, rust, gray, mahogony and plum.

The newest style in hats, for the "gentlemen" presented a narrow brim, crushed crown in dark brown closely stitched brim, with a navy blue gros grain band. Really different and quite snazzy!

The jewel toned velveteen dresses for mi-lady were gorgeous, but the sports suits, toppers and oriental colored silks were just "out of this world." Now, please tell me who on earth could purchase "essential things for the culinary department, amid all this splendor? Not I! We finally arrived home with a Trafari jeweled "Donkey". We named him "Stevenson", and we have just had the pleasure (after meeting Fred Allen on Main this morning, actively sponsoring "General Ike" for President) of flashing "Steve" from his perch on the lapel of my coat. "Steve'," naturally, symbolizes exactly where my cross mark will be placed when November 4, comes around. So, Fred did not take up much time with me.

Foolish purchase, you say? Perhaps, but we had a good time, just "shopping around".... and those pots and pans, can wait until we need another excuse to go to town!

... Mighty glad to include pretty Nelle Sloan (Mrs. Frank) on our long list of weekly readers this week. Enjoyed her little pop call, too. Always good to see Nell, Frank and Little Anita.

... Mrs. Corley, mother of Mrs. L. H. Ellis, continues ill at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis in Columbiana.

CONGRATULATIONS LT. FRED AUSTIN

Lt. Fred Austin left Columbiana, Thursday, with the expectation that his next assignment would be Korea. Fred Austin is a soldier who deserves wholehearted congratulations on his outstanding achievement. He rose from a Private in the U. S. Army (on his own bootstraps).... to an assignment in Officers Training School, and has just received his commission as a Second Lieutenant in Artillery Division.

Fred Austin is what I call a splendid representative of the courage, a typical all American soldier, possesses. He merits our highest admiration, not only as a soldier, but as a swell young fellow whom we knew when in Shelby High, where he was one of the most popular students. He was a member of Class of 1948.

Fred received his basic training at Camp Chaffee, and Officers Training at Ft. Sill. Before entering the Army, Fred had one year at Auburn. After completing his officers training, the young Lieutenant was chosen by high officials to accompany them to Alaska for one month's observation tour. Since then he has been stationed at Camp Rucker, and from this point will receive his overseas assignment.

The good wishes of a host of friends followed the handsome officer as he left Columbiana Thursday morning. This writer has told a number of soldiers, sailors, marines, and aviators goodbye, but never have we been able to go thru it, without a terrific tug at our heart strings, and a battle to keep away the tear drops. They are so young, so keenly aware of the dangers into which they go, yet so brave!

Forget them not as they go to fight again for you and me. They deserve everything we, here at home, can do for them. One talk with soldiers like Fred Austin will make anyone a better patriot!

BAKE SALE ANNOUNCED BY VIGNETTES

A "Bake Sale" will be held Saturday, October 11, 1952, at the Gulf Service Station in Columbiana, from nine o'clock A. M. until eleven-thirty A. M. Cakes, Pies, Candy and Cookies will be offered by members of the Vignette Club who will appreciate your patronage on this occasion.

... Friends of Mrs. H. H. Bearden will be glad to learn she has returned to her home in Columbiana from a hospital in Birmingham.

... Mr. and Mrs. Dan Cosby and Sallie Cosby have left Klein to spend the winter in their home in Sarasota, Florida.

... Lt. Dick Fulton, son of Frank Fulton, received a warm welcome home this week having completed Officers Training Course, and has been assigned to Maxwell Field in Montgomery. We appreciate a personal visit from Dick during his visit in Columbiana. He is a splendid fellow, who has made an outstanding record at the University, and will doubtless continue making a name for himself in military circles.

... Ralph Hunt Jr., has entered the U. S. Army and is taking basic training at Ft. Jackson, South Carolina.

... Dr. Sam Shafferman of Birmingham, spent Thursday in Columbiana, indulging in his favorite past-time.... fishing!

... Mrs. Rosa Teague, Mrs. Nell Wallace and Mrs. Dan Cosby visited in Columbiana Friday.

... The Rummage Sale held each week by Ladies of the Methodist Church has been moved to the apartment across from Dr. Crawford's office on Main. Many useful and wearable articles await your inspection at bargain prices.

... Here's hoping the rumor that Peggy, Jerald and Stan Edwards are moving back to Birmingham, is not true!

... Saturday while everybody else was vacating Main to follow the Auburn boys in their tilt for the pigskin, we.... like the "good little pig" stayed home, but, there was compensation for this, as friends from over the county came to town to shop, and "talk politics" and we are always eager to hear what our own people are thinking, politically!

Mr. and Mrs. Spiegel of Helena Rt. 1, were numbered among our interesting conversationalists. Mr. Spiegel states he is 76 years of age, but, he certainly does not look it. He continues actively engaged in business and is certainly up to the minute in current news happenings. Enjoyed talking with the Spiegels and hope next time they are in Columbiana, they will make us a return "pop" call.

... Next in our good things to remember from last Saturday, we had the privilege of greeting Addye C. Head up from Wilton, and meeting Mrs. Lewis.... a sister of Mr. O. P. Head's, about whom we had heard many wonderful things, thru the years, but had not had the pleasure of a personal interview. We found this little lady from Florida, an attractive exponent of Southern charm, and only wished the curbstone chat could have been prolonged.

THE LITTLE FLOWER SHOP AROUND THE CORNER

If you have not visited Columbiana's newest and most attractive addition to commercial circles, lose no time in getting down to the "Little Flower Shop" now open for business. You will probably have a time deciding just which is the prettier, the flowers, or Mrs. Towns, the owner and operator.

You will find a lovely collection of pottery, and metal planters. Flowers for all occaions made to order, and lasting memorial designs. Be sure and visit this shop next time you are in Columbiana and meet these charming newcomers.

... Doris Colvin, physical education director of S. C. H. S. is a charming addition to school, church and social circles in Columbiana. We are personally delighted to have her join the Baptist Choristers. She will be a talented addition to our Soprano section in this choral group.

... The Rev. Curtis Bean will preach his last sermon in the Baptist Church next Sunday before leaving for Ft. Lee, Virginia, where he has been assigned as Chaplain.

... Football fans who witnessed the Auburn-Maryland game in Birmingham Saturday included: Cecil Duke, George Horn, T. B. Miller, Wales W. Wallace, Jr., L. G. Fulton, Dr. Ralph Hunt, Dr. John Gates, Joan Gates, Frank Head, Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Luck and perhaps many, many more. We just happened to be on Main when this group of enthusiastic fans pulled out....!

... The High School Band gave their first parade preceding the Football game at S. C. H. S. Friday afternoon. All members looked mighty good in their red and white uniforms. Especially adorable were Helen Harrison and Jay Francis Falkner as they rhythmically kept up with the "high-steppers."

... The Rev. and Mrs. Ed Morris and son Frank Morris of Birmingham, were guests of the Rev. and Mrs. T. K. Roberts Sunday.

... Friends of Rux Carter were extending him a welcome back to his office on Main, Monday, following a few days absence due to illness.

... Luther Fowler, widely beloved Tax Assessor of Shelby County is in a Birmingham infirmary for a check up. Good news received this week that he will soon be able to return to his official post of duty in the Courthouse. During his enforced absence, Mrs. Fowler is doing a splendid job "pinch-hitting" for him, and taking care in her own efficient manner, of the citizens now coming in to procure their auto tags and assess their property acquired since last year's tabulation.

... Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Yates and Mrs. John Martin of Sylacauga spent Sunday with Judge and Mrs. W. W. Wallace.

... Mr. and Mrs. G. R. McNeil and their son "Kicker" McNeil of Birmingham were Sunday guests of Mrs. McNeil's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Turner.

... Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Riddle of Birmingham spent the week end with Judge and Mrs. Riddle in Columbiana.

... We are delighted to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Collins of Siluria Rt. into our ever widening list of weekly readers.

... Edward H. Littlejohn, Captain USAF, is now assigned as assistant professor of Air Science in the R. O. T. C. Detachment of the Air Force at Tufts College, Medford, Mass. Capt. Littlejohn is an instructor in Aerodynamics and Propulsion, Maps, Aerial Photos and Navigation to potential Air Force Officers. We have received a letter from the Captain, whom many will remember as Principal of Calera School, ordering the Reporter-Democrat sent to his new address.

... Dr. and Mrs. Sam Shafferman have announced the arrival of a son who was born in Birmingham, September 29, 1952 and weighed in at 7 pounds and 3 ounces. Congratulations wing their way to these former residents of Columbiana.

... Mr. and Mrs. Louis Damsker of Tyler, Texas are the guests of their daughter, Mrs. Norman Lefkovits and Mr. Lefkovits in Columbiana.

... Mrs. R. F. Cox passed away September 29, at the home of her son, Amos Holman, after many months illness. Funeral arrangements are pending.

... Friends are extending the glad hand of welcome to Neal Stinson this week following several weeks illness. Neal is one of the most popular men on Main and has been sincerely missed by a host of friends.

... If all members of the Baptist Church were as conscientious and faithful as Johnnie Fox, who is a Freshman at University, it would not be very long, before the church building would be completed, and debt-free! Johnnie Fox finished Shelby Hi in May. He joined the Baptist Church during the summer months, and left for University of Alabama in September. Naturally, Johnnie has a small allowance for his college needs, but he conscientiously and regularly sends one-tenth of what he receives with a letter asking that his contribution be placed in the building fund, and "only wishes it were more." Johnnie is a wonderfully fine representative from Shelby county at this University, and his friends predict a brilliant future for him.

... Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Fowler, Conrad Jr., and Randy, spent the week end in Huntsville, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Payne.

... Pvt. Dan T. Prim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh R. Prim, of Rt. 1, Box 75, Calera, completed his basic training at The Quartermaster Replacement Training Center, Fort Lee, Virginia, on September 27, 1952. Pvt. Prim was inducted into the Army July 16. Before entering service, he attended Calera High School.

STATE FAIR OPENS

The Alabama State Fair has opened wide its gates to receive thousands of Alabamaians this week. There will be many attractions at the fair this year, but none holding more interest, locally, than the decision of the Judges in the Maid of Cotton Contest.

Villa Bentley, sponsored by the Kiwanians in Columbiana, left Columbiana with Mrs. James Crawford as Chaperone, Wednesday morning, and is one of the most gracious "Cotton Maids" numbered among "Alabama's 57 Varieties."

COLUMBIANA METHODIST CHURCH

Last Sunday, at the morning worship service, a most impressive baptismal service was conducted by the pastor, assisted by "Bro. Tom Roberts," when 15 new members were received into the church.

Next Sunday, October 5, will be promotion day for the Sunday School and will be conducted by W. W. Wallace, Jr., the General Superintendent. Mr. Wallace will be assisted by Mrs. B. F. Skelton, Superintendent of the Children's Department, S. S. Pearce, assistant to the General Superintendent and J. R. McMillen, Secretary.

Next Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour, the pastor will administer the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in the observance of World Wide Communion Day.

REPORTER-DEMOCRAT MASCOT VISITS OFFICE

The last time we saw tiny Tommy Lewis Blankenship, (our Mascot for 1952) he was six weeks old and had come to town to receive the numerous gifts the merchants of Columbiana had given to our New Year Baby! Today, Tommy came by with his mother, and he tops the scales at 28 pounds and is one of the handsomest young fellows we have ever seen. Watch for the Christmas Edition of this paper when Tommy will be presented as he will look at this time when we will begin to wonder who Mr. or Miss New Year will be for 1953.

'JUNGLE- JIM' ALIAS FIDO, SOME GOOD AFTER ALL

Wednesday morning H. T. Whitten of Helena came in the office with the following remark, "Please mark my subscription up for another year. You know those letters you and Mr. Ellis wrote about his dog was worth $2.00, in the laughs you both furnished in our home and around Helena.'

So up goes Mr. Whitten's name on our subscription list for 1953, and (Thanks, JungleJim, Fido, et als).

... Mr. and Mrs. Ed Garrett have returned from a delightful two weeks vacation spent in Mobile, New Orleans, and other points South.

... Glad to receive a renewal subscription from our good friends down Mobile way, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Garrett, who say they always "have an argument when the 'home paper' arrives as to which will read it first." This news always sounds good to us!

... Henry Cardwell, alert and successful owner of Cardwell's Furniture Stores, was in Columbiana, Tuesday. Here is a tip for thrifty buyers! Wait until you see something sensational Henry Cardwell has to offer his customers in "bargains" before you do any buying for your homes. We are preparing the description of these articles for early release, and the prices will be most reasonable. Wait until you see these "circulars" before buying!

... Woodrow Elliott, Shelby County Superintendent of Education, spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Montgomery, attending to some meetings pertaining to the Alabama Education Association.

... Newsprint is up to $125.00 per ton, right here in Alabama. So, if you have not renewed your subscription to the "Home Paper" better check the date on the label and come in and let's talk it over.

... Karl C. Harrison, Frank Head, J. A. King, A. E. Norwood, Conrad M. Fowler and other Shelby Countians attended the meeting of the Democrats held in Tuscaloosa Tuesday afternoon. Congressman Ed deGraffenried and the 6th District's new Congressman-nominate Selden met with the representatives from the 6th Congressional District on this occasion.

... We are glad to report that our good friend and neighbor, Alvin Stinson, who was operated on Monday night for appendicitis, is recuperating satisfactorily in Norwood Hospital.

... Wednesday morning, just before going to press our good friend, G. F. Payne of Montevallo gladdened the day with a personal call and a renewal subscription to the Reporter-Democrat, for which thoughtful court-

... The American Legion Auxiliary will meet Wednesday night October 1, at 7:30. Thelma Glenn, president, requests all members be present.

... Mr. and Mrs. Washington (Josephine MacKnight) were recent guets of Mrs. Lillie Mae MacKnight,. Mrs. Washington is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. A. MacKnight, who once resided in Columbiana and Mr. MacKnight edited the county paper in Shelby County.

... It is always good to welcome our friends from various places in the county and Wednesday morning, we had the privilege of greeting John Lee of Pelham, who has long been a loyal friend and subscriber to the "Home Paper". He renewed his allegiance to the Reporter-Democrat during his visit in Columbiana on this occasion for which courtesy we are duly grateful.

BAPTIST CHORISTERS DEDICATE MUSICAL PROGRAM SUNDAY TO REV. CURTIS BEAN

The music which will be rendered by the Baptist Choristers next Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour, will be dedicated to the Rev. Curtis Bean, who leaves to accept his assignment in the U. S. Army as Chaplain following this last service.

Tuesday evening, following the weekly rehearsal, rules by which each Choir member will be governed were unanimously adopted and after a short business session, Mrs. N. A. Jones, Mrs. Thelma Miles and Mrs. T. C. Rush, Jr., acting as hostesses, served hot coffee, cake and nuts to the group.

Before the social hour was concluded, the director, on behalf of the Choristers, presented Mr. Bean with a completely furnished leather Drop-Kit as a token of their appreciation for his encouragement, understanding, and friendly interest in each member.

Mr. Bean, in accepting the gift made an impressive appeal to the members of the choir to "keep up the good work" as they continued to bring the message in song each Sunday. He praised the programs presented since his coming to Columbiana and requested that arrangements be made to record the Christmas Cantata and a recording of it be sent to him "wherever he might be". This unforgettable last message to this group of musicians who have worked so cooperatively with him, will, we feel sure, furnish an inpiration for further and better work in this all important field of service which they have chosen as their part of the work for the church of their faith.

The Choristers will close the service Sunday morning with the following Benediction:

"May angels surround you
Where e'er you may go,
And keep you and guard you
From danger and foe;
May friends never fail you,
May love never die;
God's blessing be with you
His grace ever nigh—Amen".

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 3—4.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Joshua 24: 14-21

Dedicating Life

Lesson for October 5, 1952

Dr. Foreman

THERE ARE two classes of persons in this world: the drifters and the dedicated. Drifters become driftwood, cumbering a barren shore, or they float, waterlogged and helpless, a menace to more important traffic. The dedicated, on the other hand, have purpose in their minds, they have a course and a compass. They have somewhere to go, some reason for going there. But not all the dedicated are alike. The vital question is: To what is a man dedicated?

Stalin is a dedicated man; so are Christian missionaries; so are politicians good and bad. The big question remains: Dedicated to what? to whom?

Dedicated to God

HIGHEST object of all dedication is God; this always includes devotion to his cause. To be dedicated to God means to be devoted, in purpose and in action, in every way that is possible, to making this world—beginning with one's own self—come into line with the prayer, "Thy will be done."

The young man Jesus, whose story the Sunday school lessons will be following through the Gospel by Matthew for the next six months, was of all persons the topmest example of a life dedicated to God. Jesus did not drift into this. Dedication was not automatic, inevitable.

Jesus, not less than those he calls his brothers and sisters, had to make up his mind to the ancient demand: Choose this day whom you will serve.

The Power

JESUS WAS not a late comer to his decision. Once or more it has happened that a young man who decides to enter the ministry will surprise and even startle family and friends by this decision. But when Jesus "entered the ministry" (as we may rightly say he did, after his baptism), it could have surprised none who had known him. He had always been aware of being "about his Father's business." He did not pass from drifting to dedication, as most men must; he passed from one stage of dedication to another.

Whatever questions the story of Jesus' baptism raises, one thing is certain: from and after that even Jesus knew himself to be God's special Representative, endowed with the Holy Spirit for the work he was to do.

Over and over in the New Testament we hear of the "power of the Spirit," for the divine Spirit both brings power and is Power. Only the life dedicated to God has the power of God.

The Problem

IT IS a mistake to think that the dedicated life is free from problems. God will not weaken us by making our choices for us. Every temptation is an opportunity to choose, between God's way and some way that is not God's. Temptation may also present a choice not so much between black and white, wrong and right, as between good and better, right and more-right.

One meaning of Jesus' temptations was just that in them he had to think through the how of his dedicated life. He was indeed God's beloved Son; His work was indeed to save the world for God.

But the question was, How? By turning stones into bread? By astonishing people with miracles such as jumping unharmed off the Temple top? No; these were not God's way. The last temptation was not as absurd as it sounds. Whenever men have said, "Let us do evil that good may come," whenever they have said that a noble purpose glorifies any method used to attain it, they have done what Jesus was tempted to do,—worship Satan.

The Practice

NO, DEDICATION does not free the dedicated from problems. But when life is put at God's disposal, with each problem comes the power to avoid wrong choice, to make the right one. Yet again there is a condition: God will not resist our temptations in our place. There is something we have to do for ourselves. There is a practice required

Is it likely that Jesus had never in his lifetime been tempted before that day in the wilderness? No, he resists with the skill of long practice. The weapon he uses is still ours to use: the Word of God.

Does that weapon lie rusting under the dust at your house? Keep it bright by using it, as Jesus did.

Tax Assessing Methods Changed

Beginning October 1, 1952, the method of assessing taxes on real property has been changed.

In order to relieve the taxpayer from coming into the Tax Assessor's Office each year and giving in his real estate, Luther Fowler, Tax Assessor for Shelby County, has set up a different system whereby a property owner who does not sell, buy, build or change his property in any way, will not have to come in and assess his or her property until there is a change made by them.

If the owner has been living on his property and has been claiming Homestead Exemption, and moves off the property, it should be reported to the Tax Assessor. This also applies to the person who moved on to a place and wishes to claim Homestead Exemption. If new buildings are erected on the property, this should be reported. In other words, any change made that may affect the taxes, then the tax payer would need to give in his taxes between October 1st and December 31st of that particular year the change was made.

This system does not relieve those people who have personal property of assessing their property each year. This would apply to people with stock of goods, office equipment, gins, saw mills, tractors, etc.

If anyone desires more information about this new method of assessment, they may come to the Tax Assessor's office and he will be glad to explain it to them.

All people who have bought real estate should bring their deeds with them so that a correct description may be obtained of the property to be assessed.

BACKGROUND AND HISTORY OF VETERANS' BENEFITS

The care of the disabled veteran has been an obligation of governments throughout recorded history.

The ORIENTAL EMPIRES had PENSION systems for those who were drafted into services. It was the custom in those days to levy TRIBUTE from conquered cities, and usually at the beginning of a campaign certain cities were designated from which the LOOT and TRIBUTE were to be set aside for the benefit of veterans. Even as in our own Revolutionary War the payments of these benefits was primarily intended to insure good service on the part of the soldiers.

The Greek City states established a DEFINITE PREFERENCE for veterans as to legislative and magisterial offices. They also provided for care of children of those who died in battle and paid pensions to those who could prove PERMANENT INJURY.

The Roman Empire provided for a DIVISION of spoils among veterans and paid a greater share of the loot to those who had been wounded in action. Some of those habits were adopted by this country, and as late as 1851 the United States Soldiers Home received more than one hundred thousand dollars in money which had been levied against Mexico by the commanding General of the United States Army during the Mexican War.

We are told that late in the Sixteenth Century Soldiers in England returning from the wars rioted, committed crime and filled the streets as BEGGARS. Perhaps this aftermath was responsible to a considerable degree for the passage of the first English Pension Law which came about in 1592. This law paid pensions retroactively to the year in which the Britsh defeated the Spanish Armada, in 1588. The cost of these pensions was charged to the local parish or counties and to those who were caught begging forfeited the right to pension.

The first British hospital built for the care of veterans was Chelsea Hospital. This was constructed late in the Seventeenth Century providing Domiciliary care for lame and infirm soldiers.

Following the founding of the Colony in America at Plymouth in 1626 it was decreed that if any man shall be sent forth as a soldier and shall return mained he shall be MAINTAINED COMPLETELY by the COLONY during his life.

The General Assembly of Virginia as early as 1624 said that those wounded in fighting with the Indians were to be cured at the public charge, and that in case any be lamed he was to be maintained by the country according to the person and his quality.

So it is clear that the RESPONSIBILITY of a government to its defenders has been acknowledged from the BEGINNING of this country and actually, from the beginning of recorded history.

Retail sales of cigars have been suspended from ceiling price controls, according to the Office of Price Stabilization. Cigarettes, however, remain under ceiling price regulations, the agency said.

Dry cleaners, laundries and other service business are required to post the ceiling prices for their work where you can see them.

OPS requires new car dealers to diplay posters showing the ceiling price for each make and model they sell and to furnish customers with a list of the charges.

THE FLAMING BEACON

"The word of the Lord endureth forever." I Peter 1:25

Historically speaking, that is the most arresting sentence ever voiced by human lips. In it is involved the creation and the time the voice of the Eternal was heard, "Let there be light," in obedience to which the sun, moon and stars swung into their orbits in boundless space.

Through the unrolling ages the same voice has been heard above the cataclysms of nature and the crashing of empires, calling to all men created in the image of God, beseeching them to respond to the overtures of love offered by Him, "who hath created the ends of the earth, and who fainteth not, neither is weary."

Classic literature is of high educational and cultural value, but beyond that it means nothing to the reader. You may wander through the ruins of ancient cities where in generations long gone learned pundits and philosophers taught, and where poets sang; and you may link the fascinating experiences with a re-reading of their essays and songs. All the while, however, you are conscious of the fact that their messages are as dead as the places of their habitation. Again, you may stroll along the highways of old Judea, where inspired prophets walked with God and brought ever-living communications from the Eternal Jehovah; then turning to a re-reading of the record that we call the Bible, with grateful heart you will exclaim with the Psalmist, "The entrance of thy word giveth light." Within that indispensable volume is revealed the secret of life eternal.

Again, through the ages empires have risen and fallen, because of the inadequacy of the philosophies of men. Upon this Word that endureth forever a kingdom is yet in the course of construction, the first foundation stones of which were laid in the Garden of Eden; and to all who give attentive ears this promise comes, "For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

PREPARE TO CONTROL PEACH TREE BORERS

In Alabama the peach tree borer causes more damage to peach and plum trees than any other insect pest.

W. A. Ruffin, API Extension entomologist, says the worm stage of this insect feeds on the cambium layer or the growing tissue just under the outer bark of peach and plum trees. And young trees may be completely girdled and killed within the first or second year after they have been set in the orchard.

Ruffin states the way to prevent serious damage to trees that have not been sprayed during the summer months with DDT or parathion is to treat them with paradichlorobenzine in October. In the northern half of the state treat trees the first wto weeks in October. In Central and South Alabama treat trees the latter part of October.

PRODUCE MORE MILK, MAKE HIGHER PROFITS

Since sale of milk brings in the bulk of dairy income, practices that will help increase milk production are important.

According to Pete Turnham, A. P. I. Extension dairyman, some of the practices include breeding cows to freshen in the fall when most milk is needed; breeding cows to bulls that transmit high milk and butterfat production characteristics; waiting at least 60 days after calving to breed cows again; adjusting grain feeding to pasture conditions and the individual cow's production, and feeding cows all the roughage they will eat in the form of pasture, hay, or silage, or a combination of these feeds.

HIGH QUALITY COTTON PRODUCED IN ALABAMA

Alabama farmers and ginners are doing an excellent job in harvesting, handling and ginning the 1952 cotton crop, according to U. S. Department of Agriculture cotton quality reports.

Nearly 68 per cent of the cotton ginned through September 1 was "middling" or higher in grade. And only one per cent of the bales ginned were reduced in grade by rough preparation. Staple lengths one inch and longer made up over 96 per cent of the ginnings in Alabama.

"Good grades and staple lengths mean added income to the grower," says O. N. Andrews, API Extension Cotton improvement specialist. "Therefore, farmers are urged to pick cotton clean and carry it to the gin dry. Many farmers have been observed picking cotton and piling it on sheet to dry. This is a good practice, especially when cotton is damp with dew or rain. Sheets are made of used burlap or cotton bags sewn together."

VALUE OF SOD CROPS

Sod crops provide the most economical source of feed for cattle. Also, they provide ground cover to protect the soil from erosion, and they supply organic matter to increase the water holding capacity of the soil and its fertility.

SEED BEDS

Firming seed beds are especially important at this time of year. If plants do not come up to a good stand, replant the skips until a good stand is obtained.

FERTILIZED PASTURES

Pasture fertilization increases quality of grazing. In other words, livstock grazing fertilized pastures receive more of the minerals and nutrients needed for producing high-quality, profitable products.

COTTONSEED

Save a good supply of cottonseed for next year's crop. A good plan is to save two bushels for every acre to be planted next year. Seed not used to plant next year's crop may be kept for planting the following crop.

HIGH QUALITY PROTEIN FOR A GOOD BREAKFAST

Because of its high-quality protein content, the egg stands out more brightly than ever in the breakfast spotlight.

"The reason," says Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, "is that a breakfast containing a good deal of protein, especially some in top-quality, can do more to stave off fatigue longer than a morning meal that is poor in protein."

She further states that besides eggs, other foods from animal sources, such as milk, meat and cheese, provide protein of top value. Additional protein comes from grain products and many other foods.

PROTECT NEW CLOTHES FOR BETTER SERVICE

To protect clothing against wear and perspiration stains, often difficult to remove from clothes which are not washable, put shields in both wool dresses and coats before wearing.

"Also," advises Kathleen Thompson, API Extension clothing specialist, "give a new dress underarm shields and sew in a piece of thin washable fabric over the upper back to keep oily soil from the dress. For coats, make shields of fabric that matches the lining so that they can take stains and rubs and be replaced when necessary."

Miss Thompson adds that it's far easier and cheaper to put in sheilds early than to entirely reline the coat later.

Many women have found that it is a good idea to protect new trousers by sewing retreads inside, at seat and knees. A re-tread that is an underneath stretch of firm but thin fabric, is used sometimes for the seat of a skirt. Long sitting is likely to cause a skirt to bulge or stretch out of shape unless it is reinforced underneath.

Used powder puffs make excellent pads for cleaning white shoes.

Cotton Sleepwear Is Warm and Bewitching

These Cute Cuddle-Clothes for Bed Will Add Glamor to Night-Time Togs

BY EDNA MILES

For winter wear, these soft balbriggan pajamas have warmth as well as glamor.

IT was not so long ago that warm winter sleeping fashions were chiefly notable for their lack of fashion. It was assumed that any woman who wanted practicality in sleepwear wasn't interested in glamor, too.

Things have changed. These days, a girl can get practicality in a pretty guise. For instance, balbriggan, long considered a staple, has taken to candy stripes in both gowns and pajamas. They come in tropical colors: pink, yellow sunshine, coral and blue. And a quaint rose challis print is used for the yoke of a peignoir that has a ruffled neckline.

A fabric called "candlelight" has a shimmering rayon fleck knitted into soft cotton and for an added look of luxury, is trimmed with a "gold loom" knit fabric.

Heavenly, soft brushed rayon in jewel colors gets the flattery of seed pearls scattered over a gathered bodice or a star-shaped yoke. Jeweled touches appear, too, in the nylon tricot styles for winter. Rhinestones are sprinkled over net or embroidered sheer details and satin appliques are used.

Color counts in these new winter sleepwear fashions. Ombred effects are used in nylon gowns; tri-color treatment appears in three tones of green and grape. Green jewel, coral gem and rose pastel are three of the newest colors.

This cotton balbriggan gown for winter wear has inset yoke of pastel candy stripe.

N. F. A. PLANS WELL UNDER WAY

The N. F. A. Chapter attempted to keep alive and going activity programs during the summer months. The chapter sponsored two activities during that time which proved to be successful. The first was clearing land for a group project in growing Rescue grass for seed. The area cleared composed of two acres, and the work was done on Saturday morning to make it convenient for all of the boys to come. This was carried out as planned, and was planted on September 16, 1952. To date it looks promising for we have a good stand of grass.

The other activity was selling chances on a 100 pound live hog. This activity ended on September 17, 1952. We feel that many boys failed to do as well as they could have, but the project as a whole was a fair success. Mrs. Pearlie Smith was the winner.

The chapter held its first meeting after school opened on September 23, 1952. The main features of this meeting were as follows: (1) Disposing of two pigs that were coming to the N. F. A. chapter as a result of the pig chain that was started a while ago. (2) Checking on the money raising project carried out during the summer months; and (3) Election of new officers.

The offices are held by the following persons: President, Alvin Schultz; Vice President, Braxton Wallace; Secretary, Walter Cribbs; Treasurer, Norman Smith; Reporter, Ellis Millender, and Adviser, J. M. Thomas.

"BUY DEFENSE BONDS TO REPLACE OLD TRACTORS," SAYS 'MAID OF COTTON'

Tractors, cotton and thrift are woven together in the fabric of American life, according to Miss Pat Mullarkey, Dallas, Tex., 1952 Maid of Cotton. Today, there are a million tractors on Southern cotton farms and 25,000 are added annually, sparking the trend to cotton mechanization. These tractors will last about 10 years. By putting the annual depreciation of the tractor, 10 per cent of the purchase price, into U. S. Defense Bonds each year, the thrifty cotton farmer can pay cash for a new tractor when he needs it. So, the young lady in the made-of-cotton costume reminds the cotton farmer: "Save for your new tractor the easy Defense Bond Way."

CURRENT CHANGES IN AGRICULTURE

High Cost Of Farming

Current changes in agriculture coupled with the high cost of farming has increased the demand for long-term, low-cost loans, according to Mr. A. S. Miree, Secretary-Treasurer of the Mt. Olive National Farm Loan Association.

Many people, especially town and city folks, don't realize the tremendous increase in the cost of farming and the amount of money it takes to capitalize and operate a farm, Mr. Miree stated.

Mr. Miree, who serves farmers in Winston, Walker, Shelby and Jefferson counties, pointed out that land values have doubled during the past ten years. Mechanization is expensive. A standard size tractor costs an average of $2150.00, a two-bottom plow costs about $275, a heavy duty disc harrow costs $300, a 6-foot tractor drawn combine costs $1350, an automatic hay baler costs about $2300 and other needed farm equipment costs in proportion, the credit leader stated.

For farmers who plan to shift more towards cattle raising and dairying, Mr. Miree said a good dairy cow costs from $275 to $350., a good beef cow costs from $150 to $250., fencing costs from $500 to $1000 per mile, and preparing, liming, fertilizing and seeding pastures cost from $35 to $50 per acre.

These high costs mean that many farmers must use long-term credit to buy additional land, purchase needed equipment, buy cattle, build pastures and do other things.

Farmers who are faced with problems of this sort should contact Mr. Miree at his office at Birmingham or Tuesday morning in Double Springs, and Tuesday afternoon in Jasper, and Monday morning in Columbiana. He will be glad to discuss farm financing with them.

CLUB STUDIES SEWING MACHINES

New Hope matrons are "busy as bees" this week, cleaning and making the necessary adjustments on their sewing machines following the demonstration given by the assistant Agent, Miss Collins. This practical and enjoyable affair was given at the home of Mrs. Owen DeShazo at her home on Cahaba Valley Road Wednesday afternoon.

Following the simple instruction of Miss Collins will mean a substantial saving not only on the cost of having the machine cleaned but often saves the price of a new one. This, coupled with the fact that the modern homemaker with the aid of her sewing machine, can make a complete family wardrobe, represents an enormous saving on the family budget.

Following the demonstration, Mrs. W. E. Sorrell presided at the business meeting, after which the hostess served delicious refreshments to the group. Two of these, Mrs. Earl Morgan and Mrs. Jessie Allen were new members.

COLUMBIANA H. D. C. HOLDS SEPTEMBER MEETING

The club met with Mrs. Ross Mullins September 16th with Mrs. Joe Smith as Co-Hostess.

The food committee, Mrs. Bolton and Mrs. Edmondson, who were in charge of the exhibit, "Cake Baking," at the County Fair, took orders for home baked cakes. The club members baked $20.00 worth during the Fair. The club voted to give this amount to S. C. H. S. Cafeteria to help feed needy children. The club won first prize on their booth at the fair.

Forty-two club members, their family and friends enjoyed the picnic lunch in August on the lawn of Mrs. Gene Edmondson's residence.

Mrs. Leonard, citizenship chairman urged the club members to keep posted on the presidential election and vote.

Mrs. Bolton reported the Blood Bank would soon be here again and asked club members to donate blood for this needed cause.

Mrs. Williams appointed a nominating Committee: Mrs. Francis Leonard, Chairman, Mrs. A. C. Walton and Mrs. H. L. Cobb.

Mrs. Johnston was asked to be in charge of sending cards to shut-ins.

The group sang "How Firm A Foundation." The attendance prize was won by Mrs. Walton.

Fifteen members answered roll call. Mrs. McGhee was welcomed as a visitor.

Demonstration "Care and use of the Sewing Machine" was given by Miss Cotney.

Miss Williams expressed her thanks to the Maid of Cotton Committee in their choice of Miss Fay Wilson.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

The meeting was adjourned. The next meeting will be held October 21st at the Old Court House at 9:30 o'clock. The demonstration will be on "Textile Painting." The club members will carry sandwiches and the hostesses Mrs. Isbell and Mrs. Lester will furnish the drinks and dessert.

College Represented At Conservation Meet

Miss Ethel Marshall, Alabama College at Montevallo faculty member, was one of five representatives from the Southeastern area of the United States attending the Study Conference on the Status of Conservation Education held at Purdue University this week.

Sponsored by the National Conservation Foundation and the National Committee on Policies in Conservation Education, the six day conference publicly recognized that the Southeastern area of the United States had provided more opportunities in the field of Conservation of natural resources than any other region in the United States.

Leaders in the field of conservation in attendance at the conference were Paul Sears, one of the three outstanding Ecologists of the world and head of the Yale School of Natural Resources; Henry Cain, director of the Natural Resources School at the University of Michigan; and Laurence Palmer, head of the School of Natural Resources at Cornell University.

Miss Marshall, one of the leaders in the fields of conservation and natural resources in Alabama is director of the annual Resource Use Workshop held on the Alabama campus each summer.

HORN-MULLINS LINE UP WITH NATIONAL TELEVISION PROGRAM

Horn-Mullins Supply Company, Columbiana, Alabama, local Hotpoint appliance dealer, announced today that Horn-Mullins has joined with more than 11,000 other Hotpoint dealers across the country to sponsor "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet," a new one-half hour radio and television comedy show beginning Saturday, October 4.

Horn-Mullins Supply Company said the new $3 million program will be carried over the ABC network by 325 radio and 56 television stations, the largest number of stations ever to carry any new show presented on a major network.

The program features Ozzie Nelson, his wife Harriet, and their two sons, Rick, 11, and David, 15, in a series of family home scenes. Action takes place in a studio set that reproduces actual rooms in the Nelson's home.

Horn-Mullins said they helped to select the "Ozzie and Harriet" show because it has a wide appeal to family audiences, and shows a typical American family in everyday situations. Since the program went on the air in 1944, it has won the National Association Award for Better Radio and Television as the best family situation comedy on the air, and was selected by the General Federation of Women's Clubs as the best program for family listening.

THOMPSON WARRIORS WIN OVER S. C. H. S.

The Thompson Warriors rolled one step closer to their fourth consecutive Shelby County Football championship at the Columbiana High School Football Field last week.

A powerful running attack lead by David Butler, combined with the brilliant passing by James Harris, and rugged backfield action by the entire Thompson line, compelled the Warriors to break down a strong Columbiana defense and pile up three touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

Standouts in the Thompson line were Durbin, Mooney, Epps, Payne, and Smitherman.

The Thompson Warriors play hosts to Prattville High School at the Buck Creek Stadium in Siluria this Friday.

200,000 FARMS IN ALABAMA

Alabama is one of the few states in the nation with more than two hundred thousand farms. Production on these farms is highly diversified. Cotton, corn, peanuts, potatoes, oats, soybeans, hay and cowpeas, are important crops. Millions of pounds of legume and grass eed are sold each year; the legumes include such plants as vetch, crimson clover, Caley peas, and sericea.

Many kinds of vegetables and truck crops are produced. Apples, pecans, sericea, peaches, and strawberries are included among the fruit and tree crops. Farmers earn many millions of dollars each year from cattle, hogs, dairy products, chickens, eggs and turkeys.

POLITICAL POP-OVERS

Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public, this week, are viewing the leading candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States, under a microspic lens.... and some revealing facts have been spotlighted thru the press, over radio-television et cetera.

The presidential race is, I regret to say, daily growing more undignified as personalities, rather than principles are now being stressed. There is much disillusionment evidenced, regarding some of the potent contenders, and it is well for us to view with serious consideration vice-presidential nominees this week. We have heretofore, mainly talked of Gov. Stevenson and General Ike, the 'leading men' in the race for the Chief Executive's position of this nation. Just in passing we will say that their personal physicians have given both gentlemen a fair rating, physically speaking. But, in the wild dash across this nation, both candidates are now taking, suppose death should suddenly strike them down! A gruesome thought to be sure, but, we said: "What IF".... this tragedy should occur? Which of the two vice-presidential candidates would you prefer to direct the affairs of this country of ours, NIXON?.... "General Ike's tearful little boy".... or Alabama's own able and experienced Senator John S. Sparkman?

Did you know that the TV appearance of Dick Nixon, staged the latter part of September, at which time he attempted to capture the heart strings of the nation by a highly emotional appeal to the people, has now fallen flat in the light of factual revelations? These facts, from the record, taken from statements made by those "in the know", reveal that this rather ham-ish act was spoken from an original script, written by one of Hollywood's professional writers and carefully produced by the well known director, Edward A (Ted) Rogers, who travels with the Senator's campaign caravan! Mr. Rogers is, possibly, best known for his direction of "Double or Nothing"; "The Lone Ranger", and other "soap operas". He is the senator's full time paid television and radio expert, and like all directors, he staged carefully this "tear-jerking" episode with an eye to popular appeal. The young senator was told when to smile; when to put the color in his voice; when to look at his wife; when to bring reference to the cocker spaniel; when to take the "homey pose", and according to the St. Louis Dispatch, even the "books you saw on the shelf, were made of wood, to resemble the 'regular simple guy's room.'

Now, is this the type fellow we need to face the crisis that lies before this tottering nation, literally sitting on top of an atomic explosion? He is exactly what you would get, were the distinguished General, taken from the scene of action! I have nothing to say against 'General Ike" as a great General. He has proved this fact to the entire satisfaction of a grateful nation, but, having led the life the shelter of the United States Army provides for its "top brass', do you honestly believe that even the General could know much about our civilian problems, not having experienced this kind of a life for many, many years?

Now, for our own Senator, John S. Sparkman. Here is what Senator Lister Hill has to say regarding his colleague for many years: We quote: "You can't strike down John Sparkman without striking down Alabama. Who is your loyalty to, Kansas and California, or to Alabama?" Sen. Hill also admits that the Democratic Party faces its most serious challenge in 100 years. He further urges counties and districts to organize and get to work for Democracy. This is exactly what this limited penpoint of mine has been trying to get across for weeks and weeks. Perhaps, if you have not already made up your minds that ACTION is necessary, if the Democrats are to win on November 4, you, who admire and respect Sen. Hill, will answer his challenging call to the Democratic Party.

USDA Offering Free Cotton Classing

Mr. Arthur E. Jackson, Jr. in charge of the USDA - Cotton Classing Office in Birmingham has just informed us that adequate personnel and facilities are available for classing the entire cotton crop of Shelby county. Every gin community in the county is organized a sa cotton improvement group and farmers can take advantage of this service simply by requesting that the ginner cut samples from his bales of cotton and mail them to the classing office. Mr. Jackson states that his office can give very prompt service this season; in most cases classification cards are mailed for return to the farmer on the same day that the cotton is received at the classing office.

These cards show the grade and staple of each bale and by consulting quoted cotton prices the farmer can dtermine approximately what his bale is worth.

BOARD OF EDUCATION 1952-53 BUDGET

The State Board of Education has adopted a $67,414,515 budget for the 1952-53 fiscal year.

State School Superintendent Dr. W. J. Terry said that operating under the fund will be the public schools, special schools, trade schools, and other services operated by the Department of Education.

The budget included the $57,656,000 appropriated by the legislature for the minimum program fund during the year.

Board members also gave its approval for the State Public Schools Corporation to pledge revenues from earmarked educational taxes for the repayment of a $9,000,000 loan the corporation is making to operate the schools until special revenues start coming in.

Included in the more than $67,000,000 budget is nearly $2,000,000 in federal funds. Not included is more than $5,000,000 that is to be distributed to the counties from the Public School Fund, which is financed from an ad valorem tax, provided in the state constitution.

FUNERAL RITES HELD FOR MRS. R. F. COX

Funeral services were conducted from the Baptist Church in Columbiana Tuesday afternoon, September 30, for Mrs. R. F. Cox, pioneer resident of Columbiana. The scripture passages were read by the Rev. A. D. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist Church; the invocation was given by the Rev. Curtis Bean, pastor of the Baptist Church, and the personal remarks were given by the Rev. J. E. Franks, former pastor of the Baptist Church in Columbiana, now serving the State as Chaplain. Music was rendered by the Baptist Choristers and included her favorite song selections "In The Garden" and "Abide With Me".

Mrs. Cox had resided in Columbiana for a number of years and was an active member of the Baptist Church before she became an invalid and was deprived of attending.

Surviving Mrs. Cox are two sons, Amos Holman of Columbiana, R. F. Cox Jr., of Talladega and one step-daughter, Miss Lena Cox of Columbiana.

Interment in Columbiana Cemetery, Bolton-Walton in charge.

FUNERAL RITES HELD C. R. JONES

Funeral services were held for C. R. Jones, of Columbiana on Sunday afternoon at Bolton Funeral Chapel, the Rev. T. K. Roberts officiating.

Mr. Jones had resided in Columbiana for a number of years, moving to this town from Shelby, where he was employed during the time Shelby Iron Company operated at this point. He was highly respected in Columbiana as t citizen. He was a devoted husband and father and always loyal to his friends.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. C. R. Jones, two sons, Donald Jones of Jemison; Malcom Jones of Jemison and one daughter, Mrs. Frances Wilson of Birmingham. One sister, Miss Dollie Jones of Columbiana.

Interment in Shelby Cemetery, Bolton-Walton directing.

From The Files of The Reporter

COLUMBIANA NEEDS:

1. A modern Hotel.
2. Paved Streets.
3. Paved Sidewalks.
4. An adequate water supply.

A town-wide clean up Campaign.

(This is a list made 25 Years Ago in the Reporter. Columbiana has realized all of these needs, except the modern hotel, and the lovely "Flowerland Court" owned and operated by Luther and Kathreen Curlee, adequately takes care of this requirement.)

COLUMBIANA CHURCHES CALL FULL TIME PASTORS

The Columbiana Methodist Church has requested the Methodist Conference for a full time minister.

The Baptist Church is now operating under its full time pastor, the Rev. Dean for the first time.

Heretofore two Sundays were devoted to the Methodist Church and two to the Baptist Church and union services were held.

(The editorial from the "Reporter" continues)

"The relations between the two congregations and their pastors have always been those of friendliness and cooperation and these relations continue today. As Mr. Dean, pastor of the Baptist Church expressed it, there is a desire on the part of the church people of Columbiana to enter with greater zeal into the work of the church, a purpose to intensify their efforts to make Columbiana a genuinely Christian community, and it is the feeling to have the leadership of two full time pastors will help materially in carrying on this intensified effort."

TALLADEGA COUNTY FAIR ON

The management of the Talladega County Fair at Sylacauga gives to the people of Shelby County a cordial invitation to come to the "Biggest Fair Ever Held In Sylacauga", beginning October 18, and continuing thru October 22. Railroads are offering special rates and season tickets are now on sale.

State Secretary Streamlines Record System

Mrs. Agnes Baggett, Alabama Secretary of State, explains the recently-installed modern system of keeping corporation records, a responsibility of her office. Montgomery Corporation Attorney Evans Hinson, right, is shown with Mrs. Baggett as they study one of the typewritten cards from the new index system, which makes the reports almost instantly available. The streamlined system evolved by Mrs. Baggett after several years of study, and several months of work, replaces an out-moded system where heavy, leather-bound books were used, with the records written in long-hand. The new system is more efficient, speedier, more economical.

Dairy Show Winner

RALPH BEARDEN

Ralph Bearden, Helena 4-H Club member, exhibited the Grand Champion Female in the State Junior Show at the Alabama State Fair grounds in Birmingham. This was the second such honor won by this 4-H member. Last year at the same, show he showed the Champion with a 4 year old cow.

Shelby county won first place in county exhibits in addition to eight firsts in class prizes. Other 4-H members to show were: Charles Bates, Shelby; Paul Pool, Columbiana; Sue and Jackie Nolen, Siluria; Donny Hooks, Helena; James and Ray Ingram, Wilsonville and Frances and Shirley Bearden, Helena.

R. W. Kent and Sons, J. A. Walton, Britt Ingram and J. E. Bearden showed in the adult classes.

COLUMBIANA F. F. A. GETS BEEF PROJECT

The members of the Columbiana F. F. A. Chapter are sharing in the work of fencing five acres and making hay from nearly ten acres to get their beef on pasture project going.

This is a follow up of their very successful Chapel Hill Rescue experience of last winter. On the fine Rescue grass already ready for cattle, the bops expect to put five stock steers of medium weight. The large stack of mixed hays the boys have saved will be fed, and some supplementary feeding will be done.

Careful records will be kept and visitors will be welcome to study with the boys the practical aspects of this project.

State Official Streamlines Records

State Secretary Mrs. Agnes Baggett has completed the Herculean task of stream-lining Alabama's corporation records.

Replacing a bookkeeping practice of almost a century in which all corporation records were laboriously written by longhand in heavy leatherbound volumes, the typed card index system developed by Mrs. Baggett makes it possible to locate in seconds any one of the 60,000 records kept by her office.

The card index system replaces eight large books, eliminates much loss of time, and is neater and more efficient than the old plan.

Mrs. Baggett, who had worked in the Secretary of State's office for several years before being elected Secretary, believed that Alabama could improve on its system of record keeping. Shortly after being voted into office, she presented her plans to a legislative committee. They were given ready approval by the group, which provided her $1,000 to put them into effect.

During the past eight months temporary clerks have been transferring the information on domestic and foreign corporations from the antiquated system of books to the card index. Now the information may be found almost immediately, bringing Alabama's corporation records in line with praqtice in other states.

In addition to knowledge gained from her working experience, Mrs. Baggett has also been able to gain many new ideas as a member of the National Committtee of Corporation Records of the Association of Secretaries of State. She has also worked constantly toward a greater uniformity in record procedures nationwide, in annual meetings of the group.

Mrs. Baggett, incidently, is one of five women Secretaries of State, joining members of her sex in Connecticut, South Dakota, West Virginia and New Mexico.

But Alabama's Secretary of State hasn't quit yet. She is constantly seeking improvements for her office's system of bookkeeping. Right now she is looking forward to a time when its records may be presented by microfilming, and when the plat books, field notes and tract books will be repaired and restored. These are invaluable records and many Alabama attorneys, land surveyors, and others concerned with such records, have expressed hope that they will be promptly preserved.

Another innovation of Mrs. Baggett's has been distribution of wallet-size identification cards to all elected and appointed Alabama officials to whom commissions are issued from her office. The cards are in certificate form signed by Mrs. Baggett, Secretary of State, and carry names, titles and expiration dates of commisions.

According to letters received by Mrs. Baggett they have proven a boon to county and state officials. As a matter of fact, they have gained the attention of officials in other states, and several have indicated that they plan to follow the example set by Alabama's Secretary of State.

FOUR AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED ON IN GENERAL ELECTION

Read the four Amendments carried in the current issue of the Reporter-Democrat. Two are of state-wide importance.

The Sheriff's extension of office to a six year term instead of a four year tenure is one causing more controversy than the others.

Number 1 provides that collections from fees, excise or license taxes on motor vehicles and gasoline must be used exclusively for highway purposes. This would eliminate diversion of such funds to other uses.

Amendments 3 and 4 pertain only to Fayette and Blount counties and refer to industrial development plans for these counties.

BEEF CATTLEMEN AND SHEEP PRODUCERS TO MEET

The Beef Cattlemen and sheep producers will hold a meeting at the CITY HALL, Calera, on Tuesday, October 14, 1952 beginning at 10 o'clock.

W. H. Gregory, Extension Livestock Specialist, Auburn will be with us to talk to you on production and management problems. This meeting will start promptly at 10 o'clock and last about one or one and one-half hours. We hope that every beef and sheep man will make a special effort to be present for this meeting.

FUNERAL SERVICES CONDUCTED MRS. J. F. HELMS

Funeral services were conducted from the Wilsonville Baptist Church on October 4, for Mrs. J. F. Helms, wife of J. F. Helms, long-time rural mail carrier in this section of the county.

The service was in charge of the Rev. I. M. Watson and Rev. Lay.

Mrs. Helms is survived by her husband, J. F. Helms of Wilsonville; Johnnie Helms and Evelyn Helms of Washington, D. C.; Catheryn Helms and Mrs. J. H. Seale of Birmingham; Mrs. Sam Stoudemire, Wilsonville; John F. Helms Jr., stationed with the Navy in Hawaii.

Interment in Wilsonville Cemetery.

MAYOR AND COUNCILMEN TAKE OATH OF OFFICE

Judge W. W. Wallace had the honor of administering the oath of office Monday evening, October 6, to Wales W. Wallace Jr. as Mayor of Columbiana, and to the following members of the Town Council, Arthur Wood, Bruce Alverson, Cecil Duke, Frances Leonard and Elvin Hill.

Sarah Nell Ozley, prominent career woman of Columbiana, regarded as one of the best business women in the county, was appointed Town Clerk. Mrs. Ozley, for several years, has been assisting L. G. Fulton in the Circuit Clerk's office and has a wide circle of friends throughout the county.

Following the civic ceremony, the members of the former council, the wives of the city officials and the new members, were entertained by Mayor and Mrs. Wallace with a delectable dinner at Chesser's.

Plans for the fiscal year are being formulated, and, if all projects on the agenda materialize, Columbiana will continue moving forward in a most progressive and permanent manner.

MRS. CORLEY PASSES

Just as we go to press, we regretfully learn of the death of Mrs. Corley, mother of Mrs. L. H. Ellis in Columbiana.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday, October 9, at two o'clock from the First Methodist Church in Sylacauga.

Republicans To Meet

Shelby County Republican Party will meet at the Court House in Columbiana, Alabama at 2:00 o'clock Friday, October 10th. All Republicans are urged to be present.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: Into the savage, discontented Indian arena beyond Pittsburgh went a young trapper named Will Morgan, searching for a woman he feared might be dead, killing Indians at every opportunity because they had deprived him of her love. The Indians learned to know and fear him more than the ragged militia. The government seeks to arrest him for violating peace treaties by killing Indians but he escapes capture by joining Gen. Wayne's new army as a scout. Here, he learns about a strange resemblance he bears to a great Indian chief, and boldly agrees to impersonate the chief in the hope of obtaining vital information.

CHAPTER XV

Accordingly they left camp with an outpost relief so as not to attract the attention of possible spies and went on into the forest, traveling cautiously toward the main group of Miami towns. Several times small parties of Indians were seen but never were these warriors of sufficient importance to be wearing the sort of garment Morgan wanted.

As they passed into Miami territory Will seemed to move with increasing confidence. Kirby noted the fact and commented, remembering that Will had worked out of Pittsburgh.

"I reckon I covered the whole territory," Morgan replied grimly. "It didn't pay me to stay long in one place!"

Morgan Ventures Boldly Into the Indian Domain

It was late afternoon of their second day when they began to see signs of a large village ahead. Trails crossed and recrossed, all seeming to indicate a place of some importance. Presently they could see huts through the trees and Will pulled Kirby to a halt. "I remember it now. A dozen bark huts and maybe twenty wigwams. This ought to be big enough."

"Luck," Kirby whispered. "Don't take any fool chances!"

He watched anxiously as Will melted away into the wavering shadows, losing sight of his companion almost immediately. It made the riverman realize how relations between them had changed. Once he had been the master and Will the pupil; now he knew that Morgan could do things in the woods which his old tutor could not even approach.

After some anxious moments there was a brief movement at a corner of the big lodge and Kirby understood that Will had reached his objective. After that there was an eternity of about three minutes. Then the shadow flickered again at the corner. Still there had been no alarm given.

Kirby felt rather than saw Morgan come into the trees beside him. "What luck?" he asked.

"Fair enough. Let's go."

Avoiding the patch of light where the moon shone through a break in the pines they drank thirstily and Kirby framed a question. "How fur do ye figger we oughta travel tonight? We ain't bein' chased."

"Another ten miles won't hurt us. It should put us pretty well out of Miami country and we won't have to watch out for anything but scout parties."

"Did ye get the outfit?"

Will unwrapped the bundle he had been carrying and displayed a beaded jerkin which Kirby could appreciate even in the gloom. "There was nobody in the lodge but an old man," he said slowly. "He was pretty sick, I think, and his war bag and weapons were hanging on the wall as though they hadn't been used for a long time. I took the jacket from its peg and headed for the door but just then he woke up. I had to kill him."

Kirby stared. "Ye sound almost like ye was sorry about it. What's wrong?"

Will smiled. "I don't know. He's the first Indian I've seen in months that I didn't want to kill. Maybe I'm getting over my notion that I'm going to clean up the whole territory."

"And a good thing too," Kirby grunted. "Ye've got to be all Injun every minute while ye're on this chore ye're startin'. It'll be safer if ye don't feel too much of the killin' urge all the time."

At headquarters they went right to work with their final preparations.

Finally the job was done and it was agreed that the disguise was as perfect as they could make it. A supply of war paint had been procured and under the almost fearful direction of Peters they made up Will's face in the manner affected by White Panther. General Wayne assisted at the final preparations, talking over last minute details with Morgan.

"How do you propose avoiding the real White Panther?"

Will lifted his shoulders almost imperceptibly. "It's one of the chances I'll have to take. I believe he lives in one of the Miami towns, presumably one of those farthest west. I'm going to keep to the east, maybe even sticking to Wyandot country."

"What about the Wyandot lingo?" Kirby objected. "That might cause trouble."

Will shook his head. "The Miami White Panther won't be expected to use the Wyandot tongue. I'll just depend on being recognized as the eminent chief."

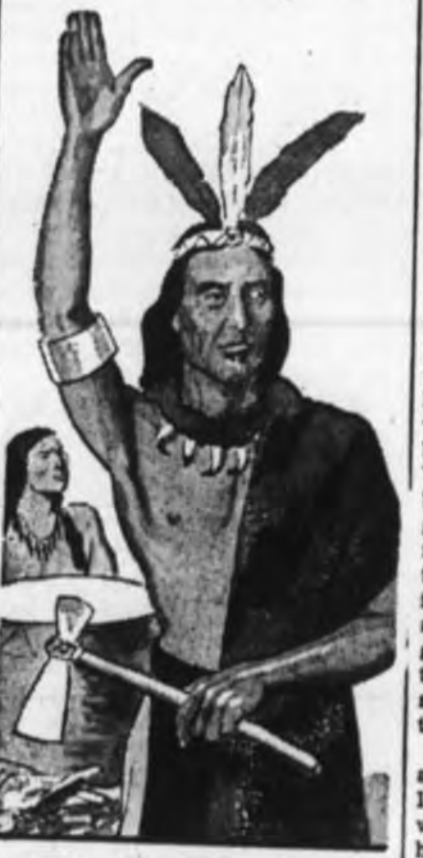
Kirby frowned. "Mebbe it'll be all right—but yer scalp is shore lookin' loose."

"It's been loose before."

Morgan made his way eastward in his new guise, carefully avoiding any contact with either Indians or whites until he had worked into the principal Wyandot section south of the western point of Lake Erie. It was ticklish work and he scouted several villages before deciding to make the plunge which might prove fatal. Finally, after several hasty withdrawals, he walked boldly into a camp of warriors who were apparently homeward bound after a late fall raid into the Muskingum area.

At his approach the warriors sprang to their weapons but Will marched on unconcernedly.

One of the band, apparently a minor chief, seemed to recognize White Panther for he strode forward eagerly and welcomed the great one from the west. He used the Miami tongue also and Will felt better both at the deference indicated and at the verification of his hunch about the language.



When the speaker had finished, a chief who had been referred to as Tark the Crane rose and greeted Will with great gravity.

Choosing his words with extreme care Morgan explained that he had come to bring the greetings of the Miamis and to learn whether their brothers the Wyandots were ready to help drive out the white soldiers who had come again into the land of the red men.

Deception is Successful, At Least, Temporarily

The chief replied in a speech that was just too eager to have the usual dignity. For some reason he was excited at having White Panther come to him and he made considerable fuss about seeing that food was brought and that the visitor was made comfortable. He proposed White Panther accompany the band to their village which he said was but a day's journey to the north.

Keeping a keen lookout without appearing to do so Morgan permitted himself to be escorted to a long house built on the Iroquois style. The leader of the war party seemed to feel that he had attained great importance by his work of escorting White Panther and he introduced the visitor with a flourish of oratory.

When the speaker had finished, a chief who had been referred to as Tark the Crane rose and greeted Will with great gravity.

"It is good to see White Panther," he said. "The crooked tongues have spoken that he stays in his lodge with the white squaw. It is well that the crooked tongues lie. We welcome our brother."

Will would have liked to follow up the reference to White Panther and a white woman but he knew he had to impress the circle of warriors with his reply. Choosing his phrases carefully he said, "White Panther still is ready to take his place with the warriors who go to drive away the white soldiers. The Miamis will take the warpath against the young men of White-Chief-Who-Never-Sleeps. They wish to know that their brothers the Wyandots will be with them."

A chorus of "Nee! Nee!" coupled with solemn nods of approval greeted him and a young chief rose to make reply.

"The Wyandots will fight beside their brothers, the Miami. The great King beyond the water has promised to send his young men with guns and powder. Soon all the tribes will be together, ready to drive away the despoilers of the hunting grounds."

Another chief rose as his fellow returned to the impassive circle. With a quick glance at Morgan he spoke quietly. "Eagle's Claw welcomes his brother. He remembers when they fought side by side in attacking the settlement of the white's. Eagle Claw will be happy again to fight beside his friend."

As though his comments had roused them, the various leaders began to make speeches again. A few were optimistic, referring to the promises of the Weas, Ojibways and Potawatomi to help, but the majority spoke of caution. It amazed Will to learn that these boastful tribesmen were keen analysts of the enemy's strength. They referred to St. Clair's army with open scorn but they were concerned about Wayne. Their scouts had reported on his preparations, drill and rifle practice. This time the Indians would face a real army, not an undisciplined mob.

The oratory went on for several hours, each chief apparently feeling that he must say a few words or admit inferiority. Finally, however, it was all over and Will was conducted to a lodge where the town's best had been set out for him. It gave him a chance to think over the many things he had learned. His own status seemed secure enough, probably because the real White Panther was actually staying in his lodge with some captive woman. It was still a matter of risk but thus far the deception was succeeding better than he had dared hope.

'White Panther' Joins Chiefs On Tribe Tours

On the following day he rested in the village, receiving all the homage due a visiting notable. There was a lacrosse game organized for his pleasure and it was while he was watching it that he was approached by the dour-appearing Eagle's Claw. Will greeted him cordially enough but used a pretended interest in the game to avoid conversation. As a result Eagle's Claw did most of the talking while Will listened avidly for information, always putting up a show of being unconcerned. It was going to be essential to know something about his former supposed association with this savage; no better time to learn than now.

Eagle's Claw was not backward about speaking. He wanted the other Indians to see him on good terms with the great White Panther and he kept up a running fire of comment, ranging from the smutty humor of the red man to reminiscences of the hunts they had made together. Only when the game was nearly over did he refer to a raid on a white settlement—and Will realized at once that the warrior was speaking of the Bolden massacre.

He could feel the rage welling up within him at the knowledge that this man at his side was one of the murderers who had committed the outrage. Perhaps Eagle's Claw had been one of those who so barbarously tortured young Dan. Perhaps he had helped . . . Will brought himself up sharply. He had to keep his mind clear. He needed information; there would be time later for thoughts of revenge.

He led the man on, discovering that a white girl had indeed been taken captive and was now the squaw of White Panther. Eagle's Claw made it a point of careful jest in mentioning it, apparently not sure just how far White Panther had become enamored of his captive.

Fortunately for Will's self-control there was an interruption as a feast was announced in his honor. He spent the rest of the day in a round of festivities, the afternoon entertainment moving indoors as snow began to fall. When he was again alone in a lodge he found that his thoughts were oddly confused. He finally knew what had happened to Mary—but the knowledge was scarcely comforting.

January was nearly spent before a break in the weather made it possible for him to leave the village of Tark the Crane. Greatly to his satisfaction, both the chief and Eagle's Claw insisted on accompanying him on his tour of the other Wyandot towns. He understood that they were playing personal politics but their good will was a distinct asset to him. Now he could move about with confidence, his position assured.

Each new village added something to the picture he was getting of the Indian strength and at every visit he did his best to work on the growing fear of Wayne's military might. Always in this he seemed to get the full support of both Tark and Eagle's Claw, the latter Indian playing the perfect supporting role to the man who would have cheerfully slain him for his part in the Bolden raid.

In late February their wide sweep through the land of the Wyandots brought them to a town as large as that of Tark the Crane. Here, for the first time, Will found signs of the distrust which he had feared so long. Chief Bear Nose was hospitable enough but at the council which was held to welcome the travelers there were unmistakable signs that the brawny Bear Nose had something on his mind. A prominent member of the Wolf totem, he was both Medicine Man and mighty warrior, a power among the Wyandots at least equal to Tark the Crane. His good will would have been valuable, but for some reason he was inclined to be surly. He questioned Morgan sharply during the council, his tone indicating distrust of both White Panther and the Miamis.

DERISION - THE OPPONENT'S LAST RESORT

"They laughed him to scorn". Matthew 9:21

In a home in the city of Capernaum a little girl lay dead. The devoted father, crushed by the blow, hurried to Jesus on hearing that he was in the town on that very day. In response to his trustful importunity, Jesus accompanied the suppliant to his broken home.

Upon arrival, the Master found a group of professional mourners in charge; people who, according to an oriental custom, were hired to make noisy demonstrations in houses invaded by death. Jesus, assuring the stricken family that he would be for them a present help in trouble, commanded that the howling lamentations be stopped; whereupon the hireling mourners, realizing that their hope of financial gain was gone, restored to derision. "They laughed him to scorn."

Ridicule is a powerful weapon. It seeks to drive reason from the throne, and often succeeds. Once upon a time, Hon. J. Proctor Knott, in a speech before the United States Congress, defeated a project for the building of a railroad from Duluth into the Northwest, wholly by the use of sarcasm, making a laughing stock of its promoters.

The great Methodist Church was born on the campus of Oxford University under the leadership of John Wesley and his consecrated group; but in its initial stage Satan tried to destroy the movement by mocking taunts of the fellow students of that earnest band.

A single sneer at the Christian idea, especially if it comes from one who claims intellectual superiority, can blight the loyalty of an immature believer beyond restoration.

Flippancy and fervor are sworn enemies. Laughing at a person is far different from laughing with a person. The one is the product of venomous jealosy, the other of genial fellowship. Enraged beyond measure, "they laughed him to scorn". Imposters they were, and they knew that their nefarious trade was in jeopardy, for they knew that Jesus of Nazareth would have no dealing with tricksters. Nor does He!

ANSWERS TO Intelligence Test

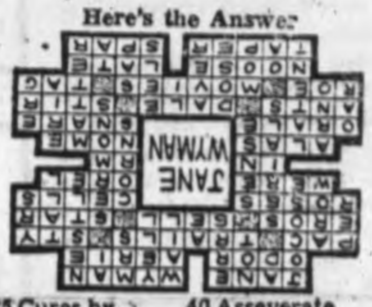
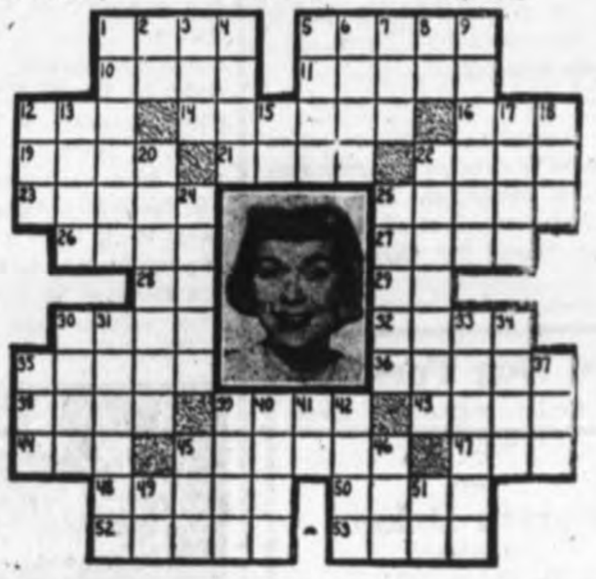
Here's the Answer





ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

B. F. HATCHETT & G. C. STARCHER JR

At Experiment, Georgia, the rolling red hills so similar to Shelby's are famed by the same sort of fine folk and subject to just the same sort of weather.

The staff of the progressive state experiment station there have been the originators of many valuable new fruit and field crop varieties and many improvements in methods of food processing, soils testing, and cattle raising.

Page 49 of the current Farm and Ranch magazine tells of the development of Empire cotton varieties by U. S. D. A. cotton breeder Wilfred W. Ballard at that station.

From 1937 to June 1942, Mr. Ballard's "Man Friday" was this writer, George Starcher. If, at times, I can be of service to the farmers of our area it will be due in large part to five year's training in detailed observation and valuation of what I saw, under direction of that exacting and precise scientist. It is good to see his work praised in a national magazine.

We have been fortunate in being able to get, through the North Central Soil Conservation District, 250 pounds of certified Alabama strain reseeding crimson clover, 40 pounds broadleaf caley peas, and 25 pounds ball clover to be loaned to cooperators to introduce those crops in the county. While we do not expect any of these to reach immediate success the way Chapel Hill Rescue did in its first year here, we do feel some farmers will find one or more of them will fill a need for them.

J. H. Edwards, who sold his Mostellers farm recently and bought near Wilton, had the largest bush and bog harrow we have ever seen at work on his new farm last week. Pulled by the E. Falkner bulldozer, it was a 6,500 pound double gang harrow. Did a fine job, too.

Falkner left there to clear ten acres for W. C. Martin, Montevallo, and do some work for others in that vicinity before moving to the M. B. Bates farm at Vincent to do a week's clearing.

The Vincent FFA boys didn't win the color of ribbon they wished with their state fair exhibit. However, their comparison of rights and wrongs of pasture development attracted large crowds and told a valuable story. And the boys did the major part of the work, a thing we feel should carry more weight in judging than it does.

WILSONVILLE

ELIZABETH WELDON

People of Wilsonville are grieved over the death of Mrs. J. F. Helms who passed away Friday, October 3. Funeral services were held at the Baptist Church Saturday with Rev. I. M. Watson and Rev. Lay officiating. Many out of town relatives and friends were here. We offer sympathy to the family.

Our town council held their regular meeting Monday night. The outgoing mayor, Mr. Jack Stors, installed the following officers: S. S. McEwen as mayor, councilmen: Dewey Bolton, Kermit Baker, Virgil Fulmer, G. W. Rayfield and O'Neal Crumpton.

The W. M. U. of Shelby county is meeting today in the Wilsonville Baptist Church. Miss Georgia May Ogburn, a Missionary to Chili will speak this afternoon.

Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gould of Chattanooga were the week end guests of Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Gould.

We are happy to report that Durwood Ingram has returned home after serving in the armed forces in Korea.

Miss Ruby Carden of Birmingham was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Garrett. Miss Carden is Mrs. Garrett's neice.

Misses Evelyn and Johnnie Helms and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Seals and sons of Birmingham, and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Helms Jr., of the U. S. Navy, were called home because of the illness and death of their mother, Mrs. J. F. Helms.

Mr. and Mrs. Winston Baker of Gadsden were here this week end.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Wolf had as their guests this week end, Mr. and Mrs. Marshal Wolf and son Elton and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McClendon of Gadsden; Mr. Mansel Wolf of Scottsboro and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Arrant (Lottie Wolf) and daughter Martha Jane of Electric. This was baby Martha Jane's first visit to Wilsonville.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Walling and daughter Ann of Memphis, Tenn., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Weldon and family this week.

Mrs. Si Nalls of Birmingham visited Mr. and Mrs. Grady McEwen.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Perry and children of Birmingham are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Perry.

Rev. I. M. Watson brought the messages for both the morning and evening services at the Baptist Church Sunday. He conducted the baptismal service Sunday morning.

Mrs. Flora Spearman has returned after an extended visit with her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Hill in Bessemer.

Mrs. Rena Hoover of Anniston and Mrs. Maggie O'Neal of Chattanooga were guests of Mrs. Rodgers and Mr. and Mrs. Carlson.

Mrs. Walter Lowery of Columbiana was the guest of Miss Mayme Hill Sunday.

Mrs. Radcliff, formerly Elizabeth Edwards of Campbellsburg, Ky., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Edwards, Mrs. Perdie Miller and Mrs. Claud Edwards and family.

Visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boyles were their daughters, Mrs. Margaret Tucker and Mrs. L. U. Carver and Mr. Carver of Gadsden.

Mrs. I. M. Hebb is visiting her granddaughter, Mrs. Marie Richardson in Wetumpka.

The Baker family had a family reunion Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Josh Baker. Thirty-five relatives from all over Alabama attended this get together.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Plyers, two daughters and daughter-in-law of Weogufka visited Mr. and Mrs. Phate Hardy. Mrs. Plyers and Mr. Hardy are brother and sister.

The area which today is Alabama was originally claimed and occupied by four large Indian confederations. Each confederation was made up of many tribes which were loosely connected. The four confederations were the Cherokee, the Chickasaw, the Choctaw, and the Muscogee.

Tax Assessing Methods Changed

Beginning October 1, 1952, the method of assessing taxes on real property has been changed.

In order to relieve the taxpayer from coming into the Tax Assessor's Office each year and giving in his real estate, Luther Fowler, Tax Assessor for Shelby County, has set up a different system whereby a property owner who does not sell, buy, build or change his property in any way, will not have to come in and assess his or her property until there is a change made by them.

If the owner has been living on his property and has been claiming Homestead Exemption, and moves off the property, it should be reported to the Tax Assessor. This also applies to the person who moved on to a place and wishes to claim Homestead Exemption. If new buildings are erected on the property, this should be reported. In other words, any change made that may affect the taxes, then the tax payer would need to give in his taxes between October 1st and December 31st of that particular year the change was made.

This system does not relieve those people who have personal property of assessing their property each year. This would apply to people with stock of goods, office equipment, gins, saw mills, tractors, etc.

If anyone desires more information about this new method of assessment, they may come to the Tax Assessor's office and he will be glad to explain it to them.

All people who have bought real estate should bring their deeds with them so that a correct description may be obtained of the property to be assessed.

Sept. 25, Oct. 2-9, 1952

Today there are more than 5,000 miles of railroad tracks in Alabama, and waterway transportation is constantly being improved and expanded. Alabama's Highway System embraces more than 7,000 miles of public roads.

In all likelihood, the Chickasaws, Choctaws and Creeks came into Alabama from west of the Mississippi River. Each tribe within the confederations had its own chief, chosen by the warriors to act as leader, and named for life.

Believe it or not, we've done the impossible, we've just found a retarded man who is not positive that he could run a better campaign than either Ike or Adlai.

GOV. PERSONS POSTS REWARD FOR NEGRO

Governor Gordon Persons has posted $250 for the recapture and conviction of an escaped negro prisoner suspected of assaulting a Coaltown, Alabama, white woman.

The fugitive has been identified as Henry Lee Sanders, who escaped recently while serving a 15 year murder term in the state prison.

The white woman, Mrs. Cullen Wilker, said that a man whom she identified as Sanders, entered her home. She said he asked for a cigaret and then struck her. She said he was driven away by her screams.

Tuscaloosa Circuit Solicitor J. Monroe Ward said he believed the suspect was hiding in that area.

Your Hands Are NOT Tied at the Ballot Box Nov. 4th!
Here Is How To Vote for a Great American EISENHOWER
for President and Still Support Your Democratic Candidate for Local Office
Every Alabama voter has both the legal and the moral right to split his ticket in the general election.
This is what a majority of true Alabama Democrats—disgusted with corruption, stupidity and betrayal of the South—are going to do.
To VOTE for "IKE"
and Your Local Democratic Candidates
1 Do NOT put your X in the circle at the top of any column on your ballot. Leave those circles blank.
2 Place your X before the names of these electors who will cast their votes for Eisenhower:
(X) William E. Brooks, Jr. (X) Leander Isbell
(X) John B. Byrd (X) J. F. Moore
(X) L. A. Carroll (X) Paul G. Parsons
(X) Robert S. Cartledge (X) John A. Posey
(X) Offa B. Cosby (X) Arthur South
(X) Carl Weigand
3 Place your X before the names of all the other Democratic candidates printed in the Democratic column on the ballot. DO NOT put your X before the names of the electors in this Democratic column.
EISENHOWER is a true supporter of Democratic principles and policies in the tradition of Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson. Be a patriot — not a partisan. Help elect this great American!

Thoughts From A Harpersville Club Man

THOU ART THE MAN

2nd Samuel, 12-1st to 7th

Surely, if Nathan could say to King David, the above accusation and get away with it, an Alabamian should be able to do the same thing in Alabama. The writer is aware of the fact that printers ink, time, paper, etc are all too high to spend on subjects without merits, so use the waste basket freely if necessary. My Story is this. Last Thursday thru the efforts of our Live Wire Sec. of our National Exchange Club, J. H. Kimbrough, we were treated with an evening program by the State Highway Department, which, owing to the nature of the program, we could not claim it enjoyable, but very educational and interesting indeed, being composed of snap shots of a part of the over 1600 deaths let alone thousands of crippled, possibly for life and destruction of property in 1950-51 and also, a very interesting lecture on the seriousness of travel on the Highways, and the obligations each individual shares in driving.

To the writer it was the most heart stirring, heart searching challenge to every citizen of our fair state who sat under the sound of the speakers voice, and too, as we viewed the pictures of death in the many forms we could not help but repeat in our hearts, "God, am I my brothers keeper to the extent that the blood of these our fellow Alabamians and others are crying out to us from the ground?" Then too, we wonder how many of our own people are responsible to one another and most of all to the GREAT GOD of us all, my mind runs back to search my heart as to my attitude towards the exercise of my franchise in combatting the greatest enemy of Alabama and America today, LIQUOR.

At the conclusion of the meeting, questions were solicited by the speakers from the audience. Someone asked, what do you attribute the cause of so much destruction of life and property? Answer: 1st. Speeding; 2nd, Driving on wrong side of road; 3rd, Driving while intoxicated. Then the writer asked: "have you ever figured out just what a driver does when he is driving an automobile intoxicated, or might say drunk? Isn't it a fact that about the first thing a drunk will do if driving is to step on the gas and get on the other side of the road?"

If this is true, then the driving while intoxicated to my way of thinking is one of the first causes of so much death and destruction on our highways and should be dealt with by our officers as such. It is not fair to those of us who do not drink to be subjected to the ever mounting dangers of driving on our highways because some wish to indulge in the habit of driving while intoxicated, there by forcing those of us who do not drink to face the hazardous highways at his will.

The greatest challenge, I think the people of Alabama could make, is to call upon the state to do away with this practice at any cost, and then watch the accidents drop to a mere sprinkle. Lord, give us fortitude to bear the burdens we can not change, give us courage to change the things that should be changed, and give us wisdom to separate the one from the other.

The above prayer possibly is not word for word but is the sentiment of a prayer by one of our bishops, and expresses what I think is very much needed attitude in our fair state.

In closing, may I ask, Alabama, do you license your subjects to furnish the fluids that cause most us the accidents on our highways and then wonder where the trouble is? If so, THOU ART THE MAN.

—Raz Fewclothes

Cloche and Cup Chapeaux Bare Hairlines

Dark green wool jersey makes a debonair turban tilted just off center. The fabric is swathed about a flat crown, fastened by jet clips and tied in a casual knot at the side.

BY EDNA MILES

THE deep hat that cups the head but does it becomingly, keynotes the fall millinery collections of top designers. This means that the hairline is bared and the hat is worn deep and straight on, or tilted ever so slightly.

As done by Tatiana of Saks Fifth Avenue, these are young-looking hats with a great deal of flattery. Black is all-important, but this year it's black polished with jet, satin or velvet braid. In color, there are delicate shades of lavender, pale blue, plus glowing reds and greens.

In fabrics, there are velours, velvets, pleated horsehair, wool jersey, and a new very thin silk stocking jersey. There's news in a French fabric that's imaginative. It's fuzzy and soft much like angora, but is in reality a mixture of nylon and rayon.

The cloche is much in evidence. This designer does one in purple velours, gives it a short, rippled brim and a long black quill.

For the equally important turban, there are lines that bare the brow and curve over the ears. One such is done in dark green taffeta with markings of cut black velvet.

For after-five-o'clock wear, the beret appears in white sequins, dazzling as mid-winter snow, slanted against a black velvet arc.

For a second beret there's black velvet dotted by tiny red silk tassels.

The three-cornered hat in a pixie mood, with swirls at each corner so that the crown lies flat yet eddies in pretty dips about the head. Made of a new nylon that looks like angora.

PIPE PUFFIN' DOG — Dixie Belle, member of Detroit, Mich., top-dog social set makes ready for morning shopping. Puffing her well-broken-in pipe, favorite hat carefully perched between long ears, Dixie poses for photographers. Glasses give that intellectual look. She wears 'em all the time. Dixie, English Pointer owned by Herman Park of Detroit, knows more than 30 tricks, would surprise no one if she talked.

Veterans' Column

State Dept. of Veterans' Affairs

E. J. SULLIVAN, VSO

Here's some information for you Korean Veterans who are planning on enrolling in college, or have already enrolled. It's a pretty good possibility that those Veterans Administration Subsistence and tuition checks will not start arriving until at least the latter part of November. Possibly even December.

This means that most of you are going to have to dig down in your own pockets, or float a loan from someone in order to pay your initial enrollment fees, buy books and supplies and meet living expenses until you receive your subsistence check. Korean Veterans will have to pay their own tuition out of their subsistence check. And the School has to Certify to the VA that the student has attended classes for a month before his voucher can even be made up.

Most Colleges and Universities are reluctant to set up INSTALLMENT systems to allow Ex-GIs to pay as they go. However, some schools do have a different payment schedule, which, in most cases, is about the same plan used for NEEDY or temporarily broke NON-VETERANS.

It's certainly going to be most DIFFICULT for MOST students under the GI Bill to get by for the first two or three months. A spokesman for the BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU has recommended that any GI student needing cash should go to his banking institution where interest rates are reasonable.

It is recommended that you hang on to your MUSTERING-OUT PAY. It is estimated that 10,000 veterans will enter institutions of higher learning this fall. The law provides full time payments to veterans enrolled in educational institutions of $110 a month for a veteran without dependents; $135 a month for a veteran with one dependent and $160 a month for a veteran with more than one dependent.

Application For Combat Pay

Application for combat pay may be made by any Korean Veteran who may be eligible. Forms may be had at the post offices, or at this office. Any one that served in the combat zone under fire of the enemy is eligible for $45 a months if he served as much as 6 days consecutive in any one month.

STATE EMPLOYEES CONDUCT POLITICAL POLL

Gov. Stevenson was favored 898 to 468 for General Eisenhower for the presidency in a poll conducted among state capitol employes and workers for the Montgomery Advertiser.

The vote came after Advertiser Editor Grover C. Hall had challenged Gov. Persons to allow a vote on the Democratic-Republican race at the statehouse, and Persons had retaliated with a suggestion that workers at the statedly-Republican Montgomery Advertiser also be polled.

In the secret balloting, the Democratic candidate got 88 votes at the Advertiser, compared to 64 for the Republican standard-bearer.

SPLIT-RAIL FULL-PAIL MEMENTOES—Souvenirs from other, more bitter presidential campaigns are examined by Mrs. Polly Lovett at the Chicago Historical Society exhibit. Big axe swung high in her right hand is from the Lincoln "rail-splittin'" campaign of 1860. Dangling at lower right is a "full dinner pail" used in McKinley rallies in 1896. Badges decorating her blouse date campaigns back to 1840. Historians predict a century hence, symbol of Ike-Stevenson campaign will be a broom.

STATE REVENUE FIGURES

Alabama Revenue Collector Joe M. Edwards says that during the fiscal year completed September 30, a total of $131,623,580 was collected by the State Revenue Department.

The previous high had been $107,752,026 for the 1950-51 fiscal year. The sales tax, raised by the 1951 legislature from 2 to 3 per cent and effective last October 1, the beginning of the fiscal year.... accounted for a major portion of the increase.

Sales tax collections totaled $51,869,344, an increase of $17,615,688 from the previous fiscal year.

Other levy returns included: Gasoline tax, $39,470,665; Income tax, $16,929,115; Tobacco tax, $7,993,521; Use tax, $4,245,976.

WELFARE BOARD ADOPTS OPERATING BUDGET

The Alabama Board of Public Welfare has adopted an operating budget of $38,024,633 for the 1952-53 fiscal year.

State Welfare Commissioner Dr. Bill Dorrough said that as approved by the board, the budget totaled $28,824,257 federal, and $9,200,375 state money.

State Welfare Co91f5mwmwm Dorrough reported estimated expenditures for the current fiscal year at $32,822,264, of which over $23,000,000 was federal money.

He also said that the current case load on welfare rolls is 9,292 less than it was a year ago. Dorrough said that 5,388 cases had been closed because of the relatives responsibility law and because the property limitation was reduced last year to $800.

TO THE PEOPLE OF SHELBY COUNTY

Again I want to express my deep appreciation to you for making it possible for me to be the Democratic nominee for Probate Judge of Shelby County at the General Election to be held on November 4th, 1952.

Due to the busy season in the Probate Office it will be almost impossible for me to see all of you before that date. However, I want to assure you than I will be most grateful for your vote and support. I promise to render the kind of service the people of Shelby County deserve.

Sincerely yours,

STATE MILK CONTROL BOARD HIKES SWEET MILK PRICE IN SEVEN CITIES

The State Milk Control Board this week hiked sweet milk prices by one cent a quart in seven Alabama cities.

Affected were Montgomery, Tuskegee, Union Springs, Tuscaloosa, Mobile, Lanett, and Opelika.

Under the new schedule, pasteurized milk sells for 26 cents a quart in Mobile and 25 cents in other cities. Homogenized milk costs a penny more.

Board Executive Secretary Alvin Smith said that a clerical slip-up caused the new price ranges to go into effect before a press announcement had been released. He said that news stories had been prepared for the action, but had not been distributed as per schedule. As a result, the hike went into effect without public notice. Producers and distributors had been notified.

Mrs. Dorothy Weiss, a native of Georgia but more recently employed in Michigan, has been named superintendent of the State Training School for Girls, Chalkville.

Social and Personal Mention

Mildred White Wallace, Editor

TO THE LADIES:

I want to express my delight over the reaction from various sources, regarding the feminine interest now in evidence in the coming election. I have received many letters and phone calls from individuals and from various organizations in the county, requesting more information on the "candidates and the issues involved in the coming election". Programs on these subjects are being sponsored in Club circles. Talks are being made by members studying these controversial topics, and all of these substantiate the fact, that Mrs. John Q. Public, is not only going to vote, when November 4 rolls around, but her vote is going to be an intelligent one. If things keep going as they are now progressing, in this county, caused by the "ladies in action".... the largest feminine vote ever tabulated will be counted in the General Election, which is just around the corner.

The approaching tilt between the Republicans and the Democrats is important to all of us. It is not a one man or a one woman's job in this county. As far as I know, there is no concrete organization, and without it, as I see it.... there will be no coordinated effort, nor can there be effective results. Only by organized team work can there be a successful campaign waged in this county, and the sooner same is perfected, and we get to work, the better the outlook for a Democratic victory on November 4. So, come on ladies, pin the "insignia" of your Party on your coat, and stand up and be counted. I have very little enthusiasm for a fellow who says he is for "Ike" or for "Adlai Stevenson", but.... refuses to "say it out loud"!

Side-stepping an issue, may be, according to some potent politicos, "the part of wisdom" as far as future political ambitions are concerned, but.... I do not agree with them. I honestly believe, the voting contingent prefers the fellow offering himself for public service, who courageously face the issues; states exactly how he stands, and why, on the controversial topics, then, leaves it to the intelligence of the voters to decide whom, they believe, will best serve the people in official positions.

I am rather wary of the fellow who is for a man or a Party, "but".... Those three little letters always leave a lingering doubt in my mind. There is another type fellow who comes around and says "It makes little difference to me who is President. It ain't going to affect me". (Brother you don't know just how much difference it will make!) Then, along comes another Main Streeter, who says, "No. I am not going to vote for Eisenhower, I am going fishing on November 4". Now, can you beat that? This attitude isn't helping matters any.... and rowing up and down a river in a boat trying to inveigle a fish to bite a hook on November 4, is not going to solve national problems that will be settled on this fateful day.

So, all these things considered, we are delighted to learn that the "women" are at long last alerted, and whats more will continue to inform themselves and having made up their own minds, will on November 4, vote for the leaders, whom they have determined, will best serve this country.

Answering a letter just received, (I shall be delighted to see you or your representatives, any time you can come by. It will be nice to have the privilege of "talking it over". Thanks for your interest.)

. . . Mrs. Edmund Ewing has returned to Columbiana after spending a month in Tulsa, Oklahoma with her daughter, Mrs. Horace Smith and Mr. Smith.

. . . Howard Latham of Montevallo, was in Columbiana Monday, and we enjoyed a few minutes chat with this long-time friend of ours who says he has "never enjoyed anything half so much as he is enjoying retirement". Howard looked it, too. Fact is, as Howard expresses it, he has just now "found time" to enjoy life, and he is certainly doing that very thing, "enjoying life".

. . . Dr. and Mrs. Sam Shafferman have named their young son, Stanley Shafferman.

THANKS MR. T. O. BRADFORD OF MAYLENE, ALABAMA

T. O. Bradford ho resides in Maylene, Rt. 1, came into the office Friday and allowed us the privilege of pinning a Stevenson button on his lapel after which, he remarked as follows: "You bet I am for Stevenson-Sparkman ticket. I haven't forgotten Hoover days. Fact is, I got so poor during that administration, I did not have money enough to take the "Home Paper". Thats not true, today, and here is my Two Dollars for another year. You all are doing a grand work thru our County Paper, just keep it up"! And with those words of encouragement, Mr. Bradford went back down Main still advocating "good old Democracy" as we, who believe in its principles, feel perfectly confident that it will triumph over all the hub-hub now reverberating around the country.

. . . Floyd Mooney, of Wilsonville Rt., is now working for Alabama Ordnance Works, but, he was not "too busy" Saturday, while in Columbiana, to come by for a social chat in our office during which time he renewed his loyalty to the "Old Home Paper" which, Floyd states, is "a very important periodical in his home."

(All these good words, go a long way on the Road to Happiness for those of us travelling the Inky Trail. Thanks.)

. . . Homer Whitfield, of Sterrett Rt., was in town Saturday, and we were delighted to have him come by the office and "sign on the dotted line" for 52 more issues of the Reporter-Democrat.

. . . Our subscription list continues growing each week, and we hope to have a Reporter-Democrat in every home in Shelby county, some of these days. You can help us achieve this goal, by reading your paper and passing it on to a non-subscriber. Maybe he or she will like it well enough to give us a trial order of 6 months, for one dollar! Will you help me try this plan? Thanks in advance! Somehow I knew you would.

. . . Miss Juanita Gardner of Phoenix City, Mr. and Mrs. Boozer Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Brown McBrier of Leeds, were recent guests in the home of the W. L. Gardner's in Columbiana.

. . . Edward Lewis used to live in Pelham. He and his family now reside in Columbiana. Mr. Lewis states he has spent 9 years in the Army, but, these years have not changed his politics. He asked us for a Stevenson button, and left the office wearing it, confident he would be on the winning side, Noevmber 4.

. . . (By the way, you Gentlemen who are supposed to be in charge of this campaign in this county.... Will you kindly bring me some more buttons? I am completely OUT! And every day, good Democrats come in my office wanting one. They tell me they are answering the call to the Democratic Colors, issued thru their "Home Paper" during the past several weeks. It is good to realize that the "penpoint industry" is having a part in lining up our own people for the "great push" toward a successful climax November 4.)

. . . Clarence Cook, former Director of Columbiana Choral Clubs was in town Saturday, and we had a curbstone chat with him. Clarence is working with the Baptist Choir at Childersburg, and has charge of the Mt. Vernon Choir composed of about 40 voices. He is most enthusiastic over his work with both groups.

. . . Ralph Jones is a student in Howard College and an enthusiastic Football player. He was on the team that beat Sewanee during the last week end, and this is the first time Howard has come out victorious over this Tennessee team. Maybe, Ralph, in some way, was responsible for this victory. Knowing Ralph as we do, we know he played his part O. K. Naturally, it takes "team-work" to win anything and no where is this statement more correct than on a football squad.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Wyatt are the proud parents of twin boys, who were born Sunday morning, October 5.

. . . Congratulations to talented Carolyn Evans, who occupies the position as Private Secretary to the President of Odess, Maryin & Herzberg, Inc., with offices in First National Bank Building. Carolyn sends a special delivery letter to the writer this morning, ordering the Reporter-Democrat sent her immediately. This is just another incident of Columbiana folk who find it "lonely sailing in the Magic City", without it.

. . . "Every body likes Ike".... but not all who like the General will vote for him for President. Those few Democrats who, a few weeks ago, were loudly proclaiming "Ike".... have quieted down to "whispering about it". Many of them, in fact, have heard the "call to the colors" and tell me the nearer the time comes for "splitting a ticket" or for "going Republican", the farther away they get from shying away from the Rooster! That is sweet music to my ears and is exactly the kind of a melody I have been banking on coming thru.... on November 4!

. . . Mrs. L. C. Walker has returned from a delightful trip to Siluria where she was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Phillips and Mr. Phillips.

. . . Bro. Tom Roberts celebrated the passing of his 81st birthday anniversary last Thursday, October 1st. The good wishes of a host of friends made the day a memorable occasion.

. . . Just can't help envying our Keystone friends, Elizabeth Wallace Hammond, and Maurice Hammond, the trip to their home in Gatlinburg, where they will spend the month of October. I am quite certain no one thing in this world can be more bewitching than watching that old Mountain turn gold!

. . . Helen Holliman will talk before the B. W. C. on October 13, and we hope every member will be present to hear this little lady tell "the women" how important it is that they cast their ballots on November 4. As we told you last week. IF all the women, who are eligible to vote, will qualify, and cast their ballots in the coming General Election, "The women" and not "the men", will name the next President of the United States. This is a tremendous responsibility, but we are glad to learn that so many women in Shelby county are becoming interested in public affairs, and we urge you to hear Helen Holliman on this date as she traces the history of Woman's Suffrage. It will be an interesting and an enlightening journey thru the years. Don't miss it.

. . . Glad to include the family of W. A. Roper of Columbiana on our list of "new subscribers" this week.

FACTS AND FIGURES

L. G. Fulton, Circuit Clerk, and the writer, were browsing around in his office last Thursday afternoon, and we came across an old volume of statistics which gave the census of various counties in Alabama in 1880.

At this time Montgomery county led the state in population. The inhabitants of this county numbered 52,356; Dallas county came next with a tabulation of 48,433; Jefferson county had a total of 23,272 and Shelby county totaled 17,236. Rather interesting to compare this figure compiled in 1880 with the last census taken. Shelby county has not done so well as far as numerical values are concerned. We now have only 30,362 population listed. But, we are entering the most progressive era heretofore recorded.

ATCHISON ROPER ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Roper of Columbiana, announce the engagement of their daughter, Doris, to Mr. Harry Atchison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Atchison of Columbiana. The wedding will be solemnized in Birmingham during the month of October.

. . . Pfc. Jerry M. Wheeler is now stationed in Camp Drake—Replacement Depot, in Japan, Record Department. As many of our Shelby County boys are now stationed in Japan, we feel sure a Shelby County gab-fest could be arranged. Know Jerry will be glad to see you! His mother, Mrs. L. C. Wheeler came by today, and renewed her subscription to the Reporter-Democrat. After she reads it, she has promised to airmail it on to Jerry. So, he can give out the news to "buddies from old Shelby" if they will only go by this busy place in which Jerry works for Uncle Sam.

. . . Kennith Mullins of Helena, spent Monday in Columbiana, and we were delighted to meet this personable young fellow. Also saw our long-time friend Tom Naish from Helena, who was here on business with the Board of Revenue and Control. We agreed absolutely on "coming events" and "final results". There was no argument whatever, hence, the curb stone chat was most refreshing!

. . . The engagement of Harry Atchison and Doris Roper of Columbiana, will be read with much interest by a wide circle of friends. Both Doris and Harry are graduates of Shelby County High. Miss Roper is at present, the attractive secretary with Marshall-Durbin Company in Columbiana and Mr. Atchison, a veteran of World War-Two, holds a position with the By-Products Company in Birmingham. The young couple will make their future home in the Magic City.

. . . Regret to report that Mr. John M. Shaw, Wilsonville Rt. 1, continues critically ill and has been taekn to Highland Baptist Hospital for treatment.

CALERA WOMAN HAS 100TH BIRTHDAY

(Birmingham News)

Proudly Mrs. Mary Naoma Walker wrapped her white scarf around her shoulders today and smiled.

The scarf was a gift to her from her great grandson, Thomas J. Bumpers of Selma, who had presented it to her on her 100th birthday.

Around her neck was a pearl necklace which was given to her by her great, great, great nephew, John D. Burke of Montgomery.

Her many descendants and friends came to her home Saturday for her birthday party.

She had attained an ambition—to live to 100.

The old lady, who is Calera's oldest citizen, was born on a farm at Plantersville. She lived in Dallas county for 70 years, and then moved to Shelby county.

As the folks who love her gathered around her at her party, she smiled pleasantly and told of the days of long ago.

She told when she saw her first train when she was 9 years old.

She recalled the troublesome times in the War Between the States, and sadly remembered her brother, Albert Ware, who fought for the South for three years.

She smiled as she compared the slow ox wagons of thoes days with the fast automobiles, airplanes and speedy trains of today.

Mrs. Walker has four living sons, J. M. Walker, Melvin Walker, and O. P. Walker, all of Calera, and Samuel K. Walker, of Birmingham, and one daughter, Mrs. Jennie Hooks, of Selma.

Mrs. A. B. Baxley served as hostess at the party. The Rev. A. B. Baxley led prayers.

Gifts and contributions were handled by Mrs. W. W. Fox, Birmingham; Mrs. T. J. Eddings, Birmingham; Mrs. Myrtle Pitts, Clanton and Mrs. Baxley.

Other out-of-town visitors included Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Reynolds, Clanton (Mrs. Reynolds is a niece), and Mrs. Percy Pitts, Clanton, daughter of Mrs. Reynolds.

EX-CONGRESSMAN HUDDLESTON VISITS OFFICE

It is always a red letter day for this writer when Ex-Congressman George Huddleston of Birmingham, comes to Columbiana, for he is always chivalrous enough to drop by this little niche I occupy in the newspaper office and we always enjoy our chat with this distinguished attorney.

Saturday, Mr. Huddleston was in town attending to numerous business matters, but, he did not forget us, and we had the pleasure of welcoming him to Main, and hearing the Judge and the Ex-Congressman "make a date" after January, for a double game of Solitaire, and a joint discussion of the books they like best. This conversation was a joyous delight to "sit in on". The Ex-Congressman is 83 years young, and just a wonderful fellow!

It must be gratifying to live such an interesting life, with so many joyous memories to recall. Before leaving, the gallant gentleman, from the Magic City, told us he was in thorough accord with the policies the Reporter-Democrat had adopted and sponsored, regarding the coming General Election.

Mr. Huddleston to prove his unswerving allegiance to the Democratic Party, pulled aside that maroon wool sweater he wore, and there were the Democratic representatives, Stevenson-Sparkman, buttons, which he proudly wore!

That gesture toward loyalty to Democracy, looked good to me! Anyone who heard Adlai Stevenson make his radio address to the people Friday evening, should no longer doubt the wisdom of the selection by the Democrats of this intelligent gentleman to lead the Democratic party to victory on November 4, 1952.

Gov. Stevenson appealed to the people from an indisputable table of facts and figures. There was no emotional upheaval, but an intelligent approach to vitally important matters now up for decision on November 4. The result of this brilliant declaration from this distinguished American, who aspires to serve this country, as President, left no lingering doubt in the minds of this listener, regarding the final and ultimate victory which will be accorded the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket about three weeks from now.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our deep appreciation for the kindness and thoughtfulness extended to us by our many friends and neighbors during the sickness and death of our mother, Mrs. R. F. Cox, Sr. May you each receive a blessing is our earnest prayer.

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Holman and family
Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Cox, Jr. and family
Miss Lena Cox

CARD OF APPRECIATION

We wish to thank our friends for their numerous acts of thoughtfulness of us during the illness and death of our mother, Mrs. Mary Bell Hunt. We shall ever remain grateful for your personal expressions of sympathy and for the flowers and other evidences of your friendly interest during these dark hours of sorrow.

BAKE SALE NEXT SATURDAY STINSON'S GARAGE

Don't forget to make your arrangements next Saturday to include a visit to Gulf Service Station on Main, and purchase your cake or pie for the week end.

The Vignette Club is sponsoring this Cake Sale, and these attractive young matrons, not only are "lovely to look att and delightful to know", they can "sew a fine seam" or "bake a cake" to please anyone at any time.

Virginia Fowler is making one of her far-famed culinary delights known as Cocoanut Cake (there is nothing better, except ambrosia to go with it), and it will be given away to some lucky one at ten-thirty o'clock A. M. on Saturday, October 11. So, be on hand and try your skill at winning this coveted yum-yummy! Proceeds from this sale are to be donatetd to the free lunch fund for Underprivileged Children" in Columbiana Schools.

Surely, this cause warrants your full cooperation with the Vignettes on this occasion.

PETE JARMAN HONORED

Pete Jarman has received an honorary degree of Doctor of Law from the Melbourne (Australia) University, an Associated Press dispatch reveals.

Mr. Jarman, U. S. representative from the Alabama Sixth Congressional District from 1937-49, is the present U. S. ambassador to Australia. The degree was conferred "in recognition of his work toward cementing friendship between America and Australia."

CARD OF THANKS

We take this opportunity to express our sincere thanks to our friends for countless acts of kindness rendered during our recent bereavement in the loss of our loved one, C. R. Jones.

Especially do we proffer our thanks to our faithful physician, Dr. James Crawford, and to members of the church organizations, and pastors, who in so many ways, expressed sympathetic and timely understanding, during these dark hours of sorrow. May God's richest blessings be upon you.

Mrs. C. R. Jones and family; Miss Dollie Jones

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends for the numerous kindnesses rendered us when we lost our beloved son, Hoyt Edmondson. Hoyt was born and reared in Columbiana and had served three years in the service of his country. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Edmondson, one sister and one brother, and one child.

We are all grateful for the sympathy and the beautiful floral offerings, but we have learned that it is only thru God we can hope for real comfort in these trying hours of separation.

Please accept our sincere thanks to everyone.

'RUSTY' HAS A NEW BLANKET AND ENLISTS HIS SERVICES IN THE COMING CAMPAIGN

Yes-sir-ree, "Rusty", this little red cocker spaniel of mine, hears about as much political chatter in this office as we do. He perks up his ears when a fellow comes in who agrees with him, and goes back to sleep in his own chair, when he hears one who is debating or doubtful about how he is going to vote. But, to prove his absolute interest in the future way of living in his country (for leading a dog's life is not always pleasant, even under the best conditions), Rusty proudly wears his blanket presented him by his personal friend, Doctor John Gates, whom he adores. On this political dog blanket, the following words are clearly written, "QUIT YAPPING. Get registered and VOTE"!

Just wondering if Jungle Jim, descendant of THE Jungle Jim of all "gems".... now located in Handy Ellis' kennel, over which much controversy was raised regarding "getting the name right".... would like to have one. We have another one which might fit "Jungle Jim", alias Fido, which says "Vote as You Dog-gone Please, But Vote"!

A new anti-flu vaccine has been reported effective in laboratory tests made recently.

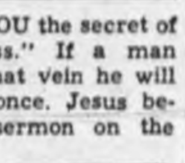
Christians Differ

Lesson for October 12, 1952

"I WILL GIVE YOU the secret of true happiness." If a man starts talking in that vein he will have listeners at once. Jesus began his famous sermon on the mount with that magic word "happy." It its unfortunate that most of our English translations use the word "blessed" because for most people "blessed" is a church-word. They don't know whether they want to be blessed or not; they have no doubt about wanting to be happy. It is twice unfortunate that Jesus' meaning has been hidden under an even more forbidding word, "Beatitudes." What we have here is a series of one-sentence pictures of truly happy persons.



Dr. Foreman

What Christians Are

In these sentences Jesus sketches the kind of person who "has," that is to say, belongs to, the Kingdom of Heaven. If God were forced to throw away some of the human race and keep others, these are the people he would keep. Jesus in these short sentences is picturing the Christ-like. He is not talking about what they believe but about what they are. There is all the difference in the world between Jesus' idea of a Christian and some of the popular ideas today. For example, many persons think of a Christian as a person who keeps a certain number of rules, or believes a certain number of things, or belongs to a peculiar kind of club called the church. But a club member may be exactly like the people on the outside except that he has paid his dues and they haven't; and some church members are just like non-church members except that they have paid their dues (or at least owe them) while the outsiders have not.

Finding True Happiness

Let us venture to put the meaning of Jesus into simple words of today. The following sentences are meant to suggest only some of the means wrapped in these truths-for-life. . . Do you want to know the secret of happiness? Jesus asks. I will tell you. The happy are those who know how little they know and how far from good they are. These are the real people, God's people. The happy are not always the gay; the happy are the serious, those who feel a sincere sorrow for their sins and shortcomings, sorry enough to turn away from them. The happy are those who do not insist on their own rights, who carry no chip on their shoulders, who are more interested in justice for others than for themselves. After the proud have destroyed the proud, these are the people to whom the earth belongs. The happy people are those who want to be good more than anything else in the world. This is the one desire that God always fulfils. Happy people are those that find their happiness in helping others; these are the people who will find helpers in their own time of need. Happy people are those who are pure, not in act alone but in inner thoughts and desires. They are the ones who have any eyes for God. Happy people are not only peaceable themselves but help others to live in peace as well. These are the people who are really God-like. Happy people are not always free from trouble; but their troubles have been caused chiefly not by their sins but by the fact that they are good. They have their heaven in their hearts.

Christians Are Different

You are happy yourselves (Jesus concludes) when the hard things said about you are lies. You are happy when you suffer as I suffer, on behalf of others. God will reward you; you belong to the glorious company of the best men of all time, for there never was a good friend of God who was not misunderstood and slandered.

Jesus never explained all he meant. ("He who has ears, let him hear," he used to say.) But whatever may be puzzling, one thing is clear: Christians are different. If a man fits these descriptions ever part-way, he is noticeably different from the run-of-mine human being. We cannot water down Jesus' ideas, for they are really radical. We should not try to make it sound easy; he did not. But let us be as frank as he was: If you want to find real happiness, if you want to belong to God's people, if you want to be a real Christian, this is it.

STATE OF ALABAMA
A PROCLAMATION
BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Regular Session 1951, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the day of the General Election next succeeding the final adjournment of the 1951 session of the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, the General Election next succeeding the final adjournment of the 1951 Session of the Legislature, at which the amendment was proposed, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gordon Persons, as Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

"No moneys derived from any fees, excises, or license taxes, levied by the State relating to registration, operation, or use of vehicles upon the public highways except a vehicle-use tax imposed in lieu of a sales tax, and no moneys derived from any fee, excises, or license taxes, levied by the State, relating to fuels used for propelling such vehicles except pump taxes, shall be expended for other than cost of administering such laws, statutory refunds and adjustments allowed therein, cost of construction, reconstruction, maintenance and repair of public highways and bridges, costs of highway right-of-way, payment of highway obligations, the cost of traffic regulation, and the expense of enforcing state traffic and motor vehicle laws. The provisions of this Amendment shall not apply to any such fees, excises, or license taxes now levied by the State for school purposes for the whole State or for any county or city Board of Education therein."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, in each county in the State of Alabama, in a newspaper published in said county.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the Great Seal of the State of Alabama to be affixed by the Secretary of State, at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 28th day of July 1952.

A PROCLAMATION
BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Fifth Special Session, 1950, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the date of the next general election after January 1, 1951; and

WHEREAS, the next general election to be held in the State after January 1, 1951, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

"Any provision of the Constitution or laws of the State of Alabama to the contrary notwithstanding, any municipality in Fayette County, or any one or more of them, shall have full and continuing power and authority, after an election held in accordance herewith, to do any one or more of the following:

"1. To purchase, construct, lease or otherwise acquire real property, plants, buildings, factories, works, facilities, machinery and equipment of any kind.

"2. To lease, sell for cash or on credit, exchange, give and convey any such property described in subdivision 1 above, to any person, firm, association or corporation.

"3. To promote local industrial, commercial or agricultural development and the location of new industries or businesses therein.

"4. To become a stockholder in any corporation, association or company.

"5. To lend its credit or to grant public moneys and things of value in aid of, or to, any individual, firm, association, or corporation whatsoever.

"6. To become indebted and to issue and sell interest bearing bonds, warrants (which may be payable from funds to be realized in future years), notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness, to a principal amount not exceeding fifty percent of the assessed value of taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in order to secure funds for the purchase, construction, lease or acquisition of any of the property described in subdivision 1 above or to be used in furtherance of any of the other powers or authorities granted in this amendment. Such obligations or evidences of indebtedness may (in addition to any pledge or pledges authorized by subdivision 8 of this amendment) be issued upon the full faith and credit of the municipality or may be limited as to the source of their payment.

"7. To levy and collect annually, in addition to all other taxes now authorized or permitted, a special tax or taxes of not exceeding two percent on the value of all taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in the same manner as other county or municipal taxes are levied and collected. Such tax may be upon all property in any municipality in Fayette County or upon all property in any district the boundaries of which the governing body of such municipality shall describe and which it shall determine to be specially improved and benefited by any proposed use or expenditure of the proceeds of such tax.

"8. To pledge to the payment of any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness the annual proceeds from any such special tax or taxes and to obligate itself irrevocably to continue to levy and collect such taxes annually until such obligations or evidences of indebtedness are paid in full and to pledge thereto any rental or sales proceeds of property leased or sold by it.

"9. To create a public authority or corporation having such powers, managed and governed by such board or governing body and subject to such limitations as the governing body of any municipality in Fayette County may impose, by approving and filing a certificate to that effect in the office of the Judge of Probate or the Secretary of State, or their respective successors in function, and to delegate to such public authority or corporation and its board or governing body all powers and authority conferred in this amendment upon any such municipality.

"The recital in any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness that they were issued pursuant to this amendment or that they were issued to provide funds to be used in furtherance of any power or authority herein authorized or that any special tax herein authorized has been pledged to the payment thereof shall be conclusive; no purchases or holder thereof need inquire further; and the levy and collection of such tax shall continue until the principal of and interest on such obligations or evidences of indebtedness shall have been paid in full. The bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness issued hereunder shall not be considered an indebtedness of any municipality in Fayette County for the purpose of determining the borrowing capacity of such municipality under sections 224 and 225 of the Constitution; and the taxes herein authorized shall be in addition to those provided for or permitted in sections 215 anl 216 of the Constitution and all amendments thereto.

"This amendment shall be self-executing; but the Legislature shall have the right and power by general, special or local act to adopt laws supplemental to this amendment or in furtherance of the purposes and objectives herein above set forth.

"10. No municipality shall make any engagement or commitment or undertake any project under the provisions hereof unless and until the proposition has been approved by a majority of the qualified electors of such municipality. The governing body of any municipality may provide for holding such elections, but in no case shall an election be held until notice of the election and of the proposition to be voted on has been published for at least three successive weeks."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, in each county in the State of Alabama, in a newspaper published in said county.

"Any provision of the Constitution or laws of the State of Alabama to the contrary notwithstanding, any municipality in Blount County, or any one or more of them, shall have full and and continuing power and authority, after an election held in accordance herewith, to do any one or more of the following:

"1. To purchase, construct, lease, or otherwise acquire real property, plant, buildings, factories, works, facilities, machinery and equipment of any kind.

"2. To lease, sell for cash or on credit, exchange, or give and convey any such property described in subdivision 1 above, to any person, firm, association or corporation.

"3. To promote local industrial, commercial or agricultural development and the location of new industries or businesses therein.

"4. To become a stockholder in any corporation, association or company.

"5. To lend its credit or to grant public moneys and things of value in aid of, or to, any individual, firm, association or corporation whatsoever.

"6. To become indebted and to issue and sell interest bearing bonds, warrants, (which may be payable from funds to be realized in future years), notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness to a principal amount not exceeding fifty percent of the assessed value of taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in order to secure funds for the purchase, construction, lease or acquisition of any of the property described in subdivision 1 above or to be used in furtherance of any of the other powers or authorities granted in this amendment. Such obligations or evidences of indebtedness may (in addition to any pledge or pledges authorized by subdivision 8 of this amendment) be issued upon the full faith and credit of the municipality or may be limited as to the source of their payment.

"7. To levy and collect annually, in addition to all other taxes now authorized or permitted, a special tax or taxes of not exceeding two percent on the value of all taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in the same manner as other county or municipal taxes are levied and collected. Such tax may be upon all property in any municipality in Blount County or upon all property in any, district the boundaries of which the governing body of such municipality shall describe and which it shall determine to be specially improved and benefited by any proposed use or expenditure of the proceeds of such tax.

"8. To pledge to the payment of any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness the annual proceeds from any such special tax or taxes and to obligate itself irrevocably to continue to levy and collect such taxes annually until such obligations or evidences of indebtedness are paid in full and to pledge thereto any rental or sales proceeds of property leased or sold by it.

"9. To create a public authority or corporation having such powers, managed and governed by such board or governing body and subject to such limitations as the governing body of any municipality in Blount County may impose, by approving and filing a certificate to that effect in the office of the Judge of Probate or the Secretary of State, or their respective successors in function, and to delegate to such public authority or corporation and its board or governing body all powers and authority conferred in this amendment upon any such municipality.

"The recital in any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness that they were issued pursuant to this amendment or that they were issued to provide funds to be used in furtherance of any power or authority herein authorized or that any special tax herein authorized has been pledged to the payment thereof shall be conclusive; no purchaser or holder thereof need inquire further; and the levy and collection of such tax shall continue until the principal of and interest on such obligations or evidences of indebtedness shall have been paid in full. The bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness issue hereunder shall not be considered an indebtedness of any municipality in Blount County for the purpose of determining the borrowing capacity of such municipality under Section 224 and 225 of the Constitution; and the taxes herein authorized shall be in addition to those provided for or permitted in sections 215 and 216 of the Constitution and all amendments thereto.

"This amendment shall be self-executing; but the Legislature shall have the right and power by general, special or local act to adopt laws supplemental to this amendment or in furtherance of the purposes and objectives hereinabove set forth.

"10. No municipality shall make any engagement or commitment or undertake any project under the provisions hereof unless and until the proposition has been approved by a majority of the qualified electors of such municipality. The governing body of any municipality may provide for holding such elections, but in no case shall an election be held until notice of the election and of the proposition to be voted on has been published for at least three successive weeks."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, in each county in the State of Alabama, in a newspaper published in said county.

EBENEZER H. D. C. JULY MEETING

The July meeting of the Ebenezer Home Demonstration Club was held at the home of Mrs. Nathan Frost. The meeting was held outside in the shade of the trees around Mrs. Frost's home. Mrs. Frank Frost read the devotional and the secretary's report was given and the minutes read.

Birthday gifts were presented to Mrs. Lawson Johnson and Mrs. Grady Wyatt on a large wooden bread tray one hundred years old. Mrs. Frost served lunch buffet style, after which the meeting was again called to order for the demonstration "Accessories for the Home". It was conducted by Mrs. Ferman Albright.

Members present were: Mrs. Ferman Albright, Mrs. Amos Davis, Mrs. Millard Douglas, Mrs. H. A. Pauly, Mrs. T. S. Hill, Mrs. G. W. Howell, Mrs. Gladys Allen, Mrs. Frank Green, Mrs. Nathan Frost, Mrs. Frank Frost, Mrs. R. H. Davis, Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. Grady Wyatt, Mrs. Lawson Johnson, Mrs. Jimmie Spain, and Mrs. Lee Putnam.

The August meeting of the Ebenezer Home Demonstration Club was it's annual picnic held at Montevallo Springs, on August 21. Members' families were entertained with a picnic lunch and games and other activities. Birthday gifts were presented to Mrs. Frank Frost, Mrs. Amos Davis and Mrs. Dewey McDonough.

The first white men known to have reached and explored the present State of Alabama were those in an expedition led by the Spanish explorer, Hernando DeSoto. In May, 1539, DeSoto's expedition which was to visit Alabama landed at Tampa Bay, Florida, and made camp.

NON-AGRICULTURAL WORKERS CLIMB IN STATE

Sate Industrial Relations Director Joe L. Coleman says the number of non-agricultural workers in Alabama climbed sharply between mid-July and mid-August.

During that time, Coleman says employment in non-farm industries climbed to the 668,700 mark. He said the end of the steel strike accounted for the accelerated figure.

There was also an increase in textile employment during the one-month period. Construction employment was estimated at 41,600, about 1,900 less than July, but only 2,800 higher than the figure for August, 1951.

SMALLER NUMBER OF FIRES IN AUGUST

State Conservation Director E. M. McGowin says Alabama had almost five times as many fires in July as in August.

McGowin said the powder-dry forest during July were responsible for the large number of blazes. During August, 189 fires damaged 1,801 acres he said. This compared with 78,402 acres damaged by 936 fires in July. This was 43 times as much forest burned acreage in July as in August.

During the first six months of the year, McGowin said a total of 319 fires destroyed a total of only 4,972 acres of forestry land, before the bad July record. This compared to 345 fires which struck at 8,819 acres during the first half of 1951.

EBENEZER H. D. CLUB

Mrs. Frank Green was hostess to the Ebenezer Home Demonstration Club at her home on September 18, 1952. Members took a covered dish and spent the day.

Mrs. W. A. Jones opened the meeting with group singing, How Firm A Foundation and The More We Get Together. The devotional was given by Mrs. Green, after which everyone joined her in The Lord's Prayer. Roll Call and the minutes were read by Mrs. Grady Wyatt, Secy.

The Chairmen made their reports and old and new business was discussed. Birthday gifts were presented to Mrs. Gladys Allen, after which everyone enjoyed the buffet lunch.

After lunch, the meeting was again called to order for the demonstration, "Care and Use of the Sewing Machine", by Miss Elizabeth Collins, Assistant Home Demonstration Agent.

Members present were: Mrs. Amos Davis, Mrs. Mildred Douglas, Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. H. A. Pauly, Mrs. Earl Swinford, Mrs. Gladys Allen, Mrs. Frank Green, Mrs. J. H. Wyatt, Mrs. Nathan Frost, Mrs. Frank Frostt, Mrs. R. H. Davis, Mrs. Grady Wyatt, Mrs. Jimmie Spain and Mrs. Lee Putnam.

ALABAMA'S PUBLIC HOSPITAL BUILDING PROGRAM

State Health Officer Dr. D. G. Gill says nearly $2,750,000 was spent on Alabama's public hospital building program during the 1949-50 fiscal year.

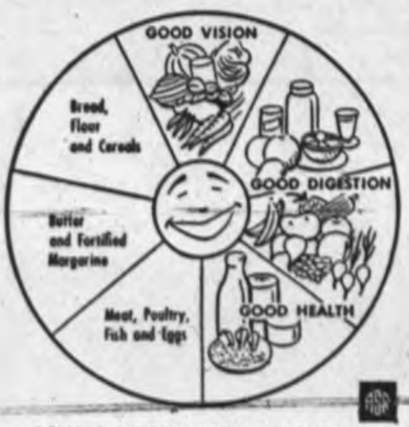
Gill says the money was composed of 50-50 matching of state and local funds with federal grants under the Hill-Burton act. He said it is the biggest item on the state public health bill the 12-month period.

Actual disbursements during the audit period were $6,695,896, according to a report by the state examiners on the health department's fiscal affair. Dr. Gill explained that Jefferson, Mobile and Escambia counties have a separate administration system and handle an estimated $50,000 a year which doesn't clear through the health department. More than half of the money spent on public health services comes from federal sources, Gill said.

In January, 1699, a small French Fleet under the command of Le Moyne Iberville sailed into the Gulf of Mexico. First putting into Pensacola Bay, and finding the Spaniards in control there, the expedition sailed on toward the west and dropped anchor near a cape later to be named Mobile Point.

Food Sense—Not Nonsense

Are you a follower of the food faddists? Do you listen to their blasts on the airlanes? Are you influenced by the suggestions of their printed messages? Are you buying their nostrums and gimmicks which are being offered you in scores of ways?



SEVEN BASIC FOOD GROUPS

Doctors, nutritionists, Government authorities and others concerned with the public welfare continue to be disturbed over the influence of these faddists. To counteract it, the public is being assured by authoritative sources that a varied, balanced diet of available foods will provide the nutrients necessary for buoyant health.

In order to simplify the planning of nutritious meals, the Seven Basic Food Groups were developed, as an easy-to-follow blueprint. Those who choose foods from each group daily, regularly obtain protective foods that help build sturdy bodies, make minds alert, and produce quick energy.

Featured in the seven food groups are: Meat, fish and eggs for muscle-building protein, essential vitamins and minerals; milk and milk products for calcium as well as protein; bread, flour and cereals (enriched or whole grain) for three B vitamins — niacin, thiamine, riboflavin—and iron, in addition to energy-sparking carbohydrates; butter and margarine for vitamin A and concentrated food energy.

To simplify selection, the fruit and vegetable families are divided three ways: Green and yellow vegetables, high in vitamin A, iron and other essentials for growth, energy and health; oranges, grapefruit, tomatoes, raw cabbage and salad greens, rich in vitamin C (the seasonal fruits, strawberries, and cantaloup and some others also are high in this important vitamin). The popular group which includes potatoes, beets, onions, corn, and other vegetables, and pears, apples, bananas, pineapple and other fruits, lends variety to meals and help round out the dietary needs.

By including foods from these three fruit and vegetable groups every day the diet tally will show that all the required vitamin C has been included; about ⅔ of the vitamin A; ⅙ of the iron, niacin and thiamine; and ¼ of the calcium and riboflavin. Because of their carbohydrate content they furnish a significant part of the energy requirement.

Known as "protective" foods, these fruits and vegetables help build a defense against disease and infections, provide roughage and are an aid to good vision. Items from each one of the three groups, as well as from the other four of the basic seven must be eaten each day to assure a diet that is adequate, nourishing and health building.

NEW PROGRAM FOR EFFICIENT USE OF FERTILIZER AND LIME

The Department of Agriculture and the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities have just recently announced a program aimed at bringing about more efficient use of fertilizer and lime. This is one means of increasing food and fibre production to meet the needs of our population which is increasing at a rate of 7,000 per day, while building up the productivity of the soil and increasing net returns to farmers. In addition to meeting the increased domestic demand, this Nation's ability to share its food supplies with needy people abroad is one of our strongest assets in working with other nations.

There is little prospect of increasing crop acreage in this country to meet the ever-increasing demand for food. Hence, efficient use of fertilizer and lime plus the use of other soil and water conservation practices must be coupled with good soil management in order to meet these increased demands.

In the two decades from 1910 to 1930 the domestic consumption of fertilizer has increased almost threefold from 1,524,000 tons of total plant food nutrients (N P & K) to 4,412,000 tons and lime from 3,468,000 to 29,842,000 or almost ninefold.

The Department of Agriculture and the fertilizer industry have set goals for increasing fertilizer supplies by 1955 as follows: nitrogen 70%; phosphate 55% and potash 51%. It appears that these will be met with the possible exception of phosphate. With respect to lime only about 25% of the land in need of this important mineral was adequately treated in 1950. It is estimated that 395 million tons of lime are needed to adequately treat all land and that annual maintenance would require 47 million tons. Use of less than this amount annually means that soil fertility and productivity are declining rather than increasing. The lime industry will have to work out some problems of distribution, but otherwise should encounter but little difficulty in meeting the demand.

The Department of Agriculture and the Land-Grant Colleges recognize that they have a joint responsibility in promoting efficient use of these materials. Long-range programs of research, farmer education, dissemination of information and other services will have to be undertaken by them if this Nation's food requirements are continued to be met. The immediate program however is to help farmers get the most out of current and prospective supplies of these materials.

The Cherokees occupied the northeastern part of Alabama. They were a part of a much larger group which occupied eastern Tennessee, western North Carolina, and northern Georgia. The Cherokees were probably of the same stock as the Iroquois Indians to the north. The Chickasaws lived in the northwest section of the area. To the south of them lived the Choctaws. The central and southeastern parts of the present State were the lands of the Muscogees, usually called the Creeks.

At my age I may not have water on the knee, but I sure have had creek in the neck.

Call to Right Living Is Available Today In Daniel's Example

MUCH is being said these days in many circles about corruption. Apparently many people believe corrupt influences have crept into some of our high places where the trust of the people is sacred. There is a definite need at the present time for a re-assertion of the standards of right living. The best example standing through the ages is the prophet Daniel. He is held up as an example of moral courage, a man with right-living standards.

But it is one thing to assert and define these standards and another to induce men to follow them. Often a man is not infected with depravity when he is attracted to the allurements of self-interest.

To the contrary, the call of self-interest urges men to run roughshod over others, completely ignoring their rights and interests and only considering his own. Also, false standards of conduct which are found to be widely accepted in practice, policy and precept today help increase the amount of evil trends active in the world.

Therefore the resolve for right living must be insistent, forceful and persistent. Daniel and his companions dared to stand against the lure of a false, corrupting social atmosphere. They recognized and resisted the dangers of bowing to evil forces. Instead they chose to follow the dictates of their consciences and accept only the standards of right living.

The greatest problem confronting the church today is that of making "right living" attractive to those who do not feel any compulsion to follow these principles.

How can this be done?

Often it appears the churches have grown a little complacent and are content to live within their sphere, ignoring the masses outside.

But we must remember. The Christian Church was founded on the basic principle of Evangelism. John explains the winning of a convert: "He brought him to Jesus."

Those who followed the Master brought outsiders into the Christian fellowship. We need more of this spirit today. The practice of seeking out others and bringing them to Jesus might be the answer to a difficult question.

Speaking of holding a party convention in a telephone booth, in Des Moines recently, the Prohibition party held a mass meeting.... six people attended.

Because only Catholic Frenchmen were allowed to settle in Mobile at first, the little colony grew very slowly. In 1703, there were 130 settlers there, all of them men. Ten years later the number of settlers had grown to more than 400.

In Escambia county, where they recently struck oil, you can tell the poor farmers from the rich ones. The poor ones have to wash their own Cadillacs.

The big literary hassle of the day is whether Hemingway's marvelous "Old Man and the Sea" is a short long story, or a long short story.

Someone was telling me th other day that oldie about a tu of cotton a screen door keein away flies. We tried it quite while ago, but it hasn't worke out so well since the Reader' Digest ran an article on it a coupl of years ago. I think the flie must have read the article.

About July 1, 1540, DeSoto an his men entered the present Stat of Alabama, meeting the first Indians near the village of Costa, i what is now Cherokee County Before long, the expedition approached the town of Coosa, i what is now Talladega County.

VOTERS GETTING READY FOR FINAL SHOW DOWN, NOV. 4

One thing grows more certain as the time draws near for a final show down between the Democrats and the Republicans. Registration of voters continues to argue in favor of one of the largest votes ever cast in a General Election. It is estimated by statistics that 55,000,000 may vote this year. The total number voting in 1948 was 48,833,680.

A Washington "Pipe-Line" says this unprecedented push toward the polls is puzzling the political big-wigs. There is not much talking, and few buttons are being worn, and there is little banner-waving. In other words, the political prognostigators, heretofore correctly prophesying on the numerical outcome of the elections, are not so certain, who will finally take a seat on Capitol Hill in Washington.

Both parties are putting on a campaign to get out the vote. Some states have even enlisted the door-bell ringing of the alert Boy Scouts.

There is one heartening fact as far as the Democrats are concerned, they out-number the Republicans. Over-all figures indicate that there are 40 million Democrats; 26 million Republicans; 24 million Independents, in the country. President Truman has charged the "stay-at-homes" elected GOP Congress in 1946; Republicans think "stay-at-home" Republicans were responsible for Truman's election.

Then, there are a number of voters who remain silent. You can't exactly determine which way this silent vote will go. So, not until the final tabulation of the last vote is in on the fateful day, November 4, will the American people know who the President and Vice President of these United States will be.

However, this writer believes, the Democrats have at least realized that they will not have a field day on this occasion, and are now swinging into action for the final round-up! Here's hoping!

CIRCUIT COURT CALLED

The Fall term of the Shelby County Circuit Court has been called by presiding Judge W. W. Wallace to convene Monday, November 10, 1952, and will continue for two weeks.

The first week will be devoted to the trial of civil jury cases, and the second week will be given over to the trial of criminal jury cases docketed.

Sixty jurors have been drawn for service during the civil week and 60 jurymen summoned for the second week of this court.

SORRY, BUT IT'S TOO LATE NOW DELINQUENT POLL TAX PAY-ERS

Sorry, but it is too late now to talk of paying poll tax and voting. Unless you paid the fee of $1.50 on or before February 1st, 1952, you cannot have a "say so" in the General Election set for November 4, unless you happen to be a veteran and have so registered.

Attorney General has so ruled and cites the State Constitution Section 178 as his authority for such decision. This section states as follows:

"To entitle a person to vote at any election by the people, he shall have paid on or before the first day of February next preceding the date of the election at which he offers to vote all poll taxes due from him for the year 1901 and for each subsequent year."

IF ELECTED GENERAL IKE WOULD SET GOP RECORD

If General Ike should receive the presidential nomination, historic facts reveal that he would be the oldest man ever nominated by the GOP. He is past 60. The oldest man ever picked by the GOP was Benjamin Harrison, whose age was 59.

The GOP has nominated professional soldiers twice; Fremont, who lost, and Grant who won twice.

County Club Women Organize For Choral Work October 14

Club women interested in a Choral program will meet with Miss Collins at The Columbiana Methodist Church October 14th.

Mrs. F. E. Williams, Mrs. A. M. Muncy, and Mrs. A. D. Glover were appointed to nominate council officers. Mrs. C. C. Warren, Mrs. W. A. Jones, and Mrs. W. L. Lawler, Sr., will submit plans for The Council Money Making Project.

The Council will sponsor the Cotton Dress Revue in 1953. Work garments are to be made of sacks, the sport dress and dressy dresses to be made of any appropriate cotton materials.

All clubs were urged to send two leaders to The County Recreational Training School December 8-11. Workshop and Program Planning on Tuesday January 13 will follow the general 1952 program.

Plans were discussed for Achievement Day and Tour on Thursday, November 13 and The Yearbook as planned by the committee was adopted. Special Interest demonstrations in 1953 will be: Making Hooked Rugs and Leather Work.

HOW TO VOTE AN ABSENTEE BALLOT

Countless advertisements in newspapers and magazines all over the nation are urging Americans to make good use of their right to vote on November 4.

This sideline campaign to the approaching national election has done much to acquaint voters with the process of voting and has also directed many questions to governmental offices on points not clear to citizens of the various states.

One of the least understood voting laws in Alabama is the ruling applied to the absentee vote. Many eligible voters, especially students who are attending institutions outside their home county, do not know the procedures for casting their vote.

The Alabama voting law requires persons who desire to cast an absentee ballot to go to the office of the Registrar of Chancery Court of the county in which they are registered. The citizen must complete his or her ballot in the presence of the Registrar of the county.

This voting must be accomplished from five to twenty days prior to the election date. The voting must be done within the allotted time and in the presence of the Registrar

The only exceptions to this ruling are service personnel and their wives who are allowed to cast their ballots by mail upon legal application to the Registrar of their home county.

WORK BEGINS ON GAS PROJECT

We are glad to make the announcement that work began this week on the installation of pipe thru this section, bringing natural gas into Columbiana.

Over 300 applications have been received from individuals in Columbiana, who made the required deposit evidencing "good faith", and the pipe will be brought to the baseboard of these homes, free of charge. After the gas is turned on in this town, and you decide to use it, the cost for piping it to your homes or business houses will have to be borne by the individuals desiring to use it.

There is still a little time left for citizens to take advantage of the liberal offer by the Town authorities, so, if you have not signed up for this heat, and you want to do so, contact Saranel Ozley, Town Clerk, or Luther Curlee, who is in charge of these applications.

ANNUAL SINGING AT BLUE SPRINGS

The annual all day singing will be held at Blue Springs on the 4th Sunday, October 26. We have a real treat for the people for the Key Masters Quartet from Birmingham will be there and many other famous singers and directors such as Martha Carson, Mr. Culverson and John Dye.

JOHN SHAW PASSES

We regret to learn just as we go to press, of the death of widely known John Shaw, who has been in ill health for the past five weeks.

Funeral services will be held from Union Church, Wednesday afternoon.

MONTEVALLO P. T. A. HOLDS FIRST MEETING

Mr. Arthur R. Garrett presided at the first meeting of the Montevallo Parent Teachers Association as its new president. The meeting was held in the High School Auditorium, 7:30 Wednesday evening.

After introduction of the new faculty member, Mr. Fred Barlow, Junior 7th grade, Mrs. J. P. Kelley gave a fitting and inspiring devotional. Following this the outline of the program for the year was presented to the members. This will be based on the Evaluation Committee's report of Montevallo High School and the Faculty Study made last spring. November's program will be a panel discussion of the School Community, and Educational Needs, made up of three parents and three teachers with Miss Nona Sparks, elementary teacher, as moderator. A panel discussion for December will deal with The Program of Studies and Pupil Activity Program with Miss Ann Grove as moderator and three parents and three teachers on the panel.

Mary B. Roberts, State Mental Health Association member, will speak on Good Mental Health for the January meeting. February's speaker is to be announced later. County Superintendent W. W. Elliott will speak on "The Invisible Wall between Home and School" for the March program. Parents again will take part in the April program which will deal with "The Patient Years for Parents".

Officers of the Montevallo P. T. A. besides Mr. Garrett are: Mrs. Pauline Rogan, First Vice-President; Mrs. W. E. Robinson, Second Vice-President; Miss Susie Dement, Secretary; Mrs. J. P. Kelley, Treasurer; Miss Mary Peters Historian; and Mr. W. J. O'Neal, Parliamentarian. The Trustees are Mr. M. P. Jeter, Mr. Pete Givhan and Mr. Lee Barclay.

Annual Homecoming Thompson Hi Oct. 24

Abie and Slats, Joe Palooka, Snuffy Smith, and the Phantom are slated to make appearances along with all the other comic strip gang from paper town during the presidential election parade in celebration of the annual homecoming game in Siluria on October 24, when the Thompson Warriors meet John Carroll in a football contest at the Buck Creek Stadium.

Mrs. Austin Holbrook, Chairman of arrangements, stated that each class in school will decorate a float using animated comic strip characters depicting presidential election episodes and ideas.

The parade lead by the Thompson Cheerleaders will get underway at 12:30. Miss Homecoming and Miss Thompson Elementary School will also be featured in the parade. A float "to get out the vote," will be sponsored by the Senior Class.

Lunch will be served on the campus to Alumni and friends of the school who will participate in the program at the school, and at the stadium.

An elaborate half-time program ie being planned by Mrs. Mary Lee Martin and Mrs. Charles A. Knowles as co-chairmen.

Dr. Robert H. Johnson, Principal, says that money received from the sale of foods on this day will be used in the fund now being raised for the purchase of a grand piano for the Thompson Schools.

Brochure Tells Of Resources Available In Columbiana

LOOKING FOR PROFITS AND PLEASANT LIVING?

The above caption, "Looking For Profits and Pleasant Living" is the eye-catching head line on Page One of a brochure prepared on Columbiana by the Industrial Development Committee in Columbiana, working in cooperation with The Alabama State Planning Board.

The booklet is most enlightening and offers the many advantages Columbiana offers to those seeking good locations for manufacturing various products.

The industrial committee of Columbiana is composed of Wales W. Wallace Jr., Mayor; Karl C. Harrison, Alvin M. Stinson and James I. Harrison.

The contents of the book comprises statistics substantiating facts that here, in Columbiana, the future business man who desires to combine gracious living with profits from investments may find exactly what he is looking for.

The geographic description of the area is clearly pictured from aerial photographs. The population of the town (1,763), is given and other material one would like to know before locating in a town. For instance, Columbiana is located in central Alabama, not far from the geographic center of the State. It is the county seat of Shelby county. Columbiana is located in a valley 426 feet above sea level. Within 3 miles is Mount Dixie with a crest of 1,000 feet. Birmingham, with similar topography, is only 30 miles away.

The Coosa River, four and a half miles from town offers excellent advantages.

The land of the area is suited to timber with smaller portions of land suited to pasturing.

The labor available for enterprises numbers within a ten mile radius about 2,500 workmen. Both male and female labor, is unskilled and unindoctrinated. Labor rates are reasonable.

The book lists materials available, which include, hot and cold rolled steel obtainable from nearby Birmingham and Gadsden. Many other products are listed under this heading. All offering flattering inducement for permanent development and expansion of Alabama's natural resources.

Power and fuel are next listed. Natural gas soon will be added to the electricity now used.

Transportation by rail and bus. Excellent Highways in all directions lead to this town.

A splendid market and trade area is here. The Textile industry has shown unprecedented growth.

Industrial sites are pictured. Excellent Recreation program is now a vitally important part of this community.

The above penpoint snapshots are only a few of the items mentioned in this most attractive brochure, which may be seen within a few days, on many desks in the business houses of the town and in the office of the Mayor. More copies of this book are being ordered and will be used to advertise Columbiana, as a good location for manufacturing hand tools and small forgings.

"Looking For Profits and Pleasant Living"? You can find them in Columbiana.

A warm welcome awaits all new comers.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: Will Morgan is familiar with the ways of the Indians. He went into the woods as a killer when the savages massacred the family of his promised wife, Mary Belden, killing so many savages that he became a frontier legend. Then he returned to the Indian camps, impersonating an Indian chief to whom he bore a striking resemblance. In gathering information for the army, he learns that Mary is a prisoner of the man he impersonates. His mission appears to be doomed when Bear Nose, a stubborn chief, makes it evident that he does not trust White Panther, nor the Miami Indians he commands. Eagle Claw vouches for White Panther.

CHAPTER XVI

Eagle's Claw offered an explanation when the three visitors were by themselves once more. "Bear Nose is disappointed," he growled. "He heard the lying stories of White Panther and hoped to become great in his place. Now White Panther keeps his place at the head of the warriors so Bear Nose must sit back."

It seemed to be the logical explanation but it did not help Will's peace of mind. He could not afford to have Bear Nose working against him; there was too much risk that the Indian might learn something.

The following day's conclave was delayed for many minutes as Bear Nose dallied in his tubular lodge making strong medicine. Will waited with some apprehension. He knew that it was a favorite trick of the Medicine Men to pick up information in a commonplace fashion, then go through a lot of hocus-pocus and pretend to acquire the facts through the session in the barrel-shaped lodge. He also knew that Bear Nose had visited a British post only a fortnight previously. There was just a chance that the big Indian knew something of the true White Panther and was preparing a fancy coup against the impostor.

Will Begins to Sense He Has Been Recognized

It was nearly an hour before Bear Nose arrived with a marked air of importance about him. The bark council lodge was filled with minor chiefs of the village, all of them apparently aware that Bear Nose was preparing some sort of stroke. They sat quietly while Bear Nose took his place and spoke of the distinguished visitors in their midst. It was the opening Will wanted.

"My brothers," he began, "I have traveled many days with two great warriors. We seek advice and help for the war to be waged in the spring. Always we have found our brothers ready to forget rank and pride in the need for warriors. Only here have we found a chief unwilling to work for the good of all. Bear Nose even now wishes to question the good intent of White Panther."

There was a brief flurry but Will continued without letting Bear Nose defend himself. "Because White Panther rested in his lodge for a while the evil tongues told that he had become no longer a warrior. White Panther is here to show the foolishness of those who believe the crooked tongues. Is there any to deny what the eye can see?"

Tark the Crane immediately began to speak, obviously aware that he was helping to foil the plans of Bear Nose. Will kept his glance covertly on the dark countenance of the medicine man, trying to decide what was in the sullen one's mind. The chief was sulking now, a fair indication that his thunder had been stolen, that he had nothing of indictment except the old gossip about White Panther's defection as a warrior.

Finally his mood seemed to change and he arose to make his speech. "My brothers have spoken well," he said glumly. "Our people must fight as a great brotherhood. Bear Nose is a warrior chief. He will fight well—as he has always fought. Never has he believed the crooked tongues—even when the young men of the English brought tales which other warriors accepted. Bear Nose will be ready to fight."

He sat down abruptly, his face still a mask. It was enough for Will, however. Obviously the chief's ideas had come from the British post and they were rumors about the defection of White Panther. It would be a matter of some difficulty if the rumors should spread—but it would be deadly serious if the enmity of Bear Nose led him to investigate.

The trio traveled onward, Morgan more and more tense as the season changed but still determined to learn everything possible before leaving. Nothing occurred to indicate danger and they returned to Tark's village late in April to find a message from Turkey Foot, another important Wyandot, calling for a tribal meeting.

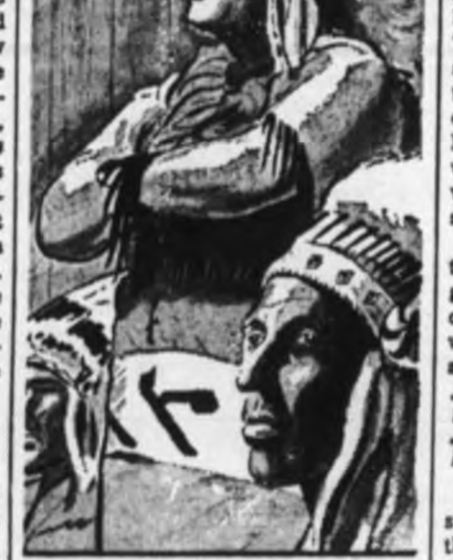
The village of Turkey Foot was slightly larger than that of Tark the Crane, its bark huts, log cabins and skin tepees equally verminous and saturated by the winter collection of Indian odors. Chiefs had come in from all parts of the Wyandot country but Will was relieved to note that no other tribes were represented. Bear Nose was on hand, his eyes still sullen.

Turkey Foot opened the great outdoor council with an elaborate speech along the lines of so many Will had heard and made during the past weeks. The only new point was the one which Will had tried unsuccessfully to open in his first remarks at Tark's council, the building of Fort Recovery. Turkey Foot was worried about the moral effect of seeing their first victory snatched from them. He wanted to seize it before it could become a symbol of defeat.

Nods of approval greeted him and Will promptly arose to elaborate on the same theme.

By the time he had finished, his words being translated into the Wyandot tongue for the few who had little knowledge of Miami, the council had run on for some time. A recess was taken for the feast which Turkey Foot's people had been preparing.

The assembled visitors set to work with the gluttony which continued to amaze Morgan even though he had been seeing it for some time. A tremendous quantity of food disappeared in short order, the chiefs picking leisurely at bones while Turkey Foot stood up for another address which was evidently calculated to impress his own people as well as the visitors.



Turkey Foot replied in a five minute oration which might easily have been condensed into a one word affirmative.

This time he dwelt upon the wrongs of the Indian, setting a pattern for the speakers to follow. Four other chiefs had spoken along the same line when there was an interruption. A runner was coming in from the west, sentinels escorting him toward the council fire. Will felt the muscles of his throat tighten. The man was a Miami!

White Woman Is Used As Bait by Warriors

He sprang to his feet quickly, partly to give himself a fighting chance and partly to adopt the old tactics of taking the offensive. The messenger faltered at sight of him but recovered himself to utter a solemn greeting. "The salute of Little Turtle," he announced. "To the chiefs of the Wyandots."

"It is well," Morgan said calmly. "The great ones of the Wyandot nation are here. Speak the words of Little Turtle to our brothers."

The courier glanced about him uneasily. "Little Turtle greets his Wyandot brothers and reminds them that already the White Chief Who Never Sleeps has entered upon Indian land. Little Turtle sends the bloody belt to the Wyandots even as he sends it to the Ottawas, the Potawatomis, the Delawares, the Shawnees, the Weas and the Eel River tribe. It is time to be men."

He stopped abruptly as though there had been more to the message, pausing a moment before handing over the belt of red wampum that was the summons to war.

There was a solemn hush as Turkey Foot accepted the token with a short speech of acknowledgment. The die was cast for war.

Will drew the runner aside as the meeting broke up. "It is a surprise to see White Panther here ahead of you?" he suggested. 'Did not Little Turtle know?"

The warrior looked puzzled. "Little Turtle bade me tell the Wyandots that he hoped to bring White Panther back to the warpath but that the white one was sulking in his lodge. I do not understand."

"Many do not understand White Panther," Will replied loftily. "White Panther moves when the need comes. Go now and refresh yourself. You have done well."

He watched as a Wyandot took the runner in charge and led him to the fires where a part of the feast was still being consumed. A sense of relief was not unmixed with dread. How much did the messenger know? What would happen when he heard that White Panther had been in the Wyandot land all winter?

He returned to the council house as Tark the Crane began a speech to the lingering chiefs. His subject was English aid. How much would the redcoats do to help the Indians?

Apparently it was a topic on which many of the Indians had hesitated to speak but with the ice broken there was a babble of comment. Presently Turkey Foot made the proposal that a delegation wait on Major Cameron at the British fort demanding some assurance of his cooperation.

Here at last was the big item which Morgan had to know about. He spoke quickly and sharply, not with the idea of persuading anyone of anything but merely that his name might be foremost in the minds of the council when the delegations should be named.

Turkey Foot acted promptly as Will sat down. He proposed that the visit should be made immediately and suggested himself, White Panther, Bear Nose and a chief named Red Jacket as the commission. No one objected and the committee agreed to set out at dawn of the following day.

As Will turned thoughtfully into the gloomy interior of the lodge there was a rustle of movement in a corner. "Who's there?" he demanded sharply, poised for quick action.

To his amazement a woman's voice came in faltering English. "They sent me," she said sullenly.

He frowned, considering swiftly. It was not unusual for a squaw to be provided for the honored guest. Turkey Foot might be providing some easy hospitality, using one of the numerous white captives. On the other hand this might be a trap. Many of the prisoners had been with the Indians so long that they were practically savages themselves—like White Panther.

He stepped forward suspiciously, trying to accustom his eyes to the gloom. He could see the woman crouching against the wall and without a word he seized her wrist and pulled her toward the light.

Tribal Chiefs Visit The British Garrison

She was quite young, apparently somewhere in her twenties although the wild disorder of her yellow hair and her general accumulation of dirt made her seem like some ancient hag. Beneath the shapeless dress it was apparent that she had a good figure but everything else about her seemed almost repulsive. Sullen eyes glared at him, their gleam a brief flash of light against the dirty background of face.

"Why did they send you?" he asked in Miami.

"I don't understand," she replied in English.

He stared doubtfully. Turkey Foot had probably been put to the limit of resources in finding enough women for so many guests and it was not strange that he had assigned a white girl to a chief who was known to speak English. Still there was a chance that it might be a trick.

"Go lie down," he ordered gruffly. "White Panther does not wish to be bothered."

She obeyed without a murmur and Will threw himself on a pile of furs in the opposite corner. It would be better this way. He could not afford to take any new risks.

The post at the mouth of the Maumee was one of the many held by the English in defiance of the Treaty of Paris. Its palisades rose menacingly from the river bank; stout blockhouses defending its corners. A sizeable village flourished outside its walls, the trading posts busy as the Indians began their spring selling of pelts.

Will noted this brisk activity as he scanned the place with care. Since leaving Turkey Foot's village his alertness had not failed, particularly when Bear Nose became so jovial. The surly chief seemed to be enjoying some secret joke and he went out of his way to be friendly toward Morgan. Apparently he was preparing for his moment of triumph.

Even though all four visitors were armed, there was no challenge as they passed the sentry at the gate. A scarlet-clad lieutenant hailed Turkey Foot familiarly, receiving in return a blunt notice that the chiefs wanted to talk with Major Cameron.

Morgan had dropped to the rear, every nerve taut as he watched on all sides for signs of treachery. Nothing happened. The lieutenant shot him a surprised glance but that was all.

Then two officers appeared at the door of the main barracks and Major Cameron welcomed the chiefs, inviting them to enjoy the hospitality of the great King across the water.

Turkey Foot replied in a five minute oration which might easily have been condensed into a one word affirmative.

Major Cameron listened solemnly and suggested, "The great King has sent one of his sons to look after the traders who deal with the Indians. Would it not be well to have him join us?"

Will restrained his amusement. The British were just like the Americans; it was a matter of trade when all was said and done. The English did not want Yankee competition in the fur trade. Both sides wanted the Indians as their own exclusive customers. Maybe it would be quite fitting to have a fur company agent in the pow-wow.

SOCIAL SECURITY NEWS

Persons receiving old-age and survivors insurance benefits can now earn as much as $75 a month without losing their benefits, according to M. C. Folmar, manager of the Birmingham office of the Social Security Administration.

The amount of wages a person getting benefits is permitted to earn in a month without losing his payment has been raised from $50 to $75, beginning with the month of September. In case a beneficiary is self-employed, he can accept his benefit checks if his net earnings from self-employment do not average more than $75 a month, that is, more than $900 for his taxable year. Beneficiaries who work in employment not covered by the Social Security Act, and those who have reached the age of 75, may cash their checks regardless of how much they earn.

Mr. Folmar pointed out that this "work clause" applies not only to the retired worker, but also to a wife, widow, child, or parent who is receiving benefits based on the social security account of a retired or deceased worker. Any beneficiary who is working for wages should notify the Social Security Administration promptly if he earns over $75 in one month. A self-employed beneficiary should notify the Administration as soon as he sees that his net earnings are likely to average more than $75 a month for the taxable year.

Tax Assessing Methods Changed

Beginning October 1, 1952, the method of assessing taxes on real property has been changed.

In order to relieve the taxpayer from coming into the Tax Assessor's Office each year and giving in his real estate, Luther Fowler, Tax Assessor for Shelby County, has set up a different system whereby a property owner who does not sell, buy, build or change his property in any way, will not have to come in and assess his or her property until there is a change made by them.

If the owner has been living on his property and has been claiming Homestead Exemption, and moves off the property, it should be reported to the Tax Assessor. This also applies to the person who moved on to a place and wishes to claim Homestead Exemption. If new buildings are erected on the property, this should be reported. In other words, any change made that may affect the taxes, then the tax payer would need to give in his taxes between October 1st and December 31st of that particular year the change was made.

This system does not relieve those people who have personal property of assessing their property each year. This would apply to people with stock of goods, office equipment, gins, saw mills, tractors, etc.

If anyone desires more information about this new method of assessment, they may come to the Tax Assessor's office and he will be glad to explain it to them.

All people who have bought real estate should bring their deeds with them so that a correct description may be obtained of the property to be assessed.

Former S. C. H. S. Athlete In Service

RALPH (Slick) ROBINSON

Kildred White Wallace

Ralph (Slick) Robinson, pictured in the above photograph, is no stranger to Shelby County High School students, for he was rated as one of the top-notch athletes during his school days at Shelby High. Then, Uncle Sam called and "Slick" went forth to do his duty with the armed forces. He is now a vitally important leader in the sports program around the camp, and is a member of the League Leading Bombers who came thru with flying colors to take the New Mexico State Title in Baseball.

We reprint the account of this sensational game and the vitally important part "Slick" played in winning it. The write up is taken from the "Sandra Crossroads" publication, and the headline reads: "Bombers" Take Semi-Pro Title".... Down "Flyers".... the opposing team 6-5 in Finale. We quote from the article above mentioned which states:

"Ralph Robinson and Ira Murphy teamed up with timely blows in the last half of the 12th inning Tuesday night to give the Sandia Baseball Bombers a 6-5 victory over Kirtland AFB in the state semi-pro tourney finals at the Heights diamond. The triumph gave Sandia the 1952 New Mexico semi-pro championship."

"Slick" Robinson writes proudly of his team mates. The season's record of 40 victories and 12 defeats, is a record anyone might well take pride in achieving. And whats more, "Slick" led the team in hitting with a batting average of 391, until August 11, when a broken ankle received in Alpine, Texas, finished him off for the season. However, the paper states "Slick" hit safely 32 consecutive games before that broken ankle put him out of the running.

This team of soldier-patriots won the Regional championship and then went on to win the New Mexico State Championship. He is stationed in Alburqueque.

While "Slick" is very proud of his baseball victory, he speaks with more joy over the fact that Johnnie Sims and Blenard Roper, from Fourmile, were spectators, who, in that good old Shelby county spirit, doubtless inspired "Slick" to really make the proper connection with that horsehide pellet on the decisive game.

We know this article contains news which will be good news to "Slick's" former classmates and his many friends in the county, who join me in sending across the miles, congratulations and best wishes to another Shelby county boy who is making good with Uncle Sam and mixing a lot of good sportsmanship in both military and athletic circles which combination should eliminate any monotony around camp.

CULTURE CLUB MEETS

Mrs. Richard Ozley was hostess to the Culture Club on October 2.

Mrs. Rux Carter conducted a brief business session. The Culture Club was invited to be the Vignette Clubs guest on Wednesday night, October 8, to hear Rabbi Milton Grafman of Birmingham. Mrs. L. B. Riddle and Mrs. F. E. Williams offered to donate pine trees from their farm lands to help the Tree Club fill requests for this type of tree.

Mrs. F. M. Benton, program leader for the day, presented her sister, Miss Myrtle Miles as guest speaker. Her subject was "Life of the Presidential Candidates". Explaining that she was not making a political speech, Miss Miles, in her own inimitable way, gave a thorough and most interesting sketch of all important phrases of each candidates life.

In reviewing the lives of the candidates, she gave their family background, educational achievements, religious affiliations, as well as their social background, business experience and financial status of past and present. Members were urged to vote November 4th.

Mrs. Ozley served a very delectable salad plate. The club adjourned to meet October 16 with Mrs. Howard Hall.

DID YOU KNOW?

That Columbia University's official paper, (The Columbia Spectator) published by the student body of this great University, over which Gen. Eisenhower once presided, has repudiated General Ike for President, and endorsed Stevenson?

We still say, General Ike is a great General of a great Army, and we personally wish he had remained in Europe with his troops until peace was assured. Doubtless personal ambition over shadowed this asignment, and he returned to toss his hat into the political arena. This is America and the General has every right to be proud of the call from the Republican Party for this position, but, will it be wise for the American people to elect one, who has been so long sheltered by the Army life, to direct the civilian life of our country with its many problems which the General simply cannot know, not having experienced it for years and years as a top brass official in the U. S. Army.

These things are, to stay the least of it, worth thinking over before placing your seal of approval on a "change in the administration in Washington."

The people as a whole have always fared much better under a Democratic administration than a Republican administration. Visible proof of this is too obvious for repetition. Just look around you at the improvements progressive leadership has given. The standard of living has been raised. Sound banking facilities are available. Schools have marched forward. Farmers and tneir wives are not having to work so hard to follow their important agricultural pursuits. Mechanical gadgets have lightened the house work. Tractors have supplanted the mule-drawn plows. Electric lights have supplanted the kerosene lamps. Just remember these things when you say "a change is needed."

As John Sparkman says,—"Change from What to What".... and thats the question that so far has not been answered by Mr. Republican!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Louis Damsker of Tyler, Texas are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Lefkovits.

. . . Wales W. Wallace, Jr., George Horn, Clayton Farr, Milton Smith and perhaps many more football fans we failed to see, leave town, witnessed the game in Tuscaloosa Saturday, between the Crimson Tide and VMI.

BLUE JEANS LOST

We have just seen Harvey Baker on Main and he is worried over losing two pairs of Girls Blue Jeans which he purchased from the Leader, and which he lost somewhere on the Main Drag last Thursday, near Dycus Cab Station. Anyone finding these articles, please bring them to my office and we will see that Mr. Baker receives them or send them on to him in Harpersville.

. . . Saturday, Mrs. Dewey Lewis of Alabaster, was in Columbiana, and in addition to renewing her allegiance to the "Home Paper" during her visit in our office, she gave me some "good advice". Mrs. Lewis told me I had better take advantage of a lesson she had learned and "slow down"! What method of perambulating shall we take around Main. Australian Crawl? Another fellow met us soon after Mrs. Lewis left and remarked.... "Lady, ever try putting a speedometer on? Wonder how far and fast you can go in a day? We haven't time to figure that one out!

. . . Lucy Turner is not only a delightful person to know, she is a talented musician and has a large class of piano pupils. The evening service at the Baptist Church will be more enjoyable now that Mrs. Turner has accepted the position as Pianist, and Robert Holliman can use one more talented musician in his choral group (Martha Bentley) who has been doing a nice job playing for this group of singers. No one thing more interesting than training the young people, and Bob and Lucy will be a wonderful inspiration to them as they undertake this work together.

. . . Nancy Horn of Alabama College spent the week end at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Horn.

. . . There is another fine boy in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lyon. We haven't had the pleasure of seeing him, yet, but if he is as fine as Ray, and as pretty as Margaret, he will have little to worry about in this old spinning ball of a world.

. . . Jimmy Mullins, age about 3, and Sonny Moore, ditto, may one day meet professionally in the Boxing Ring. But, there is one thing certain, they will not "fight it out together more seriously "than a fist-tilt we saw the other day, between these two little tykes who were having an altercation over a Sunday School paper". (Wonder when they read this paragraph 25 years from now, where they will be, and if, they will as quickly forget their ups and downs as they did this one? Five minutes after fists were flying, they were walking arm in arm down the street talking as if nothing had happened. (Take a lesson "grown-ups from Jimmy and Sonny and drop your grudges and personal prejudices. After all, both are excess baggage while you are passing thru this terra firma, and Life will be a lot happier without them.)

. . . Glad to report that Mary Mims, popular Music Director of Shelby County High School is improving following an automobile accident last Saturday.

. . . Dick Bell from Naval Radio Station, Skaggs Island, Sonoma, California, came by the office to brighten Saturday afternoon with his merry chatter, and Dick wants some Mt. Era news incorporated in the "Home Paper" each week. He believes Mrs. McQueen would do this little job "mighty well". So, we are passing on this suggestion to her, and we believe, maybe, someone will have time to get up some news nuggets from this section of our county, and send them in to us each week. Dick is a long, long way from home, and he is very proud of Shelby County, and his friends, and naturally, while serving in the Navy, wants to keep up with them. We hope news will be forthcoming. The "Home Paper" will follow Dick wherever he may go for the next 52 weeks, and will also find its way into the home of his sister, Hope Bell, who resides in Athens, Georgia. Thanks to Dick who attended to these subscriptions before leaving town.

OCTOBER BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARIES TO REMEMBER

October 12, was Columbus Day, and the Banks closed in honor of the occasion on Monday, October 13. In addition to this celebration, Dottie Walton, Vera Dean Moore, Joe Lyon, and Jimmy Mullins were the inspirations for birthday cakes; October 13, Bobby D. Mitchell, Jeff Edmondson, and Marsha White, were busily engaged in candle puffing; Tuesday, October 14, Gladys Watts, Evelyn White, and Steve Pierce were showered with gifts and good wishes, presented in honor of the day that brought them our way; Wednesday, Oliver Milstead had "His Day" with many happy events to remember; Friday, October 17, will mark the battle for the pigskin between Columbiana and Montevallo, and this popular "come together for a tackle" will be staged in Montevallo. Listed on the Birthday Calendar for this date, I note Charles Jones and Charles Allen Jones; October 18, Mrs. A. A. Lauderdale, whom everybody loves, will mark the passing of another year along her useful pathway; and little Patsy Ann Tidmore, down her way, will receive a "Happy Birthday To You" sung in her honor. Many, many happy returns of the day to each of you!

. . . Don't know what we would do without our good neighbors, the Jeff Edmondsons, "Mr. and Mrs." who express, in so many ways, their thoughtfulness of us. Today we have a lovely potted plant grown by Mrs. Edmondson who gave it to us to brighten our official quarters, and pretty soon, after this lovely gift came "Mr. Jeff" came in bringing us the coldest-cold Coke a fellow could wish for.

. . . It is wonderful to have "good neighbors" in this old knock-down business world, fact is, we could not do without "good neighbors". They make life a much happier pilgrimage.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Rentfrow (Aileen McGhee) of Corpus Christi, Texas and Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGhee of Eufaula, are guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. McGhee.

. . . B. B. Curry of Wilton was seen greeting a host of friends on Main last Tuesday. We had the privilege of a curbstone chat with this radiant fellow, and, as usual, the day grew brighter on account of it. This old world could use a lot of Byrd Currys, if they could only find them, and would be a far happier place in which to live. As one gentleman phrased it when we chased thru the corridors of the courthouse, "There goes Byrd Curry. He has the kind of religion I wish I had"! We heard another good Baptist brother say, regarding Byrd Curry.... "Wish we could find a preacher like Byrd Curry"! Another fellow standing by, said, "Let's call him and make him preach." (And there you have it Mr. Byrd Curry. Just a few remarks made about your whirl wind trip thru town last Tuesday morning.)

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Candler Watkins (Sue McDermott) and children Sharon and Phil, of Birmingham were Sunday dinner guests of the Barney Isbells and Mr. Franklin.

RASCO-MacDONALD WEDDING SOLEMNIZED

The marriage of Douglas Rasco, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Rasco of Columbiana, was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Rasco, Thursday evening, October 9, in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends. The Rev. Dan Akers, reading the marriage vows.

After a brief wedding trip, the young couple will make their future home in Birmingham where Mr. Rasco is employed by the T. C. I. Company.

BAKE SALE HUGE SUCCESS

The "Vignettes" scored a splendid success Saturday with their Bake Sale. Fact is, late comers were disappointed. There were not enough cakes to supply the demand. Next time, however, the "Vignettes" have promised plenty—and whats more, are determined to run a Bake Sale each month for some worthy cause which they are sponsoring. Thats good news to all of us who shared in this last offering. Watch for the next date, and better be there early, or place your order before the door swings open at Neal Stinson's Garage, so you will be sure to get just the kind of a cake you want for your week end needs.

Mrs. Cecil Duke was the "lucky one" last Saturday, when she was awarded a big, fluffy white cocoanut cake, baked as only Virginia Fowler can bake them.

Just watch for the next Bake Sale. We will tell you about the date as soon as the Vignettes determine same.

. . . Mrs. Bennett, mother of Mrs. Karl C. Harrison, after spending a few days in Columbiana with the Harrisons, has returned to her home in Savannah, Georgia.

. . . Down the street came J. E. Cain this wonderfully bright morning, and he brought along good news. He is a new subscriber from Wilsonville Rt. whom we are mighty glad to welcome to our reading circle.

. . . Pete Givhan, of Montevallo, is not only a good looking fellow, he is a "good sport" with it. Pete and I do not agree on who the next president will be, but, we have had a lot of merry quippings about who SHOULD be. Pete was in town Thursday and it was the first time we had seen him since we chanced to meet in Montgomery at the time, he and his "think-a-likers" were holding their "I Like Ike" meeting. However, November 4, will ring down the final curtain on this campaign, and win, lose ar draw, between Adlai and Ike, Pete and I shall remain good friends, and thats exactly the way it should be! You vote for your candidate, and I will vote for mine, but lets go to the polls together!

. . . The "Tag-Line" continues to grow at the Courthouse. Everyone delighted over the new price for auto license plates.

GUEST SPEAKER AT BAPTIST CHURCH SUNDAY

Dr. Scoggins of Montgomery, who is filling the Baptist pulpit for the month of October, spoke to a large assemblage last Sunday, both morning and evening, and his impressive messages were highly appreciated by all who were privileged to hear him. You are invited to hear him next Sunday.

The Choristers will sing a beautiful interpretation of the well known hymn.... Holy-Holy-Holy.... and will also feature Katherine Davis as soloist with the choir, in their version of "Tarry In The Garden.

The evening service will feature music by the Youth Chóir under the direction of Robert Holliman, with Lucy Turner as accompaniest.

. . . Mrs. B. B. Curry, Mrs. Hubbard and Mrs. Emma Bailey of Wilton were visitors in Columbiana, Monday, whom it was my pleasure to talk with during their brief sojourn on Main.

. . . Glad to report to friends of Gene Edmondson that he is recovering satisfactorily following a trip to the hospital for treatment last week.

. . . Talking with our long-time cherished friends last Sunday—Vivian and "Mac" (Mr. and Mrs. G. R. MacNeil), there is a slight possibility that these two splendid people with their young son, may decide to return to Columbiana "for keeps". No one would be happier over this decision in the affirmative, than the writer. Fact is, after I heard it, I began making a wish each night to the "first little evening star".... and now, I am just waiting for the wish to come true!

. . . Thanks and thanks again to our life long friend Mrs. Fay Miles Benton for renewal subscription to this paper we represent. It is heartening to realize that one who has known us so long states she still "follows us thru" each week "with interest"! It makes a fellow no longer doubt that an inexhaustible supply of charity remains among old friends, and the realization brings additional happiness as we continue our pilgrimage " Up and Down Main".

. . . Saw Elmer Davis in town Monday. Just "down from Birmingham seeing my folks".... he said then, he pulled out two dollars and that meant, "renew my old home paper".

. . . Regret to learn that our good friend W. E. Morrow continues ill at his home in Columbiana.

WORLD WAR ONE WIDOW'S PENSION

It seems that there are still lots of people who do not know that a widow of a War One Veteran is entitled to a pension after the death of her husband, even though his death is in no way connected with his war service.

In addition to bringing this to the attention of those who may be entitled to the pension some day, I thought you War One veterans would also like to be brought up to date on the present law.

In addition to WIDOWS, CHILDREN are also entitled to what is called the Non-Service Death Pension. In order that the widow and children to be eligible for benefits, there are certain provisions must have been met by the veteran while he was in service. First, he must have served in World War One before November 12, 1918, or April 2, 1920, if he served in Russia. He must have been discharged under condition other than dishonorable after 90 days, or more military service. If he did not serve 90 days, his dependents would be entitled, ANYWAY, Provided his discharge was due to a disease or disability incurred in line of duty.

In order to be eligible, the widow must have married the veteran before December 14, 1944, and she must have lived with the veteran continuously until his death, unless the reason they were not living together was due to no fault of the widow.

Children under the age of 18 years are also entitled to this nonervice pension. Or, if the child is in school, the pension may be received until it reaches the age of 21 years.

In order to be eligible the income of the widow, if she has no dependents, must not be over $1400. If she has children under 18 years of age, her income must not be over $2700 per year.

She will receive $48 per month with no dependents, $60 with one dependent and $7.20 for each additional child. If there is no widow, one child will draw $26 and two children, $39 and three children $52 per month. Each child must be under 18 years of age.

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 6.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 40: 1-8.

Sincerity

Lesson for October 19, 1952

SOME say an insincere person isn't what he seems to be. That is not quite true. An insincere person is what he seems to be, only not all the way through. He is what he seems to be, on Sundays, or part of the time, or when he's feeling just right; or perhaps he is what he seems to be, but only on the surface. The rest of the time, or underneath that surface, he is something quite different. Everybody likes sincere people, nobody wants to have much to do with the insincere.

Dr. Foreman

Getting Down to Cases

Jesus, of course, demanded sincerity. "Jesus would rather be denied by a true man than confessed by a liar." He did not use the word "sincere" or "sincerity," but (as was his habit) he came down to cases. He first shows that a generous giver, and a praying man, may be insincere. When is generosity sincere? When is a man all-the-way generous and when is he only top-layer generous? Jesus suggests that it isn't what we give, but why we give, that points up a test for sincerity. It is very doubtful whether Jesus meant to say that any one ever hired a trumpeter to toot for him when he dropped some money into the collection plate or wrote a check for the Red Cross. What he means to say is that when a man gives with the hope that his gift will attract attention and produce applause, he is not really generous. He doesn't have the recipient's interests at heart; he is thinking only, "How well people will think of Me! "Or again, that odd saying, "Do not let your left hand know what your right hand is doing" suggests that sometimes you are generous in order to please your favorite audience: You. You are generous in order to feel self-satisfied, your right hand (so to speak) brags about your left. The sincerely generous person is the only truly generous one; and the only sincerely generous person is the one who wants to give, not to be complimented, even by himself.

What Is Sincere Prayer?

Another concrete case that Jesus takes up is prayer. There is a story that once a minister was told after service: "Doctor, that was the most eloquent prayer ever delivered to a Boston audience." Jesus would say that a prayer delivered to an audience—Boston, Bombay or Barber Junction, no matter where—isn't a prayer, it's just a way of showing off. A certain professor of English used to quote famous authors in his public prayers: "As Shakespeare has said, O Lord . . . Thou rememberest what the poet Browning hath said . . ." Now there's no use quoting poetry to the Lord; that 's suited to a speech, not to a prayer. Of course Jesus did not mean that we are never to pray in the presence of others. He himself prayed in public on various occasions. Leading others in prayer is a rare gift and should be cultivated. But while prayer, sincere prayer, can be with others and for others, it should never be to others. Some preachers "beat the congregation over their heads with a prayer" as the saying is. Some deacons have been known to put long and dull prayer-meeting talks into the form of a prayer. One elder well-versed in Scripture used to go through the whole story of the Bible, in outline, every time he was called on for a prayer.

Sincerity in Devotion

Jesus points out where sincerity is most important of all: in our devotion to God. We cannot serve God and Mammon. God does not want part-time devotion. By serving God, Jesus means living by God's side, under God's orders. Serving Mammon means more than simply serving money—most Mammon-worshippers would deny that they "serve" money. It means living your life not as God would have you but in order to "get ahead," to make money, to stand well with people who have money. Serving God means living as Jesus lived, for others; serving Mammon means trying to be served by as many persons as possible. Success, in Mammon's terms, is measured in terms of how many people work for you; success in God's terms, is measured in terms of how much you have helped others. Sincere devotion to God must be devotion all life through.

A PROCLAMATION
BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Regular Session 1951, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the day of the General Election next succeeding the final adjournment of the 1951 session of the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, the General Election next succeeding the final adjournment of the 1951 Session of the Legislature, at which the amendment was proposed, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gordon Persons, as Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

"No moneys derived from any fees, excises, or license taxes, levied by the State relating to registration, operation, or use of vehicles upon the public highways except a vehicle-use tax imposed in lieu of a sales tax, and no moneys derived from any fee, excises, or license taxes, levied by the State, relating to fuels used for propelling such vehicles except pump taxes, shall be expended for other than cost of administering such laws, statutory refunds and adjustments allowed therein, cost of construction, reconstruction, maintenance and repair of public highways and bridges, costs of highway right-of-way, payment of highway obligations, the cost of traffic regulation, and the expense of enforcing state traffic and motor vehicle laws. The provisions of this Amendment shall not apply to any such fees, excises, or license taxes now levied by the State for school purposes for the whole State or for any county or city Board of Education therein."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, in each county in the State of Alabama, in a newspaper published in said county.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the Great Seal of the State of Alabama to be affixed by the Secretary of State, at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 28th day of July 1952.

STATE OF ALABAMA
A PROCLAMATION
BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Fifth Special Session, 1950, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the date of the next general election after January 1, 1951; and

WHEREAS, the next general election to be held in the State after January 1, 1951, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

"Any provision of the Constitution or laws of the State of Alabama to the contrary notwithstanding, any municipality in Fayette County, or any one or more of them, shall have full and continuing power and authority, after an election held in accordance herewith, to do any one or more of the following:

"1. To purchase, construct, lease or otherwise acquire real property, plants, buildings, factories, works, facilities, machinery and equipment of any kind.

"2. To lease, sell for cash or on credit, exchange, give and convey any such property described in subdivision 1 above, to any person, firm, association or corporation.

"3. To promote local industrial, commercial or agricultural development and the location of new industries or businesses therein.

"4. To become a stockholder in any corporation, association or company.

"5. To lend its credit or to grant public moneys and things of value in aid of, or to, any individual, firm, association, or corporation whatsoever.

"6. To become indebted and to issue and sell interest bearing bonds, warrants (which may be payable from funds to be realized in future years), notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness, to a principal amount not exceeding fifty percent of the assessed value of taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in order to secure funds for the purchase, construction, lease or acquisition of any of the property described in subdivision 1 above or to be used in furtherance of any of the other powers or authorities granted in this amendment. Such obligations or evidences of indebtedness may (in addition to any pledge or pledges authorized by subdivision 8 of this amendment) be issued upon the full faith and credit of the municipality or may be limited as to the source of their payment.

"7. To levy and collect annually, in addition to all other taxes now authorized or permitted, a special tax or taxes of not exceeding two percent on the value of all taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in the same manner as other county or municipal taxes are levied and collected. Such tax may be upon all property in any municipality in Fayette County or upon all property in any district the boundaries of which the governing body of such municipality shall describe and which it shall determine to be specially improved and benefited by any proposed use or expenditure of the proceeds of such tax.

"8. To pledge to the payment of any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness the annual proceeds from any such special tax or taxes and to obligate itself irrevocably to continue to levy and collect such taxes annually until such obligations or evidences of indebtedness are paid in full and to pledge thereto any rental or sales proceeds of property leased or sold by it.

"9. STATE OF ALABAMA
A PROCLAMATION
BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Fifth Special Session, 1950, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the date of the next general election after January 1, 1951; and

WHEREAS, the next general election to be held in the State after January 1, 1951, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gordon Persons, as Governor of the State of Alabama do hereby give notice direct and proclaim that on Tuesday, the 4th day of November 1952, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

"Any provision of the Constitution or laws of the State of Alabama to the contrary notwithstanding, any municipality in Blount County, or any one or more of them, shall have full and and continuing power and authority, after an election held in accordance herewith, to do any one or more of the following:

"1. To purchase, construct, lease, or otherwise acquire real property, plant, buildings, factories, works, facilities, machinery and equipment of any kind.

"2. To lease, sell for cash or on credit, exchange, or give and convey any such property described in subdivision 1 above, to any person, firm, association or corporation.

"3. To promote local industrial, commercial or agricultural development and the location of new industries or businesses therein.

"4. To become a stockholder in any corporation, association or company.

"5. To lend its credit or to grant public moneys and things of value in aid of, or to, any individual, firm, association or corporation whatsoever.

"6. To become indebted and to issue and sell interest bearing bonds, warrants, (which may be payable from funds to be realized in future years), notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness to a principal amount not exceeding fifty percent of the assessed value of taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in order to secure funds for the purchase, construction, lease or acquisition of any of the property described in subdivision 1 above or to be used in furtherance of any of the other powers or authorities granted in this amendment. Such obligations or evidences of indebtedness may (in addition to any pledge or pledges authorized by subdivision 8 of this amendment) be issued upon the full faith and credit of the municipality or may be limited as to the source of their payment.

"7. To levy, and collect annually, in addition to all other taxes now authorized or permitted, a special tax or taxes of not exceeding two percent on the value of all taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in the same manner as other county or municipal taxes are levied and collected. Such tax may be upon all property in any municipality in Blount County or upon all property in any district the boundaries of which the governing body of such municipality shall describe and which it shall determine to be specially improved and benefited by any proposed use or expenditure of the proceeds of such tax.

"8. To pledge to the payment of any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness the annual proceeds from any such special tax or taxes and to obligate itself irrevocably to continue to levy and collect such taxes annually until such obligations or evidences of indebtedness are paid in full and to pledge thereto any rental or sales proceeds of property leased or sold by it.

"9. To create a public authority or corporation having such powers, managed and governed by such board or governing body and subject to such limitations as the governing body of any municipality in Blount County may impose, by approving and filing a certificate to that effect in the office of the Judge of Probate or the Secretary of State, or their respective successors in function, and to delegate to such public authority or corporation and its board or governing body all powers and authority conferred in this amendment upon any such municipality.

"The recital in any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness that they were issued pursuant to this amendment or that they were issued to provide funds to be used in furtherance of any power or authority herein authorized or that any special tax herein authorized has been pledged to the payment thereof shall be conclusive; no purchaser or holder thereof need inquire further; and the levy and collection of such tax shall continue until the principal of and interest on such obligations or evidences of indebtedness shall have been paid in full. The bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness issue hereunder shall not be considered an indebtedness of any municipality in Blount County for the purpose of determining the borrowing capacity of such municipality under Section 224 and 225 of the Constitution; and the taxes herein authorized shall be in addition to those provided for or permitted in sections 215 and 216 of the Constitution and all amendments thereto.

"This amendment shall be self-executing; but the Legislature shall have the right and power by general, special or local act to adopt laws supplemental to this amendment or in furtherance of the purposes and objectives hereinabove set forth.

STATE CATTLEMEN MARKET MORE BEEF

During the last several weeks farmers in Alabama and other states have brought an increasing amount of beef to market—a product consumers have wanted to see more for a long time.

A. W. Jones, API Extension Market Specialist, says that enough cattle and calves have been sold to reduce all along the line the prices paid for beef.

For the month ending in mid-August, 14 per cent more cattle and calves went through stockyards than during the same time last year. By mid-September prices paid cattlemen for good and choice grade slaughter calves was about 28 per cent less than they received a year earlier.

The specialist states that this increase in the beef supply is beginning to show up in lower prices for many beef cuts atmeat counters. This is particularly true for young tender beef carrying a high percentage of lean.

Jones believes that with heavier marketing of cattle and calves expected through the fall months, the plentiful supply of beef will likely continue.

Instead of discarding worn socks, save them until you have several pairs. The will provide the material for a good dry mop.

4-H GIRLS LEARNING TO 'HANG OUT THE WASH'

Shelby County 4-H girls are learning the art of "Hanging Out The Wash." At each of their meetings this month a demonstration is being given which shows them the correct way to hang out the wash. Points stressed are: (1) Hang clothes on lines located near the laundry area to save steps and time. (2) Keep clothespins within easy reach by using an apron with pockets or a bag that will hang on the line. (3) Save energy when hanging out clothes by placing basket on a laundry cart or child's wagon. The girls are also taught how each article should be pinned on the clothes lines and that folding the clothes as they are removed from the line reduces wrinkles.

CLUB WOMEN TO ASSIST ANNUAL FARM BUREAU MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Shelby County Club women have made plans to assist with The Annual Farm Bureau Membership Drive, October 20-25th. Thirty-four women representing 16 clubs made these plans last Monday. A. A. Lauderdale and H. A. Pauly talked on Farm Bureau Activities and the importance of the organization. Mrs. J. Frank Wyatt, Farm Bureau Chairman, urged all Club chairmen to attend the kick-off meeting and solicit a record membership during the week.

ROOM FOR EXPANDING GRASSLAND FARMING

Grazing crops are the most important sources of feed nutrients for beef and dairy cattle, according to S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist.

He points out that they also play an important role in producing other types of livestock. And on most farms there are areas of open land that are of such slope that row crops cannot be grown continuously without serious erosion damage.

Therefore, the specialist urges farmers to devote such land to sod crops. In Alabama where these crops may be grown the year round, grazing largely eliminates the added labor of harvesting, storing, and drying forage for winter months.

CHOOSE RIGHT FABRIC FOR PLEASANT SEWING

To show individuality, details of a garment to be made at home can be varied from the original pattern.

"However," warns Kathleen Thompson, API Extension clothing specialist, "the amount of time you have and sewing experience should guide you in your choice of both the materials and pattern."

For instance, she explains, sewing short cuts can be used easier on firmly woven, medium weight fabrics than on sheer, slippery rayons. Solid or small all-over designs are simpler to handle, need less detailed trimming, finishing, and perfect workmanship.

"Also," adds the specialist, "buy the right amount of material, not from a personal estimate, but from the chart on the back of the pattern. The chart gives you the yardage for the different width fabrics, sized, and styles."

VARIETY MEATS VERSUS COSTLY MUSCLE MEATS

Many homemakers use variety meats to help stretch the meat dollar because they are less expensive than muscle meats.

Explaining this statement, Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, says that when meat with bone is bought for roasts, broiling, or frying, a serving for each adult is usually one-half pound and four to six ounces for children, depending upon their ages.

"On the other hand," says the nutritionist,t "about one-half of these quantities is sufficient when boned roasts, cutlets, hamburgers, swiss or cube steaks, liver, tongue, heart, or kidneys are served."

CHRISTIAN DEVOTION - ITS UPLIFTING POWER

"Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth". Matthew 6:10

Untold multitudes of people throughout Christendom are anxiously awaiting the answer to that prayer, and with inexpressible longing. It is one of six petitions that our Lord himself taught his disciples to voice with earnestness of heart before the throne of the Soverign God; and of the six thisone is paramount in our generation.

There are three areas within which the answer to that prayer should operate, namely; the heart of the individual suppliant, the corporate body of the Kingdom of God, and the mind and heart of the unbelieving world in its impact with the Christian movement. That is to say, the will of God will not be done on earth until the influence of the Gospel has, directly or indirectly, affected the behavior of all men everywhere.

There is no prospect for peace on this earth, or even decent behavior in our international melee so long as the will of God is disregarded. Prompted by boastful pride we are imagining that the human brain can make the grade without divine guidance; that the will of man need not be subordinate to the will of God. We are no wsuffering the consequences of having turned a deaf ear to the age-long warning, "Pride goeth before destruction, and haughty spirit before a fall."

"We have," says General Omar Bradley, Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army, "too many men of science; too few men of God. We have grasped the mystery of the atom and rejected the Sermon on the Mount. Man is stumbling blindly through a spiritual darknes while toying with the precarious secrets of life and death. The world has achieved brilliance without wisdom, power without conscience. Ours is a world of nuclear giants and ethical infants."

We had better get back to the Lard's prayer. Unless we do, this will be ourswan-song:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
All that beauty, all that wealth
e'er gave,
Alike await the inevitable hour;
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Applying liquid wax to floors with an insect sprayer is more thorough, more economical, and less difficult than the usual method.

NUMBER OF BIRTHS REPORTED BY HEALTH DEPARTMENT

The 17,701 births reported from the entire state between April and June, inclusive, included 103 reported from Shelby county. The announcement was made today by the State Department of Health, on the basis of provisional reports prepared by the Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics. Both state and county figures refer to live births only, no stillbirths.

The announcement pointed out that the provisional reports might differ slightly from the final reports not yet available.

MAIL ORDER CIGARETS

The State Revenue Department has been alerted for purchasers of cigarets mailed into Alabama to beat state tobacco tax laws.

B. B. Atkins, chief of the tobacco tax division of the State Revenue Department says a mail order firm is "flooding" the state with solicitations to purchase cigarets by mail.

Atkins warned that although the firm guaranteed not to reveal the name of a purchaser, a federal statute requires the seller of cigarets to report all sales to tobacco tax officials. He added that severe penalties could be imposed on violators.

A TYPOGRAPICAL MIX-UP

Irrepressible Jep Greer calls our attention to this "oldie".... Always a laugh-provoker!

Just before press time, an employee spilled some type concerning two stories, one a story about a public sale, the other a wedding. The editor asked the printer to pick up the type and to reproof it before placing it in the page form to be printed. The printer obliged, but did not proof the story before placing it in the page form.

The editor therefore didn't know of the mixup until an angry preacher and the bride's parents appeared in the office in a very stormy mood.

The article, as it appeared in the paper, read:

"William Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed at public auction at my barn one mile east, a beautiful cluster of roses on her shoulder and two white calves, before a background of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about 70 guests including two milk cows and six mules and one buggy.

"The Rev. Jackson tied the nuptial knot with 200 feet of grass rope and the bridal couple left on the International Harvester gang plow for an extended trip with terms to suit purchasers.

"They will be at home to their friends with one good baby buggy and a few kitchen utensils to responsibile parties and some 500 chickens."

Indians were skilled in making pottery and other objects from clay and stone.

A CHALLENGING CALL TO DEMOCRACY

The government of a nation itself is usually a reflex of the people who compose it. The people of the United States deliberately and wisely framed their Government with the view of remaining masters of it, and not being mastered by it. All free governments are party governed. It is necessary to have different party affiliations.

We have the highest regard and respect for Republicans who believe in their Party, vote for and support their party. This is as it should be. We have heard few republicans threaten to forsake their Party.

We regret the fact that a division in Democratic ranks is threatened. We sincerely hope we are unduly alarmed over the rumors of some of our Democrats throwing their support to the Republican Party. But we sound a challenging clarion call to every Democrat in Shelby county, urging them to stand by our colors! Be steadfast and true to the greatest government the world has ever known.

Its deterioration or failure rests with the individuals who comprise the Democratic Party. A house divided against itself cannot stand. The very inherent right the people have to establish the Democratic Party presupposes the duty of every individual member to support the Party. Our country faces the greatest crisis in her history. Remember—

"Each petty hand
Can steer a ship becalmed; but he that will Govern and carry her to her ends, must know
His tides, his currents, how to shift his sails;
What she will bear in foul, what in fair weather:
Where her springs are, her leaks, and how to stop them;
What strands, what shelves, what rocks do threaten her".

Therefore, we urge you to aggressively and whole heartedly support and uphold the men chosen to carry the colors of the Democratic Party to victory on November 4, 1952.

AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED ON NOVEMBER 4

There are two proposed amendments to the state Constitution which hold state wide interest. Number 1 affects the diversion of road funds to other agencies, which, according to those supposed to be "in-the-know" state, since 1927, there has dribbled out of the road development fund, 23 million dollars. In 1951 alone we lost more than $2,600,000. Those sponsoring the adoption of this amendment, which would prohibit any diversion of these funds for any other purpose, other than road development, cite the above fact of 23 million dollars loss to this cause, which would have been sufficient to build four first class highways criss-crossing Alabama from east to west or two running from North to South.

The proposed amendment would require that all revenue from the 6 cents a gallon state gasoline tax and from license tags, be spent solely on highway improvements.

Twenty-one other states already have approved such amendments. Since good roads are the essential foundation for permanent development in Alabama it seems to this writer, that this amendment should certainly be approved by the electorate on November 4, 1952.

The third and fourth amendments on which popular approval or disapproval will be expressed on November 4, concern only Blount and Fayette counties and, their future industrial plan for development.

SUPREME COURT SETTLES BALLOT CONTROVERSY

The State Supreme Court has ruled that citizens of Alabama must have paid their poll tax by last February 1st, in order to cast a vote in the General Election on November 4, 1952.

The decision simply means that citizens paying their poll taxes since that time, cannot vote in the coming presidential election.

FARM BUREA SETS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE WEEK

H. A. Pauly, President of the County organization announces this week that Shelby County will not hold their Membership Drive the week of October 20-25 due to extreme urgency of farm work going on at this particularly time, but will be held two weeks later on NOVEMBER 3-8th. Members have already been notified to mail their dues in, so that this much of the weeks work for solicitors will be spent on new members, and other follow up work. Dues can be mailed to H. A. Pauly, President or W. Royce Morris, Sec.-Treas., Columbiana.

Pipe Line On Its Way To Columbiana

This week the workmen laying the pipe line for gas for Columbiana consumers have completed approximately 2000 feet, and I am reliably informed that it is highly probable that gas will be available by January 1st, to those having signed up for this utility.

Those wanting gas in their home or business house, should see Mrs. Ozley, Town Clerk and check up on dead line for this free service offered of piping the line to your baseboard.

DOUBLE WEDDING IN SHELBY

The wedding of Miss Mildred Hendrix, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hendrix of Shelby and Ralph Emerson Macon was solemnized at the Methodist Church on October 11. Dr. W. R. Hendrix of Birmingham, who twenty-eight years ago had read the marriage ceremony for Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hendrix, performed the ceremony.

Just as Dr. Hendrix had spoken the last words of the ceremony, and the bridal party turned to leave the church, Miss Leslie Polk left her placed at the piano and was joined at the altar by J. G. Hendrix Jr., and Dr. Hendrix performed a second wedding ceremony, which came as a complete surprise even to the bridal party.

Following the weddings, a beautiful reception was held at the Hendrix home in Shelby.

Sheriff's Term To Be Decided In Election

On November 4th, voters will mark their ballots for or against an amendment which, if it passes, will automatically tack two years on the terms of sheriffs now in office.

If the people approve this amendment, sheriffs in the 67 counties of Alabama will not have to run for re-election until 1956. The terms would end in January 1957.

The pattern of six years follows that of tax collectors and tax assessors whose terms were extended two years prior to their last election.

It is reported to the writer that most of the sheriffs in Alabama are actively campaigning for the passage of the amendment.

There is however, some opposition to this amendment.

Those opposing the amendment point out the fact that only one other state in the United States has both a six year term for sheriffs and an unlimited tenure of office. That state is Massachusetts, which has only 14 sheriffs. Twenty one states, including Alabama, have four year terms for sheriffs and allow the sheriffs to succeed themselves as long as the people approve of their administration. Other states vary.

In Alabama, other officials holding six year terms include: Probate Judges, Circuit Judges, Tax Collectors, Tax Assessors, Circuit Clerks and County officials holding four year terms include Circuit Solicitors, County Commissioners, and county Treasuerers.

In all cases tenure is limited only by the electorate.

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: Will Morgan became an Indian killer after seeing two women in his life, Ann Randall and Mary Belden, both fall into their clutches. He became known as "Silent Death", slipping into their camps at night to kill and plunder. But the government puts an agent on his trail because he has violated peace treaties by killing Indians. To escape, he joins army as a scout and takes mission as spy into Indian villages where he impersonates a chief. He finds out that Mary is prisoner of White Panther, man he impersonates. The Indians try to trick him by putting white woman in his tent, but he refuses the bait, goes to British fort.

CHAPTER XVII

Captain Prentiss, the adjutant, stepped to a rear door as Turkey Foot nodded approval. "Sir Clarence," he called, "would you care to meet the chiefs? They have come to discuss the matter of the American forts."

A tall Englishman emerged from an inner room, his immaculate attire and perfectly powdered wig incongruous in such surroundings. He greeted each Indian with a word and a handclasp, looking with special interest at White Panther. Morgan gave him a grip which he expected would make the dandy wince but to his surprise found that the man had a hand of iron. The grip was returned and the trader smiled thinly, the little crinkles at the corners of his eyes giving Will an impression of vague familiarity.

Turkey Foot went into a long story of the wrongs of the Indian and Will listened absently, certain that he ought to know the company agent and swore that the man was studying him with frank curiosity.

British Company Agent Is an Old-Time Friend

Presently Major Cameron found an opportunity to break in on the long harangue. "My brothers know that the great King is always willing to help his red children. Powder will be yours for the taking. Our young men will help in the fighting although they must go dressed as Indians and not in the red coats of the King. We have few guns to spare now but by summer there will be many for our brothers. Is it enough?"

Turkey Foot nodded affirmatively and the conference came to an abrupt end. Suddenly the tall trader spoke as the chiefs started toward the door. "White Panther, haven't I seen you somewhere before?"

Again that little crinkle appeared in the corners of his eyes and suddenly Will knew him. Sir Clarence Brisbane—Tilly! The mysterious Englishman who had left his life as a trapper to go home and take over a title—and a business. For a moment the thought silenced him but Captain Prentiss spoke quickly.

"White Panther does not usually care to converse in English. Shall I translate for you?"

Will congratulated himself that he had remained silent. This White Panther was an odd one, that was certain. Brisbane shrugged. "Never mind, Captain," he murmured. "It's a mere matter of a resemblance which I recall hearing about before. The chief would not be interested."

Will moved toward the door, carrying his rifle with careless readiness. Then two things happened at once. He saw the familiar rotund form of Tobe Ansley outside the door—and Brisbane spoke again, this time in the Miami tongue.

"White Panther," he said in a strange voice. "Do you not fear to depend upon a rifle which carries a flaw in its stock?"

The significance of the question was unmistakable. Will remembered the evening of the domino game. Kirby had mentioned that check in the gunstock and there had been some discussion of how serious a weakness it might be.

Will chose to ignore Ansley before this greater threat. He turned as though to reply, swinging the rifle so that it partly covered Brisbane without apparent design. "White Panther knows no fear," he replied calmly. "Even with the flaw the rifle is ready to answer all threats."

Brisbane's face was a study, the threat obvious to him although no one else seemed to understand. What he might have done in the emergency fell into the field of pure speculation for an awed exclamation came from the doorway, taking the choice away from him. Tobe Ansley, eyes as big as grapeshot, whispered hoarsely, "Gawd! Ain't he the spittin' image o' Will Morgan!"

Brisbane smiled slowly after a single glance at the door. He could no more risk Ansley's recognition than could Morgan. "I imagine your confidence is well placed," he said slowly. "Those Pennsylvania-made Jaeger copies have many good points, in this case just five points—if I recall correctly."

The British officers were staring but Will understood the reference. Still he could not be certain that Brisbane would remain silent; this might be an attempt to trap him into admitting his identity. "I am satisfied," he said simply and headed out.

There was still the gaping Ansley to pass but Will paid no attention to the traitor.

It was well after nightfall when the quartet returned to Turkey Foot's village. Since their report was to be given to the council on the morrow there was no need to arouse the camp and the emissaries went directly to their huts. Not until he was inside did Will recall the unwanted companion who would probably give the alarm should he try to slip away during the night.

She was awake, apparently waiting, for as he entered the lodge she spoke quickly—in English. "White Panther? It is you?"

"Yes. What do you want?"

She came to him, her voice low but intense as she asked, "You're not the real White Panther, are you?"

"What . . . why do you ask?"

"So you're not. I knew it!" There was a sharpness in her voice now which contrasted with her previous dull tones, a quick note of eagerness which seemed vaguely familiar. "You're suspected. Bear Nose's squaw taunted me today because I had been sent to the lodge of one who would soon be sport for the torturers. Bear Nose awaits only word from the Miamis to prove that you're a spy. He expects a runner early tomorrow and he wants to expose you before the council. You must get out of here right away!"

Running lightly in the mile-consuming dog trot of the Indian courier, he passed their hiding place.

He regarded her intently, trying to decide whether or not it was an act. "Suppose Bear Nose is wrong," he suggested. "Suppose I am White Panther. What will happen to you for talking like this?"

"But you're not White Panther! Don't argue; get away!"

Two Figures Flee Into the Darkness

"And what will it mean for you when they find me gone?" He knew the answer as well as she did but he wanted to know how she felt about it.

She hesitated only momentarily. "Will you take me with you? I can run as fast as the braves. Often I have to run faster to get away from them. You can kill me if I delay you."

The quiet desperation in her tone brought him to a decision. "All right. Get ready."

"I'm ready now. I've been hoping. I even have food."

"Good. You know the village; lead the way until we're clear of town. If they don't miss us until morning we'll have a thin chance to keep our scalps."

She nodded and faded shadowlike through the skin flap that was the doorway of the lodge. For some anxious moments the raider who had invaded numberless Indian camps was hard pressed to match her silent swiftness. Twice they had to freeze into shadows as village curs came barking but each time the girl managed to quiet the dogs before there was any alarm.

Finally nothing stood between them and the forest but a lone sentinel at the stockade gate. They conferred in whispers and then Will began a wide circle which would bring him behind the guard. It took more time than he liked to think about but eventually he was in position not ten feet from the Indian's greasy back. Almost at once the girl came around the corner of a hut, walking erect without any attempt at concealment. The warrior grunted but made no open challenge.

She began to speak rapidly to him, keeping his attention while Will poised himself. After that the swift action was something which might have come out of an earlier day in Morgan's life. It was all over in an instant, the warrior having uttered no sound.

As they slowed to a walk after one of their short runs Will asked, "Getting tired?"

"A little," she admitted. "But don't worry about it. I'm good for a few miles yet."

"Wish I could say the same," he retorted. "A night's run on top of a hard day isn't exactly restful."

She made no reply and they paced off another mile in silence, coming to a ford where the trail crossed a branch. "First stop," Will announced. "Watch out; it might be deep."

He started into the stream as though intending to cross but instead turned directly upstream to where a small bushy island divided the creek. Avoiding the reeds he floundered through a neck-deep pool to where he could enter the bushes without leaving betraying marks. The girl had to swim as she reached the deep water but she held her bundle high and came on, close behind him as he crawled to firm ground.

"This'll do," he grunted wearily. "We can watch the ford from here. I don't think they'll be able to do much tracking, especially if a few parties move along the trail before the alarm gets out."

She shook herself like a puppy. "That water was pretty cold. Too bad we can't have a fire."

"Can't be helped. The bath won't hurt us. What do we have to eat?"

She opened the rawhide packet she had carried all night. "Meat and corn," she replied. "Better eat plenty now. We don't want to start again on empty stomachs—or overfull ones."

He chuckled at the advice. "You know a few things, don't you? Where did you come from before the Indians got you?"

She smiled a bit ruefully. "Have I changed so much . . ." she asked, "or did you really ignore me as much as you pretended?"

Identity of Companion Is Shock to Morgan

He stared at her in astonishment for a moment. Then his eyes widened as he exclaimed, "Lord! Can you be Ann Randall?"

She nodded, her smile almost fearful. "Have I changed?" she insisted.

She looked away in some embarrassment. "When I was captured," she told him, "I was taken to the wigwam of an old warrior who seemed intrigued by my yellow hair. At first I was treated quite well. Then a couple of younger braves began to eye me pretty sharply. I'd heard that Indians were very superstitious about crazy people so I pretended to lose my mind. I became as you see me, unwashed, slovenly and completely irresponsible. It worked."

Will gave her an understanding smile.

Ann seemed to have no trouble in matching the stiff pace he set. Twice in the late afternoon they had to take to the brush to avoid small groups of savages but there was nothing to indicate that alarms had been given. Nightfall brought them to a tributary flowing into the Maumee from the south and Will motioned toward it. "We'll cut south here," he said. "It'll allow us to skirt the towns at the Auglaize forks. We've got to do it but it'll be hard travel."

"Suits me," she agreed. "How would it be to follow this creek until dark, then rest 'til moonrise? We'll make better progress that way."

He grinned in appreciation. "Fifty miles since last night and you can still think!"

Her smile of pleasure faded as running footsteps sounded on the trail behind them. They moved silently into the brush just as a warrior trotted into view. Running lightly in the mile-consuming dog trot of the Indian courier he passed their hiding place and crossed the stream, disappearing along the trail to the Miami towns.

"Now it comes!" Will muttered. "They're relaying the word along from one Miami party to another. We'll have both tribes after us by morning."

They forced their way through the thickets, making slow progress as the light faded. Will was tiring as the exertion and lack of sleep began to tell on him but his pride would not let him show it while the girl kept up the pace. Finally, as darkness made their passage all but impossible, he called a halt.

"Enough for now," he grunted wearily. "See if you can find a place where the briars are not so thick."

Between them they managed to clear out a spot big enough to lie on and almost before they hit the ground both were sound asleep. Will opened his eyes some time later to find Ann had huddled close against him as the night chill came on. She was sleeping in complete exhaustion and although the moon was now gleaming through the treetops he made no move to wake her. Sleepily he told himself that another hour of rest would be well spent, then he was asleep again.

They took to the brush, blindly now, knowing only that they must continue toward the southwest in hopes of striking the Maumee again above the Indian towns. There they would have a chance of being picked up by one of Wayne's patrols—if a war party did not run across them first.

Shortly after daybreak they rested again and ate another snack of cold meat. The girl seemed to be going lame in her right foot. Despite her efforts to hide it Will had caught her limping painfully when he looked back. He said nothing about it until they had finished their meagre meal, then he asked, "What's wrong with the foot?"

"Nothing."

Dear Joe:

I started this letter two weeks ago. But a cold that settled in the back of my neck floored it for the long count. When a guy gets my age all those little itis folks start hammering on his bones and tissues. Mr. and Mrs. Arthritis and all their kinfolks. And they've got more kin than the poor have. Some day I'll get up without a new pain somewhere and you'll hear shouting over there.

But The Old Street has been busy making news for you guys. They went in to wake Aunt Dora Harkins one morning last week. But she had gone, during the night, out of reach of their words. Aunt Dora was a great friend of mine. All along the avenues of my life were little clusters of flowers she had planted there. They come back today like an old perfume. They will come back tomorrow. To remind me how nice it was to have had Aunt Dora for my friend.

The black-eyed susans have covered the hillsides here now. They are like clouds of golddust in the late afternoon sun. Then today I got an armful for my window. Pretty soft-voiced Sherry Tillery brought them. I treated her to ice cream and she tossed in a million-dollar smile for boot. The flowers will die in a day or so, and the ice cream was gone in a few moments. But all day I saw a pretty face on my money orders, and little echoes of soft words are still sounding in the office.

That swell guy on the corner, Neal Stinson, is home from the hospital. He has been seriously ill, but is on the high road now. A guy like me sho misses a guy like Neal along Main. We prop our happiness up with other guys and gals, and when a prop is missing things don't go right.

I added another birthday to my list this week. The best thing about a birthday is that the very folks you hope will remember always do. Maybe I ought to quit having 'em. Time is such a hot-rod addict. But a guy travels this way just once, and all the little things that make for happiness are worth whatever they cost.

Alvin Stinson has been in the hospital in the big town. Frances was lost for days and showed it in her eyes. Then today she came in to get Dick to go with her after him. Her eyes were bright and dancing. That pretty lady didn't like it at all, having her man in that hospital.

Baker Elliott is at Brookley Air Force Base in Mobile. Baker doesn't go in for letter writing in a big way. Wilma had waited days for a letter and was getting a little perturbed. Then it came, along with a money order. Woodrow carried it home and everything seemed on the up and up. Even Mary Wilson, her bright eyes beaming, was anxious to hear the news. So Wilma read it aloud: "Dear Mom.... Everything is about as usual.... Baker."

Sarah Foster came in to see me today. Sarah and I get along like two peas in a pod. I think she's as pretty as an elm tree in October, and she depends on me to help on hurrying up a bow and arrow that's been a mighty long time coming. Joe is in the army at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, and we were talking about that today. Joe is so tall we were a little worried about what job he would get. She wrinkled up her pretty face trying to figure it out. Then she laughed. "Oh, I know," she chirped, "they'll give Joe a job hanging pictures."

But I've lost one of my very nicest friends. Not entirely, but out of the P. O. Jean Samons has gone to the big town to make a nurse. I met Jean six years ago She came in to buy a money order. She was about eleven then and so pretty she made my eyes hurt. She gave me her thoughts in such a quiet manner that I reached out to catch them before they got knocked all out of shape by the iron bars in the window. I'm glad now I put off that smart alex appendix in 1918. It'll be fun chasing her soft words up and down that spotless white bed, and catching them before they bang against the wall.

This is the end of my paper, Joe. I see your folks every day. They're fine. In a lot more ways than one, in my book.

Promoted to Management

this Page of Pictures

TELLS A STORY...

Every month our employee magazine contains one or more pages of pictures of telephone employees who have been promoted to management. That speaks well of employee opportunity in the telephone business.

Management jobs at Southern Bell are filled by promotions through the ranks. Last year there were 819 promotions to supervisory positions. There were also 5,834 promotions to higher non-supervisory jobs, and 615 promotions to higher management positions.

This policy of opportunity and recognition for the individual employee means good management and better telephone service for you. Coupled with good pay, fair treatment and one of industry's best employee benefit programs, it explains why more than half of the employees we had 20 years ago are still with the Company.

REPLACEMENT HEIFERS RAISED ON THE FARM

Most Alabama dairymen know the future of their herds depends on the supply of replacement heifers raised on their farms.

And J. R. Parrish, API Extension dairyman, urges those who are interested to get plans and details on portable calf pens from the local county agent. Use of these pens will solve many disease and parasite problems for the dairyman.

Columbiana Methodist Church News

Last Sunday the Columbiana Methodist Church was honored with the presence of Miss Theresa Anderson of Greer, S. C. Miss Anderson has for three years been a Missionary to the Phillipines. She was born in China and her parents were Missionaries to China. Miss Anderson had a display of Flags, costumes, jewelry and miniature equipment for armed soldiers. She spoke of the culture, education and religion of the natives. She also gave us valuable information about government and law of the Phillipines. Miss Anderson is employed by the Southern Baptist Mission Board.

The pastor, Rev. Allen D. Wilson will leave Columbiana Tuesday of next week to attend the North Alabama Annual Conference which will be in session at Tuscaloosa First Methodist Church October 29 to Nov. 2nd. Rev. Wilson is Recording Secretary of the Conference Board of Missions, also serves in the office of Conference Statistician.

The Columbiana Methodist church has enjoyed a very successful year having received 17 new members and raised for all purposes more than $16,000.00 since the last Annual Conference.

KOREAN VET DISCHARGED

Private John M. Queen, Jr., of Columbiana, Alabama has been discharged from the Army at Fort McClellan, Alabama. He entered the Army in May 1947, and is a veteran of the fighting in Korea, where he served for 13 months with the 1st Calvary, 8th Calvary Regiment as a Squad Leader. Private Queen also served after World War II with the Army of Occupation in Japan.

Among his awards and decorations are The Purple Heart, and the Korean Service Medal with 5 Battle Stars.

His wife, Lois, lives in Columbiana. Private Queen is the son of Mr. John M. Queen, Sr., of Columbiana.

DEMURE LADY

A dress with a dainty and sweet air is Henry Rosenfeld's versatile dress in the new menswear cotton suiting by J. P. Stevens. Bodice fullness and skirt fullness stem from a corseleted waistline which rises high in the bodice in a line that is reminiscent of the Empire, the National Cotton Council points out.

ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

B. F. Hatchett and G. C. Starcher

If anyone but Earl Morgan had told us his first year Coastal bermuda grass had grown thirty feet from tip to tip in one dry year we might have doubted it. He even cut some for hay. Will overseed with rescue seed and ryegrass and crimson clover.

Alec Etress says he is proud of his Ky. 31 Fescue which is a fast tall and dark green.

"Alabama," the new S. C. S. strain of reseeding clover is being loaned to B. B. Mooney, J. E. Cain, and two F. F. A. Chapters at Siluria and Montevallo, for trial.

Those cheap cattle at Birmingham sales this week are largely from farms not having balanced grazing programs. Properly planned grazing would allow them to be sold at better times and in better condition.

Edward Lansford's four acre test plantings of alfalfa, ryegrass and clover, Ky. 31 Fescue and grant white dutch, crimson clover and oats, and Chapel Hill Rescue grass all look good. At present, they rank about as listed above in appearance. More later as its too early to tell the tale.

ANOTHER CHAPTER IN F. F. A. CHAPTER'S STORY

Not being superstitious, F. F. A. instructor Elvin Hill started the beef production period of his F. F. A. Clubs project on October 13.

He took advantage of a low market to buy the young bulls from which the club hope to produce nicely finished steers by March 1st. Several ages and breeds were selected and individual weights will be kept. The best way to grow beef on grass and supplemental feeds. They will also learn even more about the fine new Chapel Hill Rescue grass which is working out so well for them. The public, is invited to study the project with them.

HOW TO PUT BUTTONS ON CLOTHING TO STAY

To save clothing, mending, time and temper put buttons on clothing to stay.

"If put on right in the first place," says Kathleen Thompson, API Extenson clothing specialist, "neither ordinary wear nor washing and ironing should loosen buttons."

Pointing out how to put on buttons so they won't budge, she says to use thread strong enough for the weight of the button; use tape or other reinforcement underneath, and perhaps most important, arrange for a shank of thread which gives room for the buttonhole to slide under the button without pull on the fabric.

"When sewing on a button," says the specialist, "lay a pin or darning needle over the top and sew over it. Then withdraw the pin and wind thread around the shank underneath. Fasten the thread on the wrong side of the garment, first with a buttonhile stitch, then with a couple of over-and over stitches."

Mrs. Jas. Crawford, Jr. Honored With Shower Saturday, October 18

Mrs. James H. Crawford, Jr., was the lovely honoree at a Miscellaneous shower, 2 to 5 p. m., Saturday, October 18th at the home of Mrs. Homer Walton, with Mesdames Levert Christian, Yeager Horn, Forgus Williams, Knox Wooley, Jimmie Harrison, Alvin Bird and Mrs. Ben Skelton as Co-Hostesses.

The autumn colors were artistically carried through out the home in the arrangement of dahlias, leaves and berries.

The table was covered with a lace cloth centered with gold and bronze dahlias, chrysanthemums and fern. The gold tapers cast a lovely glow over punch, cakes, mints and nuts carrying further the autumn scheme.

Miss Bunny Crawford, sister of the bride groom, wearing a lovely pink net with pink carnations in her hair, presided over the punch bowl. She was assisted by Miss June Harrison who wore a beige pleated nylon with a blue corsage.

Others serving in the dining room were Mrs. Warren Duke, wearing a dress fashioned in pink embroider nylon with pink carnation corsage; Mrs. William Cutler gowned in white net with blue carnation corsage; Miss Faye Wilson wore a becoming brown taffeta, yellow corsage; Mrs. Forgus Williams attired in black chiffon with red jacket, wore a corsage of white carnations.

The receiving line consisted of Mrs. Homer Walton, wearing a black crepe with pink corsage, Mrs. James H. Crawford, Jr., was becomingly gowned in black and silver brocade taffeta with a white purple throat orchid, presented as a surprise by Homer Walton, Jr. Mrs. Effie Sims, mother of the bride, wore a blue grey crepe with pink corsage, Mrs. James H. Crawford, Sr., mother of the groom, gowned in orchid chiffon, white corsage, Mrs. Alvin Bird, wore a rose beige chiffon with American beauty corsage.

The brides book was presided over by Miss Llewellyn Sims, sister of the bride, who was gowned in pink chiffon with blue carnations in hair. Ninety five guests registered during the receiving hours.

Gifts were beautifully displayed by Mrs. Levert Christian wearing black crepe with pink carnations and Mrs. Jimmie Harrison in a black beaded crepe with red corsage.

Mrs. Ben Skelton, wearing a blue net and blue flowers in her hair, was in charge of the wishing well, a unique idea carried out by the color scheme of red, white and blue, and miniature flags displaying the picture of the groom, 1st. Lt. James H. Crawford, Jr. Guests wrote wishes for this popular couple, first to be censored by the bride, then mailed to the groom.

Mrs. Yeager Horn wearing a black crepe with red corsage and Homer Walton Jr., rendered piano and organ selections appropriate for the occasion. Vocal numbers were given by Misses Bunny Crawford, Faye Wilson and Mrs. William A. Johnson of Birmingham.

Out of town guests were: Mrs. C. A. Gardner, Gadsden, aunt of the bride; Mrs. Robin Hood, Misses Sara Collins, Verbena Cook, Shirley Lucas, Barbara Baker, Jean Thomas of Alabama College, in Montevallo.

Mesdames G. W. Gardner, E. M. Brittain, W. T. Taylor of Birmingham. Mrs. J. W. Curtis, Misses Elizabeth Weldon and Mamie Hill of Wilsonville, Mrs. H. D. Chapman, Macon, Georgia.

A PRAYER FOR VOTERS

Be praised, O Lord, I yet can use
Thy greatest gifts, which some abuse.
I thank Thee for my mind and will
Which can control elections still Pray let my mind enlightened be
And let my will feel strong and free,
To vote according to Thy light
By which I strengthen Freedom's might. AMEN.

The above prayer written by Father Francis C. Young, pastor of St. Juliana's Church in Chicago, should be read and used as an aid to raising the standard of elections.

GENERAL IKE HAS A BIRTHDAY

"General Ike" celebrated a birthday last week. The distinguished General was 62 years old. He has been a member of the military contingent for 41 years and this fact makes me wonder if, the General, who knows so well how to deal with the armed forces, would be as capable in handling the Chief Executive's position where numerous complex problems center around our civilian existence, as well as unsolved military activities. Forty-one years out of sixty-two directing tactical maneuvers on the battle fields, is a far different problem from directing the affairs of government in a democracy.

These facts should be seriously considered before making your "cross-mark" by the candidate of your own choosing on November 4th. That little "cross mark", could become, were the wrong man selected, a heavy cross to bear for the next four years, and this very possibility forces me to believe that more people are donning their "thinking caps" this year and as a result, the vote tabulated will be an intelligent one. Certainly more people are seeking information on controversial subjects than we ever remember happening, and an enlightened electorate foretells a wise verdict.

Who will our next President be?

Your guess is as good as mine, but— here's hoping a fellow by the name of ADLAI STEVENSON and a native son of Alabama by the name of John D. Sparkman have a chance to march up Capitol Hill and try to bring peace again to this troubled world now literally floundering on the brink of another war— far more terrible than any we have yet experienced.

The fatal decision may rest on the leaders whom you choose on November 4, and as people realize this fact—a serious approach to this coming election grows more apparent as the days glide by, bringing the time for decision, nearer.

. . . Dr. Milton Orr, one of Montevallo's most distinguished educator-citizens, was a visitor in Columbiana Saturday, and we thoroughly enjoyed a few minutes chat with this friend of long standing. Glad we agreed that the Stevenson-Sparkman ticket deserved the support of all members of the Democratic Party.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES IN SONG SET FOR DECEMBER

"The Chorus In The Skies", a Christmas Cantata will be presented by the Baptist Choristers on the evening of December 15, at 7:45 in the Baptist Church in Columbiana.

According to an announcement made some weeks ago by the Rev. A. D. Wilson, a "White Christmas Service" will be observed in the Methodist Church on December 21 at 7:30 P. M.

BOY SCOUTS NEED BUGLE AND UNIFORMS

Some years ago there was an active Boy Scout group in Columbiana. The Troop owned a bugle as well as uniforms, but it has been several years since a Chapter of Boy Scouts has functioned in Columbiana. Now that alert and capable Bill White has agreed to re-activate the Boy Scouts and has accepted the position of Scoutmaster, they will need uniforms, boy scout equipment, and especially the Bugle, to get them together. If you know of the whereabouts of any article mentioned above that the Scouts can utilize, please bring it to Bill White at the Postoffice.

No organization is more worthwhile in the life of a real American boy, than the Boy Scouts. We congratulate the leader, Bill White, whom we feel is especially well equipped to direct this movement and predict this Troop, under Bill White's leadership, will be "tops" in the State of Alabama.

Remember these "Scouts" today— are our citizens of tomorrow and help them in any way you can.

MARY LYNN ROGERS CELEBRATES 6TH BIRTHDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rogers entertained for their little six year old future "Miss. America" on October 14, in honor of her sixth birthday anniversary. Forty Lilliputian guests from Lollipop Land shared the games, contests and favors, this hospitable little honoree showered upon them and topping off the merry afternoon was the traditional birthday cake and ice cream.

STEVE PIERCE HONORED

Steve Pierece had a birthday party all his own last Wednesday, October 14, and in true Cowboy fashion rounded up all his Kindergarten pals and playmates for a real get together on the lawn of his parent's home for the "Last Round Up" in which all guests participated. The boys and girls were costumed in Western regalia, and answered his cordial invitation with a yip-i-yee-dee-i-a action.

For two hours or more out door games suited to the Ranch Party were enjoyed after which Mrs. Pierce served cake and ice cream and Steve, popular young fellow about Main, gave colorful bandana's as mementos to his guests and chalked up another happy memory on his calendar of joyous occasions.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Welby Rasco and babette are the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Rasco in Columbiana, and if you have not had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. Welby Rasco, you have something very delightful in store for you. She possesses a gracious personality and is quite pretty, too. Am looking forward to an introduction to the "baby", who, we feel sure, is a "Cutie-Pie" we should like to know.

By the way, the Welby Rascos want to remain with us in Columbiana, if they can find a furnished apartment. Do you know of any? If so, get in touch with these young people.

. . . Stores are beginning to put on that attractive "Chrismasy" look, and if you are looking for some lovely gifts, better check your stores on Main before getting in the rush somewhere else. We have never seen a larger nor a more complete line anywhere than the Candy and Cosmetic lines beautifully displayed at Varsity and Columbiana Drug Company.

JUKE BOXES ON MAIN

If foreigners should judge Americans by the music played on the majority of Juke Boxes in this man's town, there would never be understanding enough to justify "peace" again. How anyone, day in day out, can continue listening to these "whining-crying melancholy melodies" I shall never know. If I were going to have one of these machines placed in my business for the enjoyment of the guests who come to dine, I would certainly carefully select the musical program to be played. No wonder there is a lot of "indigestion" going around, and it is NOT the food, it could be the MUSIC beating on the ear-drums causing such painful re-action. TERRIBLE is the word for it.

AUTO STICKERS

To those of you who have been asking for the Stevenson-Sparkman auto stickers, we are happy to tell you they are in the office and I shall be so glad to give you as many as you need. All you have to do is "lick'em and stick'em"!

. . . Mrs. Tracy Seale came by the office Wednesday to renew her loyalty to the "home paper" which she states has long been a part of their reading material they enjoy each week. (Thanks a million, Lady!)

. . . Raymond and Margaret Lyon have named the little new comer in their home Sam Martin Stinson in honor of his "grand-dads".

. . . Congratulations are in order for Ralph Jones, who was recently elected Treasurer of the Freshman Class at Howard College. This is a signal honor for this personable young fellow and we feel is the bright beginning heralding other signal achievements which will come his way before his four year college course has ended.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Karl C. Harrison motored to Knoxville last Saturday to witness the University of Alabama and Tennessee football game.

. . . Census report shows that 2378 bales of cotton were ginned in Shelby Countty from the crop of 1952 prior to October 1st as compared with 2442 bales for the crop of 1951.

. . . We were delighted to welcome "back home" some former residents last Saturday, whom we had not had the pleasure of seeing in a long, long time, namely, Mrs. Etta Robertson O'dell of Johnson City, Tenn., Mr. and Mrs. Jim Robertson and Mrs. Alger Robertson, of Birmingham.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS ON MAIN

Parking in the middle of the down town section while the driver of the auto goes on a shopping trip or for a social chat on the curb, is a dangerous practice. This above mentioned fact caused a traffic jam last week on several occasions. I feel sure the person driving the car thought it would "take only a minute", but parking problems are yet unsolved on Main, so, let's not park in the middle of Main Street. Long pipes now being hauled, and the constant passage of lumber trucks, mixed all up with passenger traffic creates a problem too big for solution at present. There should be some route specified, if possible for busses, trailers, trucks, etc., and then enforce this route.

Speeding continues, regardless of all warnings! Saturday auto congestion was terrific on Main. People from all over the county were here to purchase hunting and fishing license, auto tags, assess property, traffic snarl finally had to be untangled by Hugh Sims, Town Marshal. It might be profitable to place another Cop on duty each Saturday.

. . . Regret to learn that our good friend W. E. Morrow continues ill at his home in Columbiana.

. . . A lot of folk on Main are still playing "cagey" regarding just how they will cast their ballots on November 4, but we are delighted to see the leading "ladies" of the town taking their stands for the man whom they have determined will best serve this country. A dozen or more came by today wanting a Stevenson-Sparkman pin, and they left proudly wearing it.

. . . Regret I was not in the office when my good friend Jeff Nickerson came by last Friday. However, the note she left on the typewriter was "next best" to a face to face confab.

. . . No wonder Doc Gates is happy today. Have you seen that new Ford he is steering around Main?

. . . Home Coming this year at Shelby High bids fair to being the biggest and best planned in a number of years, and just wait until you see Mary Nell Skelton's Kindergarten Kidlets, on a float of their own. Remember, they too, will some day be Seniors of Shelby High, and they may tell you about it on this occasion.

BOY SCOUTS TO GET OUT THE VOTE

The Boy Scouts of America have pooled their resources and personnel with the Freedoms Foundation Inc., and will undertake to call at 30,000,000 homes urging citizens to vote. The Scouts "calling cards" are Liberty Bells, which will be left on the door knobs of houses visited. They will urge all citizens to "vote as they think and to think when they vote".... which is about as good a slogan as we have seen.

The efforts of these patriotic young Americans certainly deserves the cooperation of every qualified elector.

. . . It is mighty good to see popular and lovable Mamie Horn down town greeting her host of friends after a several weeks "stay-at-home-read-and-rock" experience, during which time a broken ankle bone was healing. We had the pleasure of joining a group around her car last Friday and adding our voice to the "glad to see you out again" chorus!

. . . Petite and lovely Trinket Fore Shaw was busily engaged taking in the town with her grand-dad Claude Fore, Friday, and making friends of all passers by with that friendly little smile of hers. A doll of a baby, if there ever was one!

. . . "What will you write about after the Election?" inquires a visitor who states he reads the "home paper" from cover to cover each week. We told him we would next "take our text" on our favorite fellow, SANTA CLAUS, whose coming is more rapid than a lot of folk seem to realize.

. . . Thanks to L. Q. Scoggins of Calera Rt. 2 for a renewal subscription just received. A "renewal" always spells "good news" in our language.

ATCHISON-ROPER WEDDING SOLEMNIZED

The marriage of Doris Roper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Roper and Harry Atchison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Atchison of Columbiana was quietly and impressively solemnized at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. M. M. Hargrove, pastor of Boyles Baptist Church in Tarrant City, Alabama, the Rev. Boyles officiating.

After a brief motor trip, the young couple will make their home at 1771, 17th Street North, Birmingham.

. . . Congratulations to Lieutenant James Crawford now stationed on Okinawa who was recently promoted to first lieutenant and best wishes across the miles to him for "Many happy returns of his birthday" which was observed in this far away land on October 20. We add to those good wishes, our sincere hope that long before another birthday goes by, Lt. Crawford will be home so we can say "Happy Birthday", rather than having to write it.

. . . Lt. Dick Fulton of Maxwell Field spent the week end in Columbiana with his father Frank Fulton.

Sgt. and Mrs. Jim Duke of Camp Atterbury, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Duke.

. . . Mrs. Ralph Hunt, Mrs. Fay Miles Benton and Miss Myrtle Miles spent the week end in Mobile.

. . . An attractive feature of the Sunday morning services at the Baptist Church is the interpretation of an old hymn by Betty Rush, soloist, and Barney Isbell, pianist, which occures between the Sunday School and Church hour. This lovely offering each Sunday morning is receiving favorable commendation by an appreciative Sunday School assemblage.

RASCO-MacDONALD WEDDING SOLEMNIZED

The marriage of Douglas Rasco, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Rasco Columbiana, to Doris MacDonald, of Columbiana, was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Rasco, Thursday evening, October 9, in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends. The Rev. Dan Akers, reading the marriage vows.

After a brief wedding trip, the young couple will make their future home in Birmingham where Mr. Rasco is employed by the T. C. I. Company.

ATTENTION

Due to a last minute rush in advertisement, a number of articles and "personals" had to be laid aside last week. Take a look at the classified ad section. It may be profitable to you.

ATTENTION HOMEMAKERS!

Future Homemakers of Shelby County High School will hire out to help homemakers Wednesday, November 5th. So, listen homemakers! Save your house cleaning duties and extra jobs for that date. Make your plans early and make an appointment with Miss Lightsey, their advisor or their president, Hilda Jones.

This Ho-Bo-Day is an annual affair and is to be of community service as well as a money making activity.

. . . Mrs. A. A. Lauderdale will always remember October 18th, 1952, as a very happy birthday occasion. There was a dinner with old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick (Lafaye Jennings) in Montgomery, Sunday, when she and Lafaye shared birthday anniversary honors in the Capitol City, and a cablegram from Lillis Coates Hunter whom many friends in Columbiana will happily remember, sent in honor of Mrs. Lauderdale's birthday, and what a lovely greeting across the miles it was to gladden the heart of this lovely little lady on "her day"! No one thing can brighten any day like plain old thoughtfulness, yet how very few people take "time out" to tell a fellow about it! So, right here and now belated though we be, we are chiming in the chorus sung by a host of friends of Lady Lauderdale's who do, most sincerely wish for her "Many, many happy returns of this day".

WANT A RELIABLE PAINTER TO DO A FINE JOB FOR YOU?

If you have any repair work, paint job or want to paper a room and make your home more attractive or put a new roof on your home without any leaks, let me give you a tip on a comparative new comer in our town, but one who deserves your serious consideration, before closing a deal on any job you have along this line.

G. B. Ruffner is his name, and we wholeheartedly recommend him to you as a fine fellow to deal with. He is a conscientious workman, and will give you an estimate of the cost for any job you want done, and whats more, if you are unable to finance the project, he will be glad to offer you liberal monthly payments to fit your family budget. No use waiting and letting your property get all run down, just check your worries to G. B. Ruffner and let him figure it out. Know you will be pleased with the final result.

SALLEE CIRCLE MEETS

The Sallee Circle held its first meeting of the year 1952-53 at the home of Mrs. J. R. Wood on October 20. Mrs. Wood, leader of the circle welcomed the large group present.

For the opening of the meeting Mrs. T. C. Rush, Jr., sang the new year song, "Christ For The Whole Wide World".

Mrs. Riddle, W. M. U. president, gave a beautiful devotional on "Broken Dreams" after which Miss Renna Taylor led in prayer. Mrs. Arthur Wood, Secretary, called the roll.

All the new officers and committee chairmen were named and voted upon. Each officer planned her work for the month of November.

Mrs. Riddle encouraged the circle and urged all to attend the monthly business meeting held at the church.

Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Jimmie Ray served a delicious plate to 16 members, 1 visitor, Miss Renna and children.

B. W. C. MEETS

Misses Gertrude and Irene Bishop entertained members of the Business Women's Circle of the Baptist Church in their home on Monday evening, Mrs. Wilma Elliott, presiding.

Mrs. Adell Edmondson read the devotional, after which Mrs. Helen Holliman was presented and spoke on the topic "Choose The More Excellent Way".

Twenty members shared the interesting program and a cordial welcome was extended Mrs. Roy Towns and Mrs. M. Smith, the two new members who were added to the club roster.

Delectable Russian Tea and cookies were served during the social hour enjoyed.

NEED SOME MAGAZINES?

The Shelby County High School's annual MAGAZINE DRIVE is now in progress. Each year we sell magazines for Curtis Publishing Company which gives the school as much as fifty per cent on some magazines and thirty per cent on others. This money goes to help build up our school library.

These magazines pay fifty per cent: Saturday Evening Post, Country Gentleman, and Ladies' Home Journal. All others pay thirty per cent.

The patrons and friends of S. C. H. S. have always responded in a generous way whenever they are asked to help, and we believe you will do so in this. The magazines will cost you no more if you buy from us than if you buy from the company, but some of the money will come back to our school, your school.

If you want to renew a magazine or subscribe to a new one, one of our agents will call on you. If for any reason they happen to miss you call Mamie Hill at S. C. H. S. or at 3956 and she will send a representative to you. This is an annual drive, so please save your orders for us each year. Will you? This drive will last two weeks.

. . . Mrs. George McCord, Mrs. Elvin Hill, Mrs. Conrad Fowler, Mrs. Jay Falkner and Mrs. Richard Ozley of Columbiana were entertained with other guests from Birmingham by Mrs. Sam Shafferman at a bridge luncheon at the Fairmont Club, Birmingham, Saturday afternoon.

PARKER CIRCLE MEETS

The Parker Circle of the Baptist Church met in regular session on Monday afternoon at the hospitable home of Mrs. P. B. Shaw in Columbiana. Following the devotional service led by Mrs. Myra Chandler, and the invocation by Mrs. Ollie Tinney, the business of the circle was attended to and after the program arranged for the afternoon, the hostess served a delectable refreshment with hot coffee.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Myra Chandler on the first Monday after the third Sunday in November.

. . . Charles and Sue Spearman are home for a few days before soldier-man Charles goes on another assignment for Uncle Sam.

. . . Will Page drops by to see how the presidential pulse is today, and remarked as follows: "Well, I am still for Ike, and you are still for Stevenson. Who is going to win?" We suggested that he take the "home paper" and find out. He then pulled out two "Ike Dollars" and handed them over with the assertion that he thought that was a swell suggestion. And now, Will has his reserved seat in this ring side fiasco, and is all set to get the final tabulation. (Now thats the kind of an "Ike" I like!)

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Davis of Birmingham spent Monday in Columbiana, and when we saw them, they were leaving town in a lovely new Chevrolet which they had just bought from McDow Motor Company.

CANTATA REHEARSAL SUNDAY AFTERNOON 1:30

A rehearsal of "The Chorus In The Skies", Christmas Cantata, will be held in the Baptist Church Sunday afternoon at 1:30. All members of the Choir are urged to be present.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ray and Miss Lucile Ray of Westover, were among the visitors to Columbiana Saturday. Mrs. Ray took the opportunity to come by the Reporter-Democrat office to renew her subscription to the Home Paper.

CONGRATULATIONS LT. COL. CONRAD M. FOWLER

No one thing makes this humble scribe happier than receiving "press notices" released by the Army, Navy, and Marine headquarters regarding promotions of our own Shelby county patriots or recording the signal honors that continue coming to Shelby county thru our didstinguished service men now scattered over the four corners of this earth.

This morning, we received the following communique from the Sixth Marine Corps Reserve District, Atlanta, Georgia, which holds the personal interest of a host of friends in Alabama, for Shelby County's own Conrad M. Fowler. We quote from the official record:

"Attorney Conrad M. Fowler was recently promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, U. S. Marine Corps Reserve. His rank will date from July 1, 1951.

"Commissioned in the Marines in 1941, Colonel Fowler served with the 9th Marines, Third Marine Division, in the Pacific Theatre during World War II. His decorations include the Silver Star with gold star in lieu of second Silver Star, the Purple Heart with gold star, and the Presidential Unit Citation.

"He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Fowler of Columbiana. His wife, the former Virginia Mott of Decatur, Georgia, and two children, Conrad, 5, and Randy, 3, reside with him in Columbiana."

On no happier note could we end this column than having the privilege of adding our personal congratulations to one who has so richly merited the above mentioned recognition. (M. W. W.)

Test of Faith

Lesson for October 26, 1952

EVERY one who has carefully studied the "Sermon on the Mount" as we find it in Matthew, has run into a peculiar feature of it. The first two chapters (Matt. 5 and 6) move right along in logical fashion, one thought leading into the next, to a climax at the end of chapter 6. But chapter 7 seems to launch out in all directions. The sentences or topics do not follow a single thread of thought. The chapter is very hard to outline. There are various explanations of this. One is that in this chapter we have what might be called the discussion period or forum following the sermon. The various short paragraphs may be explained as being answers Jesus gave to questions which are not recorded. However that may be, we may select verses 12, and 15-27, and see how they answer four very natural questions which Jesus' teaching (especially in Matt. 5 and 6) would raise.

Dr. Foreman

Bible in a Nutshell

Some one might ask: "Can't you make your teaching simpler and plainer? Could you put the whole thing in a nutshell?" So Jesus gives the Golden Rule (7:12), a single sentence that has embarrassed theologian and plain Christian alike. Jesus offers this as a kind of summary of the Bible, for in his time the Bible he had (our "Old Testament") was customarily called "The Law and the Prophets." This bothers the theologian because it always scandalizes a scholar to have everything put into one sentence, and besides, theologians are accustomed to finding a great deal more in the Old Testament than the Golden Rule. It bothers the common everyday Christian because when he looks at this sentence, he knows how right Mark Twain was: "It's not what I don't understand in the Bible that disturbs me; it's what I do understand."

How Can You Tell?

Another question: How do we know you are teaching the truth? How can we tell you from a false prophet? Jesus gives a simple answer: You can tell a tree from its fruits. People who criticize Christianity should keep this point in mind. There is a great deal in "Christianendom" which is not good. But Christendom is not Christianity. Not even the church is Christianity. Anything in the church that ought not to be there, we must set down against the account of the church, not against Christ. If the church is weak and sinful it is because and so far as she has failed to follow Jesus, not because she has followed him. The fruits of Christ, of his heart, his spirit, his teachings—these are good fruit. And if any one is disposed to doubt that, let him fairly answer this question: Where would you rather live, in a community in which the citizens were strangely like Jesus, or one in which they were just the opposite?

Is Not Faith Enough?

Another question: Isn't a single act of faith enough? If I believe what I ought to believe, and if I honor Christ as Lord, isn't that enough to make me a Christian? Jesus offers a test of faith, as if in answer to some such question. It isn't just believing; it isn't paying honor to the name of Christ; it isn't preaching in his name, it is not even performing miracles. The question that will be asked at the Day of Judgment is: Did you do the will of God?

Will It Work?

One more question: Your teaching sounds interesting and is idealistic and all that, but is it meant for this world? Will it work? Jesus quite emphatically claims for his teachings an absolutely practical value. They are not for some Never-never Land, they are not for some other time, some other life. They are not some radical upside-down topsy-turvy mess of peculiar notions. They are the bedrock of a life that will endure through storms. Do you want to find out whether these teachings and ideals of Jesus will work? He invites one and all to build their house of life upon them. He does not promise at any time that those who live by his teachings will be free from trouble, sorrow, opposition, tragedy. Storms come to all houses alike. What he does promise is that the life built here shall not fall.

STATE OF ALABAMA
A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Regular Session 1951, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the day of the General Election next succeeding the final adjournment of the 1951 session of the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, the General Election next succeeding the final adjournment of the 1951 Session of the Legislature, at which the amendment was proposed, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gordon Persons, as Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

"No moneys derived from any fees, excises, or license taxes, levied by the State relating to registration, operation, or use of vehicles upon the public highways except a vehicle-use tax imposed in lieu of a sales tax, and no moneys derived from any fee, excises, or license taxes, levied by the State, relating to fuels used for propelling such vehicles except pump taxes, shall be expended for other than cost of administering such laws, statutory refunds and adjustments allowed therein, cost of construction, reconstruction, maintenance and repair of public highways and bridges, costs of highway right-of-way, payment of highway obligations, the cost of traffic regulation, and the expense of enforcing state traffic and motor vehicle laws. The provisions of this Amendment shall not apply to any such fees, excises, or license taxes now levied by the State for school purposes for the whole State or for any county or city Board of Education therein."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, in each county in the State of Alabama, in a newspaper published in said county.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the Great Seal of the State of Alabama to be affixed by the Secretary of State, at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 28th day of July 1952.

STATE OF ALABAMA
A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Fifth Special Session, 1950, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the date of the next general election after January 1, 1951; and

WHEREAS, the next general election to be held in the State after January 1, 1951, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gordon Persons, as Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

"Any provision of the Constitution or laws of the State of Alabama to the contrary notwithstanding, any municipality in Fayette County, or any one or more of them, shall have full and continuing power and authority, after an election held in accordance herewith, to do any one or more of the following:

"1. To purchase, construct, lease or otherwise acquire real property, plants, buildings, factories, works, facilities, machinery and equipment of any kind.

"2. To lease, sell for cash or on credit, exchange, give and convey any such property described in subdivision 1 above, to any person, firm, association or corporation.

"3. To promote local industrial, commercial or agricultural development and the location of new industries or businesses therein.

"4. To become a stockholder in any corporation, association or company.

"5. To lend its credit or to grant public moneys and things of value in aid of, or to, any individual, firm, association, or corporation whatsoever.

"6. To become indebted and to issue and sell interest bearing bonds, warrants (which may be payable from funds to be realized in future years), notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness, to a principal amount not exceeding fifty percent of the assessed value of taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in order to secure funds for the purchase, construction, lease or acquisition of any of the property described in subdivision 1 above or to be used in furtherance of any of the other powers or authorities granted in this amendment. Such obligations or evidences of indebtedness may (in addition to any pledge or pledges authorized by subdivision 8 of this amendment) be issued upon the full faith and credit of the municipality or may be limited as to the source of their payment.

"7. To levy and collect annually, in addition to all other taxes now authorized or permitted, a special tax or taxes of not exceeding two percent on the value of all taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in the same manner as other county or municipal taxes are levied and collected. Such tax may be upon all property in any municipality in Fayette County or upon all property in any district the boundaries of which the governing body of such municipality shall describe and which it shall determine to be specially improved and benefited by any proposed use or expenditure of the proceeds of such tax.

"8. To pledge to the payment of any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness the annual proceeds from any such special tax or taxes and to obligate itself irrevocably to continue to levy and collect such taxes annually until such obligations or evidences of indebtedness are paid in full and to pledge thereto any rental or sales proceeds of property leased or sold by it.

"9. To create a public authority or corporation having such powers, managed and governed by such board or governing body and subject to such limitations as the governing body of any municipality in Fayette County may impose, by approving and filing a certificate to that effect in the office of the Judge of Probate or the Secretary of State, or their respective successors in function, and to delegate to such public authority or corporation and its board or governing body all powers and authority conferred in this amendment upon any such municipality.

"The recital in any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness that they were issued pursuant to this amendment or that they were issued to provide funds to be used in furtherance of any power or authority herein authorized or that any special tax herein authorized has been pledged to the payment thereof shall be conclusive; no purchases or holder thereof need inquire further; and the levy and collection of such tax shall continue until the principal of and interest on such obligations or evidences of indebtedness shall have been paid in full. The bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness issued hereunder shall not be considered an indebtedness of any municipality in Fayette County for the purpose of determining the borrowing capacity of such municipality under sections 224 and 225 of the Constitution; and the taxes herein authorized shall be in addition to those provided for or permitted in sections 215 anl 216 of the Constitution and all amendments thereto.

"This amendment shall be self-executing; but the Legislature shall have the right and power by general, special or local act to adopt laws supplemental to this amendment or in furtherance of the purposes and objectives herein above set forth.

"10. No municipality shall make any engagement or commitment or undertake any project under the provisions hereof unless and until the proposition has been approved by a majority of the qualified electors of such municipality. The governing body of any municipality may provide for holding such elections, but in no case shall an election be held until notice of the election and of the proposition to be voted on has been published for at least three successive weeks."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, in each county in the State of Alabama, in a newspaper published in said county.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the Great Seal of the State of Alabama to be affixed by the Secretary of State, at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 28th day of July 1952.

STATE OF ALABAMA
A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Fifth Special Session, 1950, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the date of the next general election after January 1, 1951; and

WHEREAS, the next general election to be held in the State after January 1, 1951, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gordon Persons, as Governor of the State of Alabama do hereby give notice direct and proclaim that on Tuesday, the 4th day of November 1952, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

"Any provision of the Constitution or laws of the State of Alabama to the contrary notwithstanding, any municipality in Blount County, or any one on more of them, shall have full and and continuing power and authority, after an election held in accordance herewith, to do any one or more of the following:

"1. To purchase, construct, lease, or otherwise acquire real property, plant, buildings, factories, works, facilities, machinery and equipment of any kind.

"2. To lease, sell for cash or on credit, exchange, or give and convey any such property described in subdivision 1 above, to any person, firm, association or corporation.

"3. To promote local industrial, commercial or agricultural development and the location of new industries or businesses therein.

"4. To become a stockholder in any corporation, association or company.

"5. To lend its credit or to grant public moneys and things of value in aid of, or to, any individual, firm, association or corporation whatsoever.

"6. To become indebted and to issue and sell interest bearing bonds, warrants, (which may be payable from funds to be realized in future years), notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness to a principal amount not exceeding fifty percent of the assessed value of taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in order to secure funds for the purchase, construction, lease or acquisition of any of the property described in subdivision 1 above or to be used in furtherance of any of the other powers or authorities granted in this amendment. Such obligations or evidences of indebtedness may (in addition to any pledge or pledges authorized by subdivision 8 of this amendment) be issued upon the full faith and credit of the municipality or may be limited as to the source of their payment.

"7. To levy and collect annually, in addition to all other taxes now authorized or permitted, a special tax or taxes of not exceeding two percent on the value of all taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in the same manner as other county or municipal taxes are levied and collected. Such tax may be upon all property in any municipality in Blount County or upon all property in any district the boundaries of which the governing body of such municipality shall describe and which it shall determine to be specially improved and benefited by any proposed use or expenditure of the proceeds of such tax.

"8. To pledge to the payment of any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness the annual proceeds from any such special tax or taxes and to obligate itself irrevocably to continue to levy and collect such taxes annually until such obligations or evidences of indebtedness are paid in full and to pledge thereto any rental or sales proceeds of property leased or sold by it.

"9. To create a public authority or corporation having such powers, managed and governed by such board or governing body and subject to such limitations as the governing body of any municipality in Blount County may impose, by approving and filing a certificate to that effect in the office of the Judge of Probate or the Secretary of State, or their respective successors in function, and to delegate to such public authority or corporation and its board or governing body all powers and authority conferred in this amendment upon any such municipality.

"The recital in any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness that they were issued pursuant to this amendment or that they were issued to provide funds to be used in furtherance of any power or authority herein authorized or that any special tax herein authorized has been pledged to the payment thereof shall be conclusive; no purchaser or holder thereof need inquire further; and the levy and collection of such tax shall continue until the principal of and interest on such obligations or evidences of indebtedness shall have been paid in full. The bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness issue hereunder shall not be considered an indebtedness of any municipality in Blount County for the purpose of determining the borrowing capacity of such municipality under Section 224 and 225 of the Constitution; and the taxes herein authorized shall be in addition to those provided for or permitted in sections 215 and 216 of the Constitution and all amendments thereto.

"This amendment shall be self-executing; but the Legislature shall have the right and power by general, special or local act to adopt laws supplemental to this amendment or in furtherance of the purposes and objectives hereinabove set forth.

"10. No municipality shall make any engagement or commitment or undertake any project under the provisions hereof unless and until the proposition has been approved by a majority of the qualified electors of such municipality. ELIZABETH WELDON

Guests of Mrs. Juanita Williams and Miss Mary Williams this week were Mrs. Williams' sister, Mrs. C. L. Scott (Margarete Thornton) and Miss Ruth Jones of New Orleans. Mrs. Williams and her guests spent Wednesday in Tuscaloosa where they were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williams Jr.

The Home Demonstration Club met Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Paul Edwards.

We were glad to have Rev. Lincoln Newman of Childersburg at the Baptist Church both Sunday morning and evening. He brought beneficial messages to us.

We were also glad to have Rev. Clarence Solley of Childersburg as a visitor here Sunday.

The Wilsonville Baptist Church accepted plans for a new pastorium and will start building as soon as possible.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Franks of Birmingham were here for the week end.

The P. T. A. met Tuesday. After a business session led by our president, Mrs. Lay, Mrs. Annie Franks gave the devotional and Mrs. Jesse Barnes talked on leading youth to good citizenship. Mrs. N. E. Revis presented a skit on the use of our P. T. A. magazine and also honored our former leaders. Our hostesses for the social hour were mesdames Tom Morris and Horace Morris.

Misses Aileen Pope and Barbara Edwards attended the Gibson recital in Birmingham Thursday. Mr. Gibson played several numbers that he will play at Town Hall in New York soon. He was a former student of Miss Pope.

Mr. Pat Nichols has returned from two weeks at Great Lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kirkland and daughters and Mrs. D. C. Batson of Birmingham were guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Smith Jr. and Miss Aileen Pope.

Little Debbie Gardner of Birmingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Gardner has been visiting her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carol Gardner.

Mr. and Mrs. Ocie Ray of Birmingham were visitors here this week.

Miss Mary John Weldon of East Lake was home for the week end.

Mr. Mansel Wolf of Scottsboro visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Wolf.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Moore of Birmingham were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carol Gardner.

Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Lokey have returned from a visit with relatives in Mississippi.

Mr. and Mrs. Carol Gardner intertained with a dinner honoring Mrs. Carl Gardner on her birthday.

Mrs. James Curtis, Miss Mayme Hill and Miss Elizabeth Weldon attended the tea shower given in honor of Mrs. James Crawford, Jr., at the home of Mrs. Homer Walton in Columbiana.

Mrs. Juanita Williams, her guests, Mrs. L. C. Scott and Miss Ruth Jones of New Orleans, and Miss Elizabeth Weldon were dinner guests of Miss Mary Williams in Childersburg Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Ballard of Vincent were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gardner.

A Personal Message
To The People
Of Shelby County

I am a candidate for Probate Judge. I want to give you some personal service from the Probate Office of Shelby County.

I have lived in Calera and operated a successful Real Estate business for 27 years, eight years of which I served as Mayor of Calera, during which time Calera was cleaned up as it had never been before. A sanitary water and a sewer system was put in for the town together with many other improvements. In fact, my experience and knowledge of law concerning local government fit me to render the very best service possible to you, if elected Probate Judge. I am now assisting the "Old Age Pension Program" to get the Legislature to provide funds to meet Federal funds already allocated for the aged.

Truly, a vote for A. B. BAXLEY is a vote for the best interest of Shelby County. Won't you help me help you?

Regardless of your party affiliation, if you split your ballot, you will not regret making a cross mark before the name of A. B. BAXLEY. This will not effect your vote nationally.

Fueled and ready for the road, this revolutionary new highway tractor weighs a trim 8,000 pounds—the result of new engineering techniques, developed by GMC, which eliminate load-robbing "dead weight" from truck design.

A good example is this GMC's revolutionary new "302" valve-in-head engine—pound for pound the mightiest in truck history. It achieves a record-breaking 7.2 to 1 high-compression ratio from regular fuel, produces 145 horsepower—yet weighs as much as 500 pounds less than competitive engines!

It has all the features you want in a great truck. Standard equipment includes full air brakes and husky rear axle rated to accommodate 10:00/20 tires. Available in conventional and cab-over-engine models in a variety of wheelbases.

SCHOOLS ENROLL IN BIRMINGHAM NEWS ORATORICAL CONTEST

A large number of schools are already enrolled in The Birmingham News oratorical contest for 1952-53, with additional enrollments being received daily.

Indications are that there is greater interest in this contest than ever before.

The basic subject is "Abraham Lincoln." Contestants may use the basic subject, one of the suggested topics, or a topic of their own selection, provided it is sufficiently related to the basic subject.

Schools of this county already enrolled in The Birmingham News oratorical contest are as follows:

Senior High Schools:

Vincent High, junior and senior departments; Thompson High, Siluria, junior and senior departments; Calera, High, junior and senior departments.

Two contests are being conducted, one for senior high schools, the other for junior high. Combined schools which have both senior and junior high departments may compete in both contests, provided they enroll in both. Grammar schools which have junior high work may compete in the junior high contest.

State finals for both senior and junior high contests will be held at Birmingham-Southern College. Birmingham-Southern will award tuition scholarships valued at $3,600 to State Finalists of the senior high contest. The news will award cash prizes in both contests and will pay railroad fare and hotel bill for each visiting state finalist and chaperon. There is no charge to schools or pupils for participation.

Alabama Baptist Women To Meet

The annual meeting of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union in District 9 will convene at 10 A. M. on October 28 at Ensley Baptist Church, Birmingham, Alabama. The president, Mrs. R. B. Peace of Rt. 4, Birmingham, will preside over the meeting, using as her program theme, "Open Wide The Door". She will be assisted by the following district officers:

Vice President, Mrs. H. C. Dearing of Birmingham; Young people's leader, Mrs. Parks Redwine, Birmingham; Secretary-treasurer, Mrs. V. H. Muse, of Birmingham.

The purpose of the meeting is to present annual reports, make plans for the new year, elect new officers and to receive fresh information from missionaries who will tour the state with Miss Marjorie Stith, young people's secretary, and Mrs. R. S. Marshall, executive secretary of Alabama Woman's Missionary Union.

Among the speakers will be Rev. Elton Johnson of Hartselle who has served as a missionary in Brazil for 15 years. Mr. Johnson and his family are now serving the section of interior Brazil around Corrente. Mrs. John W. Pearce of Starke, Florida, will represent the missionary work of the Home Mission Board.

The district rally for young people will be held at 85th St. of Birmingham Baptist Church on October 27 at 7 P. M. with the district young people's leader, Mrs. Parks Redwine of Birmingham presiding. Both missionary speakers and Miss Stith will be speakers. All young people of the district are invited to attend.

WHEN BUYING AN IRON REMEMBER THESE TIPS

There are some mighty important things to keep in mind when buying an electric hand iron.

Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist, sayt that about 1,000 watts is desirable for fast heating. A dial to control heat is needed .It should be located where it is easy to read and move when ironing. Also, select an iron with a handle made of heat resistant material, such as plastic or wood, shaped to fit the hand comfortably, she says.

You will never be bothered by having ribbons on your dresses and hats fray if you apply fingernail polish to the ends. Just run the polish applicator along the edge of the ribbon, using colorless polish or a shade to match the ribbon.

TEN PRIVATE SCHOOLS APPROVED FOR VETERAN TRAINING

State Veterans Affairs Director C. C. Horton says ten private schools in the state have been approved for training under the Korean GI Bill, and that others are being approved daily.

Horton said other applicants are being processed as rapidly as possible. Under law, a veterans' training board appointed by the governor must certify private schools before they can be recognized under the education program for Korean Veterans.

He added that inspections are being made of each institution as applications are received.

Schools already approved are: Gadsden Business College, Gadsden; Larkins Business College, Brewton; Campbell Business College, Dothan; Talladega School of Commerce, Talladega; Massey-Draughton, Montgomery; Birmingham Business College, Alverson-Draughton, Massey, Wheeler, and Commercial Trades Institute, all of Birmingham.

Horton is secretary of the group. Other members are Dr. W. J. Terry, State School Superintendent; Ralph Burns, State Labor Director, and William S. Perry, Camden.

THE FREEDOM PLEDGE

"I am an American. A free
American.
Free to speak, without fear
Free to worship God in my own way,
Free to stand for what I think is right,
Free to choose those who govern
my country.
This heritage of Freedom I pledge to uphold,
For myself and all mankind."

Every true American should memorize this pledge, and be willing to make any sacrifice necessary to keep America free! It is a priceless heritage!

Many of our citizens in their effort to help out abroad, have apparently forgotten their citizenship responsibilities at home. Our democratic way of life demands an alert, active and informed citizenry; therefore, the first project on the agenda for November 4, is to see that the eligible voters are sufficiently interested to go to the polls, and participate in the selection of our representatives in our form of government.

The world is watching America, especially the communists, to see if apathy again dominates the people of the United States, therefore, a vote of all eligible voters on November 4, will be as effective, perhaps, as military and civilian defense measures might be in case of an attack.

In other words, if we are to remain a free people, each citizen must assume his or her individual responsibility and exercise the right of free expression at the polls. If citizens fail to vote, they have no right to complain about the kind of government they receive, nor have they any right to criticise those candidates who are finally elected, unless they have first exercised the right to vote and shouldered the responsibility of individual choosing. No one has the right to tell you how to vote. You vote as a free man and not as a slave. It is indeed a priceless heritage. Use it wisely on November 4, 1952, when the leaders whom you choose will direct the future destiny of this country.

A MUGWUMP

A Mugwump is a person educated beyond his intellect, says Horace Porter.

THE THIRD CAMPAIGN

There is a third campaign on. It does not seek for Republican votes or Democratic votes. It seeks simply for votes.

A great nonpartisan drive to wake up the American voter is being pushed under the sponsorship and national coordination of the American Heritage Foundation. The shameful record of Americans in staying home from the polls in recent elections is due for reversal. Can the United States contemplate with complacence the fact that while 90 per cent of the Belgians, 83 per cent of the British, and 75 per cent of the Japanese went to the polls in their last general elections, only 51 per cent of Americans voted for President in 1948?

Apathy is a sin that deserves whatever it gets. In Australia the citizen is fined if he doesn't vote. In the United States the citizen who is too indifferent to register, to read, listen, think, decide, and vote merely forfeits any moral right to criticize whatever administration he may get. And he may get practically anything if public apathy grows.

Wake up, Mr. Voter. You may be a mugwump, but don't be a chump.

THE EISENHOWER CRUSADE

The Eisenhower Crusade, in my humble opinion, has bogged down, and will go the way of former slogans, now long forgotten, such as: "Keep Cool With Coolidge"; "Two Chickens In Every Pot"; "The Good Old 80th Congress" and the more recent "I Like Ike".

The slogan that, we believe will emerge as a lasting memorial to this colorful race, is "FORWARD WITH STEVENSON AND SPARKMAN"— And everybody will be happy about the whole thing, on November 5, 1952.

Here's hoping!

National FHA Week Observed By School

Mayor Wales W. Wallace, Jr., has proclaimed National FHA Week in Columbiana, November 2-8. The 320,000 members of this national organization are participating in a wide variety of activities to help acquaint the public with the work they do.

The Columbiana Chapter of Shelby County High School is participating in this special week and is busy with many activities.

SUNDAY - "Church Day".

1. Members will go to individual churches in groups.

2. Special recognition will be given to the work and purpose of the FHA either on Sunday morning or Sunday night.

3. Red Roses ,the FHA flower, will be placed at the altar.

MONDAY - "Publicity Day".

1. Exhibits will be displayed in downtown store windows emphasizing National FHA week and its purposes.

2. Bulletin boards will be placed in School.

3. Monday night a social will be given for FHA and FFA by their Honorary members.

TUESDAY - "School Day".

1. A chapel program will be given by the FHA in which a formal initiation will be held.

WEDNESDAY - "Fund Day".

1. Homemakers save all those odd jobs and hire out FHA members on Ho Bo Day.

2. All FHA girls will bring eggs to school and we will sell them as a means of making money.

THURSDEY - "Big Little Sister Day".

1. The old members will be extra nice to the first year girls.

FRIDAY - "No gripe day and Family Night.".

1. All FHA girls resolve not to gripe for a whole day. If anyone gripes they will pay a small fine.

2. Friday night the whole family has some form of entertainment together.

The Columbiana Chapter plans and promotes many programs and activities during the year with the assistance of Miss Lightsey, Chapter advisor.

Don't Miss Halloween Party October 30

Have you seen any spooks, ghosts and witches holding meetings, running up and down dark alleys, and otherwise seeming to be all a'flutter? It's my opinion that they are rehearsing for Hallowe'en.

This reminds us that we should be doing a little rehearsing ourselves. The Columbiana P. T. A. has decided to get the jump on the eerie folk and have its annual Hallowe'en Party Thursday evening, October 30, from 6:00 to 9:30 in the High School. Come for supper and see what good cooks we have in our community!

Several new features have been added to the party. The Who's Who contest ought to prove intriguing and exciting. How good a detective are you?

This year every one MUST wear a mask! Wear a costume if you can but wear a mask without fail. You will be fined 5c if you show up without one. Masks will be sold at the party to those who forget to wear one, AND a fine of 5c will be collected. Really, no sensible person would attempt to enjoy a Hallowe'en party without a mask, would he?

Prizes will be given for the most appropriate costume.

If you are hungry, we can feed you, hot dogs, hamburgers, pop corn, peanuts, candy (lots of good home made candy), ice cream and cakes.

Do you want amusement? This is the place to show your skill with bow and arow, have your fortune told, see a good picture show, bob for apples, or try your luck at Bingo and fishing.

It would take too much space to tell you all about this wonderful party, but we want you to come and see for yourself. SEE YOU AT THE PARTY!

MRS. JACKSON CELEBRATES 82ND BIRTHDAY

On October 25, 1927, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Crumpton in the Kingdom Community, the 82nd birthday of their mother, Mrs. Susan C. Jackson was observed. The honoree was surrounded by friends and loved ones. Among them were Miss Joanna Jackson of Alex City (her sister) who was 80 years old; Mrs. Texas Duncan, another sister, who was 78 years of age; Mrs. Jackson's only brother, Joab Jackson who wis 78 years old.

Judge L. B. Riddle was the guest speaker on this happy occasion.

CHAPMAN DRUG STORE BOUGHT BY COWART

Z. S. Cowart of Calera, owner of the People's Drug Store in Calera, has bought the business of the Chapman Drug Store, owned by W. H. Chapman in Columbiana. Kavenaugh Wood of Calera is temporarily in charge. The business will be under the management of Herbert Milstead, registered pharmacist.

Mr. Chapman will move to Dadeville where he has taken charge of an Ice Plant.

J. A. JACKSON QUITS SHERIFF'S CONTEST

The contest involving the office of Sheriff of Shelby County that was filed in the circuit court in 1926 by J. A. Jackson against C. J. Falkner was withdrawn in open court Tuesday morning at the request of Mr. Jackson.

Mr. Jackson was the Republican nominee in 1926 and was defeated by a majority of 349 votes.

SCHOOL BUILDING WILL BE SOLD AT PUBLIC AUCTION

The trustees of Columbiana Grammar School in session Tuesday opened bids for the old grammar school building. All bids offered were rejected and the building will be advertised for sale at public auction on November 12, at the courthouse in Columbiana and will be sold to the highest bidder for cash.

The Parent Teachers Association of Columbiana has enrolled seventy-eight members, each member having paid $1.00 dues for the year 1927.

Honor students at Shelby High include Senior III, Cozelle Allen, Milton Allen, and J. W. Letson, Jr., Senior II, Odell Barnett, Beth Wallace, Gladys MacDonald, Mattie Ruth MacDonald. Senior I, Sarah Dycus, Charles MacDaniel and Nina Fay Reinhardt.

From Harpersville comes the following information: "The Birmingham News is still pickin' at Tom Heflin. The more the paper says against Mr. Heflin the better it is for him."

Slogan for 1927: "Make this Delco-Light Year In Your Home."

Miss Agnes Wingard spent the week end in Kingdom with her folks.

Miss Renna Taylor is at her home in Wilsonville after spending several weeks in Columbiana.

Thompson Celebrates Home Coming

Thompson High celebrated its annual home coming with a smashing 39-12 victory over the John Carroll Caveliers of Birmingham at Buck Creek Stadium. Harris, Lacey, Davenport and Butler provided the punch in the backfield while Durbin, Patterson, Mooney, Ross, and Smitherman did yoeman work in the line.

The entire effort of the celebration this year was keyed to the purpose of purchasing a grand piano for the new auditorium. All home rooms in the school contributed to the queen's race and to the food sale. Consequently, most of the purchase price for the piano has been realized, and another dream of the friends and students of this school is about to be realized.

The entire school participated in the parade during Friday afternoon when Miss Melba Jo Brannon, a senior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burrel Brannon, reigned as Queen. The floats carried comic strip characters depicting presidential election episodes and ideas to arouse the citizenry to the importance of voting in the coming election.

Trucks for the floats were donated by the local business people.

MRS. SIGNA McGRAW CANDIDATE BD. OF ED.

It should be counted a privilege to vote for Mrs. Signa McGraw of Vincent as a Member of the Board of Education. This is one place which the writer believes a woman can admirably fill, and Mrs. McGraw would be a most capable representative in sponsoring and supporting the school needs and the educational advantages which Shelby county children are entitled to receive.

Mrs. McGraw is a candidate, who was recently unanimously nominated by the Shelby County Democratic Executive Committee to take the place of her husband, Solon E. McGraw, who resigned.

We sincerely urge all citizens interested in the progress of our schools to vote for Mrs. McGraw.

MRS. HENRY CARDWELL DIES MONDAY NIGHT

Friends of Mrs. Henry Cardwell will be grieved to learn of her sudden death which occurred in Birmingham October 27. Details of her passing are not at this time known. Mrs. Cardwell was the wife of Henry Cardwell, Furniture Stores Owner, and had many friends in Columbiana where she often visited.

STATE DEPARTMENTS CUT COST

Gov. Gordon Persons says although most Alabama departments failed to make the requested 10 per cent cut in expenditures during the past fiscal year, that state expenditures were "pleasing".

Governor Persons said two factors kept the state from making appreciable savings. He listed them as general price increases on things the state must buy and salary boosts under the personnel reclassification survey.

Considering higher costs the state had to pay, the governor said he felt like there had been considerable saving.

WHY SHOULD A DEMOCRAT SPLIT HIS OR HER BALLOT?

(EDITORIAL)

A great deal of money is being spent in Alabama explaining to the people how they can vote a "Split Ballot."

What do they mean by a split ballot? Who has taken such pains to explain how to vote a split ballot? For whose benefit is all this noise being made about splitting a ballot?

The noise is coming from the Republican party in Alabama. It is an appeal to Democrats to forget the ties that have bound them for a lifetime, to forget the principles of their fathers which they have held for a lifetime and to vote for the Republican nominee for President.

But with all that is being said over and over about how to vote a split ballot, we have neither seen nor heard any good reason why a lifelong Democrat should forsake his party and his principles and vote this year against the nominee of his own party and for the Republican candidate.

Our party has chosen for its standard-bearer in the year 1952 Governor Stevenson of Illinois. Governor Stevenson is one of the best qualified men who have been offered for the Presidency by any party in the long history of our country. That is what former Vice-President John Nance Garner and Vice-President Alben Barkley have said about Governor Stevenson in recent public statements. What are Governor Stevenson's qualifications? He is a graduate of Princeton University. He was graduated in law from another of our great universities His grandfather served as vice-president under Grover Cleveland. His father held high public office in his home state.

Governor Stevenson is a man of courage. He does not hesitate to take a stand and tell people how he stands and what he stands for whether they agree with him or not. He is a deeply religious man. He knows his Bible and quotes freely from the Bible in his public addresses.

Governor Stevenson served as assistant secretary of agriculture in the cabinet of Franklin D. Roosevelt. He served as assistant secretary of the Navy under Secretary Frank Knox. He served as chairman of a commission to study conditions in Europe after the war was over to find out what could be done for the rehabilitation of those war torn countries. He represented our country in the organization of the United Nations. He served also as a delegate to the United Nations at its meetings in London and New York.

In 1948 Mr Stevenson was elected Governor of the great state of Illinois by more than half a million votes. He has made a wonderfully good record as Governor. Some of our greatest and best presidents have been governors of states.

Why then should any man be unwilling to vote for Governor Stevenson? There may be a few Democrats now living who voted for Grover Cleveland. Many, many of us voted for Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt. We should be glad to keep such a good record and vote for Adlai Stevenson.

John W. Shaw Passes October 16

Shelby County lost a good citizen in the recent passing of John W. Shaw. Mr. Shaw was as much a part of Shelby County as any one who lived here. Born in Union Community, he made it his home for the fourscore years of his life. He was a lifelong member of the Union Methodist Church and one of its most faithful and effective workers. He was a leader in his church and his community.

One outstanding experience he had was when more than fifty years ago he and a young Mr. Moore organized and planned the first Homecoming service at Union. It was so pleasing to the people that for every year since, Saturday before the third Sunday in May was Homecoming at Union. Large crowds came every year from different parts of the state and they genuinely enjoyed the day. They proved that because they came year after year. It became recognized as JOHN SHAW DAY in the community. He naturally took the lead in conducting the service; he looked forward to it from year to year.

Mr. Shaw was a lifelong Democrat and was known for his loyalty to his party. For over fifty years he served as a member of the County Executive Committee. He was elected a member of the Board of Revenue in 1922 and served two terms as a member of the Board of Equalization by appointment from the Governor.

Mr. Shaw died on Wednesday, October 16, after a short illness. His friends and neighbors came in large numbers to attend the funeral service which was held in the church he loved and served for so long and so well.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. C. H. Holcombe of Chelsea, and one son, L. E. Shaw of Union.

NOTICE

After October 31st, 1952, there will be a 15 per cent penalty on all store, business and professional licenses.

This will be the last majo campaign speech. Motorcades ar forming from every county in th state, and this final "get-to-geth-er" for a Stevenson-Sparkma victory on November 2, bids fai to bringing the largest crowd ye gathered in the interest of keeping a Democratic administratio in Washington. Make your plan to answer the call of the loya Democrats in Alabama and attend this rally honoring one o Alabama's most distinguished citizens, Senator John S. Sparkman who will likely be our next Vice-President of the U. S. A.

FUNERAL RITES FOR MRS. MAMYE GEORGE

Friends and loved ones gathere in the Methodist Church in Columbiana, Tuesday afternoon, t pay their last tribute of love and respect to Mrs. Mamye George who passed away Sunday, October 26, following many months illness at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Head.

The services were in charge of the Rev. A. D. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist Church, assisted by the Rev. T. K. Roberts. The musi was rendered by Mildred White Wallace and Betty Lyon Rush.

Mrs. George was greatly beloved by friends she made after coming to Columbiana from Mobile to make her home.

Following the brief service at the Methodist Church, graveside rites were observed in the Sylacauga Cemetery.

Surviving Mrs. George are one son, Raymond George of Sylacauga, and Mrs. Frank Head of Columbiana, and several grand children.

Pall bearers included: Homer H. Bearden, Norman Lefkovits, Sam Lokey, Cecil Duke, E. M. Young, A. A. Lauderdale, Bolton-Walton directing.

HOW THE ROOSTER CAME TO BE ON DEMOCRATIC TICKET

There are numerous accounts regarding how the Rooster came to head the Democratic Ticket in the South, and the accounts vary. However, Atticus Mullins, in his popular "Passing Throng" column in Montgomery Advertiser gives the following version as he read it in the Cincinnati Enquirer:

Origin Of The Rooster

From the Alabama Beacon, Greensboro, Ala., Dec. 11, 1875:

The Cincinnati Enquirer explains the origin of the "rooster" in politics. It says: It was not so late a period as 1840, the year of the "log cabin," "hard cider," and "coon skin" campaign which resulted in the election of Gen. Harrison, that he first made his appearance. Indiana then had her state election in August. The editor of the Indianapolis Sentinel was J. W. Chapman. In those days locomotion was slow, and it required days, even weeks to get the returns from the back counties. It so happened that in some particular county in Indiana, the Democrats made a gain over previous elections. An enthusiastic Democrat wrote a friend in Indianapolis the news, and not knowing Mr. Chapman, the editor of the Sentinel, personally, requested his friend to communicate the facts to Chapman, adding these significant words, "Tell Chapman to crow." Catching the inspiration for his second-hand correspondent, Mr. Chapman did "crow" in his paper, and as the business of "crowing" is usually done by the chanticleer, he brought out one of those fine large birds at the head of his column.

This was the first rooster ever placed in a Democratic paper to rejoice over a Democratic victory. As the general results of that election were against us, it was a matter of derision for the Whig papers, when any Whig victory was obtained, to add these words, "Tell Chapman to crow." This assisted to fix the matter in the popular mind, and to nationalize the emblem. No better one could have been adopted.

When scrambled eggs have been served, fill the frying pan with salt water and it will be easy to clean.

An empty lipstick container can be converted into a pin-and-needle case. Remove lipstick and pack the holder with cotton for a cushion.

A circular skirt should be hung on a clothes hanger for a day or two before being hemmed. This will allow the material to stretch during the hanging and not after it has been finished.

To thread a needle easily, hold the eye against a white background so that both it and the thread can be seen clearly. This works especially well with dark thread.

Starch which collects on an iron can be removed quickly and easily by rubbing the hot iron over a piece of brown paper on which salt has been sprinkled.

A RED FLAG OF WARNING TO THE CITIZENS OF SHELBY COUNTY

If Constitutional Amendment No. 1 is ratified on November 4, the general fund of Shelby County will be deprived of $18,880.97 which it now receives from Automobile license tags. This will make it necessary to make sharp reductions in appropriations to public health and agricultural extension as well as public welfare. There will be no alternative. Therefore, it is urged upon all who wish these services continued to VOTE "NO" ON AMENDMENT NO. 1.

PUBLIC INVITED

'o The Voters
Of The Town
Of Columbiana

Recently, the Board of Directors of the Alabama League of Mun- alities met at the call of President, W. Cooper Green, Mayor of mingham, and thoroughly studied Amendment No. 1 and its im- liate and future effects on municipal and county government. After ll discussion, this group voted 14 to 1 that the League of Munici- ities should advise its members, as well as the general public, t ratification of the proposed Amendment would have the most ous possible effect upon municipal and county services—and on r budgets.

Some of the more obvious disadvantages of the Amendment are t its passage would "lock up" beyond any legislative action, for tever future need, the gasoline revenue. If the Amendment pass- this money, if needed for some futur emergency or legitimate use, d not be diverted without another amendment vote. It would take y local control from the county level and invest it in the state d—a trend away from home rule which I consider unwise and gerous. It would have the immediate effect of preventing the use utomobile tag tax revenues for general government services.

I am informed by the Executive Director of the Alabama League Municipalities that the group which is sponsoring this Amendment a second objective which would come up in the next session of Legislature, that is, that the State repeal all municipal ordinances ing gasoline taxes and levy in their stead a statewide one-cent on each gallon of gasoline sold in the municipalities. That would e all municipal gasoline taxes "state levied" so as to be tied up Amendment No. 1 It seems that some thirty odd municipalities already prohibited from levying gas taxes by ordinance. The Leg- ture has levied their tax so they are effected immediately.

Should this plan be followed through and the Town of Columbiana rived of the general use of the gasoline tax, etc., it would mean t many of the services which the citizens of our municipality are itled and have become accustomed would have to be curtailed or additional tax levied.

It is argued by the proponents of Amendment No. 1 that inas- h as this revenue is derived from car owners, it is only right and per that it be "earmarked" entirely for their use. This argument s not appear to be sound as the same argument could be applied ny tax which is collected, that is, the merchants who pay a license could as sensibly insist that all business taxes be used in trade moting; property owners could insist that the property tax be used irely for the benefit of property owners; smokers, that the tax be l entirely for smokers; drinkers, that the tax from whiskey be l for more and better ABC Stores; and so the list could continue, The present administration of your Town favors a strong road ding program, and much of the money from the gasoline tax and r taxes has been expended for street construction and repair. How- r, this is only one of the many functions of municipal government. are equally obligated to furnish police protection, fire protection, bage collection and other services which are essential to every munity.

In the last analysis, there is simply a job to be done by local gov- ments. People are entitled to and expect certain services which t be paid for. The gasoline tax, together with other taxes, is the means by which we have to pay the cost of these services. If the rs feel that tax funds have been improperly expended, the remedy t the polls to elect men who will see that the people get their ey's worth—not by "earmarking" funds and making the budgets nflexible that officials, regardless of how conscientious and effi- t, cannot exercise the discretion which is so necessary to efficient ernmental service.

I urge the voters to consider carefully the possible effect of ndment No. 1. Its passage might lead to the curtailment of es- ial services or necessitate an additional tax levy.

GREATER INTEREST IN FEED AND GRAZING

Grazing and feed crops become more important each year to Alabama farmers who market livestock and products.

A. W. Jones, API Extension market specialist, pointsout that abnormal weather conditions, such as last summer's drouth, make it necessary for livestock producers to get back into heavy production as quickly as possible. And feed and grazing crops will help do the job.

Jones adds that the need for greater effort in growing grazing, hay, and forage is pointed up by the fact that in the 15-year period from 1935 to 1950, per-acre yields of hay increased only five per cent while corn yields increased 56 per cent.

A dairy cow uses half of her normal ration in reparing body tisues and maintaining body heat and energy.

SGT. JOHNNY K. FOLMAR

S/Sgt. Johnny K. Folmar, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Folmar, Calera, has returned to the U. S. aboard the USNS "General D. E. Aultman" following his completion of a year's tour of duty with the U. S. Air Force in the Phillipines.

A graduate from Jemison, Ala. High School, Sergeant Folmar was connected with the Alabama Air National Guard, Birmingham, before enlisting for military service in April of 1951.

During his stay in the Phillippines, he was stationed with the 6200th Supply Squadron, Thirteenth Air Force on Clark Air Force Base, located 60 miles north of Manila.

His wife, the former Rose Hildred Klinner, lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Klinner at Route 2, Maplesville, Alabama.

Livestock producers with a good feed and grazing program are in the best position to make cheapest gains, meet competition, and earn more profits.

A MESSAGE TO OUR FARMER FRIENDS

Mildred White Wallace

Are you a farmer? If so, your welfare lies with the Democratic administration. The Republicans will tell you "It's Time For A Change". Alabama farmers have had a change. Listing only a few include the following:

From 5 cent cotton to parity prices.

From farm drudgery and darkened homes to rural electrification.

From big electric companies to REA and TVA.

From Republican mortage foreclosures to Democratic farm ownership and new farm homes.

From "Hoover Carts" to good automobiles.

From eroded land to soil conservation and green fields.

From less than 80 cents a day average earnings to a 1951 farm income of 415 million dollars.

WHAT HAVE THE REPUBLICANS DONE FOR THE FARMERS?

THEY HAVE: Voted time after time against soil conservation.

Fought Rural Electrification.

Voted less than six months ago to reduce parity.

Fought rural telephones.

Voted to cut agriculture research in half.

Opposed TVA, and still oppose it by a plank in their 1951 platform.

Would you not agree that the FARMERS have prospered under the Democratic administration? Do not these facts convince you that the Democrats have the best agricultural program?

Read carefully the above facts, and, then, if you are not convinced— vote for a return to Republicanism— and I challenge any Farmer to show me one instance where the South has ever been considered, in any way, under a Republican regime.

Please think these things over before making your cross mark next Tuesday. As I see it, these are "blessings", I fear, we are taking for granted, and will not realize how much we should have appreciated them, until they are taken away! Then, it will be too late!

1953 CHRYSLERS WILL SET HIGHWAY FASHION

Chryslers for 1953 feature entirely new and beautiful body styling with long, low lines which emphasize the length and width of the cars.

"These cars, we know, will set the new highway fashion for 1953" reports J. A. O'Malley, vice president and general sales manager Chrysler Division, Chrysler Corporation.

"The new, sleek bodies in combination with proven engineering advances such as the revolutionary 180-horsepower V-8 Chrysler Fire Power engine, full-time power steering, Fluid Torque Drive, power brakes and Oriflow shock absorbers make these the finest, most luxious cars Chrysler has ever produced.

"In addition, this year Chrysler introduces a 12-volt electrical system designed to meet the higher electrical loads imposed by the increasing use of the new electrically operated equipment."

The new Chrysler is on display at Calera Motor Company Show Room in Calera.

MARKED PROGRESS IN PRISON CONDITIONS

A custodial consultant for the Federal Bureau of Prisons says improvements during the past year in Alabama's penal system are almost "unbelievable".

Sam A. Anderson, now serving as Warden at the Louisiana State Prison, praised Alabama Corrections and Institutions Head J. M. McCullough.

Anderson was one of the penal experts who came to Alabama at the invitation of Gov. Gordon Persons to study, and make recommendations for improving Alabama's prison system. He made his study slightly over a year ago.

"Improvements at Kilby Prison since that time are almost unbelievable," Anderson says.

"When I came to Alabama my impression was one of considerable doubt as to whether the house could be set in order," he said this week.

He said a tension existed among the inmates that resulted in destruction of property and other conditions that made it difficult for prison authorities to exercise proper control.

Now the tension is gone and the inmates appear calm and quiet, he added.

Anderson attributed that to improvements in feeding, medical care and in the attitude of officials and guards. At the request of Louisiana officials, Anderson is now serving as warden at the Angola State Prison there, helping to improve the prison situation.

VOTE YES (X) ON AMENDMENT NUMBER THREE

This amendment pertains to Fayette County only, and while it will give municipal governments the right to sell bonds, or take other steps, to promote industrial growth and expansion, it will also provide that these bonds can only be sold after each issue has had the approval of the voters of the city.

This amendment has the endorsement and backing of the Fayette Chamber of Commerce, the Fayette Exchange Club, the Fayette Lions Club, the City of Fayette, the Town of Berry, and the Fayette County Commissioners.

We ask your favorable vote on this amendment as a help to Fayette.

STATEMENT TO THE VOTERS OF SHELBY COUNTY:

On November 4, our Sheriff will have been in office 25 months. This is one month more than two full years. We all know that lots of moonshine whiskey is made in Shelby County. So much so, in fact, that the State keeps a crew of agents stationed here all the time to work with the Sheriff. The Government has men working in the county, a part of the time. The county pays three men a salary to help the Sheriff.

All vehicles used in transporting whiskey or hauling supplies to illicit stills, are subject to be confiscated, and yet, despite all the help from the State and the Government, the Sheriff of Shelby county, thru the Registers Office, has sold two old automobile wrecks. They both brought a total of $130.00. This is his record for this entire period.

If you think a Sheriff with no better record than this deserves to have two more years given him, then may the good Lord have mercy on you.

Sincerely yours,

Where Are We Going?

Certainly not to vote for 6 year terms for Sheriffs.

An honest Sheriff would be able to get re-elected! A dis-honest Sheriff "should be retired after a 4 year term".

We sometimes elect that kind. If you do not believe it—I will be glad to take the records in the Courthouse and prove to you that we do.

INDIAN SUMMER

"Autumn paints the woodlands
Like a gorgeous gown of gold,
Dropping here and there a ripple
Of vermillion in each fold
But, there's a tinge of sadness
When old Winter comes around,
And a 'bit of melancholy gets you—
When the leaves come tumbling down"—

Yes, 'a bit of melancholy'... and a bit of gypsy gets you, these wonderful, colorful days, with their wild music of autumnal winds playing among the fast fading trees, as we witness the year's last loveliest smile, "Indian Summer". Do you not like to watch Summer gather up her vernal robes of glory and like a dream of beauty glide away? The various tints of autumn, like a mighty flower garden, are now blossoming under the enchanter ...Jack Frost, and if you are real smart and will get up early enough these mornings, you can see his magic wand as he transforms the summer setting by dropping his dew-spangled brush on the torch lit trees while Old Sol comes smiling up over Mt. Dixie to begin his days journey after a night's pause for rest. This morning, after reluctantly emerging from our blue blanket, we saw a coral pink sky from our window ledge. Detached white, fluffy clouds sailed upward, and soon these white crested argosies turned to glowing flame, as the great molten disk emerged and proclaimed ANOTHER DAY!

On our way to work while enjoying kicking and crunching dry leaves in our pathway, we encountered our good friend Mr. R. K. Parks, who, too, shares our enthusiasm for this annual panorama of beauty that now lingers along the highways, and if it had not been for this very deadline we are now meeting, we would have acepted his cordial invitation, hopped in that motor drawn car, and gone with him to enjoy raving over the beauty of this glorious morning, with its riot of color in all directions.

We would have enjoyed also taking a peek at the new road projects now fast shaping this county into one of the best net work of highways in Alabama. No one thing appeals to us more than following the "open road" on a day like this, with of course, an understanding friend to share it. Glad the kind gentleman gave us a "rain check".

DR. PARKS TO RETURN NOV. 1ST TO PRACTICE

Dr. Milton Parks needs no introduction to Columbiana people. He formerly practiced medicine here, and during a recent trip back to Main for a visit with old friends, he was so beseiged with requests to return and re-enter his profession in this locality, that we are delighted to report, he has accepted the call, and will open his professional offices in Columbiana November 1st.

. . . Mrs. E. C. Mott of Atlanta has returned home after a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Conrad M. Fowler and Mr. Fowler.

. . . Dr. Jim Day, optometrist is well pleased with his reception in Shelby county. In fact, his professional business is growing so rapidly that he has had to add an "all day schedule" in Columbiana for the convenience of his patrons.

QUEEN ANNETTE THOMPSON SHELBY HIGH QUEEN '52

Queens may come and queens may go, but there will never be a prettier queen representing Shelby High, than Annette Thompson, The High School Queen for 1952.

If there is anyone prettier than this gorgeous brownette, in a lovely pastel shaded Nylon Marquisette evening gown, we just haven't seen them. She was attended by two more lovelies, Mary Fancher and Robbie Lee Kendrick and this trio furnished a panaroma of glamor seldom seen even in Atlantic City, at the annual Beauty Parade.

Who smiled as she rode on a tiger,
They came back from the ride
With the lady inside
And the smile on the face of the

GUEST SPEAKER AT BAPTIST CHURCH SUNDAY MORNING

The Rev. .... Guyton of Center Point, will speak in the Baptist Church Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Mr. Guyton is one of the ministers chosen by the Pulpit Committee to come before the Baptist congregation as a "prospect" for full time pastor. Rev. Guyton was pastor of the Second Baptist Church at Alex City for 14 years and comes highly recommended.

Dr. Scoggins of Montgomery, has agreed to continue filling the pulpit of this church until a permanent minister is selected. He is one of the most impressive speakers ever to appear in Columbiana and his sermons are greeted each Sunday by a large and an appreciative assemblage.

. . . Fred Wood, Carlos Moorer, Denton Cole of Auburn, and Ronald Owen, of Cullman, who was Fred Wood's guest, spent the week end in Columbiana. All are members of Sigma Chi fraternity at A. P. I. and formed a congenial foursome who brightened up the Main Drag during their brief visit.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Collins Mrs. Rose Collins and Mr. and Mrs. June Poole of Gadsden and Ashland, were former residents who received a glad to see you home again during their visit in Columbiana last Sunday.

. . . Clay Lester of Birmingham spent Wednesday in Columbiana, as the guest of his sister, Mrs. H. H. Bearden and Mr. Bearden. During his stay on Main, he dropped by the office to renew his loyalty to the "home paper" for which courtesy, we proffer sincere thanks.

. . . Mr .and Mrs. Clyde Cosper of Birmingham spent a few hours in town Sunday which reminds me, watch the Reporter-Democrat for a series of bargains in automobiles Clyde Cosper is selling. Mr. Cosper is associated as Manager with the American Motor Company in Birmingham, and he will be glad to see his Shelby county friends at his place of business in the Magic City.

. . . Among the old graduates who enjoyed going back to the University for the annual Home Coming last Saturday, were noted: Mr .and Mrs. Karl C. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Bob Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad M. Fowler and Mr. and Mrs. Wales W. Wallace, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Luck, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Stinson and others.

. . . Speaking of the Alumni Banquet, the Class of 1928, had the largest number present and they included Mary Tom Milstead, Dr. J. W. Letson, Polly Isbell Lyon, Howard and Luther McGiboney.

. . . We are numbered among the many friends of J. B. Turner who are missing him during an enforced absence from Main, due to illness.

BIRTHDAYS TO REMEMBER

October 22 ushered in the birthday anniversaries of Peggy Sue Coob and, Mrs. Karl C. Harrison; October 23, as listed on the PTA Calendar is set aside "In Memory of Alvin Bird" by his family. October 24, Football game against the Blocton team. A birthday, too for Bonnie Fay Dennis is scheduled on this day. Clarence Spivey and Barbara Smith come in for happy birthday greetings on October 25 and Sunday, October 26, L. G. Fulton had a birthday cake all his own. On October 29, little Deetsie Spires with her "buttons and bows" will brighten the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hank Spires, and in the Massey home, Sprothy Massey will be the honored one when October 29 rolls around. October 30, Louise Mooney Mrs. Hazel Morris and L. P. Dycus will say farewell to another milestone and closing out this month, October 31st, is Sandra Moore with a birthday to remember. The Football boys will journey to Vincent to try their luck against the Vincent Hi Eleven.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Mrs. George Horn and Mrs. Jesse Cockrell celebrated the passing of their joint birthdays on October 26 in the home of the George Horn's in Columbiana. Those sharing in this lovely occasion included: Mrs. R. D. Cockrell of Anderson; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Cockrell, Sarah and Danny Cockrell; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cockrell and Shelby Jean Cockrell; Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Graden, Mr. B. F. Wilberson of Lineville; Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, Annette Thompson of Columbiana; Mrs. Nora Alexander of Lineville; Mr. Herbert Butler and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Bob Mullins, Ross and Jimmy Mullins of Columbiana.

A delectable Buffet Luncheon was served at noon.

. . . Mrs. John Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Yates of Sylacauga, were week end guests of Judge and Mrs. W. W. Wallace.

. . . John Gay and two lovely daughters, Mary and Janet, of Sterrett were visitors to the Reporter-Democrat office Saturday morning.

KINDERGARTEN KIDS TAKE THE TOWN AT HOMECOMING

The most eye catching Float in the Home Coming Parade was the Kindergarten Krew. Seniors of 1965, in their portrayal of various phases of School Life during their future "cap and gown" day. These Lilliputian pupils of Mary Nell Skelton's were proudly riding high with "Teacher" on this occasion, and in this group were Cheer Leaders, Majorettes, King Terry Falkner and Queen Nan Hill and their royal court. The proudest little fellows we saw were in full Football regalia. All were very serious, very stately, and very proper! Just as cute as a wink, every one of them!

FROM WELFARE ROLLS

Taken from reports made by social service investigators of St. Louis, Mo.:

Woman and house neat but bare.

Man has ulster on his stomach.

Woman has no job to be mentioned.

Couple breaking up home, friends helping.

These people are extremely cultured. Something should be done about their condition.

Man has diabetes and is insulated twice a day.

Nice quiet home family. Dorothy has been out since July.

Applicant has one child, Lillian, who is 3 months old and owes 12 months' rent.

Applicant is typical real American. He is the father of eight children.

Man hit by automobile. Speaks broken English.

We have no such records from our case workers in Alabama. All are well trained, and when they undertake this important work, are fully equipped to thoroughly perform its responsible duties. The Alabama Welfare Department is possibly one of the most efficient organizations in the nation. I am dead certain no state has a more efficient staff of workers. If you do not believe me, you should go in and visit with the official personnel. You will find them delightful to know, and most interesting to talk with. They love the work they are in, and give to each individual case their best efforts to solve individual needs, under the rules they necessarily have to observe.

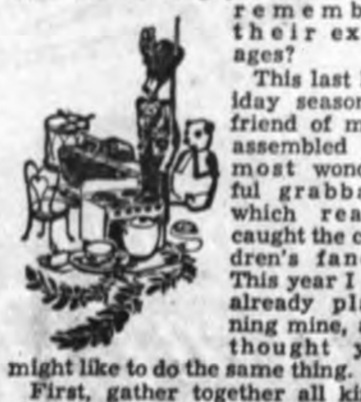
Director Bill Dorrough is one of the most conscientious workers we have ever known, and his coworkers are excellently qualified to adequately perform their various assignments. Alabamians may well be justifiably proud of the outstanding work being done in this State Department!

A HELPING HAND

By Martha White

Start a Christmas Grabbag Now

Do you ever wind up the week before Christmas wondering just what to give to the children next door—or to the youngsters of your favorite niece whom you haven't seen for so long you don't even remember their exact ages?



This last holiday season a friend of mine assembled the most wonderful grabbags which really caught the children's fancy. This year I am already planning mine, and thought you might like to do the same thing.

First, gather together all kinds of inexpensive, attractive little toys—the kind that children of all ages enjoy. There are the fascinating doll house furnishings which range from ten to twenty-five cents apiece—folding bridge tables, plastic washing machines, tiny chairs, pots and pans with lids that really come off. In addition, for little boys you can find rubber knives, saws, card games such as Authors, brightly painted yo-yos, plastic soldiers, tanks, automobiles. You can get imitation leather wallets and play money, both bills and coins, and "watches," and "pearl" necklaces, and boxes of colored crayons—all kinds of things.

When you have a few minutes to sit down with your afternoon coffee and a little hand work, search in your rag box for bright bits of cloth. A celluloid or plastic doll can be dressed in a complete wardrobe with just a few minutes work. Or you can make little rag dolls, stuffed with cotton, with yarn hair and colorful embroidered-on features. Just a tiny scrap of material and left-over trimming will dress such a doll.

Now comes the holiday season—and you will be ready for it. Get some bright Christmas-red cotton material, and make a good-sized bag. Next, get some of the iron-on mending tape which I'm sure you've used before for more utilitarian purposes. Write a big "Merry Christmas" on the tape and cut it out with embroidery scissors. A quick bit of ironing—and presto, you have a Christmas grabbag. Make a bag for each family to which you wish to give presents. Cut out the individual names of the children from the iron-on tape, and personalize the bags, if you wish. For instance, one bag might read "Merry Christmas, Tom, Mary, Jane, Joe."

Sort out the many little presents you have already accumulated, wrap each one separately in gay paper, put them in your grabbag. There you have it—the perfect Christmas present for a family with several small children. Each child will have four or five presents to reach for and to unwrap on The Morning.

Fact is, come to think about it, those 'gray hairs' add a note of distinction to his apperance. Memory always does a back flip when Fred and I get together and begin chatting away about "old times", "old house to house parties"— Gary Springs, and other meeting places for the Leepers, Haynes, Wallaces, Fultons, Scotts, Hills, Harrisons, Bentons, Birds et all. MEMBERSHIP IN BAPTIST CHOIR CLOSED UNTIL AFTER CHRISTMAS

Due to lack of space in the Choir Room of the Baptist Church, it has been found necessary by the Music Committee to close the rolls for the choir membership, until after Christmas.

The choir now has an enrollment of 32 members, and every inch of available space is taken up in the Choir Loft, with a part of the pulpit having to be utilized for the presentation of the Cantata. By next Christmas, we hope we shall have more space and that every one who wants to join us in this annual presentation may do so. We are grateful for the interest shown and for the enthusiasm and prompt attendance the members of the choir are giving us.

New members include: Helen Holliman and Doris Colvin, Tuesday night, at a regular meeting, Mrs. Jessie Jones received a warm welcome as she returned to the alto section after an enforced absence of several months.

Good Morning

Sgt. Earl A. Wood

Dear Earl:

I have just turned off the radio. I wish you had been here. That baby was loaded with old misty tunes. And an advertisement, too, that I missed until the end. But the guy gave it over then and it hit me right between the eyes. Like a dream will sometimes. Or a spitball. Or the south end of a mule going north.

The first song was Mickie. Do you remember her, Earl? She was a nifty bundle of fair skin and raven black hair who visited Annie John Haynes one summer. When she left I dressed my heart up in the prettiest words I knew and sent it over the miles. It came back in two weeks smelling of an old perfume. But it didn't matter. Two weeks is forever when a guy's fifteen.

And my heart had danced riotously to the tune of "It Had To Be You" in the picture-show the next two weeks anyhow. It was up the street, remember, from the old hotel with the long front porch. Remember the old phonograph that stood in the corner. I left my heart on the third row. It was days before I had show fare again. When I did go back my heart was gone, and the tune on the phonograph was "Moonlight and Roses".

My heart snuck back between the second and third reel. When the show was over and I got outside she was outside too. We walked all the way up Silk Stocking Street. Remember the bridges up that way. There must have been a dozen of them, or more. I guess every guy and gal who reads this, at sometime back there, stopped on those bridges and watched the moonlight and smelled the roses. And we did too. I left my heart on the third bridge . . .

But this is where the guy with the big mouth butted in. "If your hair is thin," he said, "I can help you. But if your hair is gone, forget it. No matter what anybody tells you, brother, forget it."

Pvt. Robert H. Bozeman
Fort Jackson, South Carolina
Dear Bob:

It'll soon be time for basketball up at the far turn, and I was just thinking about last year and the times we had. I guess we had more fun than anybody. And then, when we lost to Montevallo, I remember your eyes gushed water like molasses running out of a jar. If I was gonna buy a basketball team I'd buy you first for my manager, and then if I had anything left I'd buy a ball.

But that's what really matters, ain't it, Bob. Giving until it hurts sometimes. In anything, it is. I guess that's why I always sat by you, instead of the pretty girls who looked good enough to eat. Folks always like a guy who knows how to give. Things like friendliness and laughter and tears even. All through life they do. In a thousand ways.

There's a mocking bird that hangs around my window. I guess nobody ever gives him anything in this world. They don't have time for him, I guess; or maybe they just take him for granted. But every morning his song comes up with the sun. And a lot of little corners the sun doesn't touch are made bright and beautiful because of his mirth.

Pvt. William A. Johnson
c/o Postmaster
New York, N. Y.

It's the time of year here now when a guy has to get out and tramp through the woods. Today, on the mountains beyond where your Mom and Pop live, I counted the blue birds. I would tell Brother Tom how many there were, when he came down for his mail Monday morning.

The blue birds occupy an important place in our lives. We like the way they toss songs about. In times like these when it would be so easy to throw rocks. There were thirty-three, all told, in the blood-red elms, and in the blue sky, and on an old fence that ziz-zagged over the hill.

Somehow, I wish there could be thirty-three million— on the radio, and in the newspapers, and along all the crowded avenues that zig-zag over the world.

Elford W. Davis
c/o Postmaster
San Francisco, California
Dear Waylon:

I went to Montevallo with the folks Friday night to see the ball game. We got our ears beat down, but the guys did all right. They're just chillun, but they're coming along, and come another year somebody's gonna get it good.

But I wish you could have seen the band. There are more pretty girls in that bunch of younguns than most folks see in a lifetime. And the way they waltz along by the side of twenty or so guys and toss music about is something to behold.

But the thing that stuck in my mind was the way the Old Street stood breathless one day last week and listened for news of a girl. Pretty vivacious Mary Mims, on her way home for the week-end was in a car wreck, and it was several hours before we found out that she would be all right. Mary, and those little folks who make up her band, is about the greatest thing that's come along The Old Street since paved streets and street lights. You can't buy the stuff they scatter. You couldn't if you had all the money in the world. But you can have all you can tote, simply by standing on the street any Friday afternoon, when they come along scattering loveliness and laughter and music all over the place.

Country Needs Eisenhower's New Leadership

By JOHN S. KNIGHT
Miami Herald Editor and Publisher

THE MIAMI HERALD is supporting Dwight Eisenhower for President because we believe that there is an imperative necessity for a fresh and resolute attack on the many crucial problems confronting this country.

It is our conviction that Ike is better qualified than his opponent to meet this need.

Eisenhower is a mature man of seasoned judgment who has shown that he has the organizational and administrative capacity to cope with the most delicate and trying situations.

Eisenhower

As supreme commander of the Allied forces during World War II and later as military head of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Eisenhower received the warmest commendation from President Truman, the man who is now attempting to destroy him.

In this campaign, Eisenhower has shown singular ability to gasp the basic issues and the courage to stand for the principles which he feels are in the best interest of the country he loves.

Some will say that he has temporized with the McCarthys and "sold out" to Taft. This is the usual line advanced by the left-of-center columnists who make a pretense of being "objective" while actually favoring Stevenson.

No one who knows Eisenhower intimately could ever be convinced that he lacks moral stamina. In the great game of politics, a candidate accepts support where he can find it.

Example No. 1 is Gov. Adlai Stevenson who first wanted nothing to do with Truman but now appears delighted by Harry's reckless and wholly irresponsible whistle-stop outbursts.

The Governor's period of political chastity was as short as an Arctic summer.

DISMAL ADMINISTRATION RECORD EVIDENT

APART FROM EISENHOWER'S obvious qualifications for the presidency, the case for a change in Washington is well supported by the dismal record of the Democratic party.

So far as we can see, Stevenson, with Truman's help, is attempting to sell a "prosperity" package to the American people.

Stevenson's polished phrases and Truman's crudities all converge upon one basic theme: "You never had it so good."

The strategy is to talk of high wages and social advances, blame the Republicans for Truman's failures, confuse public opinion and cut Eisenhower down to beatable size.

But in making a choice between Eisenhower and Steevnson, sober-minded Americans should take these factors into consideration:

* * *

THREE TIMES IN WAR IN NAME OF PEACE

WAR AND PEACE: Within a single generation, the Democratic party has three times carried this country into war, all in the name of peace and democracy.

Yet, as the record shows, peace is still a phantom and democracy has receded, rather than gained, throughout the world.

As The Arizona Star says: "The Democratic party has sponsored these wars for unlimited and unobtainable objectives.

"Democratic party leaders proclaimed the war-prolonging policies of unconditional surrender . . . Democratic party leaders set the policy giving the Russians what they asked for, and meekly surrendering Eastern Europe and China to the Communists.

"Democratic party leaders were at the point of recognizing Red China and surrendering Formosa, when the Communists attacked in Korea. Now look at what we are paying for, mistakes that go back into the midst of World War II when these Democratic party leaders were snuggling up to the Communists. They condoned the presence of Communists within the government itself. They ridiculed those who demanded a house-cleaning. Only reluctantly, and in the face of an aroused public, did they take steps to eliminate these Communists."

What a ghastly price we are paying for these mistakes, and yet we are asked to return that party to power in Washington.

* * *

CORRUPTION AND GRAFT IN WASHINGTON

CORRUPTION: Throughout the Truman administration, the national government has been rotten with corruption and graft.

The influence peddlers moved in White House circles; Revenue Department "fixed" the tax returns of their pals in return for personal favors.

And yet we are asked to return that party to power in Washington.

BILLIONS GIVEN AWAY AS DEBT MOUNTS

FOREIGN AID: While most Americans favored the principle of giving assistance to war-torn European nations, they have been appalled by the profligacy with which the administration has given our billions away.

In many instances, your tax dollars have been used for such projects as a railroad station in Italy, resort hotels, housing projects and public buildings.

Most shocking of all is the use of American funds to help reduce the public debt of European countries when our own national debt is at a fearsome peak.

And yet, we are asked to return the Democratic party to power in Washington.

GOVERNMENT EXPENSES CAN BE REDUCED

TAXES: Both Harry Truman and Adlai Stevenson scoff at Eisenhower's promise to reduce taxes.

But Sens. Paul Douglas of Illinois and Harry Byrd of Virginia, both Democrats, have conclusively demonstrated that the expenses of government can be cut substantially.

Eisenhower says there is too much fat in nonessential military expenditures, and he knows where to slice it off.

However, Stevenson has accepted the views of Truman and you can forget about lower taxes if he is elected.

And yet, we are asked to return his party to power in Washington.

STEVENSON MEANS TRUMAN CONTINUANCE

TRUMAN AND ADLAI: A vote for Stevenson is a vote for Harry Truman and his administration. The President has said as much, and Stevenson has not denied it.

The President and his candidate now see alike on Communists in government, Taft-Hartley, tidelands oil, inflation, taxes, foreign policy and corruption in Washington.

Long before Stevenson had given a deposition favorable to Alger Hiss, Truman was pooh-poohing infiltration of the government by the Communists.

On Feb. 28, 1947, Truman wrote Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania that "people are very much wrought up about the Communist 'bugaboo' . . . Our government is made for the welfare of the people and I don't believe there will ever come a time when anyone will really want to overturn it."

And yet, we are asked to return Mr. Truman's party to power in Washington.

WORLD GOV. ABOVE U. S. INTEREST?

ADLAI'S ASSOCIATIONS: Governor Stevenson's closest friends are advocates of world government, a form of federal union in which the U. S, would be but one of many states, and subject to the laws, taxing powers of a world legislature and the decisions of a world tribunal.

The Miami Herald has learned that Gov. Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic candidate for President, also belongs to an organization known as the World Citizens Association, 230 E. Ohio st., Chicago, Ill.

The chairman of this group is Anita McCormick Blaine, a wealthy Chicagoan who made huge contributions to Henry Wallace in 1948 and has since financed the radical, left-wing New York Compass.

In its platform for world citizenship, the World Citizens Association recites that "National states must be subordinate to world civilization; their jurisdiction must be limited by world law, and any local legislation contrary to world law must be null and void."

In another section is mentioned the necessity of recognizing "the larger duality that forces itself upon peoples everywhere" and "every man's interests and responsibilities as a world citizen."

The World Citizens organization, in its program for world citizenship, says that world institutions must maintian law and order and may supervise such "world services" as the international postal union . . . the stabilizing of world finance, the better organization of commerce, world communications . . . study and regulation of labor conditions and the curbing of such evils as the traffic in women and drugs.

On page 153 of a booklet issued by the World Citizens organization, the name of Adlai Stevenson appears as a member of the central committee.

While we can offer no objection to anyone's joining this outfit, or any of the other flaky "intellectual" groups, we think it is important for everyone to know that Adlai Steveson apparently prefers world government in some form to retaining our sovereignty as an independent nation.

And yet, we are asked to elect a presidential candidate who is willing to fly the flag of a world federation above the Stars and Stripes.

For this reason alone, Stevenson should be soundly defeated.

A Personal Message

To The People Of Shelby County

I am a candidate for Probate Judge. I want to give you some personal service from the Probate Office of Shelby County.

I have lived in Calera and operated a successful Real Estate business for 27 years, eight years of which I served as Mayor of Calera, during which time Calera was cleaned up as it had never been before. A sanitary water and a sewer system was put in for the town together with many other improvements. In fact, my experience and knowledge of law concerning local government fit me to render the very best service possible to you, if elected Probate Judge. I am now assisting the "Old Age Pension Program" to get the Legislature to provide funds to meet Federal funds already allocated for the aged.

Truly, a vote for A. B. BAXLEY is a vote for the best interest of Shelby County. Won't you help me help you?

Regardless of your party affiliation, if you split your ballot, you will not regret making a cross mark before the name of A. B. BAXLEY. This will not effect your vote nationally.

Are You a Working Man?

Your Welfare Lies With the Democrats

In 20 years of Democratic administration, the working men of Alabama have seen us change from bread lines to payroll lines—from unemployment to 62 million jobs.

If you are an Alabama working man:

You have a higher standard of living, social security, minimum wages, collective bargaining, unemployment compensation, and better housing.

Allowing for more taxes and higher cost-of-living your income has still almost doubled since 1932

The profits of the Alabama corporations for which you work have increased nearly 50% after taxes and adjustments for higher prices.

You have old age pension protection—over 65 thousand Alabamians are getting 23 million dollars per year in old age pensions.

The value of the goods which you make in Alabama has increased 700 times in the last 10 years.

More than one half of the counties of Alabama got a new industrial plant last year, which means more jobs for working people. Do you think Republicans got those factories for Alabama?

• • •

What have the Republicans of the North and East done for you? They have:

Fought social security.
Opposed minimum wages.
Voted against child labor laws.
Fought low-cost housing.
Done everything possible to keep industry out of the South.
Sneered at the working man having a voice in his government.

. . . for ALL the people of Alabama, VOTE DEMOCRATIC

Power for Need

Lesson for November 2, 1952

Dr. Foreman

THERE are various kinds of power, and this lesson is not about most of them. For example there is mechanical power, and atomic power, and electrical power. There is armed force exerted by a nation, and there are all the forces of nature. We are not concerned directly with any of these. We will think not of one particular kind of power, but of any kind which is personally controlled and used, the power that every one has. Practically all human beings exert some kind of power. It may be the power of influence; it may be based on money; it may be political or social; it may be power to command, such as is held by sea-captains and labor bosses and office managers. The reader is invited to reflect on his own situation and concentrate his mind on whatever power, be it ever so small, which he himself exercises or can exercise when he pleases. Very few persons are complete Zeros.

Purposes of Prayer

Is it wrong, that is to say, un-Christian, to wish to be strong? Of course not. There is surely no virtue in weakness. To wish to be weak, or to be content with weakness, is no sign of a Christian. It depends on the motive behind the desire. Now power can be had, or wished for, for various reasons, bad and good. Some people like to be strong just to show off. A boy goes around bending his arm and showing the other boys what big muscles he has, just bragging. That may be all right for a boy (though the boaster is pretty sure to be thrown sooner or later). But when a grown man does the same thing he is just being childish. However, this is harmless compared with another common mis-use of power; that is, using it to build up more power. We can see it in politicians who hold on to important positions even though they could be more useful in private life and though a dozen other men could do their job quite well as they can. We can see it even in the church, where some men like to get on and stay on important committees because then they can "crack the whip" over their brethren. Worst and meanest of all mis-uses of power is using it to hurt and crush others. We can see examples of this on the national scale, all through history. It scales all the way down to the blackmailer, who uses some bit of scandal that he knows about to ruin the lives of perhaps much better men.

Jesus and His Power

Now Christians have always before them an example of tremendous power, gently and generously used. Readers of this column will be divided into two classes. Some will take the stories of Jesus' miracles quite litterally. Others will suppose that some of these stories may have been exaggerations of loyal memory. Let those who are skeptical about the miracle-stories give a thought to this: Even granting, for the sake of the argument, that every one of these miracle-stories is a "made-up" one; they surely would never have been invented about a weak man; and they never would have been told about a selfish one. The historians who are most full of doubts about Jesus agree and admit that he was a man of extraordinary power. And even if you thought (as this writer does not) that most of the tales of Jesus were wonder-tales and no more, the fact remains that these tales, every one of them, shows a Jesus who never uses power to show off, never uses it "just because," and seven times never uses it to hurt any one.

Power for Need

Jesus gives us the right Christian line. "As he is, so are we in this world," said one of his friends. Power is given us, as all the gifts of life are, for use in the name of God and the help of man. Whatever power we have, we possess as stewards. It makes no difference how obscure we may be, every one of us has some degree of power, of some kind. It may be a mother with her children, a teacher with his pupils, an older child with younger children, a business man with many employees, a judge on the bench or an officer in a 4-H club—if our decisions affect the life of even one other person, then God will ask us: Did your power hurt others, or help?

STATE OF ALABAMA A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Regular Session 1951, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the day of the General Election next succeeding the final adjournment of the 1951 session of the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, the General Election next succeeding the final adjournment of the 1951 Session of the Legislature, at which the amendment was proposed, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Gordon Persons, as Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that on Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, an election will be held at the several polling places within the State of Alabama, in the manner and form provided by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901:

"No moneys derived from any fees, excises, or license taxes, levied by the State relating to registration, operation, or use of vehicles upon the public highways except a vehicle-use tax imposed in lieu of a sales tax, and no moneys derived from any fee, excises, or license taxes, levied by the State, relating to fuels used for propelling such vehicles except pump taxes, shall be expended for other than cost of administering such laws, statutory refunds and adjustments allowed therein, cost of construction, reconstruction, maintenance and repair of public highways and bridges, costs of highway right-of-way, payment of highway obligations, the cost of traffic regulation, and the expense of enforcing state traffic and motor vehicle laws. The provisions of this Amendment shall not apply to any such fees, excises, or license taxes now levied by the State for school purposes for the whole State or for any county or city Board of Education therein."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, in each county in the State of Alabama, in a newspaper published in said county.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and have caused the Great Seal of the State of Alabama to be affixed by the Secretary of State, at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 28th day of July 1952.

"Section 138 of Article 5. A sheriff shall be elected in each county by the qualified electors thereof, who shall hold office for a term of six years, unless sooner removed, and he shall be eligible to such office as his own successor; provided, that the terms of all sheriffs expiring in the year 1955 are hereby extended until the first Monday after the second Tuesday of January Nineteen Hundred Fifty Seven. Whenever any prisoner is taken from jail or from the custody of any Sheriff or his deputy, and put to death, or suffers grievous bodily harm, owing to the neglect, connivance, cowardice, or other grave fault of the sheriff, such sheriff may be impeached, under Section 174 of this Constitution. If the sheriff be impeached and thereupon convicted, he shall not be eligible to hold any office in this State during the term for which he had been elected or appointed to serve as sheriff."

STATE OF ALABAMA A PROCLAMATION BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama, at the Fifth Special Session, 1950, ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the date of the next general election after January 1, 1951; and

WHEREAS, the next general election to be held in the State after January 1, 1951, will be and occur on Tuesday, November 4, 1952; and

WHEREAS, notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law, and by the provisions of the act submitting the amendment, to be given by a proclamation of the Governor to be published in each county in the State of Alabama once a week for four successive weeks next preceding the day appointed for the election:

"Any provision of the Constitution or laws of the State of Alabama to the contrary notwithstanding, any municipality in Fayette County, or any one or more of them, shall have full and continuing power and authority, after an election held in accordance herewith, to do any one or more of the following:

"1. To purchase, construct, lease or otherwise acquire real property, plants, buildings, factories, works, facilities, machinery and equipment of any kind.

"2. To lease, sell for cash or on credit, exchange, give and convey any such property described in subdivision 1 above, to any person, firm, association or corporation.

"3. To promote local industrial, commercial or agricultural development and the location of new industries or businesses therein.

"4. To become a stockholder in any corporation, association or company.

"5. To lend its credit or to grant public moneys and things of value in aid of, or to, any individual, firm, association, or corporation whatsoever.

"6. To become indebted and to issue and sell interest bearing bonds, warrants (which may be payable from funds to be realized in future years), notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness, to a principal amount not exceeding fifty percent of the assessed value of taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in order to secure funds for the purchase, construction, lease or acquisition of any of the property described in subdivision 1 above or to be used in furtherance of any of the other powers or authorities granted in this amendment. Such obligations or evidences of indebtedness may (in addition to any pledge or pledges authorized by subdivision 8 of this amendment) be issued upon the full faith and credit of the municipality or may be limited as to the source of their payment.

"7. To levy and collect annually, in addition to all other taxes now authorized or permitted, a special tax or taxes of not exceeding two percent on the value of all taxable property therein as determined for state taxation, in the same manner as other county or municipal taxes are levied and collected. Such tax may be upon all property in any municipality in Fayette County or upon all property in any district the boundaries of which the governing body of such municipality shall describe and which it shall determine to be specially improved and benefited by any proposed use or expenditure of the proceeds of such tax.

"8. To pledge to the payment of any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness the annual proceeds from any such special tax or taxes and to obligate itself irrevocably to continue to levy and collect such taxes annually until such obligations or evidences of indebtedness are paid in full and to pledge thereto any rental or sales proceeds of property leased or sold by it.

"9. To create a public authority or corporation having such powers, managed and governed by such board or governing body and subject to such limitations as the governing body of any municipality in Fayette County may impose, by approving and filing a certificate to that effect in the office of the Judge of Probate or the Secretary of State, or their respective successors in function, and to delegate to such public authority or corporation and its board or governing body all powers and authority conferred in this amendment upon any such municipality.

"The recital in any bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness that they were issued pursuant to this amendment or that they were issued to provide funds to be used in furtherance of any power or authority herein authorized or that any special tax herein authorized has been pledged to the payment thereof shall be conclusive; no purchases or holder thereof need inquire further; and the levy and collection of such tax shall continue until the principal of and interest on such obligations or evidences of indebtedness shall have been paid in full. The bonds, warrants, notes or other obligations or evidences of indebtedness issued hereunder shall not be considered an indebtedness of any municipality in Fayette County for the purpose of determining the borrowing capacity of such municipality under sections 224 and 225 of the Constitution; and the taxes herein authorized shall be in addition to those provided for or permitted in sections 215 anl 216 of the Constitution and all amendments thereto.

"This amendment shall be self-executing; but the Legislature shall have the right and power by general, special or local act to adopt laws supplemental to this amendment or in furtherance of the purposes and objectives herein above set forth.

"10. No municipality shall make any engagement or commitment or undertake any project under the provisions hereof unless and until the proposition has been approved by a majority of the qualified electors of such municipality. The governing body of any municipality may provide for holding such elections, but in no case shall an election be held until notice of the election and of the proposition to be voted on has been published for at least three successive weeks."

I further direct and proclaim that notice of this election upon Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, upon the above set forth amendment to the Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901, be given by publishing the same once a week for four successive weeks next preceding Tuesday the 4th day of November 1952, in each county in the State of Alabama, in a newspaper published in said county.

CALVES TURN UP HEELS AT VEGETABLE FAT DIET

Butterfat cannot be replaced by vegetable fat in diets fed calves, according to Dr. T. W. Gullickson, of the National Dairy Council.

He used 100 calves in his experiment, and all of them fed vegetable oil died by the time they were three months old. Calves whose diets were switched to butterfat before they were three months old lived.

J. R. Parrish, API Extension dairyman, believes that new products sold to replace butterfat may be cheaper, but they may not be healthful too. Taste alone is not a test for food products, he adds.

WILSONVILLE

ELIZABETH WELDON

J. F. Helms, Jr., left Thursday for California where he will be reassigned for U. S. Navy duty.

We were glad to have the following former residents back Friday: Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Carter, Jr., Mrs. Carter's mother, Mrs. Virgie Boyer and Mrs. Helen Smith of Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. James Woods, and sons Mike and Harold of Russessville visited Mrs. Wood's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Watson and Ruth have moved to their new home in Chapel community. We hope we shall still see them often.

Miss Adelle Pearson and her brother from Birmingham were guests of Mrs. Maggie Harkins Friday.

A large number of Wilsonville people attended the fair in Childersburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Spear Kytle and their daughter Mrs. Prescott and granddaughter of Birmingham, visited Mr. and Mrs. Byron Lindsey.

Mr. and Mrs. James Curtis and their father visited in Blountsville recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Jackson had as their guest Mrs. Jackson's sister, Mrs. Clarice Haring and her son, Richard Heath of Pittsburg, Pa.

We were sorry to hear that Mrs. Homer Jackson's mother has been ill. We hope she will soon be well.

A joint birthday dinner was given Sunday for Mrs. Jack Story and her neice Rose Marie Smith at the home of Mr. Story's sister, Mrs. Will Bentley and Mr. Bentley in DeArmandville.

Misses Mayme Hill, Aileen Pope and Elizabeth Weldon attended the Alumni Banquet of Shelby High School Friday evening.

Mrs. Juanita Williams visited relatives in Birmingham recently.

Rev. Gentry of Howard College brought excellent messages at the Baptist Church Sunday. We were glad to have Mrs. Gentry come with him.

The W. M. U. had an all day meeting Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Mansfield Stone.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Cosper have moved into their beautiful new home.

We were sorry to hear of the illness of Mrs. T. O. Smith Sr., and we wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Maud Weaver of Columbiana visited Mr. and Mrs. George Vansant Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Butler of Washington, D. C. were guests of Miss Mary Williams and Mrs. Juanita Williams over the week end.

Mrs. T. G. Morton (Iris Spearman) and Mr. Morton of Burlington, North Carolina visited Mrs. Morton's mother, Mrs. Flora Spearman. Mrs. Spearman returned with them to spend the winter. We shall miss Mrs. Spearman this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland Spearman and children from Bessemer visited Mrs. Flora Spearman during the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Wilson and children of Attalla were guests of Mrs. Juanita Williams Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Vansant have returned from an extended visit with their daughter in Anniston.

Mr. Jim Taylor, a former resident of Wilsonville, and his wife, from Birmingham were here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Vardaman and Mrs. Ed Nivens are visiting in Selma this week.

We were glad to see Mr. Josh Roper out again after an illness.

Many Wilsonville folks attended the Home Coming game at Shelby High Friday.

ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

B. F. Hatchett and G. C. Starcher

Bicolor lespedeza, the perennial legume used for quail food and shelter is ready for seed harvest. If the seed is not to be harvested, it will fall to the ground later on this winter to provide late winter and early spring food.

Working cooperatively with the State Department of Conservation and the North Central Soil Conservation District, the Future Farmer Chapters of Columbiana, Vincent, Montevallo and Siluria are planting 134 pounds of seed and 10,000 plants of bicolor this year.

Montevallo F. F. A. chapter is going to make a model conservation farm of the Woolley farm on the Siluria highway. The application has been signed for S. C. S. assistance in planning. The fifty pounds of "Alabama" reseeding Crimson Clover loaned to the chapter by the "district" will be planted on this farm.

Two Calera farm machinery dealers put on demonstrations of their equipment this week. Due to previous engagements we didn't get to see "M-M" at work. However, we were able to stop by and watch "A-C" perform. Saw all the Montevallo regular and veteran vocational agriculture students there with teachers Thornton and Little and the Blue Bullet bus loaded with Hill and his agriculture students from Columbiana.

Next week is national "Soil Conservation Districts' Week". Make a point to read this paper next week and mention conservation as often as possible.

Top hand from a famous family!

You can comb the county without finding a better "top hand" than an International Truck with pickup body.

One reason is the 45 years of truck manufacturing experience behind it. And true to its century of farm family traditions, International pickups deliver the same outstanding performance and enduring economy.

Invest 30 minutes in finding out why. Do it next time you're in town.

You can't beat these International pickup truck exclusives:
- Silver Diamond valve-in-head engine built in the world's largest truck engine plant.
- The "roomiest, most comfortable cab on the road"—the Comfo-Vision Cab.
- Super-steering system—more positive control, easier handling. 37° turning angle.
- Nine models . . . 4,200 to 8,600 lbs. GVW ratings. 6½, 8 and 9-ft. bodies. 115, 127, 134-in. wheelbases.
- The traditional truck toughness that has kept International first in heavy-duty truck sales for 20 straight years.
- Largest exclusive truck service organization.

International Pickups available in nine models with 6½, 8, and 9-ft. bodies, 4,200 to 8,600 lbs. GVW.

Buy on Proof!
Before you buy any truck, let us give you a list of persons in this area who have recently bought new Internationals like the one you are considering. Check with any or all of them. Find out how Internationals cut hauling costs on jobs like yours.

LEST WE FORGET NOVEMBER 11

On November 11, 1952, the nation will observe Armistice Day. At eleven o'clock, if the ceremony is observed properly, all traffic will halt; wheels of industry will stop; work will cease and men, women and children throughout the land will face the East. A bugle will blow .... Taps .... for America's sons who made the supreme sacrifice on the battlefields of freedom.

Many of us will remember a former November 11, when the last shot was fired in France. Americans will also pay tribute to the Unknown Soldier who sleeps in Arlington Cemetery, and to unnumbered thousands who sleep not in Arlington, but on some wooded slope or sunny field beneath quiet stars, with only a white cross to mark his last sacrifice.

These brave and courageous ones give us a rich heritage, to hold high the torch of liberty. The spark inherited from the legions of the fallen, who died in "manhood's morning' on the Highway of Freedom still glows in every true American's heart today.

Forget not, November 11; nor those who made it memorable!

CIRCUIT COURT TO OPEN MONDAY

The Fall Term of the Shelby County Circuit Court will open on November 10, and continue for two weeks, Judge W. W. Wallace, presiding.

There will be no grand jury held at this time.

The first week of the court will be devoted to the trial of civil cases and the second week of the court will be taken up with the jury trial of criminal cases docketed.

WILD GEESE COORDINATE AND FLY SOUTHWARD

The wild geese are flying Southward in a perfect V formation, writing a new meaning in the sky as they blaze the trail for thousands of miles in search of a winter haven.

Wild geese exert every effort to remain in perfect unison, in order to perfect their flight. Might be "wild geese" could teach human beings a lesson as they remind us of the old saying—"United we stand, divided we fall". Now is the time for a renewed pledge for united effort toward bringing PEACE again into our world, and every American should offer wholehearted cooperation to the newly chosen leaders, General Ike Eisenhower and Sen. Dick Nixon.

THANKS REPUBLICAN FRIENDS

Wednesday, November 5, will never beforgotten by this little Democratic Scribe. Another battle lost. It is not the first one. I have always prided myself on being an exponent and an advocator of good sportsmanship. I have always practiced this theory and certainly, I have basked in the "glory of defeat" today, as dozens of my Republican friends who have paid very little attention to me during the past few weeks, have come in and brought me "Coco Colas, with Aspirine, Standback, and dozens of apples, and candy", as consolation prizes.

This morning on the door of my office was a huge "black mourning Bow of Ribbon", someone had placed there. All in good fun, all in friendly spirit, all, Main Streeters, releasing in their own way, the tension of the hard fought election.

Now, we stand ready for another day, another week, another year. We look forward, hopefully and confidently, toward that Glad Tomorrow "General Ike" has promised us. We believe he will do his best to speed its arrival to this war-torn, confused world. So, lets fall in line and forward march on the double with "General Ike"—

CONSERVATION DISTRICT WEEK BEING OBSERVED

By proclamation of Governor Persons, the week November 2-8 is being observed throughout Alabama as "Soil Conservation District Week". D. L. Yarbrough, president of the Alabama Association of District Supervisors and F. E. Williams, Shelby County District supervisor have called upon all interested parties from the farm, professional, or business world to help emphasize the importance of the work of the Districts during this week.

Soil Conservation Districts are said to be a most democratic form of organization now in use to promote better farm practices since they were authorized as a local unit of the state government by a 1939 state law that provided for their formation by certain democratic procedure. The steps were: petitions signed by farmers themselves, hearings, and elections. May 1941 found twelve districts organized that covered the state. Each district is governed by a board of local farmers. The governing board developed, with help from farmers, agricultural workers, and others, its own program for good land use and soil and water conservation.

Each District is carrying out its own program with help from local, state and federal agencies, and with considerable assistance from individuals and businesses who have recognized the value of the work as carried on by the District.

Farmers can receive guidance in developing and carrying out long time plans for best land use, increased yields, more economical production, improved living standards, etc., from participation in the District. This is voluntary and there is no coercive pressure or domination from outside influence.

See pages six and seven of this issue of the Reporter-Democrat for more news of District activities and many advertisements of concerns that have machinery, seeds, and fertilizer materials that are useful in helping Shelby County farmers conserve their soil and rebuild damaged soil through proper preparation and establishing soil and water conserving crops.

As the aims of the District are brought nearer realization and more waste acres become productive, and low producing acres become higher, the general financial, physical and moral condition of Shelby County will steadily impove.

TREE CLUB TO HAVE IMPORTANT MEETING DR. J. A. YORK, SPEAKER

The Columbiana Tree Club announces an important meeting to take place Monday night, November 10 at 7:30 o'clock at the Bank Building. All who are interested in beautifying our town and its environs by planting trees will be welcomed.

CALERA LEADS IN BUILDING ACTIVITY

There is more building in Calera now than at any other place in the county. New construction includes two fifty ton steel stoker lime kilns; two drive in filling stations and the junior high school stations and the jr. high school. The progress of these new buildings is being watched with a great deal of interest by every one in Calera.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER FOR BOOTHTON PASTOR

Mrs. E. H. Mullins and Mrs. E. H. Hicks entertained with a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Hicks in honor of the Rev. W. A. Wiggins and family of East Lake. Delicious fruit punch was served the guests as they arrived, after which they were ushered in the living room to meet the honoree and his family. Little Misses Maurine and Lanice Terrell were dressed as little negroes and carried an old time laundry basket filled to over flowing with beautiful and useful gifts for the entire family, which were presented to Mrs. Wiggins.

A delicious salad plate was then served.

Fifty one guests were present to welcome the new minister and his family.

VINCENT MOTOR COMPANY HANDLES CHEVROLET

The officers of the Vincent Motor Company which will handle Chevrolet cars include: Dr. J. W. Arthur, president; and J. F. McGraw, Jr., Secretary-Treasurer.

The firm will also handle tires and all accessories. These gentlemen are well and favorably known throughout the county and will appreciate your patronage.

WORK GOES FORWARD ON NEW HEADING MILL

Work is going forward steadily on the plant of the new heading and stave mill that is being located in Columbiana by W. G. Nichols. The spur track to the plant has been completed so that material for building can be brought in with greater convenvience.

The plant is the largest of its kind ever to be located in this part of Alabama.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Miss Linnie Stone of Dargin is spending the week with Miss Thelma Lovett.

Homer Bearden of Birmingham spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Bearden.

The Alabama Power camp which has been in Harpersville for some time has now moved to another location.

IKE ELECTED

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

GOD BLESS OUR NATIVE LAND!

Mildred White Wallace

It is good that beauty and truth linger on forever; that bitterness lasts only a short while and then is—forgotten; that stars remain fixed and immovable, and the sun still shines.

The recent Presidential Election has centered world interest. Here we are this bright November morning, a nation composed of the most heterogenous elements: Protestants and Catholics, Jews and Gentiles, English, French, German, Irish, Italians, Scotch, with all their racial tradition, and their prejudices. In each of these are antagonistic elements. However, in all American hearts there lies a deep and abiding Patriotism, which when strongly united assures, happiness for all people thru all the years to be.

Now that MILLIONS of electors have expressed by their votes their Faith and Confidence in their chosen leader, General Ike Eisenhower, LOYALTY and UNITY are the most vitally important factors necessary to uphold him as he leads this Nation thru the chaos and tragic era thru which we are now passing. The people play a big part in statesmanship, as well as the men who sit behind carved mahogony desks and make the political appeals in marble halls, and if people are to progress, they must be united for a common cause. When "politics" descends to a mere materialistic selfish interest, danger becomes imminent. Elements creep into the battle that are disastrous—unless discarded immediately after the fight is over. We hope they will be dropped like an "old coat at the door"—and forgotten. Personal prejudice can play havoc with any program. Bitterness in one's heart can cause nothing but sorrow. In order for a people to make progress there must be a moral and a spiritual value which far transcends personal ambitious goals—class distinctions, wealth or geographic boundaries.

It has been said that the "true function of politicians and of policies is to find the common denominators upon which all ranks and kinds of people can cooperate. We all have to live together, and compromise is often the oil that lessens friction or can still the troubled waters. The most satisfactory solution for succesful political leadership is framework built on honor, truth, and the greatest good for the greatest number. These elements consistently point the way to higher ideals and there by deserve the laurel of successful statesmanship.

General Ike Eisenhower is the Skipper for the next four years, of all the people of the United States. He is OUR PRESIDENT. It is up to the PEOPLE who have made this signal mark of honor possible to prove the wisdom of their choice by extending full cooperation and unswerving loyalty to him and to his leadership.

PIANO RECITAL GIVEN AT THOMPSON BY MRS. DENNIS

An impromptu piano recital was given at Thompson, October 30, by Mrs. Lois Dennis, Head of the Music Department. Mrs. Dennis played the grand piano just purchased by the students of this school. Selections given by Mrs. Dennis were composers Beethoven, Chaminade, Chopin, Coward, and Massanet.

The students have chosen as their next project a curtain for the stage in the new auditorium.

Indoor planters at the entrance to the school are being arranged according to plans set up by a P. T. A. Committee, and other outdoor landscaping is being handled by the agriculture department under Charles A. Knowles.

FARMERS HOME ADMINISTRATION COOPERATES WITH SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT

Increased production, better homes, improved livestock and good pastures mark the progress of Shelby county farmers cooperating with the Farmer's Home Administration. To help farmers get the most from their land and their labor Soil Conservation plans are worked out along with the operation plans developed by the Farmers Home Administration Supervisor and the family concerned.

With the cooperation of the S. C. S. personnel assigned to work with the Conservation District in this county complete soil and water conservation plans are developed on each farm.

Eighty five per cent of the families cooperating with FHA have such a plan.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: Will Morgan hated Indians. They ambushed Ann Randall's family on the river, then they destroyed the settlement where lived Mary Bolden, his promised wife. Not knowing where Mary was, he went into the woods, searching, and killing savages at every opportunity. Later, he joined the scouts, learned he greatly resembled an Indian chief. Under a bold plan, he went into the Indian camps as a spy, impersonating the chief who—he later learned—held Mary prisoner. Getting the information needed, he flees with a captive white girl he discovers is Ann Randall, hoping to get the information to Gen. Wayne, but Ann is hurt.

CHAPTER XVIII

"There is. Let's have a look at that foot."

"I'm all right. Let it alone!"

Her protest went unheeded as he reached out and seized her ankle, removing the ragged bit of buckskin which had served as a moccasin. It was worn through completely, the briars and stones having torn the foot painfully where it had touched the ground.

He looked at her in frank dismay. "Why didn't you tell me? We could have repaired it before it got so bad."

Her lip quivered a little despite the stubborn set of her jaw. "I said I wouldn't hold you back. I'll keep going until I can't walk any more. After that you go on without me; it's important that you get through."

He regarded her sternly. "I suppose you didn't get us out of the village, eh? I suppose you haven't pulled your weight all the time? We're sticking it out together, Annie!"

Close Calls and No Sign of Escape Route

Picking up his rifle and the tiny remnant of food he remarked cheerfully, "Here we go. You take the lead and set the pace. We've got all summer."

She obeyed, knowing as well as he did that the last comment was ridiculous. The country was already alive with searchers and it would be just a question of time until some savage would stumble upon their trail. After that speed would be at a premium. "How much further do we have to go?" she asked as they moved off in their new alignment.

"Not far," he evaded.

"How far? I want to know."

"Fifty miles, maybe."

She stopped abruptly. "Then there's no use of fooling ourselves. I'll never make it. You go on now."

He shifted his bundle to the same hand in which he carried his rifle, stooping to lift her with his free arm. Swinging her across his shoulder like a sack of meal, he started on through the trees. "You're not stopping anywhere!" he said flatly. "You're coming with me if I have to carry you all the way to Fort Recovery . . . but I wish you didn't smell so much like an Indian if I have to have you alongside my nose all the time."

Surprisingly, she laughed. "You're a darned fool," she said, her voice not quite steady. "I'll walk."

Around noon they struck a watercourse which Will knew must be the upper Maumee. "Keep plugging," he urged her. "Somewhere along here we ought to find a place to hole up awhile."

They struggled upstream, watchful against surprise, and presently Will found what he wanted. A sizeable island loomed ahead, a few trees and bushes growing out of a wide patch of reeds. Keeping to the rocks so as to leave no tracks they worked out to the river's edge and entered the water, Will in the lead. Using the utmost caution and keeping to the overhanging bushes they slipped along until they were opposite the island. Then they took the gamble and struck out into open water. Ann had the food packet once more, Will having all he could do to keep rifle and powder dry while he swam.

A neck of open water gave them an entrance into the reeds where their passage would leave no marks and they hauled themselves through the black ooze to higher ground. As they rested from their exertions Ann smiled grimly, trying to forget the pain in her foot. "Well, that's another bath. Pretty soon maybe I won't smell so bad."

Will was almost too tired to smile but her effort demanded a reply. "Hope I didn't hurt your feelings. I'm no lily myself."

"So I noticed—but don't let it worry you."

They fell silent in some alarm as a call came from the bank which they had so recently left. The girl stared at Will in unspoken dread, her thoughts all too obvious. Had their trail been discovered?

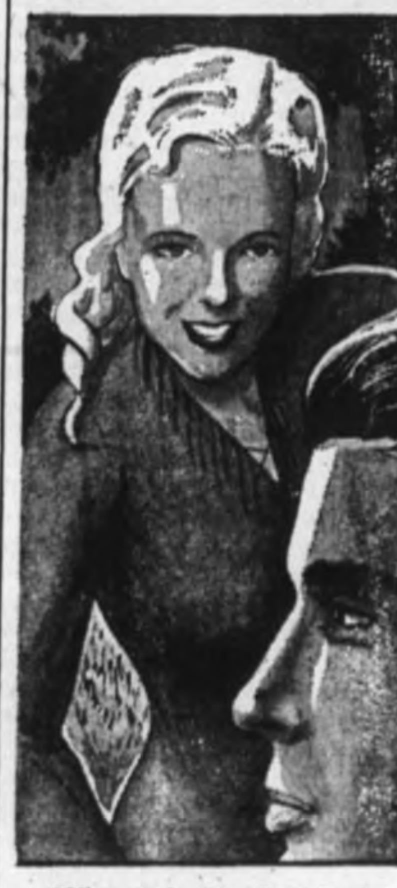
He motioned for her to remain where she was and made his way carefully to a spot from which he could observe the river bank. At once he saw that a considerable party of Indians had gone into camp directly opposite the island. They did not seem to be pursuers from the Miami towns but their presence there was a serious threat.

Morgan swore helplessly at the way he had trapped himself. He and his companion were cooped up on a ridiculous little island with thirty Miami warriors less than sixty yards away. Thirty-six hours of agonizing travel to be caught like this!

It did not take long to see that the Indians were Miamis returning from some sort of skirmish. Wounded braves were being aided by their companions while other warriors built a fire. Will studied the situation carefully, figuring the chances in case of discovery. He felt that he might be able to beat off an attack from across the water but he knew the Indians would simply wait for darkness. The only hope was to avoid detection.

He breathed more easily when the Indians showed no signs of interest in their surroundings. If they would just move on before word came of the fugitives all might be well. To his dismay, however, five of the younger braves took it into their heads to have a swim. They stayed close to the bank for some minutes but then a pair of them struck out for the island.

Morgan's rifle slid into position, its muzzle trained on the most venturesome swimmer. Any moment now the savage's eye would see the betraying marks. It would be his death warrant!



"Nice pool over there," she told him. "You'd better try it. I feel like a new woman."

Then a shout came from the Indian camp. Time to eat! Both warriors turned hastily and raced for shore. Will drew back his weapon, the palms of his hands moist. He had been reprieved for the moment. What would come next?

At Last, the Indians Move Down the Trail

Sneaking cautiously through the brush he returned to where Ann had removed the muddy moccasin from her ailing foot. Her glance was question enough and he told her what he had seen. "Nothing to do but keep quiet and hope," he shrugged. "How's the foot?"

For answer she extended it toward him. The bottom was inflamed and swollen and he wondered how she had ever managed to walk so far on it.

"Hurt much?" he asked.

"Not when I hold it up."

He considered briefly, then pointed to the western shore. "Look over there and see if you can't find clear water inside the fringe of reeds. Get the mud washed off and the sun ought to help a lot while we're resting. Keep down and don't make a sound. I'm going back to watch."

She nodded and crawled away. He went back to his observation post to watch the unhurried movements of the Indians. Several times his eyes almost stuck shut as the sun made him drowsy and he wondered if the savages intended to camp there all night. It would be mighty awkward if the alarm reached them or if some tracker followed the fugitives' trail.

The afternoon was well along when the warriors showed signs of leaving. Will's hopes began to rise but were shattered quickly as a hail came from downstream. He listened intently, trying to learn whether it was worth while attempting an escape to the opposite bank.

There was a parley and the entire force headed downstream, the runner with them. There were some anxious moments as Will feared they might range far enough from the river to find the trail which he had not tried to hide but they passed the danger spot without any alarb being given.

There was a light pressure against his leg and Ann whispered, "Have they gone?"

He slid backward to cover before turning. "They just went. We ought to be safe for a while now. We'll sleep until dark and push on."

He saw that she had been using her time to good purpose. She had scrubbed herself clean from head to foot, her rounded body showing white through the rents in the wet clothing which outlined it. Somehow she had managed to braid the golden hair, the result bearing out his earlier thought that Ann Randall had become a mighty pretty young woman.

"Primping already, eh?" he bantered. "We're a long way from civilization yet."

"Nice pool over there," she told him. "You'd better try it. I feel like a new woman."

"I'll just get muddy again," he grumbled—"but I'll give it a try. Rest that foot; we've got lots of ground to cover!"

He almost fled toward the far side of the island. Something about Ann Randall's eyes made him uneasy, almost fearful of what he might do. He had to remember that Mary was waiting somewhere for him to come after her. Such memories were not to be forgotten lightly.

The moon was high when Morgan awakened, startled at the valuable time which had been lost. He felt a quick annoyance that Ann had let him sleep but he saw that she too was paying the penalty of overexertion. He crawled across to where she had curled up beneath a budding willow, controlling himself with an effort as he touched the smooth curve of her shoulder. "Wake up, sleepy," he whispered. "Time to travel."

She sat up and reached for her bundle almost before her eyes were open. "Ready," she announced briefly.

They crossed to the edge of firm ground and she halted in vexation at sight of the mud they had wallowed through before. "I hate to think of all that mud again after the time I spent getting clean and dry," she complained.

Will grinned in the darkness. "I thought of that. Get out of your clothes and we'll lash 'em to these two logs I fastened together this afternoon. We'll dress after we swim 'em across. It'll be more comfortable to travel."

Ann's Injury Forces Fugitives to Hiding

She was peeling out of the dirty old buckskins even before he finished his explanation. In a twinkling two pale forms gleamed in the moonlight and Will started to load his narrow raft. "You'll have to help shove," he told her. "Push on that corner until we clear the reeds."

They toiled silently for several minutes, up to their hips in the soft ooze of the reed bed, and eventually their efforts were rewarded. The craft floated in deeper water and they paused to catch their breath. Ann worked her feet out of the clinging mud but lost her balance and fell against Will. For a moment he held her close, pulses pounding.

"I'm sorry," she stammered nervously. "I slipped."

He bent his head swiftly to kiss her. "I don't know which is worse"—he growled—"you or the Indians! It's bad enough to have scalpers on a man's trail . . . but I have to have things like this happen to me!"

He lifted her bodily from the mud and heaved her sprawling into the deep water. Deliberately he worked his own legs out of the clinging slime and moved slowly toward the raft. She swam with him, helping to push toward the east bank. "Do you always treat girls like that"—she asked—"kiss them and throw them away?"

"Don't talk. Swim!" he snapped angry at himself and at her for the incident. "We're not on a picnic!"

Daylight found them close to the Maumee headwaters and once more they cut away from the creek they had been following, striking across country toward the south. Their progress had been slow after the first hour, Ann's foot going lame almost as soon as she began to use it again. Will improvised a crutch for her and they made frequent stops but she was barely able to keep moving. Once he carried her on his back for some distance but the experiment was not successful. It was tiring, noisy and dangerous in that it left him almost helpless in the event of an ambush.

Their last bite of food was consumed at one of their rest stops, leaving them with the knowledge that they would go hungry for some time. A gunshot was out of the question and so was a fire.

Finally Ann could go no farther. She was barely touching her foot to the ground as she limped on her crutch, the lines of agony in her face telling their story even though she made no complaint. Will had been watching her helplessly for some time but when she went down he felt a flash of hope instead of surrender. The place seemed to be what he had been hunting.

A little ravine cut the ground before them, its banks almost completely screened by dense evergreens. A tiny brook flowed along through the rocks which lined its bottom, clumps of laurel adding to the shelter it offered. He picked her up despite her protest and carried her until they came upon a little nook which was completely hidden on all sides. Only the fact that he had stumbled under her weight disclosed it to him and he knew at once that it was a perfect hide-out.

"Take a rest," he said shortly. "I'll be back when I get our trail covered."

Just before dusk he glided softly into the recess where Ann was sleeping. Touching her lightly to awaken her he held out a beaded knapsack containing some stale corncake. "Sorry," he said in a strange voice. "This is the best I could do."

Getting Around with Mac Brown

Most people who are glad the election is over have just some general reasons, but I've got a special one. It will be another four years before all the experts and would-be experts on predicting elections will bother me again. It seemed that all of them somehow got around to me, asking how I was going to vote. I'm a truck driver and truck drivers are supposed to be fairly typical Americans.

To tell the truth, I'm always flattered when people call me an "Average American." I figure that makes me a pretty good Joe.

It's for sure that all of us who work around trucks ought to be somewhere near average, because there are so many of us. The trucking industry employs more Americans than any other business except farming. That should make us a powerful "bloc" in a political way, but that never seems to occur to anyone, not even the politicians. I'm just as glad it doesn't. Instead of being somebody special, I'd just as soon go on doing my job and being average. I think both are real important—keeping the trucks rolling and being an average Mr. John Citizen.

Armistice Day To Be Celebrated Nov· 11

All Alabama roads and air lines will lead to Birmingham Tuesday, November 11, when the city stages its sixth annual National Armistice Day celebration.

Sponsored by the eight nationaal veterans' organizations of the Birmingham district, the celebration is regarded in top military and defense circles in Washington as the nation's No. 1 Armistice Day observance.

Dedicated to the preservation of world peace, the program each year has been designed to lay stress on America's preparedness and will to strike back at any aggressive act anywhere in the world.

Raymond Weeks, Director of the observance for the sixth straight year, and his executive committee—made up of a number of business, civic and vteran leaders—believe that the 1952 program will reach a new peak of achievement.

The "world peace" luncheon in the Thomas Jefferson Hotel at noon November 11 will hear an address of major importance from the lips of Secretary of the Air, Thomas K. Finletter. It will be broadcast by radio to a nationwide audience over facilities of the Columbiana Broadcasting system, and the National Broadcasting Co. will televise the proceedings for its television newscast that evening and the next day.

The observance gets under way formally at 11 A. M. with a memorial service honoring Jefferson County's dead of all wars. It will be held in the First Methodist Church, under sponsorship of the Jefferson County Council of the American Legion. The Forty and Eight, honorary Legion organization, will handle the memorial ceremony.

Robert F. Carlisle as Chairman and C. Hewitt Pearce will represent the Forty and Eight, with C. Eugene Fowler, Jefferson County Legion president, representing the sponsoring group. Lonnie H. Teele of the American Legion will also serve.

That same morning, the U. S. Navy Air Station at Municipal Airport will hold "open house" at its headquarters on 50th St. No. with Captain Paul Gillespie Commanding. The public is invited to view the various aircraft exhibits from 9 A. M. to noon that day.

Also during the moning, between 9:30 A. M. and 10:30 A. M. the naval air station will feature an appearance of the "Blue Angels," a team of famous acrobatic flyers in jet planes at Municipal Airport, in a series of daring serial maneuvers. The U. S. Air Force will also participate in maneuvers. Maj. Gen. C. E. Thomas, Commander, 14th Air Force, Robbins Air Force Base, Georgia is coordinating all Air Force activities.

Good Morning

Milton Bird

Lt. John L. Cates
Fort Knox, Kentucky

Dear Johnie:

I went out to your house today. I parked in front and looked at the mountain. The pastures were clean on both sides of the creek, and the cows were busy as bees in a jug. I used to stop and talk with your grandmother, About things like geese, and the way they kept grass out of her garden and patches.

But the mountain was the thing today. Every tree up there had on a sassy Saint Joseph's Coat. And they danced riotously in a brisk October wind. I followed the wind with my eyes all the way from the back of Mr. Edd Smith's pasture to Mrs. Tilla Holcomb's house. Fitful gusts of it that rustled a trillion leaves in a breathless fashion.

I stayed as long as I could and then came back to the office. I went in to see your grandmother and everything is fine out there. She's a fine lady, with her bright happy eyes and her friendly smile. She will send you a hundred little goodies, in pretty boxes, all along. But I think she would really like to send a little piece of the mountain—where an elm mixes with a pine maybe, or an oak and sweetgum wrestle with the wind.

SN Bernard R. Stokes
San Francisco, California

Dear Fellows:

Your mother was down town today wearing the sassiest hat on Main. And a smile that reached out and twisted my heart. She was so happy I thought maybe I was selling wedding flowers instead of stamps.

And L was happy too. You see, I had watched her for months, waiting for letters from far off war-torn places. She would laugh with her lips and pray with her eyes, and every day I would decide all over again that she was the bravest soldier I knew.

Then your letters came, from San Francisco, and the sassy little he send the two bucks to tide you knew was suddenly the happiest lady I know.

Pvt. Ralph S. Hunt III
Camp Breckenridge, Virginia

Dear Ralph:

We had home coming up at the far turn this week. A lot of the old guys and gals were back for the banquet. At the ball game afterward the kids put on a whale of a show. They are really coming along. I don't think I ever saw a bunch of guys come so far in a few weeks. I can't wait until next year and the year after to see them. A lot of these guys around who are dancing a victory dance this year will be crying in their green spots next year.

The band paraded at the half. I wish there had been a band when I was up there. Instead of getting bounced around by Simon and Buck and Clayton, I could have been marching with pretty girls like Nancy Harrison and Shirley Sims and Bunny Crawford. Or maybe I could have helped Jean Evans tote that flag. Or even marched up front with Merle Meyers. Or back in the clarionet section with Betty Hatchett and Helen Harrison and Jax Francis Falkner.

It was a great night. All the kids were laughing at the weather. They were dressed in just enough clothes to keep from being talked about. And all us old folks were bundled up in everything out of the closet, fighting for our lives against a hord of eskimoes spread out all the way from the canning plant to the old peach orchard.

I hear you are taking in washing now. It'll be great fun when the weather gets down around zero. I used to hang out my long underwear pants and then have them walk in the bay thirty minutes later, stiff as a dark alley drunk, looking for a guy named Bird.

Your mother comes down to see me every afternoon. She helps me look for your letter, and is pretty let-down when one doesn't show. I see your Pop every day too. Did he send the two bucks to tide you over till payday? If he didn't let me know, and I'll take my storeboughts to some other guy and have them whittled next time.

INCREASING YIELDS OF CRIMSON CLOVER SEED

An application of boron increases crimson clover seed yields on many Alabama soils, especially on the lighter types.

In tests conducted on 10 areas, J. C. Lowery, API Extension agronomist, said that crimson clover seed production was increased an average of 259 pounds of seed per acre by use of boron.

Lowery added that on loamy sand at the API Experiment Station, crimson clover seed production almost completely failed when boron was not used. On the other hand, use of boron increased seed yield per acre 760 pounds.

"Therefore, if crimson clover is being grown primarily for seed production, it is desirable to include boron in the fertilizer," stated the specialist. "Farmers are reminded, however, that boron is not a material recommended for all plants."

COOLING MILK

The season is here when some milk producers think that it is not necessary to cool milk. But all milk should be cooled promptly throughout the fall and winter months.

PLANT OATS

It is still time to plant oats for some grazing and a good hay or grain crop next spring. All farmers who have livestock will need oats. The oats should be seeded at the rate of 2 to 2½ bushels per acre and fertilized at the rate of 300 to 400 pounds 6-8-4 per acre. If oats are to be grazed they should be top dressed as soon as they come to a stand with 100 pounds of ammonium nitrate per acre.

PLANT VETCH AND CRIMSON CLOVER

Vetch and crimson clover should be planted on every acre of cropland that can be turned next spring after a satisfactory growth.

These crops prevent erosion, add humus and nitrogen that is so badly needed on most all land. These crops should be planted as early as you can now so you will get a fair cover before the winter rains. A good crop of vetch or crimson clover turned next spring will double the yield on the average acreage.

THE COLD GRAY DAWN OF THE MORNING AFTER

Holding an all night vigil Tuesday, marked the end of one of the most colorful campaigns in the history of this nation. Both Republicans and Democrats fought long and hard for the honor of copping the presidency and vice-presidency of this country. The people have spoken, "the captains and the kings" have departed. The stage on which the battle was fought, is deserted. We hope, no bitterness remains in the hearts of any loyal American. We should all now fully cooperate with the "chosen ones" and look forward to a brighter Tomorrow.

Everyone we have met this morning on the Main Stem is a bit "sleepy-eyed" but, apparently, jubilant or reconciled!

Naturally, we who remained loyal to our party and to its nominees fought for their election. For this endeavor, we have no apology to make. We proudly took our stand by the side of brilliant Adlai Stevenson and Alabama's own John Sparkman, but, the people have spoken, and, as in many battles won and lost in years gone by, we are not at all "down and out" over the results.

We offer sincere congratulations to the winners, General Ike Eisenhower, a distinguished American, and to Senator Dick Nixon. We hope the United States will unite behind these two leaders, and that the General will be as successful in his battle for Peace in this country, as he has been on the battlefieds abroad.

"MR. BOB" CALLS

No one is ever more sincerely welcomed in our official quarters than R. E. Bowdon Sr (Mister Bob), our life long friend from Calera. Hence, last Thusday, during his visit in Columbiana, the chat we had made the day a memorable one.

. . . That ditch digger you saw slowly plying its way thru Main Street Monday morning was on its way to prepare the earth for the new gas pipe line, soon to bring this much needed commodity into Columbiana.

. . . Saturday is an "off day" for most folk in our business. The boys close up at noon, but always leave instructions with us to "have the copy on my desk early Monday morning, so you will not delay matters"! So, on Saturday afternoon, we begin looking about for news, and enjoy our Saturday callers. If we had closed our little office last Saturday, we would have missed seeing Mrs. W. C. Blackerby, her daughter, Mrs. Salser, and that adorable four month old manikin, Kenneth Bruce Salser, who is proudly showing his first tooth! Smart little fellow, and one we are going to watch as he grows up. Not many babettes have a tooth at four months old! And whats more—Kenneth Bruce admired our Cocker Spaniel 'Rusty'—and this shows he is a little gentleman with a love for dogs, and thats another tie that will bind us.

MULLINS BROTHERS

The above caption may some day decorate Main Street Commercial Circles, for Ross Bob Jr. and Jimmy Mullins were out bright and early November 1st, following a raid down town by Ghosts and Hob-Goblins on the windows of the business firms on Halloween Night, and with water, brush, and energy, they offered to "clean your windows for you". Thats iniative I like to see developing. Naturally, these two town boys got the job, and did a swell one, too, and left with cash jingling in their jeans for their efforts.

HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUBS ON TOUR

We sincerely appreciate the gracious invitation to join the Home Demonstration Club members when they make their tour of homes in the county on November 13, as a part of their Achievement Day Program.

The day's activities begins at 9:30 A. M. at the Conrad Fowler home in Columbiana. The second pause in this busy day, will be held in the attractively arranged kitchen in the Barney Isbell home, then on to the P. A. Garrett home in West Calera; the John Sample and Sam Knowles homes, Spring Creek-Valley Grove with luncheon and a short program at the Spring Creek Presbyterian Church. Then, this congenial group will visit the Albert Scott home and the last stop will be made at the W. A. Jones remodelled home in Ebenezer, where Tea will be served.

. . . Thanks to Eric Samons of Calera Rt. 2 for lining up with this county-wide paper which covers the news happenings in Shelby County each week. Read his classified ad in this issue of the paper, if you are looking for a "good buy".

. . . We enjoyed seeing Mrs. Jemima Kendrick from Chelsea Rt., Friday during her visit in Columbiana, and appreciated her renewal subscription to the "Home Paper" which she says, she enjoys reading each week. Mrs. Kendrick told us the Reporter-Democrat was on her "must take" list and this is always 'good news' to those of us plying the penpoint each week. (Thanks a million, Lady!)

. . . O. E. Mayo, who formerly resided in Shelby County has moved to Gardendale, Alabama, but before leaving, he ordered the county paper sent him, which we gladly do beginning this very week, and thank him for the privilege of "following our folks", no matter where they go thru the columns of this paper each week.

. . . Mrs. C. W. McQueen is our Mt. Era correspondent and representative in her section of the county, and will be glad to take your subscriptions to this paper. For news items of interest, contact Mrs. McQueen. She is doing a splendid piece of work in this interesting community.

. . . Waylon Davis, of the U. S. Navy, is now stationed in far away Japan and writes us to send him the news from home while he is in this foreign land. Naturally, Waylon wants the "Home Paper". So, here we come across land and sea to greet him. We always think of Capt. Vertnor Barnett, when we think of our boys in Japan. Vertnor told us that on his first "flying mission" he tucked the "Home Paper" under his arm and dropped it in the heart of Japan (Tokyo, to be exact). We have often wondered what those Japs thought when they found it and attempted to decipher it. This little old paper has travelled many a mile keeping up with "our boys" while away from home, and we, somehow, enjoy writing more, when we know these brave representatives of ours join in our weekly reading circle. It somehow brings us closer together. Waylon's address is as follows: Elford W. Davis S. A., U. S. Naval Air Facility, Navy No. 955 care of Fleet P. O., San Francisco, California. Now, all you High School students, who knew Waylon, sit right down and write him some letters telling him about news from his former classmates. Know he will enjoy it.

. . . Pvt. Charles R. Spearman has been assigned an instructor's position at Camp Gordon, and he and Sue will remain there where both have made a host of frineds. Sue has a splendid secretarial job with the Dupont Company while soldier-man Charles attends to his military assignment.

. . . Mrs. A. E. Norwood and Mrs. Carl Hokanson of Calera, were the attractive ladies you saw Friday in my office. We still want that bright red stole Lady Norwood so jauntily wore.

. . . Regret we did not have the pleasure of a chat with our good friend O. M. Cleveland, of Washington, D. C., who spent a few days with his mother, Mrs. Walter F. Cleveland in Wilton last week. Always a disappointment, when we fail to see "Buddy"!

. . . The many friends of Mrs. Alice Carlisle are busily engaged this week in extending her a warm welcome "back home". Mrs. Carlisle now resides in Louisville, Kentucky, but says she still feels "more at home in Columbiana, than anywhere else in all the world". She came home to cast her ballot for Stevenson-Sparkman, and to gladden the hearts of her friends on Main and thats what we call loyalty worth plenty of personal mention.

. . . Attorney Nelson Fuller of Centerville, was a distinguished visitor in Columbiana Thusday. We appreciate his personal call in our office. We enjoyed hearing this "Democrat" (the true, blue kind) tell us of his hopes for our victory on November 4. Naturally, when you read this, the final verdict will have been rendered by Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public, but, it will be a long time before this colorful race for the presidency is forgotten. It made history in more directions than any other we remember!

GIFT DEADLINE FOR KOREA

If you are thinking of sending a gift to Korea for that tired soldier man, who would give "everything" (according to a letter), to be back home for the Yuletide season, better get the package, according to regulations, in the P. O. by November 15, if he is to receive it in time to join in the Christmas Spirit, whatever kind of a spirit could be revived 'over there'. The airmail dead line is a bit later, but more expensive and you can't send but two pounds.

For regular parcel post you are allowed up to 70 pounds, provided the length plus the distance around the middle is not more than 100 inches.

Forget him not! Whatever else you might do!

Some time ago, the troops from U. S. A. were polled to find out what they most wanted for Christmas. On top of the list were 'photos from the girl friend or the folks at home! After that came food, candy, paper backed books, toilet articles, flashlights, envelopes and small cameras with plenty of film. A few wistful and apparently forgotten soldiers wrote, one word, and that was MAIL FROM HOME!

Surely, we who are here enjoying the comforts of a peace and security, at least for the time being, could and should be more thoughtful of these courageous lads, who, thru no choosing on their part, were sent to keep the torch of fredom burning over here! Let me urge you again, if you have a loved one away from home, especially at the Christmas Season, see that he gets plenty of remembrances that say.... you 'love him'.

HOB-GOBLINS DID SOME GOOD ON THEIR ROUNDS

Those roaming Hob-Goblins prowling around town last Thursday night thought they were pulling some fine stunts when they soaped up all the windows, and placed "I Like Ike" signs in the Stevenson-Sparkman places of businesses, but from the looks of the spic and span shining windows this morning, we believe they did some good after all. Know they did, as far as our windows were concerned. We can now see everybody who passes and tell who they are.

NOVEMBER BIRTHDAYS

November 1, was candle puffing time in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Luck, when Mr. Luck made a wish on his birthday cake, and then puffed out the candles! In the home of Gwendolyn Farr, there was much merriment, due to the passing of her birthday anniversary, and Tony Lyon was the honoree in his home on this, the first day of November.

Grace Sims Crawford had a birthday November 2. Know that brave Jet-Pilot husband of hers, now in far away Pacific, somewhere, wishes he could have been here in person to wish for her "all thats gloriously bright and happy" thru all the years to be. And all their friends join her in hoping James will soon be sent back to the good old U. S. A. where they can resume their all too short "honeymoon".

Margaret Moore, who is a popular member of the High School contingent and a talented musician, had a lot of good wishes sent her way on November 3.

November 6, seems to have been a popular day for Dr. Stork, for four birthdays are listed for this date—namely, David Finn, Robert Kirkland, Amy Armstrong and Ricky McDow.

November 7, Mrs. W. W. Carter shares the day with the enthusiastic boosters of the Wildcats of Shelby Hi, who will pit their brains and brawn against Pell City here on our own athletic field.

Saturday, Sam Roberts, Deborah Lee Battle, Morris Seale, Jr., Myra Holcombe and Eleanor Spearman will be having their traditional birthday cakes.

Happy Birthday Everybody!

. . . County wide friends of Luther Fowler will be glad to learn he is convalescing satisfactorily at South Highlands. We know of few men in Shelby county so richly blessed with friends who daily inquire about him. He is being sincerely "missed" everywhere! Here's hoping news that he is "home again and on the road to get-well-again" may soon be possible to pass on to our readers.

. . . Mr. and Ms. H. A. Miller (Curly and Allie) of Tuscaloosa, were home for the big day, Tuesday. So glad to have had a little curbstone chat with these old friends.

HOME-TOWNERS MEET ON OKINAWA

It was a happy reunion last week when Lt. Jerry and Marie Shogren contacted Capt. James Crawford somewhere on Okinawa, and had dinner together. Marie writes her mother, Mrs. Lonnie Brown, that questions and answers flew across the dinner table at such a rapid rate, that there was little time for "eating". Marie expressed regret that John Lewis Bolton, at the last minute, had to cancel his engagement for the meeting.

So good to know these "home-towners" can get together. Somehow I feel better about all of them, for there is no tie stronger than the one that binds Shelby county folk together, no matter where they come or go.

MR. J. L. LANSFORD SPEAKS

Coming from the Courthouse Tuesday where J. L. Lansford, formerly of Winston county, now a resident of Shelby county, whose age number nears the three score and ten mark, spoke as follows: "I have just cast my vote for Stevenson-Sparkman, and proudly, too". Someone remarked that he formerly resided in the far-famed Republican County of Winston. Mr. Lansford replied—"I may have lived there, but.... Brother, I have never allowed an Elephant's Snout to twine around my neck, nor have I ever failed to support my Party and its nominee."

And thats the kind of a true-blue Democrat we like to hear "speak his piece".

. . . Mrs. James Crawford was called to St. Petersburg, Florida Tuesday, due to the critical illness of her brother-in-law, Mr. Becker, who, with Mrs. Becker visited the Crawfords in Columbiana in September.
friends.

. . . Mrs. Bob Foster and Mrs. Woodrow Elliott spent Monday in Sylacauga.

. . . Elvin Davis, crack announcer for Television WAFM and WAPI, with offices in the Magic City, left his radio activities long enough to come to his old home town, and cast his vote, according to the loyalty he has always felt toward the Democratic Party. This statement also goes for Donald Falkner who resides in Birmingham, but heard the call of his chosen Party, and came "home to vote". And the gentleman you saw working hard all day for his chosen Party, and the chosen nominees, Stevenson-Sparkman, was none other than Tom Taylor, who drove down for the big event.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Garvin Baker spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Baker in Columbia, South Carolina.

. . . From Montgomery, we saw Mrs. Dixie Shealey, who has never failed to return to Columbiana and "vote straight". Mrs. Shealey is the only "Lady Tax Collector" the county has ever had, and is now an efficient secretary in the State Education Department in the Capitol City. It was good to have these friends come by and visit with us during their sojourn on Main.

. . . Regret to report that Mrs. H. H. Bearden is ill in an hospital in Birmingham.

IMPORTANT MEETING CALLED FOR MONDAY NIGHT

May I call your attention to the important meeting of the Tree Club which is scheduled for Monday night, November 10? Dr. York, State Superintendent of Parks will be guest speaker, and this well known authority on landscaping should be a most interesting guest.

Myrtle Miles has been the moving factor in promoting this definitely needed civic improvement for our town, and with Mr. Jimmy Harrison's full cooperation and timely assistance, much progress has been made. The full participation of every citizen is needed to make the "dream for a more beautiful town" come true—and the call is made for every resident in Columbiana to be present Monday night. Won't you join in this worthwhile project and lend your personal interest toward making it a successful achievement?

. . . Mrs. Ila Gordon of Birmingham, widely popular in Columbiana, visited Mrs. Gray Goodwin, Wednesday. We appreciate their call in our office this morning. A dedicated break from the set routine, and we enjoyed their bright and breezy chatter. Always good to greet old friends.

. . . Mrs. E. A. Baker of Sylacauga is one of our most loyal subscribers. She is the mother of Mrs. Bob Foster, and says she always feels she has had a visit with loved ones and home folk, when the Reporter-Democrat arrives. We are delighted to receive her subscription for 1952-53 which came today.

A. D. WILSON RETURNS TO COLUMBIANA

Phones began ringing a warm welcome when the news reached Columbiana Sunday night, and friends of the Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Wilson and Fay Wilson, learned that the Methodist Conference had assigned the friendly minister back to the Columbiana Church for another year.

The Wilson's have a host of friends and they are not restricted to the church membership he serves. We have heard many people say this morning—"I am so glad Brother Wilson and his family are not going to leave us", and thats the way Columbiana people feel toward this splendid family, who has meant so much to all the people in this town since they came here three years ago.

We jouously join them in extending a warm welcome "back home to the Wilsons".

. . . J. B. Turner really got the "glad hand" Monday morning when this immaculately groomed gentleman came down town for the first time in several weeks and chatted with his friends who have missed him since his illness prevented his accustomed stroll "up and down Main". It was good to join in the chorus of "so glad to see you out again."

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Elliott attended the Bird Show in Birmingham, Sunday.

Soil Conservation Service Photo

Farmers using well fertilized, adapted grasses and legumes as forage crops and using cattle to harvest them are conservation-wise and, usually, "district" coperators.

Steps To Become District Cooperator

When it becomes obvious to a farmer that he needs a better system of saving and rebuilding his soil, he begins to look for that system. Often he reads or hears about the work of the North Central Soil Conservation District and assistance of government specialists available to cooperating members of the district. He may not know how to obtain this help.

In Shelby County his first step is to see F. E. Williams, the district supervisor in Columbiana, or B. F. Hatchett or George Starcher, S. C. S. men having offices in the "Old Courthouse" in the P. M. A. offices.

He will be asked to describe and locate his farm, and sign an application for assistance.

His farm will be outlined on aerial photographs and unless it happens to be an area formerly supervised for soil types and erosion, etc., there will be a few days or weeks delay until soils scientist Kelly, (serving five counties) can visit the farm and make the soils map.

When this is done, enlarged photographs of the applicant's farm will be secured by Mr. Hatchett.

Then Mr. Hatchett will go over the farm with the owner or operator, suggest proper land use in line with the farmer's own desires.

Together they will work out a five year (or longer) program; a conservation farm plan.

A short time later, he will be given a detailed plan in a convenient form, including (1) an outline map of fields and roads, (2) a copy of the aerial photograph with soils that can be handled alike, colored distinctive colors and (3) detailed recommendations for planting, fertilizing and maintaining crops, handling water, and other problems.

And, finally, the District and the Conservation service will be ready to assist with any of these problems that require technical help such as making surveys for dams or drainage ditches, terraces or meadows. When specially difficult or unsuual problems are to be met the local S. C. S. men can call upon highly trained agronomists, engineers, and soil specialists to come in and help.

These services are offered to cooperators at no charge to the farmers cooperating with the district in the effort to save our natural resources.

NUTRITIOUS RAISINS SATISFY YOUNGSTERS

Raisins have long been recommended as wholesome sweets for children because they are high enough in natural fruit sugar to satisfy any young sweet tooth.

"Also," says Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, "they offer iron, other minerals, and B-vitamins."

She adds that seedless raisins are produced in largest quantity, generally sell at most reasonable prices, and are convenient to use because they are easily handled and measured and are small in size.

Moulton was named in honor of a Lt. Moulton, a hero of the campaigns against the Creeks.

SOIL

CONSERVATION IS OUR FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE!

We Salute the North Central Soil Conservation District Supervisors for their untiring efforts in assisting the farmers of Shelby County.

FOOD, FABRIC, AND NATIONAL SECURITY DEPEND ON OUR TOP SOIL!

It cannot be repeated too often that all that stands between the people of America and starvation and utter poverty is the few inches of fertile top soil on our farm lands. Millions of tons a year of that precious soil is lost, blown away or washed down rivers. China today is a classic example of a country whose farms are ruined by loss of topsoil. To help conserve this priceless resource every farmer should give every effort possible to do his part.

IN WHICH SEEDBED WILL GRASS "CATCH" BEST?

Much of the seed dropped in a lumpy seedbed like this is buried too deep or bunched in dry air pockets and never germinates. Seed is wasted and you get a poor stand.

Seed sown with a Brillion Sure-Stand Grass Seeder is placed in the top ½ in. of a well-prepared seedbed where it germinates quickly. You get a sure stand without seed waste.

Get a good stand of grass with a Brillion Sure-Stand Seeder

A field may be rich in plant food, and hold tons of moisture . . . yet, if it is not properly prepared, the tiny grass seeds sown on it starve to death entirely out of reach of either plant food or moisture.

That's why the Brillion Sure-Stand Seeder, the 5'4" as illustrated, an 8', or the large 10'8", gets a better stand. It combines final soil preparation with almost precision seeding . . . in one operation.

The Brillion Sure-Stand Seeder pulverizes, seeds and firms the ground all in one operation across the field . . . saves time . . . saves labor . . . saves tractor fuel . . . gets a better stand.

Soil Conservation District Week Being Observed

District Supervisors Offer New Crops For Soil Conservation

In the few years the North Central Soil Conservation District has been in existence, the Supervisors have introduced into Shelby County this list of valuable new crops:

Kudzu 23: A new S. C. S. variety of Kudzu that has smaller, thicker leaves, shorter internodes (joints), roots more readily and makes a geat many more vines from every plant. From Crowns only.

Ky. 31 Fescue: Thousands of acres of this valuable perrennial grass are planted now in our county after being introduced by the supervisors in 1947 on F. E. Williams' farm and T. H. Eastis' farm. Eastis planted 1 acre 1947, 1½ acres 1948, 14 acres 1949, 16 acres 1950, and 30 acres 1951, showing he realized its value to him.

Button Clover: A gradual increase in acreage of button clover has been evident over the 5 years since it was brought in by the district supervisors. Its future looks bright even if its use has not increased as fast as expected.

Coastal Bermuda: Capable of making 7.8 tons per acre of hay, this hybrid bermuda is making its appearance on farms of several cooperators and works with Chapel Hill Rescue and various winter legumes. Planted from stolons only.

Chapel Hill Rescue: Newest and most promising reseeding grass for use in winter grazing and spring hay combination.

"Alabama" Reseeding Crimson Clover: Developed at Thorsby by S. C. S. plant breeders, it is said to extend the grazing period of Crimson Clover.

Arlington Sericea: An S. C. S. strain notables for finer, more palatable growth, and better hay.

Bicolor Lespedeza: Supervisors obtain part of their operating funds from sale of this seed collected over the district. Seed and plants are furnished free to cooperators and F. F. A. Chapters by the supervisors and State Conservation Departments working together to increase wildlife food supplies.

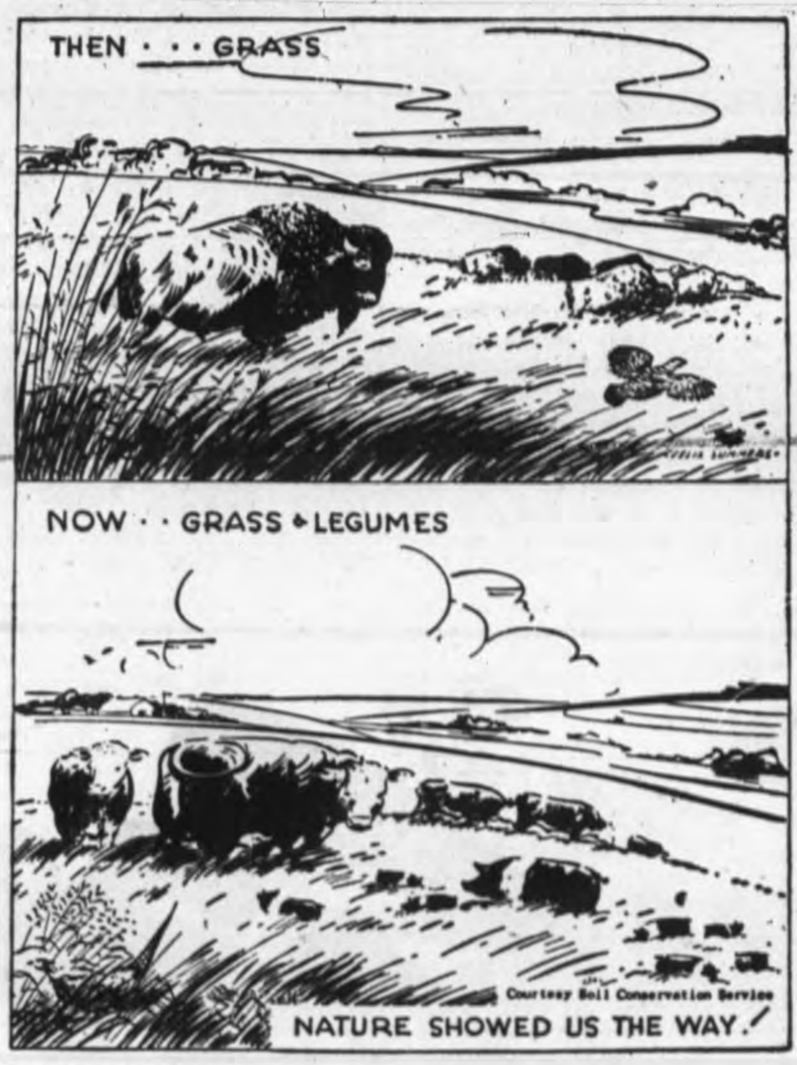
Ball Clover: Over a million of the seed of this excellent reseeding white clover are in each pound, yet it has produced a harvest of 300 pounds per acre. On Shelby farms outgrows crimson clover. Looks good for bees ,too.

Grandiflora Vetch and Multiflora rose are being tried in the county. The vetch is best of all vetches, but difficult to harvest. The rose is used in some areas for lining fence, is on trial here.

The district has the privilege of choosing newly developed plants and using those most suited to local needs. In this way the farmers get to try newest crops at little cost and decide for themselves what further use is to be made of them.

Farmer demand for Chapel Hill Rescue grass, for instance, has joumped county acreage from 30 acres in the 1951-52 winter to over 1000 acres planted this fall.

The district supervisors will continue to be alert for new conservation crops and methods and place them on trial



Future Farmers Like District

Elvin Hill

For about 7 years it has been my pleasure to teach Shelby farm youth and guide them in activities of their Columbiana Chapter of "Future Farmers Of America."

Many of these boys are now actively farming, and on their parental farms, others are carrying on projects closely related to soil conservation and farm improvement.

During these years I have received valuable cooperation from various supervisors of the North Central Soil Conservation District.

The district has always been ready to provide us with literature and other materials to be used as teaching aids. Numerous motion picture films have been furnished us.

Cooperation didn't stop with this, though. Over the years the supervisors have sponsored many tours and demonstrations for our classes and the F. F. A. group.

Plants and seeds have been secured for wildlife plantings for introductory plantings of new crops, and similar work.

Our most successful club project from financial and educational view points, the Chapel Hill Rescue grass seed patch, was made possible by the loan of seed by the district supervisors at the request of Shelby County Supervisor F. E. Williams, and their assisting agency, the Soil Conservation Service.

At this time when statewide attention is being directed toward the district's service to adult farmers we think it an appropriate time to express our appreciation for the district supervisors interest in the F. F. A. and other educational groups.

Sam Dale, the famed Indian fighter and hero of The Canoe Fight, was the first tax collector of Monroe County. Another well known figure of Alabama's frontier days who lived in the county at one time was the illustrious Creek chief, iWlliam Weatherford.

Alexander McGillivray, who spent most of his life in Alabama, was at one time known as the Emperor of two Indian tribes- the Creeks and the Seminoles.

The Choctaw name for the Noxubee River that flows near Gain ville, Nasshobi, has been interpr ted to mean 'stinking water'.

Soil Conservation
FOR YOUR FARM LANDS

Soil Conservation District Week
NOVEMBER 2-8

FARMERS, LIKE BANKERS, must conserve their resources if they are to keep in top condition for peak production. Good soil is the best resource a farmer has . . . it must be kept on the farm and in shape to produce crops.

"Soil Conservation" is not just a fancy word. It is the use of good farming practices on our farm lands. Terracing to prevent washing away, cover crops to keep the soil from blowing away. Proper use of fertilizers for healthy top soil. Wise conservation practices will hold our soil for our children.

Consult your soil conservation workers and other agricultural agencies.

SOIL CONSERVATION . . . A Never-Ending Battle That Has Just Begun

EVERY AMERICAN has his future at stake in the fight to save our soil. Without the rich blanket of topsoil covering our nation, we could not hope to fight a victorious war or live in prosperity and peace. The soil is our richest natural resource and the only one that we can conserve indefinitely. But it's a never-ending struggle.

The plans of every good-farming community will look to the saving of productive soil—to the control of erosion—to the sensible, modern practice of farming on the contour.

In soil conservation, in farming on the contour, Farmall and the Farmall System of Farming lead the way. Farmall is first in modern farming. Look to Farmall for leadership in the great power-farming developments to come.

The funeral of H. H. Stoudemire was held from the Baptist Church in Wilsonville Sunday afternoon, the Rev. Luther Gaines, officiating.

The Culture Club wishes to thank the Palace Theatre and the Reporter and all others who assisted in making the benefit picture a success. The funds derived from this picture presentation will be donated to the scholarship fund for some young girl to attend Snead Seminary.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gordon and their two sons, A. D. and Harris Milton Gordon, Mrs. W. L. Christian and Fred Harrison attended the Football game at the University Home Coming Saturday.

Felton Goodwin and E. B. Turner of Auburn spent the week end with home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. Garvin Baker and Miss Lena Cox visited in Calera, Sunday.

Miss Minnie Peebles Johnston of Montevallo has won the Atwater Kent Radio Contest in Auburn.

Ray Heaslet and J. W. Letson Jr., members of the Boy Scouts, were speakers at the Exchange Club meeting this week.

Rev. and Mrs. T. K. Roberts and Rev. Guy Wallace left Tuesday to attend the Methodist Conference in Tuscumbia.

When a woman calls down, "I'll be ready in a minute," there's only one thing you can be sure of: She speaks English.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the many acts of kindness, messages of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings received from our many friends, relatives and neighbors in the loss of our dearly beloved husband and father, Jeff D. Armstrong. We also thank Dr. James Crawford and Walton-Bolton Funeral Home for their kind service.

We especially wish to thank Rev. Louis Brasher and Rev. Clyde Deal for their sweet words of prayer and consolation.

U. S. CASUALTIES JUMP TO 123,395

American battle casualties in Korea totaled 123,395, a jump of 1,278 over last week's report, according to an announcement by the Defense Department.

This is the largest weekly increase since November 1951.

The total number of deaths since the Korean struggle began totals 21,471; 89263 wounded; 9,402 missing; 1,868 captured and 1,390 previously missing but have returned to military service.

DIPTHERIA IN ALABAMA

Fifteen were recorded for the week ending October 4. South Carolina was second with 14.

Another State Health Department report disclosed that Alabama's polio mark for the year had shoved past the 250 mark.

Six new cases were listed for the week, bringing the 1952 total to date to 251.

ALABASTER

Pamella Joyce Smith was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith Jr. of 3901 - 38th Avenue North, Birmingham, Alabama, on August 18, 1952 at the Jefferson Hospital in Birmingham, at 9:10 P. M. She was entered into the Cradle Roll at the Assembly of God, of Alabaster on September 14, 1952.

Mrs. W. A. Smith, Jr., is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Arnett of Maylene. Mrs. Smith is a graduate of Thompson High School.

Blue-Gray headquarters spokesmen say "advance indications point to an early sell-out." The game is held at Crampton Bowl, which seats 22,500.

WRECKERS CLASSIFIED AS TRUCKS

Reversing an earlier decision, Atty. Gen. Si Garrett has ruled that wreckers should be classified as trucks, and are not eligible for Alabama's now $3 passenger car tags.

A previous opinion from the attorney general's office permitted the wreckers to use a passenger car license.

In another ruling, Garrett said cities that have increased their population, especially by extending the city limits, can't use special census figures as a basis for receiving state tax revenue distributed on a population basis. Garrett held that such funds be allocated on the basis of the last regular census.

SGT. O'GWYNN ADDRESSES 4-H COUNCIL MEMBERS

"The Pedestrian is usually at fault when an accident occurs," warned Sgt. Charles E. O'gwynn, at The 4-H Council Meeting Saturday.

He also emphasized, "The pedestrian should carry a light or at least a white handkerchief in his hand when he walks on the highway at night. Always walk on the left side of the road facing oncoming traffic. Be sure the road or street is clear before crossing."

Sgt. O'gwynn also showed a picture on Highway Safety.

Thirty-five 4-Hers and Adult Leaders from 17 4-H Clubs were present. Preliminary plans were made for The Annual Rally to be held on Friday, April 10, the clubs. Adult Leaders will be recognized the first week in March, during National 4-H Week. National 4-H Achievement Day will be observed in clubs on Saturday November 8 by (a) an outstanding project story from each club for the newspaper; (b) window exhibit of 4-H project in store windows with 4-H flags and banners prominently displayed and (c) Tours of good projects.

W. M. Clark talked to the group on "Being A Good 4-H Officer," and Elizabeth Collins directed the singing, accompanied by Mrs. Coy Stone at the piano.

After refreshments the girls and Leaders were trained to give the November and December demonstrations "Toys For Tots" and "Sandra Makes Fudge."

During the war years there was a familiar slogan, "The difficult we do immediately. The impossible a litle longer." Shucks, the motto on my desk says, "The difficult we put off until tomorrow. The impossible we don't fool around with at all".

YESTERDAY'S NEWS IS DEAD

Yesterday's news is dead, and so is the election news, as far as this scribe is concerned. Many letters have been received attempting to 'explain why General Ike received such an over whelming vote'. We never attempt an analysis of a political race, after it is over!

The fact is, millions of folk hitched their hopes to 'five stars' on the General's coat, instead of the one star accredited to the 'wagon and the star story'. As stated before, General Ike is now our president-elect, and the sooner this political battle is over, and done with, the sooner this nation will revert to the 'calm that follows the storm". Only then can a correct measurement be taken of the result of November 4's historic landslide.

One letter, however, I was exceptionally interested in, commended the "Reporter-Democrat" for its fairness, and its good sportsmanship. It came, strange to say from one of the prominent Republicans in Shelby County.

Another letter from a 'dyed. in the wool Democrat', stated (as one of the reasons for Ike's election) that "the Catholics rejected Adlai Stevenson, because he was a divorced man. (The Catholics, of course, do not recognize divorce.) The letter continues: "Gallant and able John S. Sparkman, native Alabamian", came unto his own and his own received him not". "The people of this Christian Nation," continues the letter, "have chosen a man who is not a member of any church to be their leader. What can we expect for the next four years, under a non-affiliated member of any church?"

Still another letter, manlike, blames it on 'The Women', whom, he says were "swept off their feet by the glamor of the General and his five golden stars and the friendliness of Mamie with the bangs"—

On and on it goes. We say.... "Yesterday's news is dead, and so is the election, as far as we are concerned from a news standpoint.

We are now mainly interested in the "Peaceful solution" Ike promised of the Korean situation, and the retention of our Freedom! This brings up the question 'What Is Freedom? And the best definition we have read comes from a reporter by the name of Hazel Parker, who defines it as follows:

FREEDOM

"You cannot say what freedom is, perhaps, in a single sentence. It is not necessary to define it. It is enough to point to it.

"Freedom is a man lifting a gate latch at dusk and sitting for a while on the porch,, smoking his pipe, before he goes to bed.

"It is the violence of an argument outside an election poll; it is the righteous anger of the pulpits.

"It is the warm laughter of a girl on a park bench.

"It is the rush of a train over the continent and the unafraid faces of people looking out the windows.

"It is all the howdys in the world, and all the hellos.

"It is Westbrook Pegler telling Mrs. Roosevelt how to raise her children, it is the Roosevelt's letting them raise themselves.

"It is Lindbergh's appeasing voice raised above a thousand hisses.

"It is Dorothy Thompson asking for war; it is General Hugh S. Johnson asking her to keep quiet.

"It is you trying to remember the words of The Star Spangled Banner.

"It is the sea breaking on wide sands somewhere and the shoulders of a mountain supporting the sky.

"It is a man cursing all cops.

"It is the absence of apprehension at the sound of approaching footsteps outside your closed door.

"It is your hot resentment of intrigue, the tilt of your chin and the tightening of your lips sometimes.

"It is all the things you do and want to keep on doing.

"It is all the things you feel and cannot help feeling."

Let's keep it that way!

S. E. McGraw Sr. Succumbs Nov. 6

Solon E. McGraw, Sr., widely known merchant and civic leader, died November 6 after a long illness.

Mr. McGraw, a lifelong resident of Vincent, was one of the founders of the McGraw Brothers general merchandise store in Vincent, and has been manager of the store many years.

He was a member of the Shelby County Board of Education, a former member of the Shelby County Board of Revenue and a former Mayor of Vincent, an office in which he served three terms.

He was a deacon in the Baptist Church and a member of Zamora Temple, Shrine.

Funeral services were held at 3:30 p. m., Friday at the Vincent Baptist Church. Burial was in Vincent Cemetery with Service Funeral Home of Sylacauga directing.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Signa W. McGraw; a son, Solon E. McGraw, Jr., of Huntsville; two brothers, R. T. McGraw, Sr., Vincent, and L. E. McGraw, Eastland, Texas; two sisters, Mrs. Lucy M. Darden of Sylacauga, and Miss Mary McGraw of Vincent.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Senator and Mrs. Hugo Black of Birmingham visited Mrs. O. E. Black in Wilsonville, Sunday.

School frame building in Columbiana, known as Columbiana Public School will be sold at auction in front of the courthouse November 12, at one o'clock.

Dr. O. C. Carmichael, president of Alabama College is the guest speaker in Mobile this week when the annual meeting of the Parent Teachers Association convenes in Mobile.

Miss Frances Jones of Shelby, spent last week with Miss Dollie Jones in Columbiana.

Mrs. Hosie Wood and little daughter, Dorothy Wood, of Inglenook, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Carter and family in Columbiana.

J. A. Wade, Vincent; O. P. Head, Montevallo, and Mrs. Littie May Compton of Columbiana have been appointed Registrars for Shelby County.

Miss Ada Atchison spent Sunday and Monday in Birmingham.

Mrs. Steadman Wood and Mrs. A. R. Cooper spent Tuesday in Talladega Springs visiting relatives.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholson and son Joseph returned to their home in Montgomery after spending several days in Columbiana with Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Nelson.

Charles Leeper of Birmingham spent Sunday with his brother J. T. Leeper.

To provide a more definite plan by which to work in building up Bro. Tom Robert's Bible Class, the members were divided into two groups, under the leadership of C. E. Niven and Steadman Wood. They are called Wood's Regulars, and Niven's Reliables.

The Superintendent of Education Report shows a gain of over 1000 in School Attendance, according to J. W. Letson, Superintendent of Education.

Miss Louise Montebarro, a young lady of Selma, committed suicide late Monday afternoon, just after being arrested on the highway about five miles above Calera. Judge L. B. Riddle was summoned to the scene of the tragedy to make an investigation. After questioning the officers who had arrested her for speeding, and others who had witnessed the unfortunate occurence, Judge L. B. Riddle gave it as his opinion that the young woman had committed suicide.

Officer Blake got in the car with her to bring her back to Calera, and without warning, Miss Montebarro shot herself.

Dr. J. H. Williams returned to Columbiana Wednesday after a visit with his daughter, Mrs. Sadie Thomas in Patton.

1952 POLIO CASES STILL FAR BELOW LAST YEAR MARK

Alabama's 1952 polio toll has reached the 268 mark, with the addition of three new cases. However, this is still far below the 650 cases reported for a similar period last year.

STATE LOSES RECORD AMOUNT OF TIMBER TO FIRES DURING EXTREMELY DRY WEATHER THROUGH OCTOBER

State Forester J. M. Stauffer estimates that more than $500,000 worth of timber has been destroyed by forest fires this year. He estimates that the month-long dry spell cost the state more than $40,324 acres of woodlands in October. He said 1,044 fires were reported.

In Shelby county Ranger C. M. Stuckey and his crew have had a little time for rest this week after working almost continuously for a week or ten days fighting wodland fires before the rain came.

Youth Leader

N. A. JONES

N. A. JONES, TRAINING YOUTH LEADER

N. A. Jones, of Columbiana, is one of the most widely known leaders in the Baptist Church. He is a Deacon, and a member of the Pulpit Committee, and, in addition to these responsibilities, is the newly elected leader of the Baptist Training Union.

Mr. Jones has the happy faculty of projecting his optimistic personality into his work. As the father of two splendid boys, Morris and Ralph Jones, he knows and understands the problems of youth. He has been a 'pal' to his sons, and is known as an understanding friend of all the young people in Columbiana.

Mr. Jones is no one-sided fellow. He takes an enthusiastic interest in all worth while projects. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club, and a Volunteer Fireman of the town. He is a radiant Christian character. One who 'practices what he preaches'. He is the conscientious, friendly manager of the Yellow Front Store, where he and Mrs. Jones (who is equally as popular and as prominent in her church work as Mr. Jones), daily greet their patrons and co-workers, with an always unhurried manner, and people who come to visit or trade in this commercial mart on Main, feel they are welcome guests. The home of the N. A. Jones' is the meeting place for various church activities and social affairs. Their hospitality is so well known, there is no use in reiterating it. These factors, together with Mr. Jones' earnest interest in his work with the young people is largely responsible for the cooperation he is receiving as he shatters all previous records in attendance at these weekly assemblages in the Baptist Church each Sunday evening.

The young people are indeed fortunate in having so understanding a director, and those ninety-one people who were present Sunday evening proved the success with which Mr. Jones is meeting in going forward with this, most important phase of the church life in this community.

Next Sunday evening Mr. Jones is asking that 100 meet him in the Sanctuary for the weekly assemblage, and we believe they will gladly answer his cordial invitation.

Black Hill Passion Play In Birmingham November 17-20

A stage presentation that annually vies with the best Broadway productions and which boasts a far longer "run"-than any other, soon will be given in Birmingham by a group of professional actors who maintain the traditional realism of the 710-year-old vehicle. The Black Hill Passion Play is scheduled for four evening performances, November 17 through November 20, and five matinee performances, November 17 through November 21, at the Birmingham Municipal Auditorium, according to Dr. George R. Stuart, President of Birmingham-Southern College, local sponsors.

Starring the renowned Josef Meier in his heart-warming role as The Christus, and supported by a huge cast, the Passion Play brings to Birmingham the "oldest story" presented by the world's oldest and most famous cast. The story of the last seven days in the life of Jesus of Nazareth unfolds in 22 scenes. Tons of scenery and unusual lighting effects bring to spectators the feeling of actually being present at the time these immortal events took place two thousand years ago.

The central set, depicting a typical street in ancient Jerusalem, includes such scenes as the Court of King Herod, the Last Supper, and the Ascension.

Josef Meier, an American citizen since 1938, who is the seventh generation of his family to enact this impressive role of the Christus, came originally from Luenen, Westphalia, Germany, where the play originated in 1242. The entire play is presented in English. This may be a "once-in-a-lifetime" opportunity to see this great production which for so many years people traveled abroad to witness.

The role of Mary, the Mother of Jesus, is portrayed by Clare Hume, who in private life is Mrs. Josef Meier. Mrs. Meier, an American woman, has achieved acclaim both in this county and abroad, and brings to the role a rare and sympathetic understanding.

The play, which has been termed the greatest dramatic production ever staged, will be presented in Birmingham for four evening reserved-seat performances, November 17 through November 20, and five general admission matinee performances, November 17 through November 21.

At The Movies

SHELBY THEATRE, Columbiana

Thursday and Friday, NOV. 13 and 14, Stewart Granger in "Wild North".

Saturday, NOV. 15, "Great Missouri Raid", starring Life of Jessie and Frank James in Technicolor.

CIRCUIT COURT IN SESSION HERE THIS WEEK

The civil cases set for trial this week in the Circuit Court are now in progress. Tuesday morning, Judge W. W. Wallace, stopped the Court proceedings promptly at eleven o'clock for the observance of Armistice Day "one minute prayer program" and attorney Sam A. Lokey offered a most impressive invocation, after which the case now being tried, Thiemonge vs. Rogers poceeded.

Next week will be devoted to the trial of the criminal division of the Court, and this week will mark the last jury session of the Circuit Court which will be held by presiding Judge, W. W. Wallace.

The newly elected Judge (now serving the Circuit as Solicitor), Arthur L. Hardegree of Ashland, will take over the judicial responsibilities of this circuit on January 15, 1953.

Governor Gordon Persons will appoint a new Circuit Solicitor for the 18th Judicial Circuit.

American Education Week Observed Here

The schools of Shelby county are observing American Education Week November 9-15. They are encouraging parents to visit the schools during this period for first hand observance of the pupils and schools at work.

The Shelby County High School, Columbiana will present a program Friday at 2:00 P. M. to the assembled students and teachers. Karl C. Harrison of Columbiana will be the guest speaker. His general theme will be "Education".

L. F. Rogers, Shelby High principal says that the school is sending letters to the parents of his school telling of the progress being made and their plans for the future. Letters of this nature will be mailed at intervals throughout the year.

ORATORICAL CONTEST GETTING ENTRIES

A large number of schools are already enrolled in The Birmingham News oratorical contest for 1952-53, with additional enrollment being received daily.

Indications are that there is greater interest in this contest than ever before.

The basic subject is "Abraham Lincoln". Contestants may use the basic subject, one of the suggested topics, or a topic of their own selection, provided it is sufficiently related to the basic subject.

Schools of this county already enrolled in The Birmingham News oratorical contest are as follows:

Senior High Schools:

Vincent High, junior and senior departments

Thompson High, Siluria, junior and senior departments

Calera High, junior and senior departments

Two contests are being conducted, one for senior high schools the other for junior high. Combined schools which have both senior and junior high departments may compete in both contests, provided they enroll in both. Grammar schools which have junior high work may compete in the junior high contest.

State finals for both senior and junior high contests will be held at Birmingham-Southern College. Birmingham-Southern will award tuition scholarships valued at $3,600 to State Finalists of the senior high contest.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: Being in Indian country was nothing new to Will Morgan. As frontiersman and scout he had earned a reputation as an Indian killer, while searching the savage camps for his fiance, Mary Halden. With the savage revolt expected any moment, he went into their camps representing himself as an Indian chief. He learned that Mary was a prisoner of White Panther, a Miami, and also sees the British will supply arms to Savages. He flees toward American lines, taking with him an old friend, Ann Randall, who was an Indian prisoner. He is surprised at her courage. When they near the front lines, he hides her in a cave and goes scouting.

CHAPTER XIX

She gazed wide-eyed at the pair of nearly new moccasins and the sawed off trade musket which he had laid on the ground beside her. He saw the glance and handed her a packet of paper cartridges. "Know how to shoot?" he asked briefly.

"I've seen it done."

He explained carefully and after they had eaten a bit of corncake he made her go through the motions of loading, priming, aiming and firing. Then he stretched full length beside her and closed his eyes. "I hope you won't need the gun," he mumbled sleepily, "but I'll feel better about leaving you if I know you're armed."

With that he was asleep, leaving her to wonder what he meant by the last remark.

Raindrops pelting in his face awakened him, the inky blackness around him so thick that it seemed almost smothering. Ann's voice came from somewhere near at hand as he stirred. "Move over here," she suggested. "This overhang provides a bit of shelter—enough for two if we lie close."

He made certain that rifle and powder were dry, then moved over to her, the warmth of her body dispelling the chill which had come upon him as he slept. "I wonder what time it is?" he said sleepily.

"Near morning, I reckon," she replied. "The moon was shining just before it started to rain and I figured it was two o'clock then. It's getting colder."

Ann Saves Will's Life At Cost of Discovery

"Uh-huh."

"Shouldn't we be moving?"

"Not tonight. We're in fighting country now so we'll change our tactics. Last fall I noticed that most of the scouting on both sides was done in the morning. From now on we'll travel in late afternoon and early evening."

"Then we'll rest here all day?"

"Sure. It'll give your foot a chance to heal. Tonight we move on to another place I've spotted. Tomorrow I'll scout ahead and spot a new one for the next trip. It'll be slow but it'll be safer . . . and we've got to get some rest."

She snuggled against him contentedly. "Suits me," she said simply.

On the fourth night they went into hiding along a little stream Will believed to be a branch of the St. Mary's. "We must be pretty close to Fort Recovery," he said casually. "Forest was full of Indians today and they were acting mighty cautious. We'll have to watch tomorrow that we don't get shot by one of our own patrols."

Trouble started at daybreak when they narrowly escaped discovery by a Miami scout party which came up the creek. They waited anxiously for a long time after the warriors passed and then Will rose stealthily. "Time I was moving," he said in the same flat tones he had used to mention his recent daylight trips.

She grasped his hand and pulled him down beside her. "Don't go out today," she whispered. "We'll start tonight and keep going. I'll manage somehow."

He looked squarely into the troubled blue eyes, a half smile on his lips. "Don't worry about me; I just want to get an idea as to the position of the fort. We don't want to miss it in the dark."

"Don't go," she repeated. "We'll find it. The risk is too great for you to go out today."

Her arms went around his neck and for some minutes she clung to him fiercely. Will grunted in some embarrassment, trying to find words to reassure her and not let himself get emotional. Gently breaking her clasp he held her at arm's length and fell back on humor. "Don't choke me! I'll be better off with Indians than with a strangler."

Her eyes filled with tears. "Go ahead then. I know you're anxious to get us in so you can go on and hunt Mary."

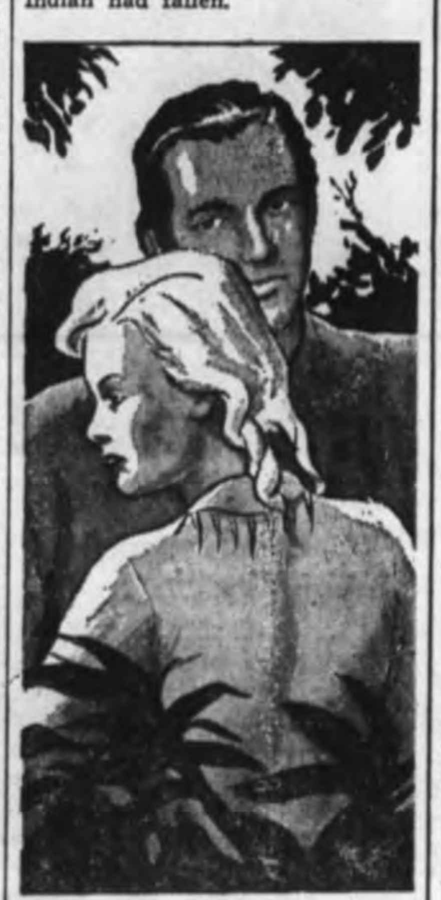
There was both petulance and resignation in her tone. Will decided to be blunt. "Naturally. I have lived for that one thing. Maybe she is no longer alive but I intend to find her if she is!"

"I'm sorry," she said. "I didn't mean to talk like that but I guess the strain is getting me. Do as you want."

He seized his rifle hastily and slipped away, working out toward the creek. No danger seemed near and he struck out boldly through the shallows. Just as he reached the farther shore he turned to wave a quick farewell to the girl but as he raised his arm there was the crack of a rifle and he went sprawling into the bushes.

After her first gasp of horror Ann's reaction was calm and efficient. Seizing the musket Will had brought her she looked to its readiness and began searching the brush where a little cloud of gray-blue floated up. Her thumb drew the hammer back steadily and presently she made out the painted form which crept along the creek. She lined her sights on the Indian as Will had taught her, following him over the gun barrel until he halted not fifty feet distant. Then she squeezed the trigger.

The recoil knocked her over backward but she was aware of two contrasting shouts from across the brook. One was the death screech of the Miami, the other a hail of surprise. Through the eddying smoke she saw Morgan scramble to his feet and run to where the Indian had fallen.



"I'm sorry," she said. "I didn't mean to talk like that but I guess the strain is getting me. Do as you want."

"Come on," he called to her. "Can't lie low now. That shot will have 'em down on us!"

She was across the stream almost as soon as he reached the dead warrior, her thoughts whirling as she stared down at the Indian she had killed. It made her a little sick to think of it but there were no real regrets. She even kept her head enough to start reloading the musket but Will stopped her.

Freedom Road Is Sighted By Weary Travelers

"Throw it away," he ordered. "This devil had a Kaintuck. It's in good order and a girl who shoots as well as you do deserves a better gun than a trade musket. Watch while I reload; it's about like the other one only you have to measure your powder and ram the bullet home with a greased patch."

She nodded, taking the loaded weapon from his hands. "I can do it." Then as they started away toward the south she added in a hushed voice, "I thought you were dead."

He kept the bloody side of his jerkin away from her. "Just playin' possum with a scratched rib," he told her. "You beat me to him—but thanks just the same."

Using the long rifle as a staff Ann scrambled along through the brush at a fair pace. The days of rest had helped some and she felt that she could keep going for a long time. Anything would be better than the dreadful waiting.

They soon struck a narrow trail and the traveling became easier although Morgan knew it meant an added risk. More than a mile was covered without trouble but then Ann began to limp painfully. Will was doing little better, the drain of his wound making itself felt. Still he was beginning to hope. Little landmarks here and there seemed vaguely familiar; spots he recalled from his autumn patrols around Fort Recovery.

He screened himself behind a tree just in time to see a file of Indians loping around a bend in the trail, all of them tense and ready for action. Will steadied himself with an effort and drew a bead on the leader.

The Miami pitched headlong as the rifle cracked, Will stooping instantly to exchange weapons with Ann. "Reload this one!" he snapped, already searching for his next target. This time he had no open shot but the weapon carried true and disposed of another enemy.

"That'll hold 'em a minute," he grunted. "Two quick shots like that ought to worry 'em."

Stooping low he half dragged the girl to her feet, leaving her to scramble on ahead while he reloaded. "They'll try to head us," he warned in a hoarse whisper. "Do a couple hundred yards if you can and we'll take another stand."

A bullet clipped branches above them, warning that they had been seen. "Next clump of laurel on the left," Will ordered. "Get in there and lie down."

Matters were getting desperate. The tribesmen would have ample time to surround them and after that it would be impossible to keep watch on all sides. Morgan waited tensely, his eyes searching every bit of cover. Suddenly he saw a gliding figure slip behind a big oak. As the Indian peered out stealthily Will dropped him with a bullet through the head. Then firing seemed to break out all around.

Lead crashed through the branches above and beside him, one ball tearing at the jerkin where blood still flowed from the previous wound.

He slumped then, the world growing very dim and shimmery. Indistinctly he heard a voice yell, "Hunt 'em down, fellers! I'll help these folks."

As the firing diminished in the distance he looked up through a queer haze to see the familiar face of Bullhead Kirby. The grinning riverman swore delightedly. "Will! I mighta knowed it'd be you! Nice scrap!"

Ann rose from the thicket behind Kirby and brushed him aside without ceremony. "Don't stand there talking!" she snapped. "Can't you see he's hurt?"

Kirby's jaw dropped. "Hell's fire!" he ejaculated, staring frankly at her. "If that Morgan ain't the beatin'est feller! Plays Injun all winter and comes back with a purty gal! Where did ye git her, Will?"

Ann had ripped open the jerkin to inspect the wound. "Shut up and take a look at this hole!"

Kirby's grin faded a little as he obeyed. "And ye still pick out the hellcat variety, too!" he mumbled to Morgan.

Morgan Makes Report To General Wayne

He examined the wound carefully and smiled again. "Jest a scratch," he reported. "Ye've been losing a lot o' blood but that's all. We'll tote ye into the fort as soon as the boys git back and ye'll be good as new in a few days."

Will looked up as several other scouts came into view. "You'll have to help Ann too," he said. "She's done about eighty miles on a foot that ought to be tied up like the general's gout!"

Kirby studied her appreciatively. "That won't be no trouble. We'll have to draw straws to see who gits the fun o' carryin' her. If I was jest thirty year younger I'd lick the man what tried to steal the chore from me."

He patched Will's ribs with rough proficiency, the other scouts coming to see Morgan and remaining to stare at Ann. She ignored them all, refusing to move until she was certain that Will was able to travel. Then she spoke with decision. Pointing to a couple of the larger men she said, "You and you—help him. I'm going with this old coot that's thirty years too old. He's safer."

She put an arm around the neck of the startled Kirby.

"When I was a young buck," he said with a sly grin, "I hated bossy females. Generally I spanked 'em if they was too obstreperous . . . and I'm feelin' younger all the time."

Ann's laugh was something very like the sound Will remembered of old. As Kirby put his arm about her waist he aimed a wink at Morgan. "Will, is this the one ye was trying' to find last winter when we was in the territory—or do ye jest have a genius fer wimmin?"

Morgan did not reply. There was not much to be said in view of the startled expression which had come across the girl's face.

Nearly three weeks passed before Will was able to report to General Wayne at the new camp, now called Greenville. His wound proved troublesome and he remained idle while his information was sent on to headquarters. One of the tiny cabins within the stockade was turned over to him — and Ann promptly moved in. After two or three days she was getting around quite well but putting a great show of lameness whenever any of the officers came by. At first Will did not care, being too sick to be interested, but as his strength returned he became embarrassed by her attentions.

He did not want to hurt her, yet knew that the situation must be broken up before it became too complicated. Already the men were making jokes about the way her foot seemed to heal in a curiously exact timing with his own recovery. Finally he was ready to make the trip to Greenville—and Ann was ready to go with him.

Wayne greeted him cordially. "I have your report," he said quietly—"but I want to hear the whole yarn. I'd like to know how you managed it."

Will told the story simply, stressing the fact that the Indian army would probably be much larger than the one which had routed St. Clair.

"I expected it," Wayne said. "But I believe our preparations and our hold on Fort Recovery will offset that fact."

Will smiled. "Fort Recovery worries 'em. They'll try to take it before long—but they won't be too confident. I've been throwing hints about it all winter."

"What's their chief weakness?"

Thompson Hi Adds Equipment

An electric typewriter and a four drawer file cabinet is being added to the present equipment in the business department at Thompson High School.

Enrollment in this department of the school includes 31 per cent of the students in the high school.

A number of the students taking business courses belong to the Future Business Leaders of America Club whose President is Jerry Bishop, a senior. This club sponsors projects in banking, in school scrapbook, and career choices, a series of career meetings when visiting speakers from various occupations appear before the group to give information the students desire.

Dr. R. H. Johnson, Principal, has said that the physical arrangement of the department will be remodeled as soon as feasible in order that the plan for courses will more nearly duplicate actual business procedure.

The nearness of the school to the city of Birmingham is one of the reasons the business course offerings of the school are popular with the students.

Mrs. Henry W. Peete is head of this department.

Getting Around with Mac Brown

Not long ago I read where some professor explained the chemical reasons why leaves change to all their beautiful colors in the fall. Back when I was a boy I could tell from three miles away that a tree was a maple by the yellow of its leaves this time of the year. And there was a special red which marked the oak. According to my system, it's the tree they're on which determines their color.

I was thinking about this last week while driving my truck up toward Gadsden. I thought too about how much prettier the woods seem to me now than when I was a kid. At least that's one thing where I think change has been for the better.

Years ago the saw mills would come through and build a railroad into a section for logging. It cost so much they had to cut down all the trees to make it pay. It left the woods stripped and ugly.

Now practically all timber is brought out by trucks, and they can afford to cut only the bigger ones. That's what they call tree farming, and think a lot of credit for its progress goes to trucks, which make it easy and economical to grow trees as a crop.

WILSONVILLE

ELIZABETH WELDON

The people of Wilsonville were glad to hear that Mrs. T. O. Smith Sr., who has been very ill in the Sylacauga Hospital is improving.

We were also glad to hear that Mrs. Harry Dorough, who has been in City Hospital in Sylacauga is able to return home.

Another item of good news is that Mrs. Doc Dennis, who had a serious operation, has returned to her home and is convalescing.

We also heard sad news. It was of the death of Mr. Earl Gardner, a former resident of Fourmile, who moved to Birmingham. He was a brother of Mr. Carol Gardner.

Sorrow came to this same family with the death of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Moore, nee Ruth Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carol Gardner. Mr. and Mrs. Moore now live in Birmingham but were former residents of our community. Funeral services were held at the Wilsonville cemetery Saturday morning.

It was nice to see Mrs. O. F. Lokey out again after an illness.

Mrs. George Vick passed away Friday. She took an active part in P. T. A. and other community activities. She will be missed by her many friends.

The W. S. C. S. held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Boyd Garrett Wednesday. Mrs. Jack Story presided. Mrs. Charles Boyles had charge of the program. A social hour was enjoyed and delicious refreshments were served.

Mrs. A. B. Gould and Mrs. Juanita Williams were guests of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church of Childersburg Wednesday evening. This was held at the home of Mrs. R. P. Stock. Mrs. Gould talked on her life in India.

Mrs. Ethel Tinney is ill and in the City Hospital in Sylacauga.

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Smith and sons and Mr. Joe Wheeler of Birmingham were recent visitors in town.

Rev. William Blount, who is now at Hueytown, was back home last week and brought with him his attractive wife and twin daughters.

Mrs. Chet Weaver of Columbiana was a visitor in town last week.

Mr. I. M. Watson has gone to Texas to visit his daughter, Miriam.

The M. Y. F. held a special service Sunday evening observing World Community Day. The subject was Building A Lasting Peace.

Mr. and Mrs. Calbert Joiner and daughter of Columbiana and Mrs. Brown Ingram of Birmingham were here to attend the funeral of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Moore.

We were sorry to hear of the illness of Mrs. Ernest Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Tucker and children visited Mrs. Tucker's parents Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boyles.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson from Nebraska were gusts of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gardner.

Save old velvet garments and tear them into pieces to use as polishing clothes, especially for polishing highly finished furniture as they do not lint on the surface.

For a better and faster job when polishing silverware, try a new lambskin shoe buffer. Cover about half the surface of the buffer with polish using and the treatment will serve you a long time.

COLUMBIANA F. H. A. AND F. F. A. ENTERTAINED WITH WIENER ROAST

On Monday night, November 3, the Columbiana F. H. A. and F. F. A. members were entertained by their respective honorary members in the back yard of Dr. and Mrs. James Crawford.

Wieners were roasted and a delicious plate was served. And the food was wonderful! During the evening the honorees enjoyed sitting aound the blazing bon fire playing games, and singing familiar songs. The games were led by Betty Jo Knowles, Hilda Jones and F. H. A. and F. F. A. members.

Many thanks to the kind host and hostesses for such an enpoyable evening!

Red Roses go to the following honorary members:

Mrs. James H. Crawford, Mrs. Homer Walton, Mrs. Thelma Vincent, Mrs. G. C. Moore, Ms. Bruce Alverson, Mrs. Handy Ellis, Dr. Crawford, Mr. Handy Ellis, Mr. B. F. Hatchett, Mr. George Starcher, Mr. L. F. Rogers, Mr. Goose Williams, Mr. Paul Moon.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

"Grant me another sunlit hour,
Dear God, I humbly ask;
The ones bequeathed to me for dower
Failed to complete my task,
Perhaps I wasted them; forgive!
But lanes were edged with bloom
A redbreast was imperative
I viewed its nesting room.
The moments fled, and I with them
Toward hills that called to us—
For who wear trees for diadem
May be imperious,
And when I started home, alas,
My feet were unaware
How dandelions in the grass
Would be like magnets there.
Tomorrow I will work all day—
This is my solemn pledge—
Unless the first unbudded spray calls from the lilac hedge."

It is a difficult task to remain indoors and tap-tap-tap all day on news items, when the woodland paths, so beautifully lit with a riot of colors call—but, I have put off for "tomorrow", just about as many tasks as 'tomorrow' will stand. So, even though my heart longs for the 'Open Road'—my mind, what there is of it, must linger and tabulate happenings in Shelby county, since last you heard from me. So, lets get going!

COLUMBIANA, THE LITTLE TOWN WITH THE BIG HEART

This little town of ours, with with its new slogan—"The Town of Industrial Opportunities", could, if we wanted to (according to historians), celebrate the passing of its 110th anniversary. While the "Door Of Opportunity" in industrial and commercial circles is wide open. I think one of this town's greatest assets is its 'friendliness', which furnishes the key note of the charm that always hoevrs around this little village.

For instance, there has never been a 'native' who moved away from Columbiana who did not long to return 'home'. Especially has the sympathetic heart throb and friendly, personal interest centered in the homes this week where the dread spector of illness has darkened the sun with black cloud shadows. Cluods that, for the time being, seemed too dark for even a ray of light to pierce and make visible the silver lining.

Yet, in so many, many, ways have kind messages winged their way to friends and loved ones who were housed in the hospitals, where the flash of white robed "Angels of Mercy" passed as they administered to the patient—and the gleaming scapels held in sure and steady fingers of the surgeons alleviated the suffering of residents in whom Columbiana citizens have been so keenly interested.

Thus do the stars of HOPE appear on an erstwhile black horizon and the sorrows shared become lighter burdens to bear as the crisis passes and life again triumphs over the Grim Reaper.

RONNIE HUGHES HONOREE NOVEMBER 14

Prince Charles of England is not the only fellow having a birthday on November 14. Holding far more local interest in celebrating this day, will be found Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hughes whose son, Ronnie Hughes, will celebrate his fourth birthday anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes reside at present in Demopolis, but in reality, "belong to us". We are just lending them to Demopolis, and Ronnie's grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stinson are just as proud of little Ronnie as are the Queen of England and her handsome Duke husband of bonnie Prince Charles.

. . . Mrs. Flora Spearman has ordered her paper changed from Wilsonville to Burlington, North Carolina, where she now resides. (Thanks for lovely letter, Lady. Appreciate the fact that you wanted to remain in touch with friends and happenings in Shelby County thru this "Home Paper.)

. . . Thanks go to J. B. Blatzer Rt. 1, for a renewal subscription just received. More and more Shelby County people seem to be renewing their interest in the future of our county, by remaining loyal to the only county wide circulated paper in Shelby County. We are grateful for these expressions daily received, and shall continue lending our best efforts toward procuring items of interest from our progressive communities. Let us hear from you—

. . . George Horn had a truck wreck, Thursday, near the Cates place. This particular section of the Wilsonville-Columbiana Highway is getting to be a danger spot for motorists. We are delighted that no serious effects followed George's crash-up.

. . . Mrs. Inez Bird spent the week end in Auburn as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Bird.

. . . Harry Donovan of Indianapolis, Indiana, was the handsome gentleman you were asking about whom you saw me talking with last Friday. He is a brother of Mrs. Ralph Hunt and was in Alabama attending the funeral of his uncle, Dr. Donovan, who passed away in Gulfport Veteran Hospital last week.

. . . Mrs. Pat Mansfield and daughter June Mansfield of Birmingham, and Mrs. Perry McCormack were Sunday guests of Mrs. Eula Carter.

. . . Miss Doris Colvin, Physical Education instructor in Shelby High spent the past week end at her home in Livington.

. . . Rux Carter is spending this week in New York on business. He will join the "Full-Backs" in Atlanta, next Friday, and this "all American married team," composed of Dick Ozley, Rux Carter, Wales W. Wallace, Jr., Alvin Stinson, Jay Falkner and Ross Bob Mullins, will take their annual "leave of absence" to attend the Football game in the Georgian City, Saturday.

Just to be sure, that all was agreeable on the home front during their absence, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Falkner and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Bob Mullins were hosts to the "Full-Backs" and their wives at a dinner party staged at Chesser's last week. These little "stay-at-home" football widows, are not going to be exactly lacking for excitement during their absence, for they have planned several "get-to-gethers" during the time the "husbands" are following the trail of the pigskin, but we are not telling what! Nor where! Let 'em wonder!

. . . O. K. Curlee of Shelby came to Columbiana Saturday and delighted us with a renewal subscription to the old "Home Paper", for which we proffer thanks.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Roy Mann spent the week end in Montgomery. Mr. Mann also attended the three day session of the Southern Recreation Association, which convened in the Capitol City Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Ditto for Elvin Hill and Ross Bob Mullins.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bolton and Mrs. Johnnie Wood were among those from Columbiana who attended the Auburn - Mississippi State game in Auburn Saturday.

HUGH SIMS

MAKES TALK TO SCHOOLS ON SAFETY

Hugh Sims, is one of the busiest "on-the-job" all time officials we know. In addition to his activities for the Town of Columbiana in keeping law and order.... he manages the business of the Water facilities of the town. At the recess and noon hours each day, you will find this alert officer cruising near the schools in an endeavor to see that proper protection from traffic hazards are maintained for the protection of young America as they march to and from the lunch room.

Monday morning, at the request of the faculty of the Columbiana City School, Hugh Sims made a splendid talk to the entire membership of this busy student body on a Safety Program for Columbiana, and his suggestions, and the safe guards offered them were impressively brought home in a way these young students will not soon forget.

Now all these things occupy six days in the week for Mr. Sims. Most folk would find some excuse for observing the Sabbath with a less active program, but not Hugh Sims. He begins each Sunday as Superintendent of the Baptist Sunday School, and his record has topped all previous superintendents in having on one Sunday reached "over the 300 mark". Last Sunday, and practically every Sunday, the average attendance runs near the 200 figure, and thats a splendid record. Mr. Sims always closes the assemblage at the Church School hour with a short talk, that carries, in one sentence, a punch line that lingers.

Several ministers, recently, who have come to this church to fill the pulpit as guest speakers, have referred to the fact that "it is indeed fortunate for Columbiana people to realize that in their Town Marshall, they have a Christian law enforcement officer".... and, we believe Columbiana people duly appreciate this factor.

Mr. Sims also takes an active part in the school life, and especially on the athletic field where his son, Hugh Jr., is a Co-Captain of the football squad. We believe in giving honor to whom honor is due, and since Hugh Sims is making such an outstanding record in his civic assignment; his church affiliations; his personal interests in the schools and at all times public spirited and cooperative citizen of the town, we proudly join others in congratulating ourselves in having so conscientious an officer, churchman, and friend in this all important work he is so splendidly doing for his "home town".

Therefore, we salute Hugh Sims this week and commend him for outstanding achievement in all he has attempted to do.

WHAT? NO CADILAC?

Senator J. T. Phillips of Siluria, a Democrat with no "ifs" and "buts" about it, came to Columbiana, Tuesday. We had a curbstone chat with the distinguished Senator, and asked him why he was driving a "Buick", instead of his swanky Cadillac.

He replied, "I have put the Cadillac in storage until the Democrats are returned to Washington".... and with a 'Santa Claus smile', and a merry twinkle in his blue optics, away he "flew with a terrible clatter".

. . . Mrs. Mary C. Barrow and children of Florida are guests of Mrs. Barrow's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Curlee.

. . . Regret being 'out' when we should have been 'in' and missed seeing Mrs. Sam Wallace and Mrs. Erin Wallace Harrell of Birmingham, who left a note on our desk telling me of their visit.

. . . Lena Merrell Garner, of Birmingham, is a former resident of Columbiana, who never has forgotten her friends on Main. When folk leave here for the hospital in Birmingham, Lena Garner is usually the first one to stand by their bedside. It is good to have friends to share the grey days, as well as the sunlit hours, and Lena is that kind of a friend. We are glad we are numbered among those who have reason to appreciate and be grateful for her thoughtful kindness, always!

. . . Thanks to Mr. J. P. Rainey of Wilton, Highway Patrolman, for a renewal subscription just received in our office.

. . . Mrs. Curtis Bean and children of Wilton, spent Sunday in Columbiana, as guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Jones. We learn that Chaplain Curtis Bean is now stationed permanently at the following address: Chaplan Curtis M. Bean (1st Lieut.) USAF AO 2-249-234, 76th Air Base Squadron Niagara Falls Municipal Airport Niagara Falls, New York. Mrs. Bean and children are leaving to join the Chaplain in their new home this week.

. . . We hear from friends that Joy Elizabeth Sawyer, who will be three weeks old Thursday, is one of the loveliest little newcomers Columbiana has had in a long time. We are a bit late in announcing her arrival, but this is due to the fact that nobody told us about Dr. Stork's visit on this occasion. Belated though we be, we extend a cordial welcome to Columbiana's newest citizen, and congratulations to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Sawyer (Gladys Martin).

. . . Thanks to J. R. Butler of Helena Rt for returning to our reading circle this week. We hasten to pull up a chair for him and hope he will enjoy reading this paper as much as we do visiting with our folk all over the county thru its columns.

. . . W. A. Duke of Siluria thoughtfully came by our office while in Columbiana Monday, and renewed his allegiance to the "home paper" for 1953, for which courtesy we are always grateful.

. . . Mary Jane Blackerby mails us two dollars and asks that we continue sending her the paper at her home. We are delighted to enroll her name on our ever lengthening list of weekly readers. Thanks Lady!

DR. PARKS TO ARRIVE NEXT WEEK

Dr. Milton Parks, who has been delayed a few days in coming to Columbiana for the practice of medicine, has written that he would be here the latter part of this week and was "looking forward to a reunion with his professional friends as well as his host of civilian friends, and patients, whom he so happily recalls as having made his stay in Columbiana, so unforgettable, that he regards it a privilege to be able to 'come back home'".

Dr. Parks has reserved an apartment in the home of Mrs. Nelle Davis where he will reside. He will announce definitely where his professional offices will be located, after his arrival. Until then he may be reached by telephone number 3921.

HOBO DAY WAS A SUCCESS

The girls of the F. H. A. Chapter of Shelby County High School are proud to say Hobo Day was one of its most successful ne in years, with the help of our wonderful neighbors and people in the community. The girls made approximately $45.00, which will be used in their chapter's activities. This included work, and donations. The girls want to thank the following people for the part they took in making our Hobo Day a success.

Mrs. Paul Smith, Ray's Cafe, Eleanor Vansant, Mrs. Tom Morris, Mrs. Ivey, Mrs. King, Mrs. Faulkner, Mrs. Bob Walton, Mrs. C. M. Stuckey, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Tony Lyon, Mrs. Riley, Mrs. Margaret McGhee, Mrs. Beavers, Columbiana Drug Co., Mrs. Lefkovits, Miss Mims, Mrs. Tinnie, Mrs. Neal Stinson, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Mann, Mrs. Walton, Mrs. Vincent, Mrs. Farr, Mrs. Meyers, Mrs. Goodwin, Mrs. L. F. Rogers.

. . . Herbert Sims, has spent the past year in Germany, with the U. S. Army and about the happiest felow we have seen on Main this week is his Dad, who was in town this morning. Naturally, elated over the election results, but most of all, he was rejoicing over Herbert's arrival home. "Thats the best news of all", said Mr. Sims, and we certainly agree with him.

When Herbert arrived from Germany in New York, he saw his friend, Hubert Joiner, who was just setting sail for Europe. And so it goes, some return home and, like ships that pass in the night, others leave to complete their hitch for Uncle Sam. Sincerely hope Ike finds a way out for those boys in Korea when he makes his promised trip 'over there'!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Luck will leave Columbiana to attend the Alabama-Georgia Tech game in Atlanta.

COLUMBIANA LEADER FEATURES NEW NATIONALLY KNOWN WORK CLOTHES

The Columbiana Leader has, not only sponsored dependable merchandise in Shelby County for over fifty years, it has maintained its leadership in keeping step with the progress the town has made, by bringing to its people nationally known, standard names and brands of clothes, widely appreciated for style, and attractive lines featured, even in the so called "work clothes" they offer.

It is my pleasure this week to present to you "The Dickie Work Clothes" which you may purchase for the first time in this section, in gray, forest green, or khaki colors, and in short, medium or long lengths, and in sleeve lengths to fit you. We are only announcing this nationally known line. Next Saturday, Mr. Bill Witt, Factory Representative, who hails from the Lone Star State, where these clothes are manufactured, will be in the store all day, and he wants to meet Shelby County citizens, and show them this line of goods. I have just been in the store and seen them unpacked—shirts, pants, matched suits, that are swank enough to wear anywhere. Especially appropriate for your work hours or for sports wear.

The Lefkovits Brothers, "Alvin and Norman", in an endeavor to obtain the best for their Shelby County customers want you to come in and register. Thats all you have to do, unless you are numbered among those lucky ones, whose names will be drawn at 10, 12, and 3, when a matched suit will be given away FREE, to the one whose name is called, provided he is in the store at these hours. Then, if you miss this good fortune, and have registered, you may be lucky and receive a set of Western Blue Jeans, if you are present at 11, 12, or 3, o'clock next Saturday!

Now, here's a tip worth taking. I have seen these clothes. They are outstanding in detail, workmanship, and color. You will have the oppotrunity of meeting Mr. Witt, whom I am sure you will like; and if I don't miss my guess, every fellow who "works" will proudly walk out of the Leader with one or more of these suits. And whats more, a suit that fits, not only his needs, but his "figure" and his budget. These "Dickies" are made to fit the long, tall and shorts, and are guaranteed to give you the satisfaction you have been looking for in wearing apparel.

Remember next Saturday, be present at the Columbiana Leader and register. You are not obligated to purchase anything to be eligible to win one of these suits, but, if you are wise, while the stock is complete, you will buy a "Dickie Suit" to suit you and probably return for several more suits to call your own before the season is over.

ll Phases Of Study iven At Thompson

he course of study here has n enriched by the addition of overflow period from the lunch ak when students literally ab-b all the facilities of the school meeting for special interests. ese groups cut across age and de line and the only require- nt is interest in the particular ase of work the group has osen.

At present there are groups nctioning in music, dramatics, d costume designing, art, va- us crafts including leather, eral forms of recreational par- ipation, and reading for pleas- e.

Other groups will form during year as students desire or ed them. There is an unwritten w at this period that no student y study. There are a few stu- nts who find that they need t at that time, students who part-time work in the school, after school hours.

The administration feels that is movement in the school is emplary for much student en- usiasm for the plan has been own.

Thanking God

Lesson for November 23, 1952

IT IS hard to imagine Jesus observing exactly one day in the year, no more, as a Thanksgiving day. This is not to say that the idea of a Thanksgiving Day is a bad one. The Jews of ancient times, whose religious observances Jesus closely kept, had a whole week of celebrations in the fall, corresponding somewhat to our Thanksgiving day. But Jesus' heart of gratitude was not to be limited by the calendar.

• • •

Mistakes About Thanksgiving

There are at least three mistakes which are commonly made with reference to Thanksgiving day. We Christian people make the mistake of limiting our thoughts of gratitude to one day. We count our blessings on this one day of all the year; we go on a kind of "binge" of gratitude.

Dr Foreman

Another sort of mistake, made by a great many, even of those who are called Christians, is to use the day for purposes that have nothing at all to do with it. Instead of worshipful gratitude to God for his blessings of the year past, the day is commonly used by many for eating too much or for getting drunk at football games.

Retail stores use the day to usher in the Christmas season. In fact, not so many years ago the commercial interests of the country were successful in pushing the day back a whole week just in order to have a longer season in which to sell "Christmas" merchandise.

But the purpose of the day is not to make money or to win football games or to get stuffed with turkey.

Grace Before Shakespeare

A third mistake is to be thankful for only one kind of thing: namely, material blessings such as food, security, good crops and good business. Now our Lord was grateful for such things. More than once we read of his taking bread and giving thanks for it. But as he knew that man does not live by bread alone, so man should not give thanks for bread alone. Most of Jesus' prayers of thanksgiving are for other and higher blessings.

Some well-known writer once commented on our custom of saying "Grace before meat"—the old expression for what is now often called "asking the blessing" at the table. Has God no other blessings for us?

When a person sits down with a great play (say by Shakespeare) in his hand, why not a "Grace before Shakespeare?" How many of us have a little prayer of thanksgiving before reading a book of poetry or going out to look up at the starry sky on a clear night, or before opening a letter from an old friend or before going to the hospital or the dentist? (Yes, indeed; the dentist may not seem like a blessing, but try to stand a toothache all by yourself, or try to imagine going to his office, or to the hospital, before the days of modern medicine, surgery, X-rays, anesthetics and sanitation!)

Blessings of the Spirit

Jesus' prayer of thanksgiving, which our lesson Scripture records, however, is on a higher plane still. The particular blessing for which he thanks the Lord of heaven and earth is in the first place a spiritual one, and in the second place it is not something that came to him but to some one else. He thanks God that a spiritual light has been seen by his most humble friends.

Can we say that many of our prayers are on this high level? Many of us never get beyond the "Gimme" stage. And even among those who do rise to the level of real thanksgiving, it is rare enough to find those who are grateful not only for their own blessings but for those received by others; and how seldom does God hear any note of praise for blessings of the spirit!

This is a high plane, to be reached only by high souls, those who have been intimate enough with Christ to absorb his spirit and attitude. Stupid people, who do not have very good minds, cannot be expected to appreciate blessings of the mind; and people with small and wizened souls cannot feel blessings of the spirit. And only those who practice the Golden Rule every day, so as to put themselves into others' places, and who cultivate the gift of sympathy so as to "rejoice with those that rejoice and weep with those that weep," can have the heart to be thankful when others receive the highest blessings of heaven.

GOOD MORNING

Milton Bird

Pvt. Charles R. Spearman
Camp Gordon, Georgia
Dear Charles:

Dan Cupid moved in his week to help me with the stamps and money orders. And when that guy comes in to help me, things like dimples and big eyes and heart-beats get as thick as bees in a clover patch.

Betty and Karen Towns came in one day to get their Mommy's mail. They've got big brown eyes and smiles that reach out and take hold of a guy right under his vest buttons. I found out their names and looked for mail and then followed them down the street to their Pop's flower shop.

Now it wasn't any kind of anniversary at our house. We celebrate birthdays in October and August, and we said "I Do" in March. And I guess I'm not in the dog house, since she hasn't acted or talked like it either. Naw, I was just curious. I wanted to see if Mrs. Towns had any flowers in her shop as pretty as Betty and Karen. And she didn't.

And the very next day I was mailing a package for Sue Turner. She teaches music to the little folks in town, and orders her music from some place in Pennsylvania. And if I could spell it I'd be in congress instead of peddling stamps. I think, way back yonder, they caught two Indians fighting and took their picture and used it for the name of a town.

But I forgot all about how to spell, or read either, when Sue sat Cammille in the window. She was bundled up in a bright blue outfit, and all you could see was big blue eyes and cheeks like a peach and a smile that made you gasp. As if, maybe, they had taken the picture of two camellias, on a bright summer day, and used it for the name of a girl.

Dear George:

They had the homecoming parade on Main last Friday. I stood in the crowd and watched. A guy saw all of his friends and most of his enemies in the crowd that lined both sides of the street all the way from the court house to Horn's Service Station.

There was the class of 1965. The little folks from Mary Nell Skelton's Kindergarten, dressed in football suits and all sorts of classy costumes. And right in the middle pretty Nan Hill, "Miss Homecoming" on that far off tomorrow. I took one lok and decided right away that the old school would be doing more than all right thirteen years from now.

Chuck-a-luck McGhee was sitting on top of the world and grinning at guys like me. And why not. While I was standing there drooling with guys like Dick Ozley and Leo Foster and George Horn, he was floating along through the October air with Cathy Walton and Peggy Stokes and Mary Poole and Emily Mitchell and Anne Shaw.

And then, right at the last, Miss Homecoming and her maids. Golly, George, how pretty can girls get? Annette Thompson was so lovely she made your eyes hurt. And her maids, Mary Fancher and Robbie Kendricks were just the same. Anyway a guy looked at that car he got both eyes full of loveliness.

R. E. Martin, FA USN

Dear Bobby:

They had the Halloween Party at the school house Thursday night. Everybody and his brother was there. Mr. Sullivan let us in for a dime, and turned us over to the spooks and goblins. I lost my heart to an Indian Princess in two minutes. She came with Hazel McCord and we called her Sally and she was so pretty she took my breath. And while I was standing there trying to get it back Donnie Hall and Randy Fowler stole her away before you could say doodle-de-doo backward.

But I managed. I found a seat by Linda White at the bingo table. Linda and I have been going steady ever since I helped her look for a package in September. I think she's pretty and she likes my bald head all right and we haven't had a real spat in eight weeks. But she was gone too after one game. She won a nifty orange tie and I spent a quarter. And in ten seconds I was up to my neck in a pitch game with Tom Minor and R. S. Walton and Ernest Hughes and Joe Foster. We got prizes for a nickle a throw, by dropping four clothes pins in a quart jar, while Mrs. Brinton Owen and Mrs. Herlen Cobb took our nickles and dished out the prizes.

But this was soon over, too, and the next thing I knew I was fishing for a white-icing cake with Martha Bentley and Sue Averytt and Myra Bentley. Mary Warren got the cake, but we managed a quart of honey and everything was fine. I didn't tell the lovelies, but I donated the honey myself. It was last week's drippings from those red-stamped letters that fly off to far away places. Letters that all the pretty girls send to you guys in blue and khaki scattered to the four corners.

After that I went home to see about my car, that was parked under the dark of a tree. But somebody who liked Ike had found it, and had left his message in soap all over the windshield and back window. I guess it was the first time romance had draped itself around the old boat; because when I turned on my flashlight to see if that was all that had happened to it, I could see the slightest trace of a blush dangling from the radiator cap.

PUMPKIN PRESERVES WILL CATCH THE EYE

Very few homemakers know that pumpkins make excellent preserves, believes Lavada Curtis, A. P. I. Extension Food Preservation Specialist.

She points out that they have a very pretty color, and, with the addition of lemon juice make a very nice tart preserve.

"To make this tasty treat," says Miss Curtis, "wash, pare, and cut one pound of pumpkin into strips and then into thin shavings. Spread the chips on a platter, sprinkle with one pound of sugar and let stand eight to ten hours. Put in a porcelian kettle, add one-fourth cup lemon juice, and cook slowly one and one-half hours, or until clear and tender. Skim, pack into jars, and seal. Process in a water-bath canner for 10 minutes.

Farm News

FARM NOTES

1. November is not too late to plant oats, vetch or oat and vetch mixtures. The oat and vetch mixture will make a good hay crop next spring. The oat crop will be needed next June as a grain crop by most farmers.

2. Corn and cotton stalks should be cut as soon as harvest is complete. These stalks on the ground will help to keep the land from washing and be well rotted by spring.

3. Plan now to put idle eroded areas to work. These places detract from the farm and should be prepared and planted to kudzu, sericea or some other sod crops to furnish grazing and prevent erosion.

4. November is a good month to build new terraces and plow our old terraces. Good farmers will see that adequate water disposal areas are established for new terraces.

5. Now is a good time to build stock watering ponds while the weather is dry and the heavy machinery can go in the low places. These ponds are good for fish as well as stock water.

Use a mixture of table salt and lemon juice for brightening copper vessels that have become blackened by contact with fire. Rinse them with tepid water.

BEST SOILS FORMED UNDER GRASS SODS

Alabama's best soils were formed under grass sods, and depleted soils are most rapidly rebuilt and most effectively conserved where good sods are maintained.

And S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist, reminds farmers that good pastures hold the soil in place and add humas and plant food which boost yields of crops that follow.

LICE ON CATTLE ARE MULTIPLYING RAPIDLY

With cold weather here, it's a sure thing that lice are multiplying rapidly on all cattle.

W. A. Ruffin, API Extension entomologist, reminds cattlemen that lice seriously damage beef and dairy cattle during the fall and winter months. Also, they will reduce milk production and gains made by beef animals.

Ruffin said these pests can be controlled by spraying or dusting animals with DDT or rotenone. Lice on beef cattle can be killed with a spray mixture containing five to eight pounds of 50 per cent wettable DDT in 100 gallons of water. Dairy animals should be treated with eight pounds of 50 per cent wettable methoxychlor in 100 gallons of water.

The specialist added that if only a few animals are to be treated, it may be easier to control lice by dusting them. A dust that contains five per cent DDT should be used for treating beef animals. Dairy cattle can be treated with a dust that co per cent rotenone.

"Regardless of what mat is used for lice, it is wise treat animals twice," said Ruffi
"Treatments should be ma about 15 days apart.".

Light-duty trucks that stand up!

Just one of the many International light-duty stake truck models, available in ½, ¾, and 1-ton sizes, with 7½ and 8½-foot bodies.

Lots of owners tell us that you have to operate an International light-duty truck for a couple of years to appreciate just how good it is.

That's true. Internationals are built to grow old profitably, but you can find plenty to appreciate in a hurry.

A few minutes behind the wheel will show you what a pleasure an International is to handle. You'll get a kick out of the power and pickup of an engine that's easy on gas and oil. You'll ride in a new kind of comfort in the roomiest cab of them all.

There's no need to settle for less than an International.

- International light-duty trucks—½, ¾, and 1-ton sizes, 115, 127, and 134-in. wheelbases. Body types include pickup, stake, panel, Metro, utility and many others.
- Real power plants! Silver Diamond valve-in-head engines are rugged, packed with extra power. Engineered to save you plenty on gasoline and maintenance.
- They handle easily! International's great Super-steering system takes the work out of truck driving. Wider front axles make possible a full 37° turning angle for greater maneuverability. You'll find Internationals a pleasure to drive.
- Relax in armchair comfort! Drivers designed it for drivers—and the Comfo-Vision Cab is the roomiest, most comfortable cab on the road. The big seat holds three men with ease. The one-piece Sweepsight windshield means perfect visibility. And the new green-tinted, non-glare safety glass is available.

Better roads mean a better America

Let us give you the complete story about International light-duty trucks. Come in soon.

Bid Her Welcome

WHEN she introduces herself as an Alabama Power Company home service advisor, bid her welcome. She'll have nothing to sell you. She may be able to tell you how you can get even more enjoyment from the electrical appliances you already have. She may be able to show you how to make some simple repair—such as replacing a worn lamp cord.

She may be able to give you some easy-to-follow suggestions about the lighting in your home, so that you can read or work with greater comfort. . . . so that the children can do their homework without eyestrain.

There is no charge for the services of our home service advisors. Well trained, capable women, their sole duty is to help our home customers get the most value from their electrical appliances and electric service.

A request to our nearest office will bring an early visit from one of them.

B. F. Hatchett and G. C. Starcher

The Homer Jacksons, Senior and Junior, of Oakhaven Farm, Wilsonville, took visitors and us, on a tour of that farm just before showers ended our fall drought.

We were surprised to find that there was still sufficient grazing to carry their large herds of Whiteface cattle.

Early planted oats and crimson clover, and Ky. 31 fescue and ladiho were the two combinations being grazed now. A 2½ acre planting of button clover is up to a fine stand, as is the large field of Chapel Hill Rescue grass and crimson clover.

One of the visitors, Roy Eastis, was particularly interested in the button clover. "I believe the Chapel Hill Rescue and button clover I have in combination on my farm will be the best winter grazing for our county."

Experiences of these and many other District Cooperators prove the great value of Sericea for summer grazing and reseeding, or early planted small grains and legumes for winter grazing.

To keep casters from dropping out of furniture legs, fill the hole in the bottom of the leg with melted paraffin and immediately insert the caster.

Almost half of the total decrease of 3,000 initial claims was concentrated in Jefferson county.

Most men think twice before leaving their wives home alone at nights—first an excuse for going out, and then a reason why she can't come along.

Bigger Demand For Farm Credit

Short feed crops, parched pastures, empty barns, and the sharp break in prices of cattle and lower prices for cotton, coupled with high cost of farming, are combining to create a big demand for farm credit, A. S. Miree, Secretary-Treasurer of the Mt. Olive National Farm Loan Association, said this week.

Mr. Miree reported that the price of cattle has dropped from 30 to 40 per cent during the past three months, and the value of cotton is down $15.00 to $20.00 per bale. Many farmers have little or no hay and pasture are practically bare.

Many farmers will have to buy hay and cottonseed meal to carry their cattle through the winter. He said it will take at least one ton of hay and one sack of meal to winter a mature animal. This means a cost of $35.00 to $50.00 per cow.

As a result of the drouth that has cut feed crops and burned pastures, and the drop in cotton and cattle prices which has reduced cash income, many farmers are finding it necessary to obtain long-term loans to refinance short-term debts, buy feed, and do other jobs, Mr. Miree stated.

He said the Mt. Olive National Farm Loan Association stands ready to help farmers get land bank loans to meet their credit needs.

EXAMINATIONS FOR FUTURE VACANCIES!

THE PRESIDENTIAL CONFERENCE

This week finds the eyes of a nation focused on Washington, D. C., where the first conference is being held between the newly chosen President-to-be-Gen. Ike Eisenhower, and President Harry Truman. From this historic meeting we hope there will emerge a plan that will assure us peace and freedom, with honor and liberty. As someone has previously stated, "Let us never seek war, yet may we never surrender the the American way of life; may we never give up the right as Americans to think, talk, and worship, each according to his own way, yet, may we be always united, a nation indivisible, in the common defense; may we enjoy and be grateful for the richness of our land, yet be willing to endure the hardships of free men determined to keep a democratic society".

A hopeful people anxiously await the outcome of this presidential conference. The decisions made by these two Americans, and thier co-workers, may shape the future destiny of our nation.

WELFARE OFFICES WILL CLOSE FOR THANKSGIVING HOLIDAYS

Mrs. Nell Fulton, Shelby County Director of Public Welfare, states that the offices in Columbiana will be closed on Thursday and Friday, November 27 and 28 for the holidays. Mrs. Fulton is following instructions she has received from State Welfare Director, Bill Dorrough.

All persons having any business with the County Welfare Department should arrange to take care of it before Thursday, November 27th.

CIRCUIT COURT CONTINUES

The last term of the Shelby County Circuit Court is being held this week as criminal cases docketed are being tried by presiding Judge, W. W. Wallace. Newly elected Judge, Arthur L. Hardegree, will asume the responsibilities of this office on January 15, 1953, at which time Judge W. W. Wallace will become a member of the Supernumerary Judges of Alabama, and will be subject to call by Chief Justice Ed Livingston, to go anywhere in the state as a Supply Judge when needed.

Judge Wallace is completing his 18th year of service as Judge of the 18th Judicial Circuit.

MRS. RUX CARTER, TOWN'S 'GRACIOUS LADY'

Columbiana citizens are justifiably proud of their representative in the Birmingham News Pictorial Gallery of 'Gracious Ladies of Alabama'. In selecting Mrs. Rux Carter for this signal honor, the News could not have chosen a more worthy exponent of southern charm blessed with a more gracious personality, than Jane Fowler Carter.

Mrs. Carter beautifully combines the artistic with the practical side of living and blends them as perfectly in her every day life as colors are blended in the brightest of rainbows. We, in Columbiana deeply appreciate this recognition by the News of this truly "Gracious Lady", and we hope to get a replica of Mrs. Carter's photograph, and include it in our "Penpoint Sketches" for historic reference in years to come of those to whom this town owes much today for its successful achievements in all worthwhile endeavors. We can think of no one who more consistently portrays the term "Gracious Lady" than our own Jane Fowler Carter.

Recreation Training Course To Be Given Leaders In County

"Recreation is now recognized as a basic human need," according to Helen M. Dauncy, a specialist in leadership training with the National Recreation Association in New York City who will be in Shelby County to conduct a course for recreation workers and teachers.

The training course will be at Columbiana in the afternoon and in Siluria at night from Monday, December 8, through Thursday, December 11 under the sponsorship of the Shelby County Board of Education and the National Recreation Association. The course is open to any interested person and all who take it are guaranteed a good time. Learning by doing is the basis of Miss Dauncy's teaching methods.

Mr. W. W. Elliott, the chairman of the Planning Committee, emphasized the fact that the course is not planned exclusively for professional recreation workers. Teachers will find in it new ways to keep their pupils out of mischief on rainy days; parents can learn much about things to do for fun in the home; volunteer leaders in young peoples groups and in adult groups who are looking for recreation ideas will get them at these training courses.

Those who are interested in taking the sourse and can attend all four days—either in the afternoon at Columbiana, or at night at Siluria, should contact one of the following people: W. W. Elliott, Mrs. C. E. Jones, Miss Anita King, L. F. Rogers, and Miss Ailene Pope, Columbiana. Dr. R. H. Johnson, Mrs. Mary C. Martin, Mrs. Doris McCauley, Siluria.

THREE MEETING SCHEDULED FOR COTTON LEADERS

The National Cotton Council has announced three conferences at Memphis, between now and the end of January which will be devoted to increased efficiency in cotton production.

The second annual conference on Herbicidal Weed Control in Cotton is scheduled in Memphis December 4-5. Attendance will be limited to representatives of public and private agencies in weed control work. It will be a working-discussion type meeting, the Council reported.

Several hundred entomologists, insecticide manufacturers, makers of application equipment, cotton producers and others concerned with the problem of cotton insect control will meet at Memphis, December 10-11, for the Sixth Annual Insect Control Conference. The Council said strong emphasis would be placed on prevention of the spread of the dread pink bollworm.

The 1953 Beltwide Defoliation Conference is scheduled at Memphis, January 15-16, the Council announced. Emphasis will be put on educational phases of defoliation—how farmers can put in practice results of reasearch in use of chemicals to cause the cotton plant to shed its leaves.

POULTRY FUTURE LOOKS BRIGHT

The newly formed Alabama Poultry Processors Association has chosen Marshall Durbin, Birmingham, as its first president.

Some 45 processors, meeting in Auburn recently, installed another Magic City member, H. B. Garrett, as secretary. The group heard Auburn extension poultryman John Weeks declare that the the broiler industry "has a better future than any other enterprise in Alabama."

DOROTHY PERKINS TO HEAD SELDEN'S STAFF IN CAPITAL

Miss Dorothy Perkins of Tuscaloosa, Red Cross worker and former teacher in the schools of her home town, has been appointed executive secretary to Armistead I. Selden, Jr., newly elected congressman from the Sixth Alabama District.

In announcing the appointment of Miss Perkins to head up his office force in Washington, Mr. Selden said:

"I feel most fortunate in getting a person of Miss Perkins' ability, experience and background for this important job. She comes to me highly recommended, and I believe that she will serve the people of my district most effectively. Her personnel experience with the Red Cross especially equips her for this position."

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Herbert Perkins, of Tuscaloosa, she was born and reared in the Druid City. She attended the Tuscaloosa schools, and when in her junior year at Tuscaloosa High, she was selected as a member of the Druid Chapter, National Honor Society.

Majoring in public school music, she graduated from the University of Alabama with an A. B. degree. While a student at the University, she taught music in the city schools. After her graduation, she spent three years in Lamar County as a teacher of public school music. In 1943 she went into defense work at Brookley Field. The following year, she came back to Tuscaloosa as supervisor of the music program in the elementary schools and Junior High.

Miss Perkins joined the American Red Cross in 1945, and spent two years in Europe. She was stationed in both Austria and Germany. Since her return to this country, she has continued with the Red Cross. She spent a year at the V. A. Hospital in Jackson, Mississippi, as assistant field director. In 1948 she became a general field representative and did this work in Georgia until a few weeks ago, when she transferred to Middle Mississippi.

Miss Perkins is a Methodist, and has been active in the work of the Wesleyan Foundation.

HUNTING BAN LIFTED

State Conservation Director E. M. McGowin has lifted the ban on Alabama hunting following a general rain which did much to dispel forest fire danger, and gave new life to winter crops in the state.

R. J. Ozley Announces Start Of Christmas Seal Campaign

Now comes the time to get out the voté— for Christmas Seals and the fight against tuberculosis, announced Mr. R. J. Ozley, president of the Shelby County Tuberculosis Association.

The message of the Christmas Seal, how it has been fighting TB for 46 years, will be spread wide throughout Shelby County beginning next week.

Monday is the day millions of Seals will find their way into homes all over Alabama.

The design of the 1952 Christmas Seal is a simple one. It features a glowing candle in an old-fashioned, brass candleholder, the glow of the candle reflecting on the red double-barred cross which has become the traditional insignia of the crusade against TB.

There are at least 10,000 known cases of tuberculosis in Alabama right now, and it is estimated by health authorities this number would be doubled if all cases were found.

Ninety-four cents of every dollar contributed in this annual drive stays in Alabama—to fight the disease at home— while six cents supports the search for new drugs and new methods of attacking this killer on the national level.

Alabama rates at the bottom of all states in providing facilities to curb TB. More hospital beds, more trained medical personnel, and more money to treat victims are the outstanding needs.

Christmas Seals tell this story, and the money they bring in helps keep the problem before the people throughout the year.

Every Alabama county is active in this campaign. Leaders are out to make this the most successful Christmas Seal Sale in history.

BAPTIST TRAINING UNION 'M' NIGHT AT SILURIA DECEMBER 8

The annual "M" Night, a mobilization meeting, for all Training Union Forces of all Baptist Churches of the Shelby Association is to be held at Siluria Baptist Church on Monday night, December 8th, says G. C. Moore, Jr., newly elected Director of Associational Work.

Rev. James Butler, Pastor of the West End Baptist Church, in Birmingham, has been selected as main speaker on the program which will include several features projecting goals for the year 1953.

Hundreds of similar meetings will be held throughout the Southland in most of the associations which join in on this "Simultaneous" meeting to launch the program of Training in the various churches for the new year. All churches are urged to make plans to attend. The goal is 400. Let's beat this goal and help reach the Southwide goal that night of 250,000 people.

An attendance Banner will also be at stake to the church having the highest per cent of enrollment present that night.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: Will Morgan made an ideal spy. His experiences with the Indians as the "Silent Death", and as a scout, were invaluable. In searching for his promised bride, a prisoner of the savages, he had learned them well. It was thus easy for him to pose as an Indian chief, White Panther, who he greatly resembled, get the information that the British would supply arms to the Indians, and also learn that his beloved was a prisoner of the real White Panther. He discovered an old friend, Ann Randall, in the Indian village, and assisted her to freedom with him. Making this intelligence report to General Wayne, he tells their weakness.

CHAPTER XX

"The nature of the beast. Even with all the lake warriors they'll still be Indians. No discipline, no organized supply system. They might wage endless war in small parties but they will run out of food if they have to remain in one spot long as a group. Keep 'em busy for a few days without a real battle and half of them will slip away to hunt food. Then a quick stroke will smash the balance and leave the scattered bands to be cleaned up at leisure."

He settled back somewhat abashed at the way he had been handing out advice to General Anthony Wayne. The general smiled as though reading the thought. "I think that's it," he agreed. "You had better consider yourself on my staff henceforth. I'm going to need you."

Will stammered his thanks but objected. "I want to go on a scout trip into the western Miami country," he said slowly. "You recall that I told you how the Indians took the girl I was to marry? Well, I feel certain that she is alive and a captive there. I want to go after her."

Wayne frowned. "It would be suicide!" he exclaimed.

"I did it once. Why not again?"

"This would be different. The country is full of war parties and it's getting worse every day. You would have to pass through the greatest concentration of Indians in history. Besides, if she is still alive she will probably be all right until this campaign is over."

Will Bids Goodbye To Young Ann Randall

Will shrugged uneasily. "There's something else, General. I brought a girl back from the Wyandot country with me and I've got to do something about her before long. She's getting a bit . . . well, you know what I mean."

Wayne laughed. "I think I understand. You'd rather risk the Miamis than her. Is she as bad as that?"

"No. Not at all. She's rather a fine woman and I owe her a lot—but I've spent all this time living for just one thing and I can't let anything interfere."

Wayne nodded more seriously. "What can I do?" he asked briefly.

"See that she gets started east. She must have folks somewhere back there."

A couple of weeks passed during which Will worked early and late with the scouts. The supply route had to be guarded closely as final munitions came up and the Indian pressure increased. He deliberately avoided Ann but she was getting plenty of attention from an artillery lieutenant and a Kaintuck volunteer cavalry captain who bore the heroic name of Boone. On the few occasions when Will met her she seemd disgruntled at his neglect and he was content to let the breach widen.

Then, one evening as he came in from a patrol, she hailed him from the doorway of the cabin she occupied. "I'm leaving for Fort Washington in the morning," she said significantly. "General Wayne asked me to leave before the campaign starts. I'm going with a wagon train under command of Captain Boone."

Will understood the implications but merely replied, "Good idea. You'll be safer there."

She stared at him curiously for a moment, then dropped her eyes. "You don't care if I go?"

He did not reply for some time and she went on quickly, "I know I'm a bother to you. I just hoped for too much."

Before he realized what she was about she threw both arms around him and kissed him. "That's for goodbye," she said slowly. "Thanks for bringing me back. I'll never forget you . . . and I hope you find Mary."

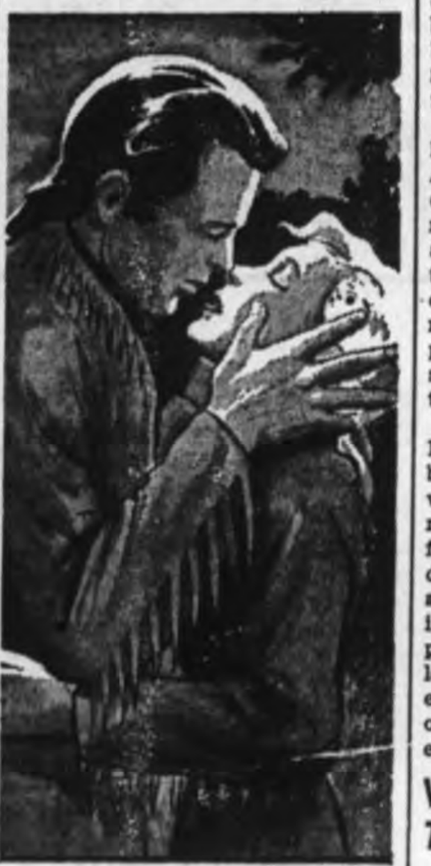
"You make it very difficult for me," he told her. "You were a great partner—and I take back all the mean things I said about you back there in Pittsburgh. I guess I was pretty blind."

He took her face between his hands, kissing her firmly before turning away. Then without looking back he strode off to the cabin he shared with some other scouts. That was over. It did not leave him very happy to have done it that way—or to have done it at all—but there had been no choice.

Next morning a courier arrived with word that the Indians were gathering in force around Fort Recovery. The time for action had arrived and the army prepared to move to the relief of the threatened post. Will did not see Ann again before he went out with the advance and he was just as well pleased. There could be no purpose of reopening the wound.

The relief column marched swiftly but arrived too late to be of any assistance, the garrison having repelled the attack in a manner which seemed certain to disconcert the Indians. Almost no losses had been suffered by the defenders while they had inflicted heavy casualties upon the enemy. The advance units of the army continued the fight, harassing the Indians continuously until Wayne ordered a general advance by his entire force. The moment for the big blow had come.

Dividing his time between headquarters and patrol work, Will could not help but see the vast difference between this movement and that blundering march of St. Clair's army. The column moved briskly, encountering no opposition as they advanced along the upper Maumee, but there was no over-confidence. Flanks were protected, scouts were out all the time and the entire force acted with precision and discipline. It was a subject for thought when one remembered that the men under Wayne were no better caliber than the ones St. Clair had had. The whole difference was in training and preparation. Raw militia had become an army.



He took her face between his hands, kissing her firmly before turning away.

The Miami towns at the junction of the Auglaize were taken and destroyed without much of a fight, a strong fort rising in their stead. With a thought to the British post so short a distance downstream the place was named Fort Defiance.

Gen. Wayne Prepares To Smash the Tribes

From this base Wayne prepared for the final blow. He sent women, children and wounded prisoners ahead with an ultimatum to the chiefs. Will translated the message to the prisoners, mixing in the proper amount of braggadocio for Indian consumption. "Tell your chiefs that we have no wish to harm the peaceful. We send you along with kindness but we remind you that we have already shown our power over your warriors. The White-Chief-Who-Never-Sleeps will destroy any warriors who fail to make peace. They must send tokens of peace immediately or they will be hunted down like rabbits. Tell them these words were spoken to you by the one who passed among you as White Panther."

The latter part was an inspiration of the moment, added when he realized that they knew him. There was no comment from the stolid prisoners and they were sent off, the army going on with its final preparations in anticipation of the enemy's refusal to talk peace. Too many tribes had come to fight for there to be any immediate surrender. It would mean loss of face for the group knuckling under first.

On the other hand this mixture of tribes was a weakness. Soon the more distant bands would weary of retreating and would sneak away to their own unthreatened lands.

With this in mind there was a three-day delay before the army moved on. Another three days brought them to Roche du Bout where another crude fort was thrown up to protect the stores. The scouts reported Indians ahead in force, waiting to be attacked, and Wayne looked slantwise at Morgan. "Is this where we keep them cooling their heels?" he asked. "It's your idea so you'd better make the decisions."

"I think this is the time," Will agreed promptly. "Give them a few days and they'll lose half of their force."

"What about our men? They're keyed up now."

"Let them know the meaning of the delay. They'll appreciate the stategy and your confidence in telling them. The time can be used in perfecting tactics."

The commander turned to face his half-resentful aides. "I'm taking that advice," he said flatly. "Pass the word. When we advance there is to be no close order firing. The infantry will charge with the bayonet until the enemy shows himself. Then they will fire only at specific targets. The cavalry must keep the Indians from making an organized stand. That is all. Have the men ready to advance at short notice."

A misty dawn was slipping through the forest when Morgan moved out ahead of the left flanking column. Three days of delay were over; the army was advancing against the Indian defenses. Will knew that the savages held a strong position, his scouting expeditions having revealed their well-chosen defense line in a tangled thicket where a tornado had made a natural entanglement of fallen trees. It was going to be a formidable position to take by storm and Will wondered whether his advice would prove valuable. Would Indian desertions have been numerous enough to offset the disparity in numbers and defensive strength?

He had spent an uneasy three days, knowing that the responsibility for delaying the attack had been squarely on his shoulders. Should the delay prove ineffective the fault would be his.

Nor had the interval improved his mood otherwise. The thought of Ann Randall moving away to the eastward mingled with his eagerness to get on with the campaign against the Miamis. Now was the time for him to pursue the search of the Miami villages—and yet his mind insisted on dwelling upon a picture of a blond girl who had been such a sturdy companion in trouble.

He tried to keep his thoughts on Mary as he struck out into the brush. This would be the battle which would open the way to her rescue—or would forever seal her fate. The fact that it might spell doom for the would-be rescuer was a matter which he preferred to ignore. After three years of campaigning against the Indians he had learned to control such thoughts, even though he now found those other ideas of Ann beyond his power to suppress.

Will Gets Opportunity To Even an Old Score

His column was to close in from the left as soon as the main force struck the Indian center. Knowing the tendency of the savages to mass their strength on the flanks, Wayne was depending on a strong center blow to disorganize them. Once the enemy was split into two groups the cavalry would dash in to deliver the final thrusts.

The flankers advanced several hundred yards without sight of an Indian and Will began to worry. Where were the Indian flank defenders?

Then there was a burst of firing from the center, its volume telling its story. Little Turtle and his counsellors had done the unexpected. They had massed their strength where Wayne had depended on finding weakness. Now the weak American center was driving upon the full strength of the Indian confederacy.

The flanking column raced toward the sound of conflict, only two companies continuing as planned. Morgan had run only some two hundred yards when his ear caught a note which his brain almost refused to credit. The sounds of battle were shifting. It was a running fight—toward the Indian rear!

He closed in on the fallen timbers which had been the main line of Indian defense, his rifle cracking with deadly accuracy whenever a fleeing Indian appeared. Everywhere the troops were pressing forward, the enemy in panic.

In an unbelievably short time the clearing and the blockhouses of the English fort appeared through the trees and Will was just in time to see the great gates shut in the faces of the flying savages. The English had permitted a few to enter but had closed the portals against the others as American troops came into sight.

As Morgan became aware of the British action, he found himself in the center of a rapid drama. From a clump of bushes just ahead of him two figures rose to lash out with tomahawks at a young soldier who was racing toward the clearing. One was a pudgy white man, poorly disguised as an Indian, and the other was the sullen Bear Nose. Will fired hastily but was too late to save the trooper, Tobe Ansley's axe reaching its mark a split second before the traitor fell dead with a bullet in his heart.

Morgan did not pause to reload but went after the Indian with his knife. Something of the rage he had known after the Bolden massacre swept over him and he did not even pause to glance at Ansley. It was time to settle matters with Bear Nose.

The burly Indian was a runner in spite of his bulk and they were almost under the guns of the British fort when Will leaped upon his shoulders and bore him to the ground. Bear Nose twisted quickly and lashed out with his knife, the brawny body too well greased for Morgan to hold his grip. The Indian let out a grunt as he recognized his antagonist and for several desperate moments the major battle went on unheeded as the bitter personal quarrel whirled to its deadly finish.

GM Opens $194,000 Highway Contest

HEADQUARTERS
GENERAL MOTORS
Better Highways Awards Contest

FROM DETROIT headquarters, thousands of entry blanks and rule books were being mailed out this week to contestants in the General Motors Better Highways Awards Contest.

The contest is the largest of its kind ever attempted and GM is offering 162 prizes, totaling $194,000 for the best essays on the subject, "How to Plan and Pay for the Safe and Adequate Roads We Need."

Open to every man and woman in the United States, the contest offers a first national award of $25,000; second place nationally, $10,000; third place, $5,000; and three national honorable mentions of $3,000 each. In addition, there will be nine separate regional awards of $2,500 each. Finally, first place winners in each of the 48 states plus the District of Columbia will receive $1,500 each. Two honorable mention awards for each state and the District of Columbia will be $500 each, a total of 98 state honorable mentions.

GM is sponsoring the essay writing contest, which closes on March 1, 1953, in an effort to stimulate "more nation-wide thinking, discussion and understanding of the facts of our current highways requirements."

Entry blanks, rule books and further information about the contest may be obtained at any GM passenger car or truck dealer in the U. S. or by writing to General Motors Better Highways Awards Contest, General Motors Building, Detroit 2, Mich.

WHAT THE PEDESTRIAN SHOULD KEEP IN MIND

Accident reports show that the great majority of pedestrians injured at any one time were violating a definite regulation designed to save their lives, reveals Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist.

In one instance, she stated that 55 per cent of the pedestrians killed in cities were using the roadway beteween intersections. Also, approximately three-fourths of the pedestrians killed in accidents between five and eight o'clock are killed during the season when darkness comes during these hours.

"On the basis of weight and strength," warned the specialist, "the pedestrian is so outclassed by any car that strikes him that his chance of avoiding death is slim, and his chances of avoiding injury are practically nonexistent."

Veterans' Column
State Dept. of Veterans' Affairs

E. J. SULLIVAN, VSO

It seems that many Korean Veterans are having quite a bit of trouble in getting lined up on the job training program under the Korean GI Bill. Many of these veterans, having applied for training, have received letters from the Veterans' Administration tellhing them that their application has been disapproved because the business establishment with whom they are connected has not been approved to train veterans under the Bill.

Under the provision of the law, veterans are not permitted to train under the GI Bill until the establishment offering the training has been approved. Here in the State of Alabama, the State Department of Education has been designated as the approving agency. This means that the Department of Education must make some sort of an inspection to determine whether or not the establishment is in position to adequately train those who wish to learn a trade. As we all know, the Department of Education at the present time does not have sufficient personnel to cover the entire state for approving these establishments. Then, too, we must realize that it takes quite a bit of money to set up such approval systems From what we can learn, the Veterans' Administration has made no financial allowances for such approval system.

Early this week the Department of Education started its inspectors out to cover the state to examine the establishments which have applied for approval to train Korean veterans and it appears that this program will soon be functioning. It is true that many business establishments were approved to give training under the World War II GI Bill. However, they were approved under the laws which governed at that particular time and now must be Re-Approved under Public Law 550, which is commonly referred to as the Korean GI Bill.

You who are attending State Schools of higher learning, will not have any trouble in getting your course approved because these institutions are already approved by the State Department Of Education. High Schools must apply individually to the Department Of Education to be approved.

SPRING CREEK

Sunday, November 9, was "Exchange Day" in the churches of Birmingham Prebytery. The pastors exchanged pulpits, and in some instances elders were asked to fill in. Such was the case at Spring Creek. Elder Matthews from First Church in North Birmingham brought the morning message and did an excellent job. At the noon hour a picnic lunch was enjoyed together out on the church yard table.

Achievement Day for the Shelby County Home Demonstration Clubs began with a tour of new and improved homes of a few club members. Midday the group of over 150 members met at the Spring Creek Church for lunch, which was served by Spring Creek-Valley Grove members from a long table put on the church ground. Immediately after lunch the group assembled in the church for election and installation of officers and other official business. The tour was concluded at Mrs. Jones, in Ebenezer with a tea honoring Mrs. Frank Baker, retiring President of Alabama Council.

Relatives and friends of Bobby Ingram join him in being happy over his return to civilian life. Mr. and Mrs. Ingram and baby son are now living near Baker's Dairy, but they plan to move in their newly purchased home first of the year. They have bought the Clark Ingram farm. Bobby got his job back with T. C. I. and is now working there.

Mrs. A. A. Blackerby continues ill at her home, but is much improved. Friends are earnestly wishing a speedy recovery for her.

Recent visitors of Mrs. Carrie Ingram were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Alexander and Mr. and Mrs. Hall and baby of Fairfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Knowles and little daughter, Melissa were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Good, Steve and Ann.

Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Ingram and little son, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Ingram, June, Ann and Jackie Ingram spent Sunday with Mr. Ben McLaughlin and family at Brighton.

Mrs. Jack Shipley visited in Birmingham part of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Sanders, Clark and Pat Sanders of Blount Springs, were last week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sanders.

Mr. and Mrs. Billings of Birmingham came down last Sunday to visit the B. C. Atkinsons. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson bought the farm known by most people as the J. E. Roach place. They are anxiously awaiting the return of their son from Korea.

the afternoon they attended the meeting of Calera Garden Club, where Mr. Mauldin was guest speaker on their program.

It was quite a thrill seeing our own Dora Grace Frost, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Frost on television and listening to her over Don McNeil's Breakfast Club during her recent trip to Chicago.

Mr. R. S. Mauldin, of Hueytown spent last Tuesday with his sister, Mrs. Lawson Ingram. In

PASTOR HONORED

The new manse was the scene of one of New Hope's most delightful social events Saturday evening, when Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Bright were honored with a surprise Food Shower.

The party gathered at the Presbyterian Church, then proceeded to the home of their pastor to greet him with the "Welcome" carol. Mrs. Carl Street and Mrs. W. E. Sorrell were hostesses for the occasion, and entertained the guests with games and contests.

A variety of canned and fresh foods and gifts were placed on the table in the dining room, and the pastor and his wife responded with expressions of their appreciation.

The hostess served tempting refreshments to more than thirty guests who enjoyed the occasion.

NAVY DEPARTMENT NEEDS STENOGRAPHERS AND TYPISTS

Miss Edythe Malcom, Civilian Navy Representative of the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., is in Birmingham, Alabama, for a limited time only, to interview stenographers and typists for positions with the Navy Department in Washington, D. C.

The positions are under the Federal Civil Service system and carry GS-3 and GS-4 Civil Service ratings with entrance salaries of $2950 and $3175 per year—salaries being based on a 40-hour week.

Under the present regulations, vacations with pay are earned each year and 13 days sick leave with pay are earned yearly. The minimum age for employment is 18 years and the positions are available in Washington, D. C. only.

Qualification requirements for the positions include the ability to type 40 words a minute and pass a general clerical test. Applicants for stenographic positions must be able to take dictation at the rate of 80 words a minute.

Interested applicants will be given full information regarding living conditions and recreational opportunities. The Navy Department will make accommodations and will assist in obtaining permanent housing for all applicants who are selected for employment.

Miss Malcolm is located at the Navy Recruiting Station, Post Office Building, Birmingham. Interviewing hours are from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. daily. For special appointments call 4-1741.

Getting Around with Mac Brown

Last week I was in Montgomery and watched the parade there. I like parades, military music and marching bands, and they had some good ones. Lots of them were from high schools in different Alabama towns.

Of course, me being a truck driver I was very interested in the use of trucks in the parade. One completely motorized military unit passed by. In each truck about twenty soldiers were seated, face to face with their rifles in their hands. Most people don't realize how much it helps to have trucks to transport not only supplies but the soldiers too—to bring them into position quickly and not worn out from marching.

The importance of a large, healthy civilian trucking system as a defense asset is realized in some places. I read not long ago where one European country is subsidizing truck manufacturers in order to build up their civilian truck fleet for possible use in time of war.

Over here it seems at times we are mighty short-sighted in this respect. Some people want to hamper truck operators—regulate and tax them right out of business because they compete with other transportation systems Maybe before its too late Americans will wake up, too, and start boosting trucks and truckers instead of hounding them.

Calera School Makes Progress

Wheels of progress continue to turn at Calera School as the 1952-53 session enters it's third month.

The beautification program adopted by the P. T. A. went into full swing with the removal of all old shrubbery around the building.

New plants and shrubs have been purchased by the P. T. A. and will be set out within the next few days.

All of the work and planting will be guided by a landscape Architects plan drawn two years ago.

The members of the local P. T. A. believe this project, when completed, will give Calera the most attractive campus in Shelby county.

In addition to the landscaping, walkways will be added and the lawn improved.

The high school boys, under the direction of Mr. Kenneth McRae, have been assisted by local citizens who have cooperated in providing trucks and tractors.

Since the students and faculty adopted the slogan "Better Times Ahead for Calera School", last year many improvements have taken place.

The interior of the building has undergone a thorough cleaning. The Cafeteria has had the kitchen enlarged, tables painted and floors thoroughly cleaned. A new electric hot water heater will be installed in the next few days.

Rest rooms that have been a problem have been cleaned, painted along with a large expenditure of money to improve the plumbing facilities.

The color scheme of several of the class rooms have undergone a change from hard, harsh colors to soft green which tend to reduce eye strain. All blackboards have been refinished in green and has improved the room appearance.

New chair desk have been purchased for two class rooms, these removing badly worn out seats.

A new science demonstration table has been installed in the science room and it is being used for classes in General Science, Biology, and Chemistry.

The library is also getting more attention. Twenty magazines are placed in the reading room each month. Many new books have been added and present plans call for more being placed on the shelves this month.

New typewriters and business machines have been added to the Commercial Department and new student chairs have been purchased.

In the Home Ec. Department, new chairs have been purchased by the P. T. A. An electric refrigerator, given by the Civitan Club and a new hot water heater has been added through the efforts of the Home E. students, has greatly improved this department of the school.

The students in several of the grades have been working to improve the appearance of their rooms. The ninth grade, under the guidance of Mrs. Pearl White, have been raising money to sand and do over the floors of their room. Eighth grade students, with the help of their home room teacher, Mrs. Mabel Thornton, have done some painting and hope to soon be able to purchase venetian blinds and thus complete a project started last year.

In the Elementary school, students have not stood idly by while their older brothers and sisters worked. The sixth grade, with their teacher, Mrs. Joyce Mabry, started a room improvement early in September. At the present time they have painted furniture, bought a new linoleum rug and have had floors scrubbed and refinished.

The fourth and fifth grades are also enjoying rooms where improvements have taken place. With the help of their teacher, Mrs. Thelma Findley, the fifth grade students have hung drapes and had their floors refinished.

Miss Lorraine McLaughlin and her fourth grade have had the floor redone.

REMOVE STORAGE SPOTS FOUND ON WOOL DRESSES

Those who are counting on wearing last year's wool dresses will want to check for spots caused by dampness and mildew.

"Maybe the spots can be removed at home," suggests Kathleen Thompson, API Extension clothing specialist. "Brush the spot carefully with a soft cloth. When the spot is completely removed, press the wool garment with a warm iron."

J. D. MILAM RECEIVES CASH AWARD FOR SUGGESTION

On October 30, 1952, Mr. J. D. Milam, who resides at Vincent, Alabama, received a cash award of $10 for a suggestion which improved work operations at Alabama Ordnance Works. The check was presented by Capt. Angelo J. Mini, Executive Officer of Alabama Ordnance Works, Sylacauga, in the presence of Mr. Milam's supervisor and fellow crew members. This suggestion award facilitates the handling of heavy equipment with roustabout cranes and is being used at this facility. Mr. Milam has been employed as a Rigger at Alabama Ordnance Works since November 1947.

The Army Efficiency Awards Program is an aggressive effort on the Army's part to improve its operations and effect economics through the medium of employee suggestions. The award presented today was Mr. Milam's fourth cash award for suggestions adopted and put into effect during his employment at Alabama Ordnance Works.

DR. WILLIAM E. MORRIS METHODIST MINISTER, DIES

Dr. William Edward (Ed) Morris, 82, one of the North Alabama's most beloved Methodist Ministers, died Saturday in a Birmingham hospital after a brief illness.

Funeral services were held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday at the Norwood Methodist Church. Bishop Clare Purcell, the Rev. Fagan Thompson, the Rev. M. E. Lazenby and the Rev. R. Lawrence Dill Jr., officiated. Burial in Elmwood Cemetery.

A native of Greensboro, Dr. Morris served as minister of Ensley First, Sylacauga, Eleventh Avenue, Bessemer First, Woodlawn, Highlands, Norwood, Anniston First, Huntsville First and Florence First churches.

During his 47 years as an active minister he also served as presiding elder of the Huntsville, Decatur, Anniston and Birmingham Districts.

For 30 years Dr. Morris served as secretary of the North Alabama Methodist Conference.

Dr. Morris was a cousin of Rev. T. K. Roberts of Columbiana. He was well known in Columbiana and had many friends there.

BAPTISMAL FONT HONORS 'BRO. TOM AND MISS SUE'

MISS SUE ROBERTS

BRO. TOM ROBERTS

Clarice White Luck

In the long interesting, and sacred annals of the historic Columbiana Methodist Church, surely Sunday, November 9th, 1952, will mark a service unforgettable to the Sunday School of this Church, for the devotional hour was one of spiritual depth and beauty.

A Baptismal Font, exquisitely carved from rose Italian marble, was given to the Church and dedicated to the Reverend T. K. Roberts, and Mrs. T. K Roberts by the Sunday School classes known as "The Sue Roberts Sunday School Class," and "The Brother Tom Roberts Sunday School Class' in love and appreciation of their thirty-five years of faithful witness, by precept and example in their positions as teachers in this Sunday School.

Mrs. Lillie Mae Liles MacKnight, in her impressive manner, made the following presentation in behalf of the Classes:

Maybe you are wondering, as I did, just why I should have the honor of speaking for these two classes. Aside from having had the privilege of being in 'Miss Sue's' class for many years, and my father being a charter member of 'Bro. Tom's' Bible Class, Miss Sue was my teacher in Grammar School, and I have a very distinct recollection of her teaching me to subtract! She was a wonderful school teacher, as well as Sunday School teacher.

At about this same time, Bro. Tom taught the older pupils Latin in our school in Columbiana. He would walk back and forth to school very briskly, but never failed to stop to say something to the group of little girls playing mumble peg, or he might even stop long enough to "root the peg", or, "turn over the world" with us!

When Bro. Tom and Miss Sue came back to Columbiana to live, in 1912, there was a Bible Class in the Methodist Sunday School composed of both men and women, and was being taught by Dr. Eugene Miller. In 1913, Dr. Miller gave up this Class, and the Class was divided, the men being given to Bro. Tom, and the women to Miss Sue. This classification continued until August, 1927, when the men in Bro. Tom's Class decided to organize their Class. They moved into the Presbyterian Church; they named their Class, "Bro. Tom's Bible Class".

At this same time Miss Sue's Class was organized and named, "The Sue Roberts Bible Class". Mrs. L. H. Ellis was elected President; Mrs. W. E. Lovelady, Vice-President; Mrs. W. L. Christian, Secretary and Treasurer; Mrs. Pinkie Jordan, Chairman of the Membership Committee. The names of the Charter Members of the Sue Roberts Bible Class are as follows:

Mrs. T. K. Roberts, Mrs. J. F. Baker, Mrs. J. M. Butler, Mrs. J. G. Baker, Mrs. W. L. Christian, Mrs. L. E. Christian, Miss Betty Cleveland, Mrs. James H. Crawford, Mrs. L. H. Ellis, Mrs. M. V. Gilmore, Mrs. J. P. Houston, Mrs. Harry Harper, Mrs. Pinkie Jordan, Mrs. Georgia C. Johnson, Mrs. Beulah Lester, Mrs. J. W. Letson, Mrs. W. E. Lovelady,

Mrs. A. A. Lauderdale, Mrs. Walter Merrell, Mrs. John McGiboney, Mrs. Elmer McGiboney, Mrs. T. D. McCullough, Mrs. Jennie Nelson, Mrs. H. W. Nelson, Mrs. Frank Norris, Mrs. J. C. Organized Sunday, August 28, 1927.

I believe that if each of these women and men could witness today, she, or he would most likely say that both Bro. Tom and Miss Sue have tried to teach by "precept and example" this one theme, "Seek Ye First the Kingdom of God and His righteousness". The poet, Sam Walter Foss, in his memorable poem has expressed in words what Bro. Tom and Miss Sue have exemplified in their lives, when he said,

'There are hermit souls that live withdrawn
In the peace of their self-content,
There are souls, like stars, that dwell apart
In a fellowless firmament;
There are PIONEER souls that blaze their paths
where highways never ran;
BUT LET ME LIVE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD,
AND BE A FRIEND TO MAN".
I see from my house by the side of the road,
By the side of the highway of life,
The men who press with the ardor of hope,
The men who are faint with the strife;
But I turn not away from their smiles or THEIR TEARS
BOTH parts of an INFINITE PLAN;
Let ME live in my house by the side of the road,
And be a FRIEND TO MAN!'

There are few of us, if any, who are here today who have not been to their "House by the side of the road" for prayer, or counsel for self or others.

As this Baptismal Font is dedicated to Bro. Tom and Miss Sue, they who are so baptized with the Holy Spirit, we trust that in the years to come many, many lives shall be here dedicated to our Father in Heaven. We remember those familiar, yet most meaningful words of our Saviour: "Suffer the little children to come unto ME, and forbid them not for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

In the quietness and sacredness of this hour, Sallie Sue Roberts, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, great-niece of "Bro. Tom" and "Miss Sue" Roberts, was christened by the Reverend T. K. Roberts. In attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Mims Roberts, Sam Roberts, Harry Roberts, Mrs. Fay Miles Benton, grandmother of Sallie Sue, and Mrs. T. K. Roberts. In solemn petition this child was dedicated to Him who commanded that "little children" be brought to Him' "And He put His hands upon them, and blessed them.'.

In the inimitable fervor and manner of Bro. Tom and Miss Sue, the service was closed with their expressions of love and gratitude to the members of their Classes, and to everyone who, through the thirty-five years of their active ministry in Columbiana Methodist Sunday School and Church, have made possible the "unspeakable" blessings of Christian fellowship.

RESOLUTIONS IN MEMORY OF ROBERT KAPLAN

On the 25 day of July, 1952, our beloved member Brother Robert Kaplan passed on to his Eternal Home.

He was the husband of Sister Rose Kaplan and the Father of Helen and Gary Kaplan of Columbiana, Alabama,

RESOLVED: That we, the members of the Shelby County Chapter 116 Order of the Eastern Star are grieved at the going of our faithful and loyal member, Brother Robert. He was a loyal member of our Order, a true and understanding Brother, and a kind and charitable friend to all. We knew him well and feel so deeply the empty place he has left in our Star. The memory of his interest and faith in all our work will not go unrecorded and will live on in the hearts of each member.

We, the members of the Order of the Eastern Star, extend to his family our sympathy in their sorrow and pray that the Heavenly Father will in some way comfort them. We request that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Eastern Star Chapter, that a copy be sent to the members of our Eastern Star Chapter, that a copy be sent to the members of his immediate family and that a copy be published in the county paper.

Respectfully submitted

PARKER CIRCLE MEETS

The Parker Circle of the W. M. U. met Monday at the home of Mrs. Myra Chandler with eleven members and two children present. Mrs. Robert Bolton brought the devotional. Her theme, "Thanksgiving". Mrs. Riddle lead the opening prayer. She also gave the highlights of a new book which is to be studied, a chapter each month (Pioneer For Jesus).

eDlicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be the Christmas social.

Dick Bell was operated on last Friday in Tennessee. Hope Dick is feeling much better by now. Wishing you a speedy recovery.

HUMORING 'SMALL FRY'

The writer is often chided for humoring the whims of "Small Fry"— any "Small Fry"— especially our own member of the Pablum Set. When these verbal barrages are hurled in my direction, I often recall a little poem I once read somewhere, in which much truth is portrayed, regarding their childhood "wants".

During these early years, disappointments are so real— and hurts so poignant. I can never find it in my heart to deny a child anything within reason. I can not endure to see a child disappointed. The non-understanding look on their little faces, lingers with me—long after they probably have forgotten what they even wanted. On the other hand, the tragedy of getting "grown up" and those things which meant so much to them when they were tiny tots, no longer count among the responsibilities life naturally brings them.

Here is the poem for you people who say you have more "wisdom" than I—regarding these little fellows and their fads and fancies. It is called "A Childhood Tragedy"—

"I always wanted a red balloon
It only cost a dime,
But Ma said it was risky,
They broke so quickly,
And beside, she didn't have time;
And even if she did, she didn't
Think they were worth a dime.
We lived on a farm, and I only went
To one circus and one fair,
And all the balloons I ever saw
Were there.
There were yellow ones and blue ones,
But the kind I liked the best,
Were red, and I don't see why
She couldn't have stopped and said
That— maybe, I could have one.
But, she did'nt— I suppose now
You can buy them anywhere
And that they still sell red ones
At circuses and fairs.
I got a little money saved,
I got a lot of time
I got no one to tell me how to spend my dime.
Plenty of balloons, but somehow,
There's something died inside of me,
And I don't want one—now!"

Think about this fact, when you deny Small Fry, those little things which mean so much to them "NOW"!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Harry Atchison of Birmingham spent the week end in Columbiana.

. . . Friends of Luther Fowler will be delighted to learn he has returned home from a stay in Highland Baptist Hospital in Birmingham, and is recuperating satisfactorily at his home in Columbiana.

. . . Miss Billie Jean Young, capable and very pretty representative of Brownell Travel Bureau in Birmingham, has just returned from an extensive tour of Europe, which included a delightful visit with her brother, Lt. Joe Young and his family in Frankfurt, Germany. Other points of interest visited included, Paris, France; Switzerland, and other countries. Miss Young spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Young in Columbiana.

MICHAEL LEON LANSFORD

Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Lansford are receiving congratulations this week upon the arrival of little Michael Leon Lansford in their home. Michael weighed in last Tuesday morning, Armistice Day, November 11, at 8 ½ pounds in South Highland Infirmary.

. . . . Lt. and Mrs. John Lewis Cates spent the week end in Columbiana en route to Ft. Hood, Texas, where Lt. Cates has recently been assigned.

COMPLAINTS

Several interested parties from various towns in the county have written asking me to write an article on the pilfering of flowers and flower containers from cemetery lots and graves of loved ones. This seems such a strange request, and utterly unbelievable that anyone should deliberately go to a grave and take flowers or other mementos placed there by "those who care" and remove them from these sacred spots. And yet, requests for such a piece continues.

One this morning from a husband who lost his wife three years ago, and whose grave is in a neighboring cemetery, states, "On my wife's birthday I always place red roses on her grave. Her birthday falls on October 23. On this day, as usual, I carried red roses to her grave, and later revisited the cemetery; even the vase, containing the flowers, had been taken. I was grieved over this deliberately thoughtless act. Please mention it in your paper."

Another complaint I regret to say from Columbiana, states that flowers, ribbons, standards, on which floral offerings were placed, are continually being taken from the graves in our cemetery. Children are allowed to roam and play among the graves, and have uprooted shrubbery, and numerous other flowers planted there. Kindly call attention to parents regarding this ruthless destruction by these children, who, possibly have not been taught that it is wrong"....etc.

I feel these two instances received this week, and recorded here, will prompt thoughtless ones, never again to invade the cemeteries in this county, and take anything away from any grave, which represents "Mounts of Sorrows" dear to the hearts of many of us.

. . . The hospital home of Dr. and Mrs. James Crawford housed a merry group of collegiates during the past week end. They included: Mrs. James T. Crawford Jr., Misses Shirley Lucas, Sara Collins, Jean Thomas and Mary Roland. Sunday, 'the following boys came up from Craig Field: A/1c Chuck Keyes, A/3c Joe Cardone and A/3c Bill Ghedi.

Other collegiates home for the week end included June Harrison from University, who was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Harrison; and Fay Wilson, spent the week end with her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. A. D. Wilson.

CONGRATULATIONS ANNETTE FRANKS

Wonder how many people ever think of the training a student gets in the High School from which he or she takes the leap into collegiate circles, and how very essential this careful training is, as far as the student is concerned and his or her future rating.

I have just had the pleasure of seeing popular Annette Frank's name listed as Secretary of the Freshman Class in Judson College. This is a recognition of leadership which is a coveted one and for which we send our congratulations.

Then, the Dean of Judson writes a letter, stating that Annette Franks is on the Dean's list, and she gives much credit to Shelby High School's scholastic rating. The credit in this instance I think should go to present Superintendent of Education, Woodrow Elliott, who had the pleasure of having Annette Franks during most of her High School years.

The letter from the Dean congratulates both "student and instructors", and we happily pass on the "good words", believing them to be richly merited.

CONGRATULATIONS SHELBY HIGH FOOTBALL TEAM

Congratulations Football Boys of 1952, and to Coach Roy Mann. Now, in numbers, and victories, the score is not impressive, but for a first year team of comparatively new material, and O so young, we think these gallant lads deserve a big hand, and we have not seen anyone who does not agree with us.

We know you played your very hearts out on the athletic field this year. We know a few "broken dreams" lie scattered around, over certain tilts, but, remember it is a fine thing to know you played your best, fair and square, and are a bigger and a better man for it, and next year, if this team stays together, and we can persuade Roy Mann to remain with us the score, in numbers, and in victories may be more impressive. But after all, when a fellow does his best, we doubt there is any compensation greater than the realiqation of this fact.

And so, we say.... Congratulations! We know full well every boy on this football team merits an award for "good sportsmanship" and sometimes, this factor is more priceless than—a Touchdown!

. . . Bill Witt (Dickie Representative), made a hit with every visitor in the Leader last Saturday, and personally, we think this town would be a brighter spot, if that optimistic, personality-plus, Texan, should decide to come here for "keeps".

. . . Dr. Howard Hayes, widely known veterinarian of Bessemer, and former graduate of Shelby High School, was the distinguished guest of Dr. John Gates in Columbiana, Monday. The writer enjoyed a chat with this former Shelby Countian whom we had not seen in many years. However, as all good Shelby Countians usually do, we recalled many incidences which occurred during his school days here, and had a good laugh together over their recollection.

. . . We know an adorable little couple who want a furnished apartment. Does any one have an apartment they want to rent? If so, phone me!

. . . Don't forget to be present at the Tom Thumb Wedding at the High School next Friday evening at 7:30 P. M.

Now all those political experts can go into hibernation for another 3 years and 7 months.

CULTURE CLUB MEETS

The Columbiana Culture Club met in the hospitable home of Mrs. L. B. Riddle on November 6 and in the absence of the club president, Mrs. Rux Carter, the business session was conducted by Mrs. Howard Hall.

The program featured an impressive talk by Mrs. Luther Curlee on the Life of Helen Keller, nationally famed Alabamian who, in her early youth was stricken with an illness that left her totally blind.

Following the program, a delectable Party Plate was served and the club adjourned to meet November 20, with Mrs. Mims Roberts.

W. L. FARLEY WRITES LETTER TO M. W. W.

In last week's issue there was a sentence which prompts me to write you. We quote:

"I am a proud native of Shelby county by birth. I lived in Shelby county for 50 years. Twenty-five of these years I lived in Columbiana, which makes me feel that I am also a 'native' of the 'old home town'.... and I often long to return to it. Columbiana is big enough and small enough to be 'always a better place in which to live'. It is a place where I tried to serve and where I had and still have many dear friends. Thy woods and templed hills".

Thy woods and tempted hills".

My best regards to all who remember me.

W. L. FARLEY
629 West 11th Street, Birmingham

(I feel sure many of Mr. Farley's friends who remember him when he lived and worked in the Bank in Columbiana and in other commercial circles, will be glad to hear from him. Therefore, we share the letter with you.)

. . . Jo Meyers tells me she has purchased the largest shipment of Costume Jewelry ever shown in Columbiana. She is expecting it in this week in time for early and thrifty Christmas Shoppers.

. . . The editorial Fred Nichols wrote for the Auburn College paper during the election which has been received in the office, might well be numbered among the best from the Eisenhower standpoint, written during the campaign. Fred has a fluent pen, which is developing into a potent force at API as he spreads the ink on various current happenings about people and things.

(Congratulations Fred, although we could not agree with you on this particular campaign, we thoroughly enjoyed reading your well written article, and since your side won, we shall now see what happens with General Ike at the helm of this rocking old Ship O' State.)

. . . I hope you got to meet 13 month old Davis Glenn, handsome son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Glenn of Pell City, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Davis this past week end. That little fellow called Davis is about the brightest manikin we have yet met. Walking and talking (his own language, but it works) and as cute as a wink. What a Christmas joy he will be in the Glenn and Davis households this year!

NOVEMBER BIRTHDAYS

Last Saturday, principal Leonard Rogers was the recipient of "many happy returns of the day". Tuesday, November 18, "between cases" being tried in the court room, Judge Wallace received the good wishes from attorneys and friends as he passed another milestone. Jane Warren came in for her share of "Happy Birthdays to you" on November 19; Thursday November 20, Stan Edwards and Hazel McCord celebrated the passing of their birthdays and Friday, November 21, will mark the birth-dates for John Henry Pesnell, Conrad Fowler, Jr., and Bobby Jo Robertson. Saturday, popular Elvin Hill will be the honoree in his home as will Ann Goodwin in her home on the same date.

Best wishes everybody, and many, many happy returns of the day.

NATIONAL BETA CLUB CHAPTER AT S. C. H. S.

A local chapter of the National Beta Club, a service-leadership organization for high school students of America, was established on 10th of November, at Shelby County High School, according to Leonard F. Rogers, Principal.

The National Beta Club, with over 1925 local chapters and approximately 49,000 members in high schools of 16 States, is now in its twentieth year, and has been in continuous operation since 1933.

Objectives of this non-secret, leadership-service organization are: to encourage effort, to promote character, to stimulate achievement among its members, and to encourage and assist students to continue their education after high-school graduation.

Leonard F. Rogers, teacher of Prin. was appointed as faculty sponsor for the local chapter.

Permanent officers for this year are: Mary Fancher, President; Earl Riley, Vice President; Annette Thompson, Secretary; Joan Nichols, Treasurer.

The local organization is composed of the following students who have fulfilled the requirements necessary for membership in the National Beta Club.

Nina Pate, Joan Nichols, Nancy Taylor Hylott Armstrong, Gwendolyn Farr, Billy Joe Brasher, James Harrison, Leonard Joiner, Flora Mae Bozeman, Annette Thompson, Hugh Sims Jr., LaNelle Moore, Kyle Lyon, Mary Fancher, Eva Lee Lovett, Arland Carroll, Larry Skelton, Earle Riley, Howell Horn, Tommy Hatchett, Jimmy Dennis, Bunny Crawford, Tyla Crenshaw, Juanita Morris, Merle Myers, Elaine Payne, Llewellyn Sims, Elner Mae Carden, Bobby Stinson, Betty Stinson, Carolyn Stone, Betty Ruth Watts.

. . . Miss Margaret Stone of Easonville is visiting the Rev. and Mrs. T. K. Roberts.

SMITH-MARTIN WEDDING SOLEMNIZED

The marriage of Mary Faye Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Martin of Helena, and Gerald Victor Smith of Holyoke, Colorado, was solemnized on the evening of November 15, at seven-thirty 'clock in an impressive candlelit ceremony which occurred in the Byran Memorial Presbyterian Church in Birmingham, the Rev. James S. Cantrell, officiating, assisted by Elders P. M. Smith, Jr., and Calvin C. Martin.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, John H. Martin. She wore a gown fashioned from white tissue faille, made ballerina length with which she wore a finger tip veil of illusion caught to a coronet of miniature pom-poms. She carried a white prayer book with a lavender orchid showered with ribbon streamers.

Mrs. W. J. Bailey, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. The candle lighters were the bride's sisters-in-law and included Mrs. Calvin C. Martin, and Mrs. James Ray Martin. Mrs. Bailey wore a ballerina length dress of blue faille and carried pink carnations. The candle lighters wore royal blue suits with carnation corsages.

James Ray Martin, twin brother of the bride, served the groom as best man. The ushers included W. J. Bailey and E. E. Fulmer.

Preceeding the ceremony, Mrs. J. R. Matthews and J. R. Matthews presented an appropriate program of nuptial music.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mrs. Sarah Pitts, after which the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip to Council Bluff, Iowa.

For traveling, the bride chose a cherry red suit with which she wore brown accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will make their future home in Holyoke, Colorado.

CAROLYN MONTGOMERY DIES IN MEMPHIS, TENN.

Regret to report the passing of Carolyn Montgomery, former graduate of Shelby High, who served for a number of years with the armed forces as a nurse in Japan. Miss Montgomery recently returned to the states and had returned to her professional nurse's career when taken ill. She died in Memphis, Tennessee, on November 17. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Montgomery of Birmingham and Shelby, and has a host of friends in Columbiana who happily remember her.

Thanking God

Lesson for November 23, 1952

IT IS hard to imagine Jesus observing exactly one day in the year, no more, as a Thanksgiving day. This is not to say that the idea of a Thanksgiving Day is a bad one. The Jews of ancient times, whose religious observances Jesus closely kept, had a whole week of celebrations in the fall, corresponding somewhat to our Thanksgiving day. But Jesus' heart of gratitude was not to be limited by the calendar.

Mistakes About Thanksgiving

There are at least three mistakes which are commonly made with reference to Thanksgiving day. We Christian people make the mistake of limiting our thoughts of gratitude to one day. We count our blessings on this one day of all the year; we go on a kind of "binge" of gratitude.

Dr Foreman

Another sort of mistake, made by a great many, even of those who are called Christians, is to use the day for purposes that have nothing at all to do with it. Instead of worshipful gratitude to God for his blessings of the year past, the day is commonly used by many for eating too much or for getting drunk at football games.

Retail stores use the day to usher in the Christmas season. In fact, not so many years ago the commercial interests of the country were successful in pushing the day back a whole week just in order to have a longer season in which to sell "Christmas" merchandise.

But the purpose of the day is not to make money or to win football games or to get stuffed with turkey.

Grace Before Shakespeare

A third mistake is to be thankful for only one kind of thing: namely, material blessings such as food, security, good crops and good business. Now our Lord was grateful for such things. More than once we read of his taking bread and giving thanks for it. But as he knew that man does not live by bread alone, so man should not give thanks for bread alone. Most of Jesus' prayers of thanksgiving are for other and higher blessings.

Some well-known writer once commented on our custom of saying "Grace before meat"—the old expression for what is now often called "asking the blessing" at the table. Has God no other blessings for us?

When a person sits down with a great play (say by Shakespeare) in his hand, why not a "Grace before Shakespeare?" How many of us have a little prayer of thanksgiving before reading a book of poetry or going out to look up at the starry sky on a clear night, or before opening a letter from an old friend or before going to the hospital or the dentist? (Yes, indeed; the dentist may not seem like a blessing, but try to stand a toothache all by yourself, or try to imagine going to his office, or to the hospital, before the days of modern medicine, surgery, X-rays, anesthetics and sanitation!)

Blessings of the Spirit

Jesus' prayer of thanksgiving, which our lesson Scripture records, however, is on a higher plane still. The particular blessing for which he thanks the Lord of heaven and earth is in the first place a spiritual one, and in the second place it is not something that came to him but to some one else. He thanks God that a spiritual light has been seen by his most humble friends.

Can we say that many of our prayers are on this high level? Many of us never get beyond the "Gimme" stage. And even among those who do rise to the level of real thanksgiving, it is rare enough to find those who are grateful not only for their own blessings but for those received by others; and how seldom does God hear any note of praise for blessings of the spirit!

This is a high plane, to be reached only by high souls, those who have been intimate enough with Christ to absorb his spirit and attitude. Stupid people, who do not have very good minds, cannot be expected to appreciate blessings of the mind; and people with small and wizened souls cannot feel blessings of the spirit. And only those who practice the Golden Rule every day, so as to put themselves into others' places, and who cultivate the gift of sympathy so as to "rejoice with those that rejoice and weep with those that weep," can have the heart to be thankful when others receive the highest blessings of heaven.

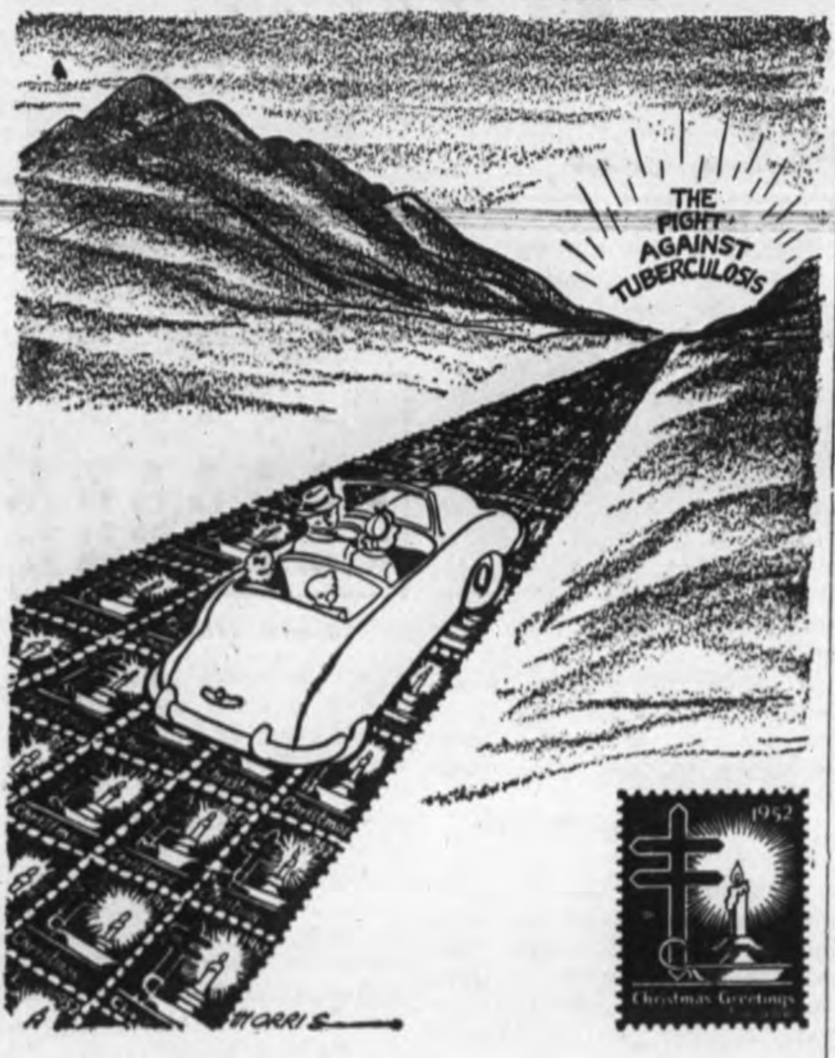
The Road to Health



Good Morning

Milton Bird

Pvt. Joe M. Foster
Fort Belvoir, Virginia

Dear Joe:

How about a sack of tid-bits from the folks back home. A lot of little things that make up an old street. Eldridge Ray is home from Oklahoma, on his way to San Diego, up to his ears in his Mom's cooking. For two days he camped outside my window. He was all eyes, looking for something. Then on Friday Bill hollored to ask if I knew anybody by the name of Geneva Whittrock. I wish you could have seen Lard. His eyes took on all the brightness of a baby atomic bomb explosion and he told everybody this side of three-mile hill that he was the guy who knew who that girl was.

I heard today that Dick and Sara Ozley's little girl Grace was tip-toeing up the aisle right away to say I Do. It seems she couldn't get over the way Kenny Skelton played football and so there was nothing left but to face the preacher. It's been a spell since we had a Tom Thumb Wedding in the old burg, and I'm looking forward to meeting the folks.

I wish you could have seen Jane Patterson today. That pretty girl was lit up like a birthday cake. And when a girl as pretty as Jane gets delightfully excited about something you can wade around up to your neck in sunshine and prettiness. Pat was being transferred from Illinois to Barksdale Field and was gonna be home for a few days enroute. They're a swell couple, Pat and Jane.

Olen Jackson is home for good now and therein lies a tale of woe. A few weeks ago when Jack was a sergeant in some far off place, pretty as pie Ellen would come in every day to see about a letter. She was always as pretty and neat as a fresh rain drop, and always in her hair she would have a sassy ribbon. A guy sort of looks forward to seeing a pretty girl every day, and if she stops coming just like that he gets pretty lonesome. But that young lady's man came home, and she hasn't been back looking for a letter since. And I'm mad.

But then I get happy again just looking at Patsy Duke. Warren is getting out around the first of December and that gal Patsy is happy enough for a dozen folks.

Oliver Head was home from Fort Benning for the funeral of his grandmother Mrs. Mamye George. She was a fine lady, and these folks she leaves behind are fine folks too. A guy's world gets beautifully mixed up with other folks, through the years. I guess there wouldn't be much laughter, or tears, if it didn't.

The football season is over, and the boys finally won, beating Calera 32 to 6. But we're plenty proud of 'em along the old street. They didn't give up a second, and have come a long way. They've got what it takes.

Pvt. Robert C. Baker
Fort Slocum, New York

Dear Bobby:

A little over a week and we'll be after the bob-whites down here. Your pop and I can hardly wait. We've had a terrifically dry fall and summer here, but I have stayed in the woods nevertheless. Dot and I have a new friend. A guy named Buck who is all legs and feet, and with a nose that misses nothing. I wish you could have seen him in a briar patch with three jolrees. He sniffed through the leaves and then listened with his long ears cocked. Then he rooted another ten years and stood rigid with his right front leg crooked under his body.

Ten minutes later he got awfully busy with a squirrel scent under a tall white oak. The pink and lavender leaves were still wet with dew and the sunlight stuck on them. He trailed over the hill and into a grove of young sweet-gums. The wind had got up and blew their colored dresses like a hundred flags. It was like this all day. Nature was out-doing herself to make the day beautiful.

When I got home I got busy with the paper. I noticed where some gink had lived sixty years, and had died, without ever having left one big town. I thought about the way the sun had stuck on the white oak leaves, and how the wind had rustled the bleeding sweet-gum leaves, and how two hawks had streaked through a high November sky . . .

I guess every guy gets about what he wants though. Your Pop and I will get a thrillion thrills, and a trillion pretty sights, and maybe a few bob-whites, before time for me and Will Davis to start our garden in March. And I wouldn't swap one day of it for that guy's whole sixty years in the big town.

GOODNESS IN ACTION

"One soweth and another reapeth". - John 4:37

Generosity evidences a noble heart. It asks for no reward. It is the expression of sincere desire to help a worthy cause. It reflects a willingness to give regardless of the cost to the giver. Its fruit is measured, not by the magnitude of the gift, but by the motive of the giver. By that standard a peasant may outrank a prince. A classic example is found in our Lord's commendation of the poor widow who dropped two mites into the chest as over against the ostentatious offerings of the rich.

"Another reapeth." The generous person is often unaware of the result of his cheering ministry. For example, when David Livingston went as a pioneer missionary to Africa, a Scotch woman who had saved up thirty pounds, gave it to him with the words, "You are going out to an unknown land for God and his cause. Please take this and pay some African native to go with you and share your sacrifices and dangers."

With that money Livingstone hired his brave and faithful servant Sebantino. In the heart of Africa a lion attacked him, and crushed the bones of his left arm. What if that poverty-ridden Scotch woman's generosity had not provided Livingstone with a deliverer in that desperate emergency? "One soweth, and another reapeth."

Let it be kept in mind that the Bible idea of generosity is not limited to the financial support of this cause or that. It is too often the case that even good Christian people imagine that money can be made a substitute for life. Such people should be quite embarrassed, when called upon to offer a reasonable answer to the old Gospel song:

"I gave my life for thee....
What has thou given for me?"

Not only is the reaper blessed, but the sower as well. The gift enriches the giver. Generosity is the key to contentment.

Cranbrook Club Coupe in Plymouth's 1953 Line

Dash and distinction are combined in the flowing lines of the Cranbrook Club Coupe, one of nine outstanding body styles in the new 1953 line of fine Plymouth cars. The new styling is combined with increased power and improved performance to make it more than ever the big car value in the low-priced field. Power has been increased to 100 horsepower with 7.1 to 1 compression ratio for finer response and efficiency. New suspension gives virtually gyroscopic stability under varying road conditions. Engine and rear axle relocation, coupled with easier riding, angle-mounted rear springs, provide the utmost in comfort. Plymouth engineers have designed more headroom, legroom and hip and shoulder space into the 1953 models.

HORTON NAMED TO REHABILITATION GROUP

An Alabamian was named today as a top leader in veterans rehabilitation through the appointment by National Commander Lewis K. Gough of the American Legion of C. C. Horton, Montgomery, as Vice Chairman of the organization's National Rehabilitation Commission, the assignment becoming effective November 1st. Horton had served for several prior years as a member of the executive section of the Commission. Robert McCurdy of Pasadena, California, was named as Chairman.

The Commission maintains a large professional and medical staff in Washington and is considered a very potent influence in the field of veterans affairs. It regularly provides Congressional Committees and the Bureau of the Budget with surveys and statistics regarding hospital and medical services for veterans and facts concerning compensation and pension needs.

Horton has been Director of the Alabama Department of Veterans' Affairs since 1945 and will continue in that capacity.

STEPS NEEDED TO IMPROVE DAIRYING

The year 1953 can be a banner one in the Alabama dairy business if herd owners will follow a few simple precautions, believes Pete Turnham, API Extension dairyman.

He said if cows are bred to bulls with a high production index and then placed on dairy herd improvement association tests to determine how much money they are retunring monthly, a big step will be made in the right direction. Once cows are on test they can be fed according to production, which in most cases means a saving to dairymen.

"Therefore," urged Turnham, "put dairying on a sound basis in 1953 by breeding, feeding, testing, and growing replacements according to Extension Service recommendations."

TWIST-TYPE RUGS VERSUS TUFT-TYPE

Twist-type carpets and rugs are becoming more popular and, they are challenging the long supremacy of the "cut pile" type, such as the axminster, finds Alice Peavy, API Extension home management specialist.

She states that axminsters still lead all other kinds of carpets in sales, but consumers are showing a preference for the twist-type with the harder surface and nubby or pebbly look.

Reasons consumers give for this type are that it shows soil and footprints less easily, has good scuff resistance, is of plain color yet may give a two-tone effect because the uneven surface provides highlights and shadows.

TIPS ON STORING SUMMER CLOTHING

A pad and pencil should be kept handy when packing away summer clothes, according to Kathleen Thompson, API Extension clothing specialist.

She urges homemakers to jot down the place each item is stored. down the place each item is stored, explaining that this will save time, trouble, and confusion next spring.

Miss Thompson reveals that systematic housekeepers post on attic or closet doors a list of articles stored in bags, boxes, or certain closets. Some labey each trunk, box, and bag with its contents. Any device which helps the housekeeper and her family know where possessions are at a moment's notice makes for good home management and convenience.

"One other suggestion," says the specialist, "even though gloves have been taken out of storage for winter use, don't use this as an excuse to fold them into a ball and cram them into a purse where they may not be found when needed."

ARTIFICAL BREEDING BUILDS UP DAIRY HERD

Artifical breeding offers an excellent method for dairymen to use in improving the quality of their cattle.

Pete Turnham, API Extension dairyman, pointed out recently that dairying brings in about seven per cent of Alabama's farm income, and dairying may be expected to become more important as better herds are produced and more grass and legume pastures are grown.

Turnham said advantages of artifical breeding include service of outstanding dairy sires at relatively low cost; disease frequently brought in on purchased replacements are avoided; the expense and risk of keeping a bull on the farm avoided; and frequently, artificial breeding tends to cause owners to give better feeding and care to their herds, especially to those animals resulting from artificial service.

Some glove materials will shrink or change shape when being dried if they are washed in the usual manner with soap and water. However, if the gloves are of the right size, this shrinking can be prevented by inserting ordinary clothespins in the fingers.

When no baking powder is at hand, a satisfactory substitute can be made by mixing one teaspoonful of baking soda with two teaspoonsfuls of cream of tartar.

CARE OF FARM TRACTOR DURING WINTER MONTHS

Even though tractors normally are only used for light work during winter, proper maintenance jobs on them should be done at regular times.

In fact, J. T. Gaillard, API Extension machinery specialist, says a tractor doing a very light job, such as pumping water or sawing wood, should be brought up to operating temperature and kept there while running. This will prevent engine damage and save fuel.

PASTURE LAND

Now is the time to "clean up" pasture land and get the seedbed prepared for seeding in February or March. If lime is needed, it should be applied during land preparation.

If land is turned this fall, clods pulverized, and land smoothed, the only preparation needed next spring will be to freshen the crust with a section harrow or weeder just ahead of sowing the seed.

PRECOOK MEAT BEFORE PLACING IT IN JARS

Before canning meat many homemakers find that precooking it saves time and energy.

Lavada Curtis, API Extension fod preservation specialist, says to first put the meat in a large pan and add hot water. Cover pan and precook meat slowly until it changes its pink color, stirring occasionally so that it will heat evenly. If salt is desired, put level measures into clean, empty containers: one-half teaspoon in pint jars or No. 2 cans; three-fourths teaspoon in No. 2½ cans; one teaspoon in quart jars or No. 3 cans.

Pack meat into jars while it is hot. Leave about one inch above meat for headspace in glass jars and one-half inch in tin cans. Pour in hot broth or hot water to cover meat. Again leave one inch at top of glass jars for headspace; fill tin cans to one-fourth inch of top. Work out air bubbles with knife. Add more liquid, if needed, to cover meat and adjust lids on glass jars or seal tin cans.

Process at once in the steam pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure; pint jars, 75 minutes; quart jars, 90 minutes; No. 2 cans 65 minutes, and No 2½ cans and No. 3 cans 90 minutes.

HERE'S WAY TO MAKE DUSTLESS DUST CLOTH

A cloth that will pick up dust and hold it is what most homemakers want in a dust cloth.

"Here's how to make one," says Stella Mitchell, API Extension home management specialist. "First, obtain a one-half yard square of hemmed cheesecloth, medium grade. To one quart of boiling water, add one tablespoon of linseed oil, one tablespoon of kerosene, and one tablespoon of turpentine. Keep this mixture in a closed container. After it cools, soak the cloth thoroughly in the solution, wring it out, and hang it up to dry. Wash when necessary and repeat treatment."

COLISEUM LEASED

The Agriculture Center Board has leased the Alabama Agriculture Center Coliseum from the State Agriculture Center Corporation.

Annual rental will run approximately $100,000 and the lease runs until August 31, 1982. On this same date, the $1,250,000 worth of bonds the corporation sold several weeks ago to finance completion will be amortized.

In addition to the coliseum the Center Board leased approximately 60 acres of land in the area of the structure.

Under terms of the lease the board will pay the corporation $100,000 upon completion of the coliseum, that date to be determined by the State Building Commission when it accepts the structure from the contractors.

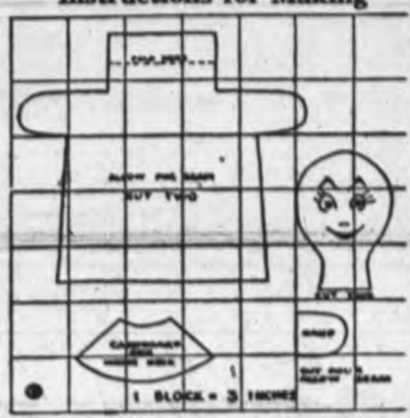
Also included in the rental is $50,000 that will be paid in 12 annual installments of $4,166 each.

The Board will pay the corporation the rental in semi-annual installments, falling due in February and August of each year, and the total due for the straight rental will be an average of $75,000.

POLLY, THE HAND PUPPET

Bring Christmas joy to the youngsters with this zany hand puppet named Polly, says the National Cotton Council. Polly is easy to make, she costs you little or nothing, because she is made from colorful cotton feed bags!

Instructions for Making



Using diagram, cut two pieces each of the head and dress. Use white or flesh-colored material for head. Sew up head, and stuff tightly. Form cardboard insert into cone shape, tape securely, and insert into head. Turn neck edge inside cardboard cone and tack fast. Sketch face with pen and ink, paint or embroidery. Rouge cheeks. Using coarse cord for hair, sew in loops. Then cut loops for bushy look. Fold dress neck as shown and stitch. Attach hands (four pieces) to each piece. Sew up sides of dress pieces. Sew in the gathering thread to pull tight at neck. Put head in place. Pull gathering thread tight, and tie. Sew to neck. Tack tape around neck, and tie bow.

PONDS SHOULD BE STOCKED WITH FISH

The Alabama Conservation Department advises that for best results ponds should be stocked with fish at this season of the year.

The first step in securing an application for fish is to comply with Malaria Control Regulations and obtain a permit from the Health Department.

Any owners having newly constructed ponds should have them registered with the County Health Department and be ready for fish when sufficient water is available.

Rubber boots will keep their shape and last much longer if the tops are propped up by inserting rolled cardboard forms when the boots are not in use.

A comb can be cleaned in a hurry if a toothbrush with stiff bristles is worked between the teeth of the comb. This is faster than washing or soaking the comb.

REMOVE STORAGE SPOTS FOUND ON WOOL DRESSES

Those who are counting on wearing last year's wool dresses will want to check for spots caused by dampness and mildew.

"Maybe the spots can be removed at home," suggests Kathleen Thompson, API Extension clothing specialist. "Brush the spot carefully with a soft cloth. When the spot is completely removed, press the wool garment with a warm iron."

'53 Plymouth To Be Presented To Public

The 1953 Plymouth will be presented to the public throughout the United States on Thursday, November 20, Bowdon Motors and Calera Motors announced today.

"Advanced engineering and styling make the new Plymouth more than ever before the outstanding car of the low-priced field."

The 1953 Plymouth models will be on display at Bowdon Motors and Calera Motors in Calera.

The 1953 Plymouth is the most completely new Plymouth to be presented to the public in the quarter-century since the original model rolled off the assembly line.

"This year Plymouth is introducing a new concept of automobile design in the low priced field," President John P. Mansfield declared in describing the 1953 models. "Superb styling is co-ordinated with radical engineering developments to produce the truly balanced car for easier, safer and more comfortable driving."

Height of the new Plymouth has been reduced for improved appearance. Yet engineers have designed even more room into the car's interior and luggage compartment. The 1953 model has more headroom, greater legroom and more hip and shoulder space than ever before.

The lively and dependable Plymouth engine has been given even greater power. For 1953 the horsepower has been increased to 100 and the compression ratio stepped up to 7.1 to 1.

Nine different body styles are offered in the two Plymouth lines for 1953. In the Cambridge line are the Four-Door Sedan, Two-Door Sedan, Business Coupe and the exciting and popular Suburban. The Cranbrook line this year includes the Savoy, a Four-Door Sedan, Club Coupe, Convertible Coupe and the dashing Belvedere Hardtop.

The overdrive unit reduces gasoline consumption by cutting down engine speed by 30 per cent while the car's road speed is undiminished. As a highway crusing gear, engineers estimate it saves up to ten per cent on gasoline. An additional gear ratio in each of the other two forward speeds is also provided by the unit. Overdrive is especially useful for traffic driving in second gear.

All of these features combine to give the 1953 Plymouth owner an automobile that is unequalled in its price class for riding and driving enjoyment, performance, beauty and economy.

NEW TRANSLATION OF BIBLE OFF PRESS

The new revised standard version of the Holy Bible came off press September 30. It is being hailed by church men and scholars as a Bible needed today, for modern readers. The translation has not been changed other than written in new format and taking out obsolete phrases and using more modern language. The meaning remains the same. The Bible after all these centuries still leads all books in sales.

The most beautiful description of the Bible we have ever read fell from the penpoint of Henry Van Dyke: We reprint it for your Scrap Books.

THE BIBLE

Born in the East and clothed in Oriental form and imagery, the Bible walks the ways of all the world with familiar feet and enters land after land to find its own everywhere. It has learned to speak in hundreds of languages to the heart of man. It comes into the palace to the monarch to tell him that he is a servant of the Most High, and into the cottage to assure the peasant that he is a man of God.

Children listen to its stories with wonder and delight, and wise men ponder them as parables of life. It has a word for the time of peril, a word of comfort for the time of calamity, a word of light for the hour of darkness. Its oracles are repeated in the assembly of the people, and its counsels whispered in the ear of the lonely.

The wicked and the proud tremble at its warnings, but to the wounded and penitent it has a mother's voice. The wilderness and the solitary place have been made glad by it, and the fire on the hearth has lit the reading of its well-worn paper. It has woven itself into our dearest dreams; so that love, friendship, sympathy and devotion, memory and hope put on the beautiful garments of its treasured speech, breathing of frankincense and myrrh.

No man is poor or desolate who has this treasure for his own. When the landscape darkens and the trembling pilgrim comes to the valley of the shadow, he is not afraid to enter; he takes the rod and staff of Scripture in his hand, he says to his friend and comrade: "Good-bye, we shall meet again," and comforted by that support, he goes toward the lonely pass as one who walks through darkness into light.—Henry Van Dyke.

ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

B. F. Hatchett and G. C. Starcher

At the county training school Professor Thomas and his boys have a Chapel Hill Rescue seed patch planted September 16. It has made almost enough growth to begin grazing. These boys will not only have seed to sell, but will have a chance to study this new crop and decide what place it will have on their farms.

That completes a picture; every school in the county, including the elaborate new Indian Springs School, that give agricultural training are now cooperating with the Soil Conservation District to study new crops useful in soil and water conservation and land utilization.

Thompson High School, Vincent High School, Montevallo High School, Alabama College, and all Veteran's Vocational Agriculture classes are already working closely with the district.

We had an interesting visit with Mr. Bristow Monday while he was directing clearing operations in a low area where he will plant Ky. 31 Fescue and Ladino clover for the Shelby Iron Company beef herds. He is having stock watering ponds dug in every separate pasture so that it will be easy to control grazing.

Cecil Davis, Shelby veteran trainee, had only one pond dug, but located it at the corner of four pastures and fenced it separately. Now he can have it open to whichever of the pastures he wishes to have his cattle in at any particular time.

With water available to every pasture without having to allow the cattle to pass through another pasture these men will be able to control grazing. Preventing overgrazing of grasses and legumes is very important in getting the best results from your pastures.

A SPECIAL THANKSGIVING SALUTE TO COLUMBIANA FIRE DEPARTMENT

In summing up many blessings for which we should offer gratitude in this town of ours on Thanksgiving Day, no one blessing stands higher in our estimation nor have we any more priceless citizens than our gallant Volunteer Firemen who stand always on the alert to answer the alarm, and hasten, tirelessly to work in an endeavor to prevent damage to our homes and commercial buildings in Columbiana. These men receive no pay for their efforts. They are not required to serve, but do so on their own initiative, and we feel that such altruism should be rewarded, with at least, a public acknowledgement from the citizens of this town for their generous contribution to our safety.

Last Friday evening, the Town officials entertained these Volunteer Firemen with a Barbecue Dinner at Tuck's. Just as the dessert was being served, the fire alarm sounded and with total disregard to their "best bibs and tuckers" they promptly answered a call to the Hank Spires home and worked like true Trojans to save the Spires residence, which successful endeavor is certainly a note worthy event for the Thanksgiving list of "things for which we are grateful". Not only on this particular day should we offer our appreciation for these Firemen, but, on every day, they merit a salute from every citizen in this town, and here is ours "on the double" to the following Firemen:

Hugh Sims, Chief, Coy Stone, Assistant Chief; E. J. Jones, N. A. Jones, A. C. Jones, Oscar Hall, Norman Lefkovits, George McCord, Elbert Jones, W. B. White, Jr., George Holcombe, Leon Farr, Herlen Cobb, Bob Walton.

CHRISTMAS JUST AROUND THE CORNER

Thanksgiving holidays will end this week, and the Christmas excitement and rush will immediately follow. Already little folk and grown-ups too, are being extra good and thoughtful around the Main Drag in anticipation of the good things Santa Claus will have in store for them.

Stores up and down Main are replete with every conceivable toy. No need to leave town to purchase your Christmas remembrances. Lay-Away Plans are in vogue in order that the patrons may have the benefit of a full selection of toys. Kiddies are in direct communication daily with Santa's Headquarters, and here's hoping that not one little fellow in all this world will be disappointed.

Goodfellows are beginning to see about taking care of this problem in Shelby County. So, if you know of a family who will have no Christmas toys for their little ones, get in touch immediately with the Welfare Department or Elvin Hill or Luther McGiboney, who have charge of the movement in Columbiana. The County Chairman is Dr. Browne of Vincent.

Real Christmas joy is also assured thru your contribution to the Christmas Seal Drive. This drive is a nation wide campaign against the dread malady of tuberculosis. So, buy and use Christmas Seals and in this way lead a helping hand.

CHAPLAIN CURTIS BEAN IS GRADUATED FROM SCHOOL

Graduation ceremonies were held at Fort Slocum, New York, last week in the Chaplain School Auditorium for sixty-eight Army and Air Force Chaplains who presented diplomas upon successfully completing the five week prescribed course of study. Chaplain (Brigadier General) A. F. Gearhard, Deputy Chief of Air Force Chaplains, was the guest speaker for the occasion. The invocation was delivered by Chaplain (Captain) Roy F. Webb, and Chaplain (Major) Maurice C. Patrick gave the benediction.

Among the members of the graduating class was Chaplain (1st Lt.) Curtis Bean, who is now enroute to his duty station at Municipal Airport, Niagra Falls, N. Y. Chaplain Bean is the husband of Mrs. Dorene Bean, Clanton, Alabama.

HELP FIGHT TB BY BUYING SEALS FOR CHRISTMAS

"Let's give thanks that the fight against TB can and will be won."

That's the Thanksgiving message expressed here this week by Mr. R. J. Ozley, president of the Shelby County Tuberculosis Association.

"Tuberculosis is curable and it is preventable. And the prevention and cure of the disease is the purpose of the annual Christmas Seal Sale.

"We're thankful so many people are having a part in a great crusade because they buy and use Christmas Seals. Death rates have been dropping steadily since the first Seals were sold 46 years ago.

"But a strong fight still must be waged. The battle is only half won.

"There are active, infectious cases of TB in every Alabama county. Many of them are known cases, recorded on health department files, but there still are just as many unknown cases. A lot of people have TB and do not know it, because in the early stages TB gives no warning signs.

"Tuberculosis is everybody's responsibility, because it is a 'catching' disease. The purchase and use of Christmas Seals gives everybody a chance to discharge his responsibility in this once-a-year drive.

"Let's be thankful we have this opportunity—and give as generously as we can.

"Money contributed now will help hospitalize, treat and prevent TB the whole year through."

Play At Calera School Thrills Audience

Louisa M. Alcott's immortal "Little Women" lived for a Calera audience on Thursday evening when the three act play was presented in the High School Auditorium.

The production was staged and costumed by members of the Calera High School Beta Club under the direction of Mrs. Gertha Kelly, assisted by Miss Jo Ann Odom.

Taking part in the play were: Martha Rose Askins, Betty Ruth Smith, Opal Spain, Pat Woods, Cordelia Goings, Caroly Johnson, Rebecca Edwards, Rosemary Tortorigi, Gerrie Pugh, Amelia Frost, Carolyn Sample, James Alton Findley, Donnie Jacks, Eugene Hadaway, Jerry Adams, and Bobby Henson.

VETS GET BREAK ON LOST INSURANCE

Another chance to resume protection of their families through National Service or United States Government life insurance was opened to many veterans recently by a redefinition of intent to continue such protection announced by the Veterans Administration. In some cases renew insurance may be provided to those who had given it up as far back as January 1, 1951.

"Where there is clear evidence that a veteran expressed a desire to continue coverage but was prevented by a technicality, the denial of insurance may be voided," said Lawrence A. May, Legal Advisor of the Alabama Department of Veterans' Affairs, in a statement released recently.

The new regulations say that the insurance shall not be considered as expired when the veteran has made an inquiry, tendered a payment, has a credit to his account, or has expressed a desire to convert or continue his insurance prior to or during the month during which the current term ended. Veterans desiring further information regarding the new regulations are invited to visit the nearest County Office of the Alabama Department of Veterans' Affairs.

MUSICIAN ASKS THAT GUITAR BE RETURNED

James Walter Wood, blind Negro musician of Columbiana, asks that the person who borrowed his electric guitar on Nov. 16, please return it as it is needed badly. It is used by Walter as a means of earning a small livelihood and will be hard to replace.

'Chorus In The Skies' Here December 14

The Baptist Choristers will open the Christmas Season in the Columbiana Baptist Church with their interpretation of "The Chorus In The Skies", a Carol Cantata by Fred Nolte on the evening of December 14, at seven thirty o'clock. The choral ensemble numbers 30, and special parts of this beautiful cantata will be offered by Ed Rush, John Rush, Roy Mann, Baritones; Jessie Mae Jones, Contralto, Catherine Walton, Soprano Soloist, and Betty Rush will offer the immortal Ave Marie by Schubert. Tenor soloists include Bob Holliman and T. C. Rush, Jr.

The Rev. Raymond Scroggins of Montgomery will conduct the devotional part of the service. Church decorations are in charge of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson; Mr. and Mrs. Luther Curlee; Mrs. Roy Towns, and Miss Saranel Lightsey, which assures an artistic setting.

The public is cordially invited to be present.

Thompson Completes Football Schedule

Thompson High School completed its football season in spectacular fashion at the City Stadium in Sylacauga when the Sylacauga High School Aggies held them to a 6 to 6 deadlock. Brilliant line playing on the part of the entire Thompson line, and a rugged pass defense continually thwarted the Aggies all evening.

In the first quarter, Thompson took the opening kick-off, and marched 80 yards for its score. The two teams battled even-stephen through the second and third periods. The aggies mustered a touch down drive at the beginning of the fourth period. Later in the fourth qaurter Thompson marched to the Sylacauga goal line with the game ending as Thompson moved across Sylacauga's goal.

James Harris, David Butler, Crayten Patterson, and Skinny Sorrel, were seniors playing their last game for Thompson.

Coach Byron Chambliss in his first year here has had cooperation of the Thompson Warriors in a most succesful record with 6 victories over all Shelby County High School elevens, and harsh foes Prattville, and John Carrol, and a tie with the strong Sylacauga Aggies; dropping decisions to Emma Samson of Gadsden, Cordova, and Holt.

Coach Chambliss was ably assisted by Assistant Coaches Earl Douglas and Buford M. Maddox.

Youth Held In Death Of Brother

Melvin King, 26-year-old textile worker, was stabbed to death Sunday afternoon, in Columbiana, and his brother, Earl King, 20, was held in the slaying.

Deputy Sheriff Claude Fore said the stabbing occurred during an argument at the apartment house here where the brothers roomed together.

The deputy said the brothers had been drinking when the argument started. Melvin King, he said, was stabbed in the stomach.

Fore said the two brothers came to Columbiana from Anniston. Both were employed at Valley Mills.

COLUMBIANA METHODIST CHURCH

A special Thanksgiving service will be conducted at the church Wednesday evening at 7:00 P. M. The public is cordially invited.

Rev. T. K. Roberts is to preach Sunday morning 11:00 A. M. and Rev. Scroggins is to preach Sunday evening at 7:00 P. M. All the members of the Baptist congregation is given a special invitation to worship at the Methodist church.

The pastor, Rev. Allen D. Wilson, was elected last week Vice President of the Pastors Union of the Anniston District, an organization which includes 47 pastoral charges.

Lot Of Work Tied In With Art Of Playing

There is a lot of work connected with playing, and Miss Helen Dauncey, Leadership specialist with the National Recreation Association will be in Shelby county the week of December 8-11 to prove it.

A party or social affair that runs off smoothly and successfully means that there has been a lot of good planning and thought put into it. Miss Dauncey believes that more people need to learn how to make their own good times whether it is in the home, the school, or the club.

The Shelby County Board of Educational is sponsoring a Recreation Leadership Training Course in two centers in the county beginning December 8, and running through December 11. A course will be held in Columbiana each afternoon from 3:30 to 6:00, and in Siluria each night from 7:30 to 10:00.

Musical games, quiet games, stunts, group contests, fun songs, and square dances are included in the course.

Adult leaders who have charge of children's young people's and adult's recreational programs are invited to participate in the training course. Anyone who is interested in attending should get in touch with Mrs. C. E. Jones, Columbiana, general chairman of registration, or with the principal of the school in your community.

Funeral Services Held For O. P. Head

Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. O'Neal from the Wilton Baptist Church Monday afternoon honoring Mr. O. P. Head who passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Walter Frances Cleveland Sunday, November 23.

Mr. Head was recognized as one of Shelby County's most beloved personalities. He was 92 years of age and a former resident of Columbiana and Montevallo. Mr. Head will long be remembered by a wide circle of friends, who recall his never failing cheerful optimism; keen sense of humor, and his philosophy of living. These attributes and his unswerving loyalty to family and friends made of Mr. Head an outstanding citizen. One whom everyone highly esteemed.

Surviving Mr. Head are his widow, Mrs. O. P. Head; three daughters: Mrs. Walter Frances Cleveland of Wilton; Miss Carrie Head of Birmingham; Miss Sarah Head of Montgomery; two sons, Frank Head of Columbiana and O. R. Head of Thomasville, and three grand sons: Lt. Oliver Pickens Head of Ft. Benning, Ga; O. M. Cleveland of Washington D. C. and Rip Head Jr., of Thomasville, Alabama.

GOODFELLOWS START DRIVE FOR CHRISTMAS FUND

Christmas with all its joy and pleasure will soon be here again. The children are already discussing the treasures Old Santa holds in store for them. The older children, too old to believe in Santa himself, like all of us, believe in the things Christmas stands for—the spirit of good will to all, the love of family and friends, the spirit of giving to bring happiness to others.

The Goodfellow Organization was founded on the Christmas Spirit. It tries to give happiness to under-privileged children who would get no Christmas gifts By providing nuts, fruits, candy, and toys for them, it brings the Christmas spirit to the entire family everybody shares in a child's happiness.

This year over 700 children are on the list. All toys and edibles are bought at cost or below through joint buying with Goodfellows in Birmingham and six other counties, but the cost per child runs a bit more than $2.00. This year $1500.00 will be needed and this can be raised with the help of everyone.

Let's ask all our friends to become Goodfellows in 1952 and provide a Merry Christmas to all the under-privileged children.

The county committee consists of: Dr. W. C. Browne, Chief Goodfellow, Vincent; Jimmy Wyatt, Montevallo; Elvin Hill, Columbiana; L. O. Farris, Alabaster; Clyde Adams, Chelsea (Sterrets, Rt. 1); Roy Downs and W. N. Minor, Jr., Calera; Mr.s Lois Segers, Westover; (Sterretts, Rt. 1); F. Jackson, Harpersville; Mrs. Martha Armstrong, Sterretts and Oland Smith, Wilsonville, Luther F. McGiboney, Treasurer, Columbiana. Any of us will assist you in any way possible. Contributions may be made to this committee or mailed to the Treasurer.

Support from every community will insure continued success for this organization whose function is to spread the Christmas Spirit amongst the under-privileged.

Home Ec and Ag Classes Make Tour

On Wednesday, November 19, the Sr. II and III classes of Home Economics and Agriculture visited the Alabama Power Steam Plant in Gadsden. During the tour through the plant the class saw how power is being made and generated to all parts of the State. The plant being almost 11 stories high, with all its machines and equipment, it took approximately an hour and a half to see the entire works. Members of the group found it very interesting to see how electricity is made.

This trip was made possible by the Alabama Power Company. Mr. Paul Moon, an honorary member of the FFA, who is with the Alabama Power Company, made the arrangements. Three of the power company's cars transported the group over and representatives from Birmingham, Montevallo and Gadsden assisted in making the trip both enjoyable and educational. The tour was ended by a delicious picnic lunch given by the Alabama Power Company.

Ground Broken For Wilsonville Pastorium

Mr. W. J. Weldon, prominently identified with the life of the Town of Wilsonville for a number of years, and a devout member of the Baptist Church, had the honor of breaking ground for the new Baptist Pastorium last week. The building committee, in addito W. T. Weldon, comprises Messrs J. F. Helms, Stinson Hill, Don Beavers, Olin Smith and S. S. McEwen.

Following the regular service held in the church Sunday, the congregation adjourned to the site of the new Pastorium. Dewey Bolton acted as master of ceremonies.

OUTPOSTS OF VENGEANCE

A HISTORICAL NOVEL BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR: The Miami Indians made an enemy of Will Morgan when they captured his fiance, Mary Bolden, and slaughtered her family. Morgan took to the woods and became a fabled Indian fighter. When war appeared certain, he joined militia as a scout. He capitalized upon a strange resemblance to an Indian chief to pose as a spy and enter the villages to gather information that later helped the army crush the uprising. He also led to freedom a young girl named Ann Randall, who once professed to love him, but he did not find Mary. He was told that she had become mistress to White Panther. Still searching, he joins final battle.

CHAPTER XXI

Twice the Indian's knife lashed out but each time Will evaded the thrust, annoying his enemy with hard fists while he watched his chance for an effective hold. Finally Bear Nose lunged too eagerly and Will closed in to catch him in one of the holds used by the alligator-horses in their river brawls. There was a brief moment of deadlock and then with a sudden twist Morgan caught the savage off balance, lifting him from the ground and sending him down in a crashing fall which broke his neck.

Then he realized that the troops were cheering him from the edge of the forest. The duel had taken place just as the battle died away, in time to have a full complement of spectators.

From the palisades above him a voice hailed, "Good fight, Morgan—and dam the frog-eatin' sidewinder who invented dominos!"

Will waved shortly as he started back to his own lines. He wondered how Sir Clarence Brisbane was going to explain that remark to the English officers. Perhaps those officers were going to be too busy to think about it. They already had placed themselves in a position of turning down an ally in an emergency, nor was the situation yet improved for them.

Morgan Renews Search For White Panther

Will drifted back toward Roche du Bout, hunting for the commander. Everywhere there were signs of the terrific slaughter which had taken place among the tribesmen and he realized that a mere advance guard had broken the greatest Indian army ever assembled. Forty minutes of fighting by the center column had done the work of four anxious years.

He found General Wayne jubilant and a little amazed at the easy victory. The bulk of his army had never gotten into the battle, a column of infantry and a few Kentucky cavalry had destroyed fully half of the Indian army.

There remained the problem of the English fort but Wayne proceeded with boldness. After exchanging tart messages with Major Cameron he sent a force in to destroy all buildings outside of the stockade. Will went with the demolition squad, fully aware that British guns and muskets were trained upon him as he worked. The fact that two regiments of Americans were standing by to take punitive action should the British fire was little consolation to men who would fall at the first display of force.

Still the fort remained silent, even when the store of Colonel McKee, the British agent, was fired. Orders had been to destroy Indian property but the scouts knew McKee to be a prime mover in the Indian troubles and they interpreted their orders liberally. Kirby touched the match himself, cursing McKee as he did so. Will watched him quizzically, wondering what Kirby would say if he knew that McKee's immediate superior in the company was a man named Brisbane, better known as Tilly. He decided to keep his knowledge to himself.

Morgan stayed with the army while nearly a month was spent in punishing the scattered bands of savages who continued sporadic resistance.

It was almost autumn when the army turned westward and began a systematic destruction of the villages on the Auglaize, the St. Mary's and the St. Joseph. Again a base was set up, the troops dubbing the place Fort Wayne in spite of their commander's protests. With this as a center detachments went about the grisly work of making an example of the Miamis. This campaign had to be final, a definite end to Indian threats against settlers in the Ohio country.

Will tried to be everywhere, fearful that White Panther might have taken Mary and gone west with other Miamis who had fled with the Ojibways and Weas. He refused to admit even to himself the possibility that she might have been killed already.

A week of this sickening work of destruction brought the raiders to a town of some size where a large body of Indians were known to be posted, a palisaded town defended by two strong blockhouses. It was the section of the Miami region where White Panther must have lived and Will felt his pulses beat a little more rapidly as he advanced with the troops before dawn.

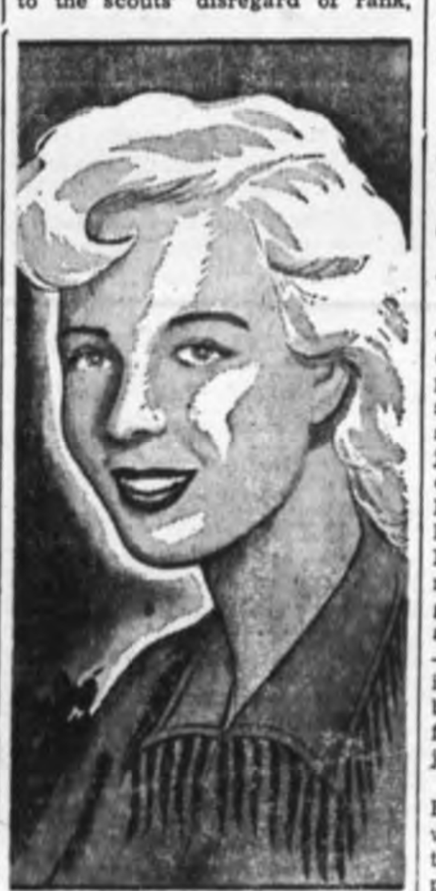
They arrived at the edge of the Indian cornfields before any alarm was given. Divided into four attacking columns they completely surrounded the town, the battle developing into a regular siege as the Indians took refuge in their sturdy blockhouses.

By midday is was apparent that the defenders had suffered heavily and Major Porter wanted to order a general assault. Kirby dissuaded him, however, "Jest a mite longer," he said. "We'll lose a lot o' good men if we rush 'em now. I got a hunch they'll make a break fer that neck o' the woods nearest to the south blockhouse if we devil 'em a bit more. When they do that we'll drive 'em back and foller right into the fort."

Porter looked to Will, caught his nod and agreed. "I'll order men to that point," he said briefly.

"Never mind," Kirby grinned. "I already got a full company there lyin' low."

Porter grimaced but said nothing. Like most of Wayne's officers he had learned the futility of objecting to the scouts' disregard of rank, particularly when they were right.



She smiled a little more easily at his tone. "I suppose I could lay the blame on Kirby," she murmured—"but I won't."

Shortly after noon there was a lull in the Indian fire, the blockhouse falling completely silent.

"Now comes the sortie," Morgan said quietly. "They're trying to get us off guard." Along with Porter and Kirby he had moved around to the spot where the company of tense riflemen waited in ambush for the sally Kirby had predicted.

It was not long in coming. A howling pack of savages poured from the log fort and raced for the angle of forest which seemed to offer refuge. A withering fire mowed down the leaders and many of the other braves, the regulars charging in with the bayonet to complete the job.

Bullets that Save Will Kill His Long Ambition

It was the signal for a general assault, the cheering troops breaking into the village at a dozen points. They were shooting at anything that moved and Will was sick with foreboding as he saw the number of women and children being slain by attackers who did not dare hold their fire long enough to identify the lurking Indians.

He raced recklessly through the town, searching for what he almost feared to find. Suddenly a white man in Indian garb appeared at the door of a lodge, a long rifle swinging up into firing position.

Will found himself staring into the eyes of a man who was his own image. In the brief instant while that rifle was coming up Will Morgan knew two things. His resemblance to White Panther was indeed uncanny—and he was about to die at the hands of the mysterious renegade who had already affected his life so queerly.

With the thought came an equally swift emotion. The long quest was to be foiled in the end. He would die without finding Mary.

Then White Panther seemed to hesitate. Sight of the face before him must have been even more startling to him than it had been to Morgan and the surprise brought a halt in his threatening movement.

The split second was enough. A rattle of shots sounded from behind Morgan as a group of soldiers flung hasty lead at the renegade. The man opened his lips as though trying to say something, then sagged to the ground lifeless.

Will stepped past the dead man without a glance, ignoring the excited comments of the soldiers behind him. The end of the trail was finally at hand. He pushed aside the riddled bearskin which served as a door to the lodge and stooped to enter. As he tried to focus his eyes in the semi-gloom he was aware of a sobbing breath from a far corner. A prone form lay along the wall and he crossed hurriedly.

"Mary! Mary, is that you?"

There was no reply and he knelt beside the unconscious form, sure in his own mind although the dimness still defied full recognition.

His groping hand struck something warm and wet and then he knew what the end of the trail was to mean. The woman had a bloody patch in the middle of her back. Probably she had been killed by one of those wild shots aimed at White Panther.

"Mary!" he cried again, turning her over gently. He could see her features clearly now and in the darkness he thought her lips moved as though she was trying to tell him something. Then her breath went out in a rattling gasp and he knew that it was truly the end. Three years of hell, bloodshed and heartbreak . . . waiting for this!

He buried his face against the dead breast, giving vent to the bitter emotions which had been building up in him for so many months. Then a voice spoke from behind him. "Is it her, Will?"

Something about Kirby's voice helped to bring Will back to self-control. He lowered the dead form back to the ground and stood up slowly. "It's her," he said quietly. "One of our bullets did it."

Kirby made no reply. He simply swung a long arm about his friend's shoulders and headed him toward the door.

Peace Comes to White And Indian Nations

The death of White Panther seemed to mark the end of the trail for everyone. Little Turtle sent in a plea for peace and the complete surrender of the Miamis was in sight. Will heard the news as he journeyed southward with a train of wounded but it left him unmoved. It seemed to him that his whole life had been spent in a search for Mary. Now it was all over. Common sense told him that he could go back to the river trade and live a normal—and perhaps prosperous—life but there was no longer any incentive for even that. His life had been geared to one object too long for him to be able to make the adjustment.

Perhaps if Ann had not gone . . . He forced the thought away as unworthy. He had let her go when there had been no other choice possible. Now he could not have any regrets in that quarter.

At Greenville he found work to keep him busy. General Wayne was preparing to meet the Indian leaders and he wanted Will's advice on a number of details. Time went by swiftly as the day approached for the peace talks, the victorious army drifting back to Greenville and going into winter quarters.

Kirby had been sympathetic for a few days, trying to divert Will from his sorrows, but then he had disappeared and Morgan understood that the riverman had been sent away on some errand for General Wayne.

Then one evening he heard the familiar voice outside of his cabin. Kirby was talking almost anxiously to someone who did not reply. There was a pause as Will listened to pick out the other person's voice and then the door opened far enough for Kirby to stick his head in.

The big riverman looked oddly troubled but he managed a crooked grin. "Now don't be a fool, Will," he said. Then his head disappeared and the door swung open a little wider.

Will came to his feet in surprise, only to be even more astonished as Ann Randall appeared in the opening. Her garb was still the rough outfit of the frontier but somehow she had achieved a feminine touch which made his heart beat a little faster.

"Hello there," she greeted almost doubtfully. "Remember me?"

He realized that he was staring idiotically. "How could I forget?" he replied, trying to get control of himself. "What brought you back here?"

She smiled a little more easily at his tone. "I suppose I could lay the blame on Kirby," she murmured—"but I won't. I came because I wanted to come."

"Then you have heard?"

He frowned determinedly, trying to keep down the feeling of happiness which seemed almost disloyal to Mary's memory. "And you didn't marry Boone?"

"No. We agreed to disagree before we ever reached Fort Jefferson. I decided to wait—and hope. I suppose it was wicked of me—but I did."

"Not wicked," he said thoughtfully. "People out here do a lot of things which would not seem quite right back in the eastern cities. There's so much of hardship that there seems to be no room for needless suffering. I guess . . ." He broke off abruptly, conscious that he was excusing himself quite as much as the girl.

She came toward him slowly. "Then you won't drive me away this time?"

Her smile was a brave effort to make the question sound light but he realized that there was a great depth of meaning behind the words. It had not been easy for her to come here like this, expecting a rebuff yet willing to take the risk. Nor was he making it too pleasant for her.

He shook his head slowly as she came into his arms. "Nor any other time," he promised.

(THE END)

With the various tribes of early Alabama Indians, red paint on their bodies and mounts was always a sign of war, while white paint was a symbol of peace.

The fathers of Alabama's great iron and steel producing industry were a group of veterans who were mustered out of General Jackson's army at the close of the War of 1812.

Running through Russell county is a creek the Indians called Hitchiti. The word means "sweet potato-mother".

Bible Comment:

No Persecution Can Separate Us From God's Love

To know God means a great deal more than just believing in His existence. The God that Jesus revealed is a God of love Who so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son to be its Savior.

His love is more powerful than all the hate man sees thrust upon Him. In this world of bitter competition in which we find ourselves, it is often more difficult to realize that God's love is there in spite of all other things that seem to defy it.

From time to time we find men questioning God's purpose. They do not seem to understand that in His purpose is a richer reward than all the material wealth of their material world.

To know God is to realize and share in God's purpose as far as the human race is concerned.

And that purpose is one of absolute love and redemption. This fact is constantly reaffirmed in the Bible.

It is also the theme of John the Baptist. Lastly, it is the essence of Christ's gospel and is revealed in all that He said or did.

Paul became the great exponent of this philosophy after his conversion. It dominated him so completely he was certain no power or experience would ever be strong or bitter enough to separate him from it.

Paul lists the suffering and hardships he endured and tells us none shall ever be able to separate us from Christ's love. This is profound faith not easily obtained.

Because it is easy to believe in God when all goes well, only when trouble and sorrow cloud our lives do we doubt. But Paul's represented the strongest of Christian experiences. Many lesser Christians whose names are unknown, have suffered bitter trials and persecutions. They have found that Christ is nearer and richer when they have suffered the loss of everything.

Thus we can see how unfailing is the love of God.

It is as Paul said: "I can do all things through Christ Who strengtheneth me."

MORE PEOPLE VISIT PARKS AND FISHING LAKES IN ALABAMA

State Parks Chief James Segrest says 1,773,578 persons visited Alabama's public parks and fishing lakes during fiscal year 1951-52 which ended Sept. 30.

The figure was an increase of more than 300,000 visitors over the year before. Of the total, 187,302 were out-of-state visitors. Gulf State Park, in Baldwin county, as usual was the favorite spot. It had 469,818 visitors. Marion County Lake was most popular of the public fishing grounds with a total of 104,200.

ELIZABETH WELDON

Miss Katherine Strickland of Childersburg and Mr. Bill Vansant were married Wednesday. They are spending their honeymoon in New Orleans.

The American Legion sponsored a musical program Saturday evening featuring the Key Masters Quartet.

Mrs. G. E. Franks, Mrs. Don Beavers and Shirley Beavers visited Mr. and Mrs. Winston Baker and new daughter in Gadsden.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Lindsey Sunday were Mrs. Lindsey's sister, Mrs. Bert Daley from Washington, D. C. and Mrs. Dick Webster and Mr. Webster from Sylacauga and her brother Mr. John Kytle of Fayetteville.

Fred and James Clinkscales of Talladega visited in Wilsonville Sunday.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dorough on the arrival of a daughter. Mrs. Dorough and daughter are in the Sylacauga Hospital.

We are glad to have Mrs. Ethel Tinney who has been in the Sylacauga Hospital, home again.

Miss Renna Taylor, who has been visiting her sister in Columbiana, has returned.

Mr. Irvin Winghard, who is 98 years old, is seriously ill at his home.

Mrs. T. O. Smith, Sr., remains seriously ill in the Sylacauga Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. McEwen and Mr. Olin Smith attended the Passion Play given in Birmingham.

Mrs. Grady McEwen visited her mother, Mrs. Si Nall in Birmingham Saturday.

We are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Mrs. Amos Daniel's mother, Mrs. Henry Cosper.

The ladies of the Methodist Church entertained with a tea shower at the home of Mrs. Juanita Williams, honoring Miss Rena Carlson, who is to be married in December.

Mrs. O. W. Poe, formerly Miriam Watson, and her two sons from Clifton, Texas, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Watson.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Cosper and daughter Jane and Mrs. Lila Cosper visited Mr. and Mrs. Bill Cosper in Jackson, Miss.

We were sorry to hear that Mrs. Alice Ray is seriously ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hebbrand and son and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stoudemire and son visited in Gadsden Sunday.

The Boy Scouts entertained Friday with a wiener roast.

Rev. and Mrs. Gentry from Howard College visited here Sunday. Rev. Gentry brought the messages at the Baptist Church Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Smith and family from Birmingham visited Mr. and Mrs. Paul Smith Sunday.

Mrs. James Curtis was called to Pell City due to the death of her brother-in-law, Mr. W. A. Weaver, who was an attorney there.

The P. T. A. had flourescent lights installed in Mrs. Curtis' room at the school. This was a dark room and the new lights are very helpful.

Wilsonville is proud of the new shrubbery around the school. This adds much to its appearance.

Mr. Hugh Riley died at his home in Kingdom Community and was burried in the Chapel Cemetery.

The Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. Albert Lokey.

CARD OF THANKS

First to Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bolton for every act of kindness and thoughtfulness during our recent sadness and loss we express our deep gratitude.

Second to our many friends of Columbiana and surrounding communities who so graciously opened your hearts and homes to us daily we shall ever thank God for you.

Third to every person who called by the home to express love and sympathy, for the beautiful floral offering, for the many prayers from sincere hearts that we felt, in the home going of a wonderful dad, we do express our deepest appreciation.

Fourth to Mrs. Wilbert Anderson and Mrs. Jessie Mae Jones for the sweet music and song, also to Rev. Fincher and Rev. Kirk Lucas for the words of comfort we are deeply grateful to you.

May God bless each of you.

12 MOTOR VEHICLE DEATHS IN COUNTY IN APRIL, MAY AND JUNE

Pointing out that 12 motor vehicle accident deaths were reported from Shelby county in April, May and June, the State Department of Health announced today that it was one of the 51 Alabama counties from which deaths of that kind were reported during that three-month period.

The state total, the Department said, was 211. The Jefferson total of 31 was the largest for any county.

The announcement was based upon provisional reports prepared by the Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics. These may differ slightly from the final reports not yet available.

WELFARE CHECKS UP

State Welfare Commissioner, Bill Dorrough says that welfare checks averaging four dollars above September payments were sent to Alabama's 99,161 needy cases in October.

Dorrough says that additional federal money and a reduced case load accounted for the $4.17 average increase. The checks averaged $28.72 each.

A drop of 659 cases as compared with September was mainly attributed by Dorrough to stricter laws that went into effect last month. He said approximately 2,200 cases were closed during the month and only about 1,600 new ones opened.

The Relatives Responsibility law closed 587 cases, caused 83 applications to be denied and resulted in smaller payments in 94 instances, Dorrough added.

Veterans' Column
State Dept. of Veterans' Affairs

K. J. SULLIVAN, VSO

I know that veterans all over the State of Alabama have been quite interested in reading about the reduction in funds in the operation of our Veterans Administration Hospitals. As a matter of fact, some of you probably have your application already on file for hospitalization with the Veterans' Administration. Now just what are chances of getting hospital treatment from the VA in the near future?

Well, the VA has recently announced that veterans will be admitted to its hospitals on the basis of nine new priority groups based on laws passed by Congress and administered by the VA. These priority groups are set up to establish an equal rule governing the use of vacant beds for all persons eligible for admission or transfer to particular VA hospital.

Well, after emergency admissions comes one group which includes War veterans and those who served since June 27, 1950, the start of the Korean War, who need to be in the hospital on account of service-connection.

Next we have group two which includes peacetime veterans who need to be hospitalized for service-connected disabilities, or who were discharged disabilities incurred in line of duty.

Group three are veterans whose hospitalization has been requested by authorized officials for the purpose of observation and examination. Group four are wartime, post-Korea and peacetime veterans with service-connected disabilities or with line of duty discharged who are now in non-VA hospital but who have been requested that they be transferred to a VA hospital.

Group five includes wartime, post-Korea and peacetime veterans who are now being hospitalized by the VA for treatment of non-service-connected disabilities but whose transfer from one hospital to another has been requested by authrized officials for merical reasons.

Group six are wartime, post-Korea and peacetime veterans with compensable service-connected disabilities or discharged for line of duty disabilities requiring hospitalization for non-service disabilities.

Next we have group seven and in this group are wartime, post-Korea and certain veterans retired from the armed forces for physical disabilities who have no compensable service-connected disabilities and are not discharged for line of duty disabilities but who require hospital treatment for non-service-connected disabilities.

In Group eight are non-veterans whose hospitalization has been requested by authorized officials excepting U. S. Armed Forces personnel, whose hospitalization is directed by the Veterans Administration Central Office in Washington. And last, group nine, which includes all eligible Veterans now in VA hospital who have requested transfer for personal reasons but whose transfer is not necessary for medical reason, and certain eligible veterans whom VA has hospitalized in non-VA hospitals, and who have requested transfer to VA hospitals for personal reasons but whose transfer is not necessary for medical reasons. There you have the nine priority groups.

KOVETS TO GET BACK SCHOOL PAY

Unavoidable delays in approving schools for the training of Korean veterans will not cost such vetertans any money, if the schools are certified by December 1st, said C. C. Horton, Director of the Alabama Department of Veterans' Affairs, here today. Such veterans can be paid for all time spent in the classroom subsequent to August 20th, 1952, instead of from the date the school was approved by the State. Hundreds of enrollments were accomplished in Alabama before the approval agencies had a chance to inspect and approve institutions and as a result many classes were actually begu for veterans improperly. The Vet erans Administration has now au thorized its regional offices t back-date the approval of school to protect veterans against pay less periods which otherwise woul have resulted.

Institutions of higher learning public trade schools, accredite high schools, including accelerate continuation classes, on-job train ing and on-farm training are th responsibility of the State De partment of Education for appro val in Alabama. Private profi schools such as business college beauty college and private trad schools require approval from th Veterans Training Board, Mont gomery.

Getting Around
with Mac Brown

They say a man's getting old when he starts thinking things were better back when he was a boy. If so, I'm getting up there. I've been thinking about Thanksgivings back on the farm. We really had them! It was a sin to eat the way we did! The folks always went back to the home place. We kids ate in the kitchen and the grown-ups ate in the dining room in shifts—men first, then the women. Grandma cooked four or five big turkeys, one after another in the big wood stove. We always had barbecue, too, and pumpkin and mincemeat pie.

Almost everything we ate was grown there on the place. This is an example of the way things change. Now, with so many people in the cities not raising their own birds, turkey growing in the country has become a big business.

Thousands of turkeys must be shipped to town, and if you've been on the road recently, you probably have seen trucks loaded with crates of fat gobblers headed to town. Many is the family today which must say of its Thanksgiving dinner the same that's true of almost everything we eat, wear, or use: "If you've got it, a truck brought it." I had to put that in because I'm a truck driver. But it is true, isn't it?

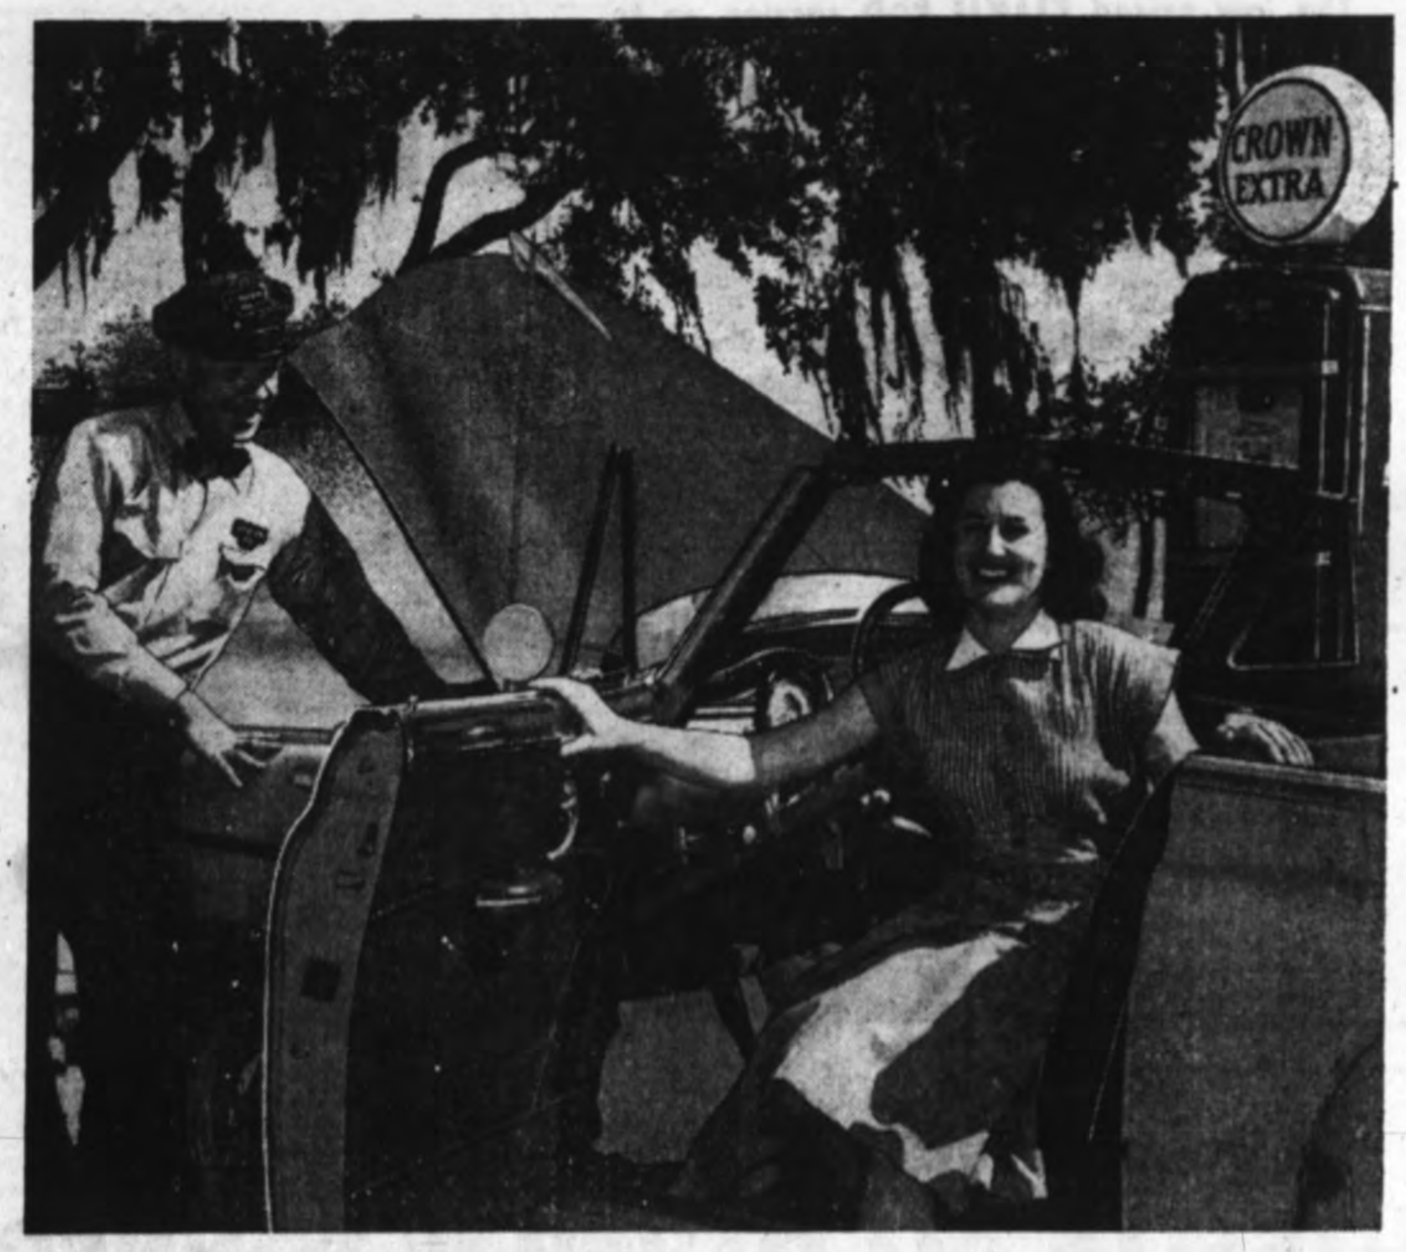
"Is it true what they say about Dixie?"



THIS YEAR, tourists will spend several billion dollars in the South. They have become the South's fastest-growing crop.

They come to enjoy our wonderful climate; to see our mountains, lakes and beaches . . . our wealth of scenery and spots of historic interest. And, because of our world-wide reputation for "Southern hospitality," they expect a smile as warm as our sunshine.

No one has done more to encourage and facilitate tourist travel in the South than those STANDARD OIL dealers whose stations dot the highways from the Ohio River to Key West.

Down through the years they have secured trip-routings, furnished road maps, provided the on-the-road conveniences which made the tourist's stay more pleasant . . . shown that "It's true what they say about Dixie."

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27
THANKSGIVING DAY

It is a long trek back thru the centuries in 1621 when the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth and rendered thanks for a safe voyage and began blazing the trail and perils of a wilderness. They faced the hardships of a bleak frontier, and these courageous pioneers broke the trail across a rugged and an unknown land. It mattered not to these brave ones the danger and loneliness they found waiting here; nor the hardships they endured. They stood on the immortal ground of HOPE.

In 1863, a proclamation was issued declaring the last Thursday in November a day set apart for Thanksgiving and since that date, with but few exceptions (The Roosevelt Era) the universal world has paused to pay homage to the Giver of all good gifts.

It is hard for those of us now living in the atomic age with all the modern conveniences to visualize the 'pioneer woman'. She who left behind her comforts she could not hope to find in this new land, yet, her heart was filled with faith and cheer, and "Life was good, for those she loved were near." Join with us in a salutation to "The Pioneer Woman".

"Hers was the spirit humble and free
That guided well a nation's destiny;
Hers was the fortitude and wholesome grace
That made a cabin, joy's abiding place;
Hers was the charm and noble strength of soul
That ever sought a better, higher goal!
And we, who are her sons and daughters, pay
Our tribute of esteem to her today;
Rejoicing in the priceless heritage
That grows more glorious from age to age,
We voice our veneration for her here,
Courageous, earnest, noble Pioneer".

And now after paying tribute to those who made possible this occasion Thursday, Nov. 27, while enjoying your holiday, remember how very much I should like to be the kind of friend to you that you have been to me.

My best wishes surround you. May the day be a happy one from dawn to dark. Believe me when I say I am grateful not only on Thanksgiving Day, but EVERY DAY for your loyalty, interest, love and many acts of thoughtfulness that have marked the days throughout the year for me. You have made my pilgrimage a happy one! My whole life will not be long enough to prove my gratitude.

. . . King Virus has invaded the Main Drag this week, and keeled over a lot of folk. We are all missing Milton Bird from the P. O. this week as he battles his way out from the Land of Counterpane. TOM THUMB WEDDING SCORES A HIT

Everybody we meet continues talking of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb who scored a hit with the public as they treked down the altar at the School House last Friday night accompanied by well known celebreties. All the Lilliputian Thespians performed in a truly professional manner. The night's activities netted the sponsors for the City School program, a neat sum which will be donated to the improvement of the new class rooms.

It is impossible to mention all the participants of this night's entertainment, but all children were outstanding in their costumes and impersonations of local and nationally known celebrities.

Grace Carter Ozley was the bride and Kenny Skelton the groom. The last time the writer witnessed a Tom Thumb Wedding Bunny Crawford and Howell Horn were the leading characters. Hope some of those snap shots taken of the cast Friday will turn out good, so we may have one made for your Scrap Books.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Karl C. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Duke and other Columbiana folk were numbered among the football fans in Mobile during the past week end.

NOVEMBER TIMESCAPE

November has a bad name and a good character. It wipes the slate clean. It clangs the door shut on October's brief audacities. Umber and ocher may persist, the tattered bronze of oak leaves, the plum-colored haze of level distances; but the basic color is gray. This is a month for the strong, the honest, the soberly observant; a month of still, chill days, of iron waiting; a month whose motionless mists cannot hide the spare, clean lines of the year's economy.

This month holds an election, stripping away the gaudy rhetoric of the preceding campaign days. It remembers an armistice, and girds itself for the hard task of winning a still reluctant peace. It celebrates Thanksgiving, not at the moment of harvest triumph but as the gray days narrow toward bleak and difficult winter. This is a month for realists with ideals. It makes no false promises, smiles no false smiles—and it is undismayed.

He has a host of friends who will be joining me in wishing for him many more happy birthdays along his useful way.

PLEASE EXCUSE!

We sympathize with the editor of a small-town weekly who was taken to task because of an error in his paper. He had this to say about it:

"Yes, we know there were some errors in last week's paper. We will further agree that there were some errors in the issue of the week before, but in bawling us out too unmercifully about it, we want to call your attention to these facts . . . In an ordinary newspaper column there are 10,000 letters, and there are seven possible wrong positions for each letter, making 70,000 chances to make errors and several million chances for transposition . . . There are 48 columns in this paper, so you can readily see the chances for mistakes. Did you know that in the sentence, "To be or not to be" ,by transpositions alone, 2,752,022 errors can be made? Now aren't you sorry you got mad about that little mistake last week"—Athens Banner-Herald.

VIGNETTE CLUB MEETS

The regular monthly meeting of the Vignette Club was held Wednesday evening, November 19th at the home of Mrs. Alvin Lefkovits, with Mrs. Norman Lefkovits as co-hostess. Refreshments were served to 18 club members and nine guests. Mrs. Alvin Lefkovits introduced the speaker of the evening, who was Mr. Bryan Chancey of Birmingham. Mr. Chancey gave a very interesting and informative talk on the work done by Alcoholics Anonymous. After the program a regular business meeting was held.

. . . Mrs. Wade Lawless of Tallassee spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Pauline Bird.

. . . The Baptist Choristers will render Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour a new sacred song, called "The Light Of The World Is Jesus". Robert Holliman will offer a Tenor solo, "I Know God Will Understand."

. . . Don't forget the Vignette Bake Sale which will take place December 6. Place your order for the kind of a cake you want and phone Mrs. Conrad M. Fowler, or some other member of this alert organization and presto, you can "have your cake and eat it too", when you want it, and the kind you want.

What Makes Right?

Lesson for November 30, 1952

WHAT makes right, right? It cannot be determined by counting votes. The voice of the people is not necessarily the voice of God.

Even if everybody in the world did exactly what is right (which has never happened in this world yet) it still would not be right merely because they all did it. If "right" meant nothing more than what everybody does or what most people do, then right would change as often as popular opinion changed. It would change with the climate, with the calendar. But right is something more enduring than popular opinions, customs or enthusiasms.

Does "Right" Mean "Legal"?

Another notion of what it is that makes right, is Law. If it's legal it's right, if it's illegal it's wrong. But haven't we often heard the expression, "There ought to be a law . . ."? The person who says that means that there is something which is right that isn't legal; he wants a law to match what is right. Or again, laws are sometimes repealed. But no one would ever vote to repeal a law if he didn't think the law was wrong. Good men sometimes repeal laws; but no good man ever wanted to repeal "right."

Dr. Foreman

There is a variety of this idea which has more truth in it: namely, that right is the same thing as the law of God. But God does not make acts right or wrong simply by ordering them to be so.

Could God have said, Thou shalt kill, thou shalt bear false witness? Could he have said, Thou shalt hate thy God and hate thy neighbor? Of course not. He could not have made up such nonsense-laws, such wicked commandments, because he is not that kind of God, for one thing, and for another thing because if he did, it would have meant the destruction of the human race. Although right, and the will of God, are really the same thing, yet an act is not right because God wills or commands it because it is right.

How Jesus Looked at It

How did Jesus our Lord stand on this question? What made a thing right, for him? He got into trouble with the lawyers of his time, and he got into trouble with what we would call D.D.'s and prominent preachers and professors of theology (the Pharisees); they called him "bad" and had him executed accordingly.

So there was evidently a difference between his way of looking at "right" and their way. It was precisely on this point that they split. Jesus tried to make clear, though the Pharisees were too blind to see it, that the Sabbath law, any law of God or good rule of man, is right and good only in so far as it promotes the welfare of man. This is not setting up man above God, for God is man's Creator. Right is what develops God's children; wrong is what stunts, deforms, defeats and destroys them.

To put it in another way: The test of right and wrong is always this: Will this thing make people better and make better people? If so, it is right. All our laws, institutions and interests must be brought to the test of their effect on human welfare. And of course, in Jesus' view, the welfare of man includes social, spiritual and mental well-being and growth, not physical health and financial wealth alone.

• • •

Liquor and Welfare

This being Temperance Sunday, it is a good time to think about the liquor traffic in the light of all this. Think it out for yourself. Remember, alcohol is a habit-forming drug. and all talk about liquor cannot erase that very plain fact.

Now think about the whole business of making it, glamorizing it in advertising, selling it and using it. Look around you in your home community, and in our nation at large, and ask: Does it bring more benefit to people in your community than it brings harm? Is the purpose of the business human welfare?

Ask the welfare agencies in your community—the Red Cross, the hospital, the agencies that look after the poor, the orphanage, and so on—ask these people: Does the liquor business make your work easier? Is the liquor trade the ally of the public school and the church? Does it make better citizens, better Christians? If it does, and only if it does, then as a Christian can you call it right.

Under The Study Lamp

By William Crowe

The Printing Press — Its Contribution To The Christian Movement

"The leaves of the tree are for the healing of the nations" — Revelation 22:2

During the early years of the fifteenth century in the old German town of Mentz a sprightly boy was growing up. His name was Johann Gensfleisch— in plain English, John Gooseflesh. His mother's maiden name was Elsie Gutenburg. She was a business woman, a member of sheepskin parchments, the basic writing material used by the scholars of that day.

John's boyish hobby was that of carving the letters of the alphabet with his pocket knife on separate bits of wood. On one notable morning he decided to cut on uniform blocks the letters of his own name.. He had reached the letter "H" in his fascinating task when by some awkward turn the letter dropped into a pot of boiling purple dye which his mother used for making the ornamental borders of her finished parchments. Without stopping to think, the boy snatched the block out of the hot liquid, and by another awkward movement let it fall on one of his mother's white dressed sheepskins that happened to be lying on a nearby bench. What the mother did to him on discovering the defacement of her prized parchment, the chronicler does not record. Whatever the domestic disturbance might have been, the fact remains that the imprint of the letter "H" changed the course of history.

When John Gooseflesh grew to mature manhood, by court action he became John Gutenburg, adopting his maternal family name, a move worthy of our hearty commendation. The U. S. postage stamp recently issued in commendation of the 500th anniversary of the invention of printing by movable type bears that name.

About the year 1452 the Gutenburg invention was recognized as a real factor in the field of literature and business.

Will all readers of this article please make note of the amazing fact that the first complete book ever issued from a printing press was the Bible. This was from the Gutenburg Press in the year 1454. The successors to that initial volume may be reckoned in multiplied million—beyond the wildest guess of the enumerator. Applying justifiable figure of speech to the Bible verse at the top of this homily, it may be truly said that the leaves of the tree of Life have been for the healing of the nations, and that the printing press has been the agency for making it possible.

Stirring events happened in that fifteenth century of which we will mention three. The fall of Constantinople in 1454 opened the Continent of Europe to Oriental learning, including the Greek manuscripts which established the authenticity of both the Old and New Testaments. The Gutenburg invention at mid-century opened the way for world wide knowledge of the inspired word of God. The discovery of America in 1492 provided a continent to be dedicated to freedom of thought and action, a country that has made it possible for all nations to be the beneficiaries of the Bible, now printed in more than nine hundred languages and dialects.

Speaking of the providences of our Sovereign God, what more evidence do we need than the combination of ,divinely guided events of the fifteenth century?

MOBILE PORT DOES RECORD BUSINESS

The Port of Mobile did a record October business, handling 750,770 tons of cargo of all types.

General Manager Jerry P. Turner, of the Alabama State Docks, announced the new record after completing figures of commodities handled through state-owned and private piers in Mobile. October's business was up almost 100,000 tons over September, another big month, when 656,332 tons were handled.

The State Docks itself handled 418,594 tons of shipping during October. Another 332,176 tons moved through private piers.

Petroleum was the largest single commodity handled by private piers, running 264,315 tons. The export grain elevator on State Docks property moved 21,614 tons.

Do you know this about telephone taxes?

You may not realize how large a part of the money paid by telephone users goes to taxes.

Including the federal excise tax, a total of 29¢ out of every dollar received from Southern Bell customers last year was paid out in taxes to federal, state and local governments. To put it another way, the average amount of taxes was $2.67 a month per telephone.

Telephone taxes are necessary to the support of government, but they do mount up. Higher taxes of course have effect on the price you pay for telephone service.

The next time you pay your telephone bill, remember that a good part of it is taxes for government and national defense.

TIPS ON PLANNING THE 1953 POULTRY PROGRAM

One of the first planning points in egg production should be to start pullets in December, January or February.

"When this is done," says John Weeks, API Extension poultry specialist, "a majority of the egg crop can be produced during the last six months of the year, when egg prices are highest."

Pullets that are started within the next few weeks will be mature and laying large eggs by next July. And they will be in their best production during the following six months. This will be time enough for the pullets to make their owner a profit before egg prices drop in the spring.

Weeks adds that pullets started late in March, April and May will have little chance to lay many eggs during the fall and winter months, and they will be in best production during spring months, when prices are low.

TREAT THE LAND RIGHT FOR HIGHEST RETURNS

Much farm land can produce more at a profit and without damage, states S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist.

"Land is ready to produce if it is given the right chance," says the specialist. "But highest production will not be made unless water is conserved for crop production, productive topsoil is kept in place, fertility is increased and maintained at a high level, soil is kept in good tilth, and crops are planted on land suited to them."

Doughty points out that conservation farming helps increase yields per acre now and keeps land in shape for continued high production.

TERMITE CONTROL

A thorough treatment of soil with five per cent DDT and fuel oil will control termites for five years or more.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR GOOD COTTON SEED

There is no substitute for good cotton seed, according to O. N. Andrews, API Extension cotton specialist.

And he says that good cotton seed means seed of a recommended variety that has been tested by the API Experiment Station and proven to be a good producer of staple one inch or longer.

The specialist adds that good cotton seed are pure and have a germination of 80 per cent or above. They must also be properly delinted and treated to control seed-borne diseases.

WILSONVILLE H. D. C. MEETS

Mrs. A. M. Lokey was hostess for the Wilsonville Home Demonstration Club, Friday, November 21. The Club president, Mrs. Bill Smith, had charge of the meeting. After the devotional by the hostess, the members answered the roll call by telling what each was most thankful for. A motion to sell Holland Magazine was made and was passed. Other old and new business was discussed.

Miss Collins, Assistant Agent, gave a demontration on "Gifts from the Preserving Pot".

Club members gave Mrs. Bill Smith a surprise stork shower and she received many lovely gifts.

The pink motif was carried out in the refreshments served to the following:

Mrs. D. Clark, mother of the honoree, Mrs. Dewey Clark, Mrs. Grady McEwen, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Paul Smith, Mrs. L. P. Lovett, Mrs. Vernice Stoudimire, Mrs. F. F. Miller, Mrs. Neal Crumpton, Mrs. Nona Payne, Mrs. Eastis, Mrs. Claude Edwards, Mrs. O. F. Lokey, Mrs. N. F. Revis, Mrs. A. A. Thornburg, Jr., Mrs. Carlson, Miss Collins and the hostess.

The Christmas meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Brown.

POULTRY CARE

Cold weather brings a reminder that extra attention to housing and feeding of poultry flocks pays worth-while returns.

GARDEN FERTILIZER

The one best time for making an application of unrotted manure to gardens and truck patches is late fall and early winter.

DON'T STUFF TURKEY UNTIL READY TO COOK

One time-saving practice not recommended to Thanksgiving meal planners is stuffing the turkey in advance or before freezing.

Mary Hulsey, API Extension nutritionist, warns that stuffing birds in advance may result in spoilage and food poisoning.

She advises homemakers to save time by making the stuffing the day before and holding it in the refrigerator. It will help if string, needle or skewers, and other tools are easily available so the job can be finished a few minutes after it is started.

"But remember not to put the stuffing in until the turkey is ready to go into the oven," urges the specialist. "And in roasting, allow enough time and use the right oven temperature to insure cooking to the very center of the stuffing."

Miss Hulsey adds that turkeys should roast at 300 to 325 degrees F. in an uncovered pan according to a time schedule suited to the weight of the bird. This lets the heat penetrateslowly and thoroughly, holds in the juices, and prevents overcooking the outside of the bird before the inside is done.

Alabama 4-H Boys And Girls Make Fine Records In State Club Projects In 1952

HIGH HONORS were accorded 4-H'ers for their top records in the 1952 National 4-H Canning, Dress Revue, Farm and Home Safety, and Tractor Maintenance programs. Each received an educational trip to the 31st National 4-H Club Congress, Chicago, November 30—December 4. Highlights of the Alabama 4-H winners' careers are given below.

Proper tractor care has kept the wheels rolling and production up on the Tyner farm near Berry. For a job well done, son Roy, 16, was named Alabama winner in the 4-H Tractor Maintenance program and will attend National 4-H Club Congress as guest of Pan-Am Southern Corp. Roy has devoted two years to the study and practice of tractor operation and maintenance. Since 1950 he has attended two county training schools on tractor maintenance, experience which helped place him as 1951 county winner in the project. As county blue ribbon award and medal winner this year, Roy assisted in giving two demonstrations at school, one on tractor safety, and one on servicing the air cleaner.

Roy Tyner

Jean Harris

Louis Bennett

Bettie Morris

Top-notch achievements in 4-H Canning won state honors for Lettie Jean Harris, 17, Titus. This young homemaker has canned 1,452 quarts of various fruits and vegetables, doing the majority of canning for her family of five. Much of it was grown in her own 4-H garden. Kerr Glass provided her all-expense trip to the Chicago 4-H Club Congress. In club work seven years Lettie Jean tries to can meats, vegetables, fruits, pickles, preserves and jellies. Her products show quality as well as quantity. While Lettie Jean was president of the Richville 4-H Club, they received the banner for 100 percent record completion. Lettie eJan's canning project has helped the food budget, and given variety and balance to family meals.

Louis Bennett, 17, of Garland, has accomplished noteworthy results in the Farm and Home Safety program, for which he received the General Motors trip award to the Chicago 4-H Club Congress. By means of surveys, demonstrations and other aids, he has helped to make his community more safety conscious. For the last four years Louis has carried on a systematic safety campaign. He helped construct concrete steps and replaced rotted boards in the porch. He also removed gasoline from the house, repaired damaged electrical appliances, kept the yard free of tools, boards and nails, and helped get rid of the rats. He volunteered as safety instructor at the community pool, and for two years has served on the school bus safety patrol, as well as his local club as president.

Representing Alabama in the National 4-H Dress Revue program will be Bettie Morris, 16, Blountsville. Through her 4-H project work, planning and making a harmonious ensemble has become a simple matter to Bettie. Poise, good grooming habits, improved personality and a considerable savings in dollars have also been gained along the way. Bettie's trip winning costume was a two-piece navy broadcloth, consisting of dress and bolero. Attractive accessories were two dickeys, one made of navy material with lime-colored covered buttons, and the other was of the lime colored material with tie neck and self-covered buttons. Thus Bettie has made two variations from one costume. She will be the guest of Simplicity Pattern Co. at the Chicago 4-H Club Congress.

All these programs are conducted under the direction of the Cooperative Extension Service.

CONTROL COTTON PESTS

From the National Cotton Council comes the heartening news that 1951 cotton pest damage in Alabama was $62.4 million less than in 1950.

Total value of cotton and cottonseed destroyed by bugs and worms in Alabama in 1951 was estimated at $25,492,300 as compared with $88,097,000 in 1950.

Council statistics reveal that the boll weevil and other marauders kept 126,300 bales of cotton and 51,500 tons of cottonseed out of productin in Alabama in 1951. In 1950, pests dcked Alabama cotton farmers 380,377 bales and 149,245 tons of seed.

Weather conditions, of course, have a great deal to do with the damage to cotton each year by pests. It is encouraging, however, to note that cotton farmers more and more are becoming alert to the serious insect threat. They are following control practices recommended by entomologists. Without these precautions, insect damage to cotton in Alabama in 1951, undoubtedly would have been much greater and yields and income reduced accordingly.

Alabama cotton farmers can still afford loss of more than $113 million to pests in a two-year period. There is need for further intensified control efforts.

At the Cotton Insect Control Conference in Memphis, December 10-11, the National Cotton Council is bringing together all groups concerned with reducing insect losses. Unified activity such as this is a constructive step toward halting crop ravages each year by pests.

ADVICE ON REMOVING DIRT FROM FURNITURE

Many homemakers find that if too many heavy applications of wax or polish have been applied to furniture without sufficient rubbing, dirt and dust tend to stick to the surface.

Alice Peavy, API Extension home management specialist, says that dirt on varnished furniture may be removed with a small amount of soap and water or with linseed oil, turpentine, and hot water.

Here's how to tell when a pan of gingerbread has baked enough. The top should have a light springy feeling when gently tapped with the fingers, the sides of the cake should have shrunk slightly from the sides of the pan, and there should be no sticky particles left on a clean toothpick or wire cake tester inserted in the center.

When you are roasting a chicken simmer the giblets and neck in a cup or two of water to which you have added a bay leaf, a few peppercorns, a small onion, a prig of parsley and a little salt. Use this giblet broth with which to make gravy after the chicken is roasted.

COSTRUCTION PROGRAM ALABAMA HAS LARGE ROAD

Alabama has the biggest road construction program in the Southeast. That is the report of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads.

The Bureau figures showed Alabama's approved program of road funds "being spent and to be spent" amounts to $61,744,000, and will include 967 miles of road.

Georgia came second in the list, with $60,496,000.

State Highway Department Director W. G. Pruett has figures on record showing that Alabama's entire road program envisiged for construction or start of construction within the next 12 to 15 months, totaling approximately $70,000,000.

The Alabama program can be broken down into the following projects:

1. Primary federal aid, or major highway projects, amounting to $42,000,000.

2. Secondary federal aid highways — farm-to-market federal roads, but not including county-state aid roads. Approximately $22,000,000 to be spent on such roads within the next 12 months.

3. Urban program — under construction or getting ready for construction, $2,000,000.

In addition, there is an unprogrammed balance in federal aid of approximately $4,000,000, including state and federal aid funds.

For a delicious luncheon dish, try piling slices of hard-cooked eggs on slices of buttered toast; top with canned drained green asparagus tips and a cheese sauce.

KING'S BEND PLANTATION SOLD IN DALLAS COUNTY

Historic King's Bend Plantation in Dallas county has been purchased by Miller and Company, Selma lumber firm.

A price of $122,500 was paid for the 3,000-acre property with some 20 houses and buildings, which was formerly the property of Vice-President William Rufus King. The plantation had been in the King family since 1819. King died shortly after being elected.

The plantation was sold at auction to cover costs of administering the estate of the late Alice Devane King, a niece of William Rufus King. It is across the Alabama River from Selma.

WEST VIRGINIA PAYS VETERANS BONUS

West Virginia veterans of World Wars I and II now residing in Alabama were reminded today that December 31, 1952, is the deadline to apply for the bonus now being paid there. Applications must be postmarked no later than midnight, December 31st, to be eligible for consideration.

Already 282 veterans now living in Alabama have been paid bonuses totalling $91,990.00 according to information received from the West Virginia Department of Veterans' Affairs at Charleston. There are indications that there are more veterans in this area who may qualify for West Virginia's bonus.

Qualifications include six month's residency in West Virginia immediately preceding entry into service and at least 90 days' active duty between April 6, 1917 and November 11, 1918 for World War I veterans or between December 7, 1941, and September 2, 1945, for World War II veterans

Oregon veterans of World War II or their survivors residing in Alabama are warned that Monday, December 1st, 1952, is the deadline for applying for the bonus paid by the State of Oregon. Assistance may be had in filing for either of the above benefits by application to the nearest County Office of the Alabama Department of Veterans' Affairs, said C. C. Horton, Director, in Montgomery.

Lift For Leftovers From Thanksgiving

Whatever is left of the turkey after Thanksgiving dinner, whether it is plenty of tender meat or just the "pikin's and the bones", can be the basis for many delicious, thrifty dishes. Old jokes about the hash and coup to the contrary, any leftover turkey dish can be different and appetizing with a few extra touches and trimmings. Recipes for using cooked range from the familiar turkey a la king, pies and dumplings, to hearty chowder, noodle scallop and baked hash, enlivened with chopped green pepper and onion.

One practical suggestion is to reverse the usual routine and make the turkey soup first instead of last. This saves space in the refrigerator, prevents the meat from drying on the bones as it waits, and starts the cook out with a supply of flavorful broth. This she can use to stretch leftover gravy for dumplings and pie, to moisten leftover stuffing for reheating or to add flavorful liquid to hash.

Strip the meat from the bones and cover it for keeping in the refrigerator, or package it well and put it away in the home freezer for later use. (Large pieces of cooked turkey in the freezer are especially convenient for hurry-up meals.) As for the bones, cover them with slightly salted water and simmer an hour or so before straining off the broth. Add onion, celery or other seasonings to the bones for more flavorful broth.

Turkey teams up well with many foods so no cook with imagination need let leftovers become monotonus in flavor or looks. Foreign cookery offers cues for giving a lift to routine recipes. Turkey might "go Italian" by combining with spaghetti, tomato sause and a topping of grated cheese; Spanish with green pepper, onion and hot seasoning; French with a bit of nutmeg; Hungarian with plenty of paprika; Mexican with chili seasoning and a topping of a cornmeal mixture. For an exotic-looking but easy dish, add chopped nuts, shredded raw carrots and occoanut. Southern cooks in this country often use turkey bits and broth in spoon bread.

By Saturday or Sunday after Thanksgiving when the turkey is almost gone, a hot turkey pie is still possible if a cup and a half of turkey can be coaxed out of hiding, Miss Lightsey suggests. This amount of turkey is enough to make a pie for four people.

Ingredients: 1½ cups chopped cooked turkey; ¼ cup cooked diced celery; 2 tablespoons finely minced onion; ¾ cup cooked diced carrots; ¼ cup canned or cooked peas; 1½ cups sauce (thickened broth made from turkey bones); unbaked pastry. To make: Place turkey, vegetables and sauce in layers in a shallow baking dish or in four individual baking dishes. Bake in a hot oven (425° F.) 20 minutes—or until hot through. Meanwhile cut pastry into four circles or other designs, then bake 12 to 15 minutes on a baking sheet. Place baked pastries on top of pie and serve. A ring of seasoned mashed potatoes placed around edge of pie before baking may be used instead of pastry.

SALLEE CIRCLE MEETS

The Sallee Circle met at the home of Mrs. T. C. Rush, Jr., on Monday, November 17.

Mrs. J. R. Woods, chairman of the circle, opened the meeting by welcoming the group. Mrs. J. F. Thompson gave a beautiful and comforting devotional, using verses from John 15 and Psalm 32:8 on "God is My Refuge" after which Mrs. Gaston Walton led in prayer.

Mrs. Robert Holcombe, Mission Study Chairman, gave the first chapter of "A Pioneer For Jesus". This was an interesting and informative study.

The Secretary, Mrs. Arthur Wood read the October minutes, called the roll and gave the financial report.

There was a discussion to help the needy and sick of our community on Thanksgiving with baskets and other remembrances. The week of prayer for Foreign missions was announced The program for Monday, December 1st was assigned to the members of the Sallee Circle by Mrs. Arthur Wood, program chairman.

This concluded the business after which Mrs. T. C. Rush, Jr., served delicious cake, coffee, nuts, and soft drinks to 11 members and 3 children during the social hour.

HERE AGAIN

You wonder if there is a Santa Claus,
You've never seen him, you say?
Child, he's been traveling over the world
For two thousand years and a day.
Haven't you found his spinning tops,
His dolls and his round red drums?
Then certain it is that once a year
The King of the Far North comes!

And Santa Claus is eager to remember every little one this year, and thru the Good Fellows is trying his best to get the name of all children who, otherwise, would have little cause for happiness at this glad season. Please contact Elvin Hill or Luther McGiboney in Columbiana if you know of a child who needs the Good Fellow's "ray of sunshine" to make his or her heart rejoice at Christmas Time this year.

Luther McGiboney is Treasurer of The Good Fellows organization and will be glad to receive contributions to this most worthy cause. Give generously, please!

SPEAKING OF CRUSADES

If we were ever to start out blazing a trail for an effective Crusade, the first people we would solicit for their active "support and influence", would be the Football enthusiasts and all people endowed with the Christmas Spirit who retain an unshaken belief in Santa Claus and all the things he represents. In this way, we feel sure our cause would be worthy of preservation. And numerically, we are dead certain we would win! And, whats more— our "Crusade" would comprise the happiest people on earth.

Combine the Football spirit, with the Christmas Spirit, and a fellow could go out and lick the world!

SANTA CLAUS IS COMING TO TOWN

Santa Claus, according to custom and tradition, will arrive at Meyers Variety Store Saturday afternoon at one o'clock, and this year the jolly old fellow is sporting a brand new red corduroy suit with all accessories, including a pack filled with free gifts for the kiddies.

Santa will also take orders from "Small Fry" and relay them to proper authorities, and the Good Fellows stand ready to assist him in every way possible. They work in close cooperation with Santa Claus in spreading the Christmas Spirit in this old war-torn world. So, be on hand next Saturday in Columbiana and be sure and bring the kiddies and stop at Meyers Variety where Santa will be the genial host.

LET'S HAVE MUSIC AND LIGHTS DURING YULETIDE

Let's string up the welcome lights early this year, City Dads, and how about getting Olin Jackson to tinker with those chimes in the Courthouse belfry and get some Christmas Music ringing out over Main? Even on a rainy day, these colorful additions to the shopping district would be a splendid thing. What do you think?

MUSICAL PROGRAM AT HIGH SCHOOL TUESDAY EVENING

Talented Mary Mims will present the musical part of the P. T. A. program at the High School next Tuesday evening. Columbiana music lovers are in for a treat in Melodyland with this popular little exponent of Music directing. Make your arrangements to be present.

Now that America has developed a jet which will average over 600 miles an hour, the flight from Montgomery to Birmingham can be reduced to one hour and six minutes — six minutes for the flight and one hour for the trip to the airport.

BUCK CREEK FIRST IN GOODFELLOWS FUND CAMPAIGN

L. O. Farris and his Buck Creek Goodfellows have started the big drive in Shelby County in a big way. With 172 Goodfellows contributing almost $80.00 to the fund to bring toys, fruits, nuts and candy to over 700 needy children in the county, they are the first to report.

Perhaps many people are wondering how they can contribute to the Goodfellow fund. Anyone may give a contribution to any of the following community Goodfellows: Dr. W. C. Browne, Chief Goodfellow, Vincent, Jimmy Wyatt, Montevallo, Elvin Hill, Columbiana, L. O. Farris, Alabaster, Clyde Adams, Chelsea (Sterrett Rt. 1), Roy Downs and W. N. Minor Jr., Calera, Mrs. Lois Segers, Westover (Sterrett Rt. 1(/ F. Jackson, Harpersville, Mrs. Martha Armstrong, Sterrett and Oland Smith Wilsonville. Or it may be mailed to Luther F. McGiboney, Treasurer, Columbiana.

Dr. Browne says that he is looking forward to hearing from every community in the county. Every bit of help that can be given will be needed to raise the $1500 needed for this commendable project. Approximately $2.00 per child will be spent. All materials are purchased wholesale through the cooperation of the Birmingham Post and the Birmingham GoGodfellows.

Mr. Farris' report from Buck Creek is as follows:

Finishing Department—Marshall Barnett 50c, Othar Dennard 50c, Wilton Merrell 50c, Clate Crumpton 40c, Jim Mack Lawley $1.00, Hobart Wyatt $1.00.

ATTENTION TAX PAYERS!

Under the new law, it is required that all owners of personal property, such as dairy cows, cattle, tractors, machinery of all kinds including saw mills, stocks of goods and all other personal property, shall make a new assessment every year.

There is a penalty for failure to make such assessment.

Owners of homes, who have not signed a claim for homestead exemption, must sign such a claim one time by January 1st, 1953.

As has been explained before, tax payers who have real estate only, do not make new assessments unless there is a change. All tax payers who have changes in their assessments should report such changes without fail.

Columbiana Scouts Receive Charter

The Columbiana Boy Scout Troop No. 60 has received its charter. This Charter has been granted to the Columbiana Park and Recreation Board upon receiving its application for same. The program on the Boy Scout and "Explorer Program for Character Building and Citizen Training", subject to the provisions of the Constitution and By-laws and regulations of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America, has been officially granted. The following prominent men in Columbiana are members of the Troop Committee: Roy Mann, Chairman; Luther F. McGiboney, J. F. Thompson, Francis Leonard and Allen D. Wilson. Institutional Representative: Ross Bob Mullins. Scout master, B. B. White; Assistant Scout master, Hugh M. Sims.

All officials have been duly certified and are officially registered by the National Council.

The Charter bears the date, October 31, 1952.

J. A. Tucker has leased this organization a one acre plot of land for ten years. It is located near a big spring, and on this lovely plot will soon be erected a modern Boy Scout Lodge, which will fill the long felt need of a wholesome recreational retreat for this age group.

Scoutmaster B. B. White expresses gratitude for the generous spirit he has encountered in promoting this project, and we feel sure, under this official leadership, the objective of this worthy organization will be fully realized.

CLOSED ALL DAY SATURDAYS

After December 27, the Alabama Power Company Office will be closed all day each Saturday. Business with this Company should be transacted before Saturday each week. At present, the office is open until noon each Saturday but the new policy will go into effect on the 27th. Make a note of it.

SEALE-MERRELL POST CALL FOR MEMBERSHIP

The members of the American Legion Post 168 of Wilsonville, known as the Seale-Merrell Post, is issuing this week a challenging call for membership. Now is the time to pay up those dues, and join with former "comrades in arms" and bring up the membership quota in this alert organization.

This special call will continue thru the month of December. Those who pay their dues by December 11, will be given a free chance on a Turkey, which will be given away. For further particulars on this offer, contact Billy Smith, Commander or J. C. Farr, Post Adjutant.

REV. JAMES R. BUTLER

'M' Night Set At Siluria Church By County Baptists

Pictured above is Rev. James R. Butler, pastor, West End Baptist Church, Birmingham, Alabama, who will be guest speaker for the Shelby Association Baptist Training Union "M" Night at Siluria Baptist Church next Monday night, December 8th.

The Associational Training Union is fortunate in having this "Training Union-minded" man to speak from one of the better churches of the great Birmingham Association to speak to us on the 1953 Training Union themes that are to be studied from month to month next year.

The goal is to have at least 450 present as against 423 that assembled at Columbiana last December for Mobilization night. To make it more interesting thru-out the state, Shelby Association has challenged the Baldwin Association this year to better their attendance last year. They had 450 last year and we are to beat them this year, if possible.

There are 33 churches in this association with training Unions, says G. C. Moore, Jr., associational director, who will all want to have good delegations to Siluria on the night of December 8th. Not only active Training Union members are invited but all Baptist Churches or individuals interested in taking a part in the county-wide program are cordially invited to attend.

The program opens at 7:30 with group songs, and will be climaxed with the message by Rev. James R. Butler. The local host pastor, Bro. M. L. Butler, Siluria, assures us that we will be comfortably seated for the occasion, and that you will have a warm welcome to Siluria Church.

TREE CLUB PLAN TO PLANT OAK AND PINE IN CITY

The Columbiana Tree Club, at a meeting Monday night, agreed upon a plan for starting fall and winter planting to beautify Columbiana.

James I. Harrison, who presided, pointed out that the most desirable tree for planting on sidewalks is the oak. Young oaks indigenous to this section can be easily obtained and planted with almost a certainty of success and the knowledge that through the years they will grow ever more beautiful and useful. Pines, which are favored by many home owners, can also be provided by the club in quantity, he mentioned, but added that, while they lend themselves satisfactorily to transplanting within property confines, they are hardly desirable for growing along the town's narrow sidewalks. He suggested, therefore, that pines be chosen for use on grounds surrounding houses and public buildings wherever possible.

Forgus E. Williams represented the placement committee in the absence of the chairman, Leon Meyers. This committee will be instrumental in starting in motion the beautification efforts proposed by the club. Representing local organizations which have promised their support in this civic movement are the following members of the placement committee; Mrs. Gray Goodwin, Mrs. Alvin Stinson, Mrs. F. E. Williams, Mrs. Jay Green, Miss Myrtle Miles, Homer Walton, Forgus E. Williams and Elvin Hill.

Mr. Meyers, the chairman, has announced that a meeting of this committee will be called in a few days to assign a section of the town to each member so that they may confer with residents to learn (1) if they wish to further beautify their premises with trees; (2) if the trees are to be planted on the property or along the bordering sidewalk; (3) the variety of trees desired.

Preferences already expressed have covered a wide variety. Some are interestd only in woodland trees such as dogwood, crabapple and redbud. Others wish to plant nursery stock of various kinds. It was determined at the meeting that every effort will be made to aid citizens in securing the wanted trees. Luther Curlee, chairman of the procurement committee has secured the cooperation of the city in the plan for planting along the sidewalks.

ALABAMA RECREATION SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS

At a recent meeting of the Alabama Recreation Society held in Montgomery, the following officers were elected for the current year:

President, Robert A. Turner, West Point Manufacturing Company; President-elect, Beth Yates, Sylacauga, Alabama.

Mrs. Yates was also designated to establish procedure for recognizing the most outstanding contribution made to recreation in the state by a lay person. Such recognition and award to be made at the next annual meeting of the Society.

Vice President: King Sparks, Birmingham, Alabama; Secretary-Treasurer, Jesse Matthews of Anniston, Alabama.

Columbiana Recreation Director Coach Roy Mann, Ross Bob Mullins and Elvin Hill, from the Park and Recreation Board attended this meeting. The next meeting will be held in Birmingham.

THOMAS E. McGIBONEY PASSES

Thomas Eugene McGiboney, age 77, of Siluria, passed away at his residence Monday afternoon. He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Eva McGiboney; 1 daughter, Mrs. C. R. Crim of Central Park; 2 brothers, E. T. and J. E. McGiboney; 1 sister, Mrs. R. D. Crim; 2 grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at 1:30 P. M. in Central Park. Interment in Oakland Cemetery.

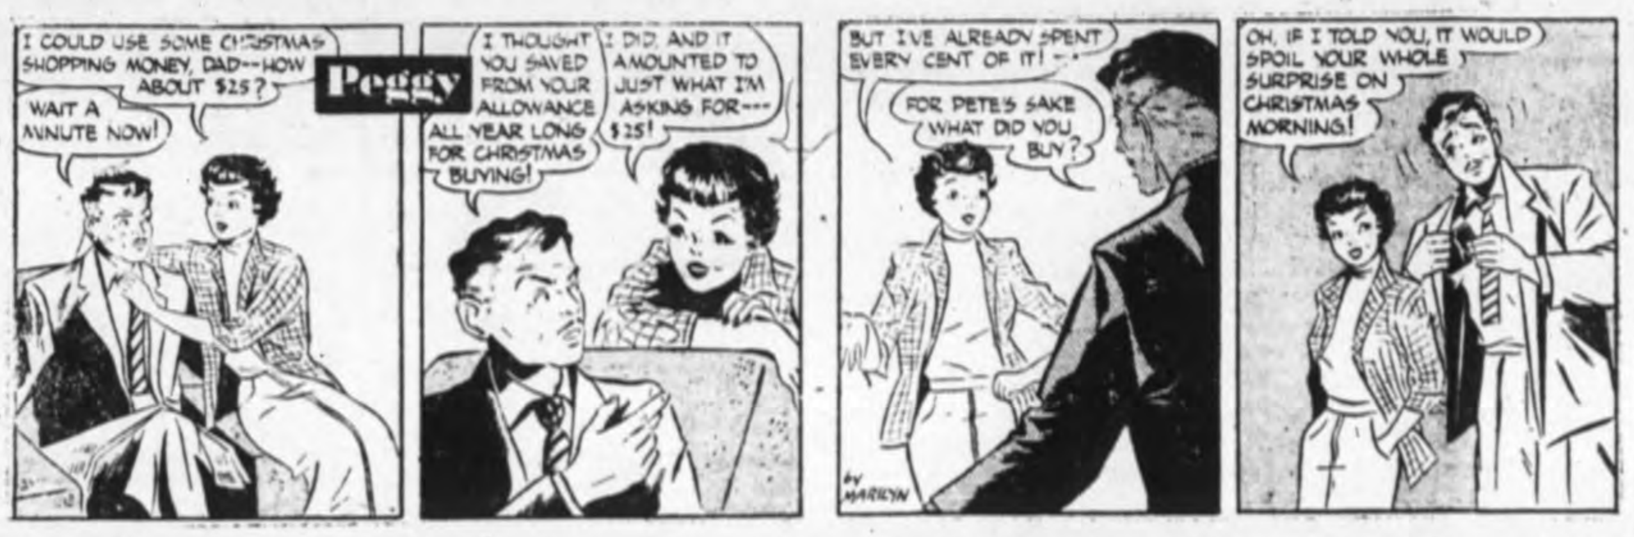
The TILLERS
LISTEN, PAW! SOMEBODY'S PLAYING A BANJO ON THE RADIO!
HE'S PRETTY GOOD! REMEMBER HOW I USED TO PLAY AND SING TO YOU WHEN WE WERE COURTING?
I WAS PRETTY GOOD IN THOSE DAYS!
YES...I ENJOYED YOUR PLAYING THEN BETTER THAN I DO TODAY'S MUSIC ON THE RADIO!
DO YOU REALLY MEAN THAT, MAW?
OF COURSE I DO!
THOSE BEAUTIFUL LONG PAUSES BETWEEN NUMBERS WEREN'T RUINED BY COMMERCIALS!



Peggy
I COULD USE SOME CHRISTMAS SHOPPING MONEY, DAD--HOW ABOUT $25?
WAIT A MINUTE NOW!
I THOUGHT YOU SAVED FROM YOUR ALLOWANCE ALL YEAR LONG FOR CHRISTMAS BUYING!
I DID, AND IT AMOUNTED TO JUST WHAT I'M ASKING FOR---$25!
BUT I'VE ALREADY SPENT EVERY CENT OF IT!--
FOR PETE'S SAKE WHAT DID YOU BUY?
OH, IF I TOLD YOU, IT WOULD SPOIL YOUR WHOLE SURPRISE ON CHRISTMAS MORNING!

HOLIDAY HOUSES OF 1952 TO BE OPEN DECEMBER 13-14 IN BIRMINGHAM

On Friday and Saturday, December 13th and 14th, five of Birmingham's most attractive homes, which will be decorated and arranged for the Christmas Season, will be shown as the Holiday Houses of 1952 of the Women's Organization of the Independent Presbyterian Church of that city.

The Holiday Houses of 1952 are the homes of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McNabb, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Shepherd, Dr. and Mrs. Clifford L. Lamar, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Upchurch, and Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams.

These homes will be open on Saturday from 11 A. M. to 6 P. M. and on Sunday from 2 to 6 P. M. Tea will be served each afternoon in the church parlors which will be festive with Christmas decorations and music. Tickets for the tour and tea combined will be sold at the church and at each Holiday House. The tour will start from the church at 3100 Highland Avenue where free transportation will be available each day.

Bible Comment:

Gifts From Heart Are the Only True Signs of Love

BACK in the harsh period of the Exodus when the Jews were living under the most primitive circumstances, their tabernacle was a tent that far ante-dated the rich splendor of Solomon's Temple.

Yet somehow the atmosphere of these first crude churches expressed the true spirit of sincere worship. It revealed the essential basis of worship at any time or place. The idea of worship is more important than the place chosen or decorated for the occasion.

All who felt inspired brought offerings for the work. It seemed a consecration on the part of all. Each brought the best he had to offer.

Best of all, they brought not only things in general use but their own hand-made things as well. Thus willingness was the essence of all they gave and willingness is at the heart of all true worship.

But the truest adornment of any church or cathedral is the hearts of its worshipers. Paul said that even though one gave all one had including his own body, it was as nothing if there was no love in his heart.

Jesus defined true worship as not being in the gifts but in their spiritual contents.

"God is a spirit and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

But worship in the spirit and truth is not worship without gifts. The measure of your inward devotion is often actually the extent of the depth of the gifts.

Today, with so much suffering in the world, religion at its highest level consists of love for both God and our fellows. It finds its best expression in any act which may work toward the humanitarian goal of feeding the hungry and clothing the ragged members of the human race. One of its finest acts of self-expression in bringing warmth and shelter to homeless, suffering millions

CAMP BRANCH CHURCH

Dr. B. F. Tingle, District Superintendent, brought an inspiring sermon to us on November 16, when he presided at our First Quarterly Conference.

The Senior M. Y. F. had charge of the worship service at the morning hour Sunday, November 23. The message of the service was in keeping with the Thanksgiving season.

The W. S. C. S. enjoyed a Spend The Day at the Church Tuesday, with a delicious lunch at the noon hour. The day was profitably spent in study and discussion of the book, "Toward Understanding The Bible". Mrs. Jim Redfield gave the devotional for the day. Mrs. R. S. Dixon lead the discussion.

French emigrants who settled near Demopolis in hopes of raising grapes and olives found rich soil, but neither crop did well and they soon became discouraged. Alabama soil and climate were better suited to growing cotton, grain and vegetables. The friendly Choctaw Chief, Pushmataha, taught the Frenchmen how to grow these Alabama crops.

WILSONVILLE

ELIZABETH WELDON

Our oldest citizen and one loved and respected by all who knew him, Mr. Irvin Winghard, died at the age of ninety-eight and was buried in the Wilsonville Cemetery.

The W. M. U. of the Baptist Church met at the Pastorium for an all day program Wednesday.

Mrs. Ben Ingram, a former resident of our town and mother of Mrs. Carol Gardner, died at her home in Birmingham and was burried here last week.

Mrs. Alice Ray, mother of Mrs. Grady Blankenship and Mr. Arnold Ray, died at her home in the Fourmile District and was buried in the Fourmile Cemetery.

Mrs. Calvin Weldon from Mobile, Mrs. Tom Taylor and Mrs. James Taylor from Birmingham were visitors in town Sunday.

Mrs. Juanita Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Story spent Sunday as guests of Dr. Marion Morgan in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. James Curtis spent the Thanksgiving holidays touring Florida.

Mrs. Alice Rodgers and daughters Dorothy and Faye spent the holidays in Anniston visiting Mrs. Rodgers' mother.

Home from school for Thanksgiving were Barbara Edwards from Montevallo and Betty Ann Vardaman and Edward Cunningham from Howard.

Mrs. Ethel Tinney is visiting her sister in Chattanooga.

All circles of the W. M. U. met at the Baptist Church Wednesday evening for a study course.

Mrs. O. F. Lokey is visiting in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. James Wallace of Camp Gordon and Birmingham, were home during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Smith and Sandy spent Thanksgiving in Russelville with Mr. and Mrs. James Wood and family.

Miss Maggie Lou Garrett from Birmingham was home for the holidays.

Mr. C. A. Curtis is visiting his son in Birmingham.

Rev. Thomas from Moundville, brought inspiring messages at the Baptist Church Sunday. Mrs. Thomas visited with us.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Vardaman Thanksgiving were Mr. and Mrs. Macon Ray from Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bennett Vardaman and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Vardaman and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vardaman from Selma and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Vardaman from Thorsby.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Smith Sunday were: Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Franks, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Carr and Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Smith from Birmingham.

Mrs. Lila Cosper spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Green in Vincent.

We welcome Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt and daughter who have moved to our town from Clanton.

Mr. and Mrs. Barney Nichols had as their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Milam and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nichols.

We regret to report that Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Early are moving from our town. They are going to Pensacola, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Morris and family visited in Gadsden Sunday.

Visiting Mrs. Fred Miller and William Frederick were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McGlaughin, Mrs. A. L. McGlaughin and Mrs. Bill Bailey (Christine McGlaughin) and children.

Visiting Mr. and Mrs. S. S. McEwen Thanksgiving were Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Cox and sons and daughter Terry from Talladega, and Mrs. Blenard Smothers and children from Vincent.

During the early Alabama days, a number of land companies were organized for the purpose of speculating in land in the state, buying millions of acres. One of these companies bought the tract of land on which Montgomery now stands and the town was laid out in 1819.

NEW HOPE

NEW HOPE MATRONS MEET

In planning for the Holiday season just ahead, the Home Demonstration Club enjoyed a most timely demonstration Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Mahan on Cahaba Valley Road.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. C. Greathouse presided at the business session when plans for the Chicken Supper for December 6 were completed.

The topic of discussion was "Gifts from the Preserving Kettle" which was ably presented by Miss Collins. She made Orange Carrot Marmalade, and showed Amber Marmalade, which had been prepared. Both are unusual, flavorful sweets, suitable for that Christmas Stocking. Refreshments were served to 15 who enjoyed the occasion.

Now that America has developed a jet which will average over 600 miles an hour, the flight from Montgomery to Birmingham can be reduced to one hour and six minutes—six minutes for the flight and one hour for the trip to the airport.

SEN. JOHN SPARKMAN INSPECTS MUTUAL SECURITY

Senator John Sparkman, of Alabama, left Friday afternoon for a quick inspection of Mutual Security operations abroad to determine whether American small business is receiving a fair share of orders under the program.

Sparkman, Chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee, was author of the amendment to the Mutual Security Act, adopted last June, which provides for assistance to small business in the procurement of supplies. During his trip, the Alabama Senator hopes to assist Mutual Security offices in Europe, Asia and Africa to set up facilities for providing information to purchasers in the recipient countries about commodities and services produced by small independent enterprises in the United States.

The inspection tour, originally planned for August, was interrupted by Sparkman's nomination as Democratic Vice Presidential candidate. When the unexpected nomination occurred, Sparkman had already gotten his tickets, passport, and innoculations.

"Since the campaign is over and it will be necessary to report to Congress on the program this January," said Sparkman, "I decided to go ahead as originally planned. I would like to determine for myself whether American small business is getting its fair share of orders, or whether further amendment to the act is necessary to make an effective program."

Sparkman, who will travel by commercial aviation, will be accompanied by one staff assistant from the Small Business Committee. He hopes to visit approximately fifteen different areas of operation, and be back in Washington in time for Christmas. To keep up this schedule, it will be necessary to limit visits to some places to only a few hours.

VINCENT GARDEN CLUB ACTIVE ORGANIZATION

The members of the Vincent Garden Club are a most energetic and enthusiastic group of ladies. Each year their programs are attended with interest and anticipation. The year books for the year 1952-53 are most attractive, done in gold with hand painted iris on the cover. Hand stenciled illustrations dramatize each month's program.

The first project of this year was to make, paint and plant flower boxes for the beautification of down town. At the November meeting, Mrs. Blanche Duvall, of Childersburg, presented an illustrated lecture on Christmas decorations. This so enthralled the members that it was decided to undertake the decorating of each business firm in the town. No gayer place will be found than our town for the holidays with each store, filling station, and other places wearing a bright wreath or arrangement either outside or in.

Each year the Garden Club with the Study Club sponsors the lighting of the large outside tree in the center of town. Not content with material beauty the club members will answer roll call at the December meeting with a brightly wrapped gift to be delivered to the town's shut-ins.

When the Christmas Cantata is presented on December 21 at the Baptist Church, the blue and gold decorations with the soft glow of candlelight will again testify to the interest of the Garden Club as the decorations are done yearly by this group.

Members are looking forward to their Christmas meeting when 4 guests will relate how the holidays are spent in their respective countries of England, Switzerland, France and Belgium.

Other plans for the year include the beautifying of the streets leading in and out of town and the planting of a church garden to be shared by both churches. The members of the Vincent Garden Club truly believe their motto, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever".

Total amount of unemployment payments made during September was $943,180, issued to an estimated 16,500 jobless workers. The average weekly payment was $18.26 cents, which is 30 cents less than the average weekly payment for August.

WHY YOU SHOULD BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS

Dr. E. F. Sloan, County Health Officer

Those of us who are enjoying good health often find it difficult to realize just what its loss can mean .

The occurrence, for instance, of a case of Tuberculosis in a family can and does disrupt the entire family.

If it occurs in the father, the loss of income over a long period of time can reduce the family to poverty.

If it occurs in the mother, the household is completely upset and the children must be deprived of the mother's care for a long period of time.

If a younger member of the family is the victim, he or she must give up, for a period of months or years, practically all those things from which they derived their greatest pleasure.

Many are now victims of Tuberculosis and many will be stricken within the next year.

Probably no more than one-half of the total number of cases are known to have the disease.

Tuberculosis is preventable and most cases are also curable, although even with the modern methods, cure may require several years of treatment.

The Shelby County Tuberculosis Association, the County Board of Revenue and Control, the practicing physicians of the County and the County Health Department combined forces two years ago to combat this widespread menace.

During the time that this team has been working together, many new cases have been found, many patients have been sent to the Sanatorium, who could not otherwise have gone, drugs have been bought for many other patients who were treated at home, and supplies have been furnished patients to help prevent the spread of the disease to others.

For the first time, progress is being made in the fight against Tuberculosis.

The extent of the financial participation of the Tuberculosis Association in this crusade against Tuberculosis depends entirely on funds derived from the sale of Christmas Seals. Your liberal purchase of Christmas Seals is a sound investment in the future security of yourself and your family.

It is earnestly urged that you buy more Christmas Seals this year than ever before and thereof the most devastating of the by aid in the eventual eradication communicable diseases.

ON THE FARMS IN SHELBY COUNTY

B. F. Hatchett and G. C. Starcher

At Jimmie Rowe's, Vincent:

Chapel Hill Rescue grass, on sericea, alone for seed, and as a nurse crop for Ky. 31 Fescue.

Oats following 70 bushel corn, in the long time rotation of 5 years sericea, 1 crop of corn, 1 crop of oats, then sericea again.

Multiflora rose for a living fence. District Supervisors will furnish 2000 free multiflora rose plants this month to continue his plantings. He says: 'I have found the roses must be protected from cattle at first. I believe it will be fine after it is older."

At the Thorsby Nursery:

We picked up 2000 multiflora rose plants for Jimmie Rowe, and 2000 for someone we can't for the moment recall (was it you?).

Pines by the million are being dug, and roses by the acre.

Roses on plots where button clover has grown for several years were double the size and vigor of the other plots.

On Mack Nix farm:

Interrupted Mack at his job of planting vetch on corn fields. He reports he has lots of wheat planted.

His Coastal Bermuda didn't prosper too well during the drought. It will get crimson clover on it this winter and nitrate come spring.

From "Better Crops With Plant Food", quotes:

"Bankers, (says the American Bankers' Association) should encourage the development of a sound conservation plan for every farm and ranch in the nation."

Also:

"Soil conservation districts with the aid of the technicians of the Soil Conservation Service, are making progress as rapidly as the work can be done in preparing the programs that warrant support by the bankers."

Thank you!

Well, there's one thing for certain, if everybody had been elected president that backers were confident would win, the U. S. today would have two presidents.

A PRE-CHRISTMAS WISH FOR YOU.

As we enter this glad, gay, glorious season of joyous anticipation of good things to come, I should like to get in a Pre-Christmas wish for you, before you get in too big a rush to read it—

"May the Peace of Christmas bless you,
May the Christmas love possess you,
May the Faith of Christmas possess you,
May the Christmas Hope provide you,
With a Merry Christmas
And a Happy New Year."

TIMELY TIPS FROM LOCAL STORES

Beautiful Mantel and door Christmas decorations are available at Varsity. Also jewelry, leather articles and a nice selection of Candy, and cosmetics. Famous brands of Cosmetics boxed and in attractive sets will be found at Columbiana Drug Store with many lovely suggestions for the "Her" and the "Him" in your life. Naturally, while browsing around, a delectable drink from these fountains helps a fellow think clearer, and shopping becomes a pleasure amid the gay chatter incident to the happiest season of all the year.

The Leader is running a splendid after Thanksgiving Sale on wearing apparel which is proving most popular with their many patrons.

Yellow Front is ablaze with every conceivable toy and the usual run of choice dress lengths to brighten up the Holidays, and at prices you can afford to pay—

The Floral Shops, Thelma and Oakley Vincent and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Towns, are planning a beautiful display of potted Poinsettas, and other gay and colorful flowers which will beautify your home and bring happiness to the recipients. Columbiana is most fortunate in having two dependable Floral Shops from which to make a selection.

All grocery stores in town are featuring the "goodies" a fellow always places on his "must have" list. Chase by Wood's, Green's or other favorite trading places and give them your order for the size Bird of Cranberry you will want so there will be no disappointment along this line.

Meyers has long been recognized as the store featuring "everything a Kiddie's heart may desire". This year is no exception. We saw Jo Meyers unpacking some wonderfully pretty dolls, trains, books, musical toys and costume jewelry. Better stop by next time you are in Columbiana. Then you will see what I mean.

Jimmy McDow continues marching ahead with his line of Chevrolets, and that new model is a "honey". If you are interested in a trade, see Jimmy, who tells me he has on his "trading clothes" and is ready to "talk turkey".

There are other things to be considered if you intend looking your best thru the Holiday Season, and you cannot do this, without a well groomed "hair-do". Perhaps you need a new Permanent, or a change in coiffure, to pep up the old tired feeling. If so, go right down and talk it over with "Delilah" Miller or Ethel Billingsley and their associates. Again do we say Columbiana folk should at all times present a well groomed look. Two splendidly equipped shops to attend to this essential matter, and such "nice folk" to enjoy a social chat with while the work goes on.

On and on we might go, but, come on in Folks and see for yourself. Take a whirl around friendly old Main. We love having you visit with us.

Now, naturally, before closing the "Timely Tips" for this week, our suggestion is that you immediately "send a subscription to the Home Paper for Christmas". This gift lasts the whole year round, and those who tried it last year have returned to have it "marked continued" for 1953. Let me hear from you if this idea clicks with your plans for that "certain somebody" whom you believe would enjoy this weekly message from Main!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Fulton and children spent a few days in Brewton as guests of Mrs. Fulton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jones.

. . . Mrs. J. E. Franks and Annette Franks of Montgomery spent Friday in Columbiana with their many friends. During their short stay on Main, Mrs. Franks took the opportunity to renew the Reporter-Democrat for 1953, which courtesy we sincerely appreciate.

. . . Mrs. Maxey, former resident, is receiving a warm welcome home for the holiday season as she visits the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Rush and Mr. Rush.

. . . Friends are busily engaged in urging Al Carlisle to return to Columbiana for "keeps". She is the guest of Mrs. Nelle Davis and has a wide circle of friends who are enjoying her stay on Main.

. . . Holiday guests in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. John Green included Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Villyard of New London, Texas and Arthur Strickland of Tallulah, Louisana. This week John and Bettina Green are happily anticipating the return of their son C. B. Green and his wife from Detroit, Michigan, whom they are hoping will decide to remain in Columbiana "for keeps". This will indeed be good news at Christmas time, for their friends as well as their loved ones should it materialize.

. . . It is good to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ivey, popular managers of the Shelby Theatre into our ever widening circle of weekly readers this week.

. . . Misses Janet and Betty Cosby of Auburn spent the Thanksgiving Holidays as guests of Mrs. Rosa Teague, Mrs. Will Parker and Miss Dorothy Parker at The Pines.

. . . Barbara Horn, popular co-ed from University was a week end guest in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Horn.

CONRAD FOWLER JR. HONORED ON 6TH BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

Friday, November 21, was an extra special day in the life of Conrad Fowler Jr., for it marked his sixth birthday anniversary. "Connie," as he is affectionately called, truly had "his day".... and from what we can learn from "Small Fry".... Connie decided on two parties, instead of one. During the afternoon he entertained his "girl friends" with an ice cream party at which time the traditional cake with brightly glowing candles made festive the occasion.

Saturday afternoon, the youthful host entertained with a "stag" party, at which time his cowboy comrades came in attired in Roy Rogers costumes and together they enjoyed a Western Picture at the Shelby Theatre, plus the pop corn et cetera incident to these shoot-'em-up delights.

The good wishes for "many happy returns" to Connie were not restricted to the Lollypop crowd. Lots of grown ups love this friendly little fellow, and took the occasion to tell him so. Already plans are going forward for next year, on November 21, when Connie promises to think up something different and when he does, he will share it with his playmates, and all of these wonderful little people will have the opportunity of marking up another Red Letter Day on their Calendar of happy Childhood days to remember, always!

. . . King Virus continues marching thru Columbiana and is not at all particular about where or when he knocks a fellow down. Many victims were stricken immediately after enjoying a Turkey Dinner Thanksgiving. Fortunately however, the "knock out" does not last long, and here's hoping all will soon be back on the Main Drag. What is causing this upset is still the $64.00 question.

. . . Gas pipe lines are being laid all over town and this marks a step forward for a long needed commodity in Columbiana. It won't be long now until we can tap in and turn it on.

. . . We have a few Christmas Greetings cuts left which are very attractive and will say "Thank you and Merry Christmas" etc. from commercial firms to customers as an expression of your appreciation for continued patronage etc. Will be glad to reserve one for you, if you will let me know the size you want.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rogers and family have returned from a brief vacation spent in Mississippi.

. . . Homer Joiner spent Thanksgiving holidays in Columbiana with his parents and friends. Pvt. Hubert Joiner, his brother is now serving over seas, but has ordered the "Home Paper" to follow him, which we gladly do. His address is: Pvt. Hubert K. Joiner, US 53109483, APO 403, 45th Engr. Const. Bn, care of P. M. New York, N. Y. Hope all of his friends will drop him a card "wishing" him a Merry Christmas!

A TRAGEDY NO WORDS CAN DESCRIBE

Sorrow at Christmas-tide seems even more poignant than on more ordinary occasions, and the hearts of this community were deeply grieved Saturday when they learned that the little three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wingard (former residents) now living in Prattville, had fallen from the family car as they were returning from a Christmas shopping trip and another car had run over the little body, crushing it to death. The child was three years old.

Funeral services were held Sunday. Deepest sympathy across the miles to those bereived ones is herby extended! This tragedy cannot be pictured in words. It is a heart wound! One which even Time's kindly fingers cannot ever erase from their lives.

This tragedy should be a warning to mothers who leave little ones parked in these cars on the streets during shopping trips. So often we have seen accidents narrowly averted thru this office window, which involved helpless little ones. They are so small, so heedless of danger. Please think these things over before leaving them, even for one minute!

P. T. A. MEETING DEC. 9

Everyone is urged to attend the December meeting of Columbiana P. T. A. which is to be held on the evening of December 9 at the High School Auditorium at 7:30 P. M. The devotional will be given by Rev. H. B. Ramsour. The program is entitled "Together We Sing" and will be under the direction of Miss Mary Mims. Miss Mims' Christmas program is an event to which we all look forward with a great deal of pleasure.

. . . Wedding bells will soon ring a merry welkin for one of Columbiana's loveliest girls. More about this later.

ZEBRA GIRL

Styled in the rain or shine manner is a coat by Lawrence of London which is completely reversible. Wear it on the striped side, or turn it around completely to the plain side. Both plain and stripe are Cone twin denims, color-coordinated to go together. The fabric is Zelan water repellent, the National Cotton Council reports.

MAYS-HUNT ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Dr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Hunt of Columbiana, Alabama, announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Elizabeth to Captain John P. Mays of Camp Polk, La.

The wedding will be solemnized on December 21st, 1952 at one o'clock P. M. at the Methodist Church in Columbiana.

VIGNETTES SPONSOR BAKE SALE SATURDAY

The Vignette Club is sponsoring a Bake Sale next Saturday in the Neal Stinson Garage, and the entire proceeds will be donated to Leonard Rogers, Principal of the S. C. H. . . . Regret to report that the Rev. R. R. Brasher is ill in an hospital in Birmingham.

. . . Who said this? "Today is the Tomorrow you worried about Yesterday?"

. . . Cheerful Cherub sends us a thought worth conning over when we too harshly judge the "younger generation". She says:

"We speak of the last generation with scorn,
Their silly Victorian
scruples and fuss....
But never a thought
we spend upon what
The next generation will think about us."

. . . It is good to see Dock Jones on Main this week. Dock has been in the Veterans Hospital in Montgomery for the past three weeks but is out again and thinks he is recuperating satisfactorily. Dock is a veteran of World War Two and his friends will be glad to get this news regarding him.

. . . Don't fail to bring the kiddies in to see Santa Claus at Meyers Variety Store next Saturday. He has gifts for the kiddies, and he wants to talk with them in person so he will know just what each boy and girl wants to find in their stockings.

. . . Ross Bob Mullins is spending this week in Gadsden as a member of the Federal Grand Jury now in session in North Alabama.

. . . Braving the elements which visited Terra Firma last Saturday at the Football game in Birmingham, when Bama submerged the Auburn Tigers, were: Wales W. Wallace, Jr., Jimmy Sharbutt, T. B. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Luck, Cecil Duke, L. G. Fulton, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Harrison, Barbara Horn, Jimmy Fox, Ray Riddle, and perhaps dozens more. All were "singin' in the rain" and apparently thought the sun was shining. Ho Hum! So much for the "pig-skin"—

. . . Mrs. Annie Stone Pattillo of Lagrange, Georgia, sister of Mrs. T. K. Roberts and Miss Margaret Stone; Mr. and Mrs. C. I. Holcombe (Sue Pattillo) of Temple, Georgia, were recent guests of the Rev. and Mrs. T. K. Roberts and Miss Margaret Stone in Columbiana.

. . . Sam A. Benton and Beatrice Tate Benton (Mr. and Mrs.), two of our former pals in Radioland, are back in Birmingham after a number of years spent as managers of WBJY in Gadsden.

. . . N. C. Cady, a fellow who has befriended us in many ways ever since we embarked on a sea of printer's ink, spent Monday in Columbiana. The last time we saw this gentleman, he looked all "down and out". His mood? the "whats the use it" variety. Today, he briskly stepped in our office looking like a cool one million dollars, and we remarked on the right about face effect, and asked N. C. what brought about the transformation. He replied: "I stopped worrying". And there you have it. No one thing upsets a fellow's whole out look on life like Old Man Worry, and ten to one, the thing we worry most about, never happens!

. . . Guess our good friend Mrs. Frank Wyatt up Vincent way is engaged in making pounds and pounds of Fruit Cake for the holiday season. We hear last year, this little lady baked nearly 5000 pounds! Yummy-Yummy!

MUSIC AT BOTH CHURCHES CHRISTMAS

The Baptist Choristers will present "The Chorus In The Skies" Sunday evening, December 14, at seven o'clock.

The Methodist Choir will present "While Sheperds Watched" on Sunday evening, December 21.

The public is cordially invited to share these Yuletide offerings.

WEDDING BELLS CHIME IN HARMONY WITH CHRISTMAS BELLS

Arrangements are going forward for the approaching marriage of beauteous Betty Hunt and Captain John May. A prenuptial shower will be held in the home of Mrs. L. G. Fulton with Mrs. Cecil Duke as co-hostess, honoring the bride elect. And, because I know you will be asking me the silver pattern chosen, it is Marlborough. The China is Creton and the Crystal is Wakefield. All are registered at Bromberg's.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Whims have returned to their home in Detroit, Michigan, after a visit with Mrs. Whim's sister, Mrs. Conrad Fowler and Mr. Fowler.

. . . We are indeed delighted to travel to Louisville, Kentucky this week and greet our good friends Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Cone. Mrs. Cone, it will be remembered is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bowdon Sr. of Calera, and Mr. Cone is project manager on a Government job in Indiana, just across the river from Louisville. So, while these two attractive people stay in Kentucky, they will still be in close touch with a wide circle of friends in Shelby county who so happily remember them.

. . . The home of Mrs. Myra Chandler was a happier place during the Thanksgiving Season on account of the presence of her three grand-children, Mickey, Myra and Bill Chandler of Birmingham.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Luck will leave Columbiana on December 19 for Christmas with the Gordons in Wilmington, Delaware.

. . . Nobody can make Lloyd Cole as happy as the irrisistible Deborah Allen. And if you don't know little Debbie, then you won't get what I mean. If you do know her, you will!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Crabtree and children of Goodlettsville, Tennessee were recent guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Stinson.

. . . Thanksgiving day in the home of Mrs. Lillie Mae MacKnight was a happy occasion brightened by a family reunion which included Mrs. MacKnight's children and grand children who are: Mr. and Mrs. David MacKnight, Celia and Becky MacKnight of Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. Hallet MacKnight of Oak Ridge, Tennessee and Mr. and Mrs. Frank MacKnight and their two sons, David and John, of Jackson, Mississippi.

TAKE PART IN THE CHRISTMAS SEAL DRIVE

Shelby County does not have a quota in the Christmas Seal Sale, said Mr. R. J. Ozley, chairman of the drive here.

"This is one drive in which it's up to the citizens to decide what they want to give.

"We do have a goal, however, a goal of $1,269.00.

"The goal has an economic basis. It is a conservative figure of what our county is capable of raising in the Seal Sale.

"It's a friendly game aimed at giving everybody a chance to have a part in the fight against tuberculosis.

"A small contribution now from a lot of people will mean an economic gain for the future. We shall be helping save lives of citizens who will be valuable in the growth and progress of our county in years to come.

"We're very eager to reach our goal, along with the other 66 Alabama counties. But whether you give or not will be left entirely up to you. No high- pressure methods will be used to insist on a contribution.

"We believe our citizens are conscious of the evils of TB. It's a disease that causes much tragedy and heartbreak, needlessly. It can be prevented, can be eradicated wholly from our county, state and nation.

"Won't you please remember this when you take part in the Christmas Seal Sale?"

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 13.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 119:33-40.

The Great Teacher

Lesson for December 7, 1952

ALTHOUGH this column is not intended for Sunday school teachers only, many teachers do read it. This week, while so many thousands of Christians are studying about Jesus, the great Teacher, it is a good thing to think about the teaching of religion, and to see what can be learned from the methods of Jesus himself. He was called "Teacher" more often than by any other title, and summed up his own work by saying "I have taught."

What?

The first thing a Sunday school teacher needs to ask is, What am I supposed to be teaching? Just facts about the Bible aren't the thing; Jesus never formally "taught Bible" as we often try to do. There is a place for that sort of thing, of course; it is of some importance to know how many books there are in the Bible, with their names arranged in order; it is worth while to know the names of the Apostles and to be able to trace the journeys of Moses or Paul on a map. But teaching these is not teaching religion. What Jesus taught can be put into two words: God, man. What God is like; what man's relation to God ought to be; how man should act toward God and his neighbor; everything Jesus taught can be summed up in those topics.

Dr. Foreman

You can express it in various ways. You can say he taught the way a child of God ought to live. You can say he taught the laws of right living. You can say he taught how to come to God and to serve him. Any way you put it, it comes back to the same two themes, God and man,—not separately but related, man to God, man to man.

* * *

How?

There are two differences between a good teacher and a poor

all." Or as the Psalmist said long before Shakespeare: "The wicked flee when no man pursueth."

Many of our fears would never exist if we had lived as we ought to have lived. Men live in fear of exposure, fear of blackmail, fear of failure and defeat, often through no one's fault but their own. Then the disciples too were afraid. They were not superstitious, they were not haunted by their sins, but they were afraid in the storm, they feared the wind and waves.

Why Christians Are Brave

Students of the Bible have discovered that the word "fear" is usually tied there to another word: Not. Fear not, is one key-note of both Old and New Testaments. The reason for this is plain. Christianity is the religion of love: love to God, love to one's neighbor. Not mere good will or kindly feeling, but active, self-forgetful love. "There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear," as St John said.

Old writers, commenting on the story of Peter's sinking in the sea, have said that if he had kept his mind on Jesus instead of on himself and on the storm-tossed waves, he would not have cried out, "I perish." Certain it is that when we are self-centered we are sure to be tormented with fear, for we are always thinking what may happen to us—and of course plenty can.

If we keep our minds on our work and on the fact that God is our Father, if we remember morning, noon and night that the God who "so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" is the same God who created this universe and controls it, then we shall not be scourged with fears.

Courageous Christians

It is a tremendous mistake to think that Christianity is only for rabbity people, for mice and not men. Christ does something for even such persons, it is true; he takes them clear out of themselves. Remember the long roll of the early Christian martyrs, very humble people most of them, who died horrible deaths rather than deny their Master; remember such saints as the missionaries who converted our own savage ancestors, at great peril to their own lives; remember the missionaries of our own time, some of them suffering torture and all of them distress, yet not giving up. The ordinary Christian missonary has more to be afraid of than most of the rest of us have; yet he has less fear. He knows God too well.

TUBERCULOSIS DEATHS REPORTED IN STATE

Almost a sixth of all the tuberculosis deaths reported from the entire state in April, May and June were reported from the state's largest three cities.

The State Department of Health announced today, on the basis of provisional vital statistics reports, that 17 tuberculosis deaths were reported from Birmingham during that three-month period. Mobile reported six and Montgomery four. And compared with the 27 reported by these three cities alone, there were 168 reported from the entire state.

The provisional reports upon which the announcement was based, prepared by the Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics, may differ slightly from the final reports not yet available.

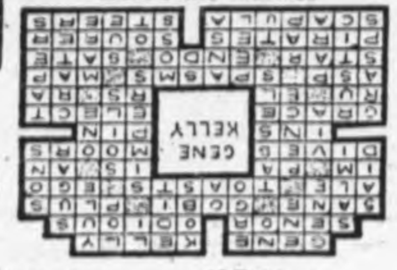
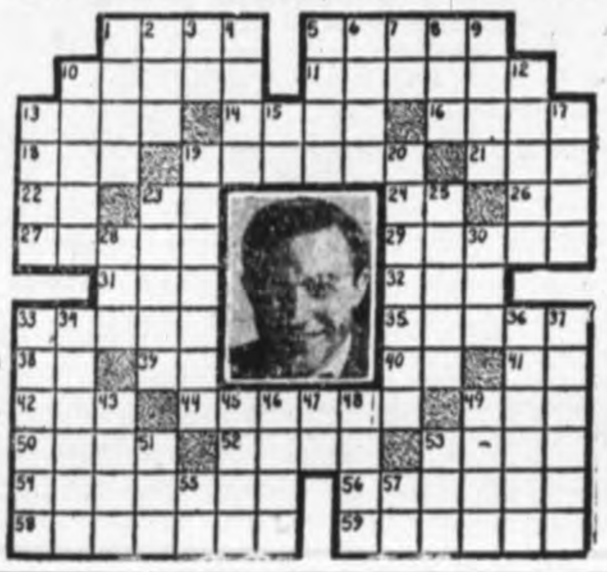
Here's the Answer





EXILED FRENCH

French who were exiled after the defeat of Napoleon chose the name "Demopolis" for their first Alabama settlement. Demopolis means "city of people". Their log houses in no way resembled the homes these Frenchmen had left in France, but they used all their skill in decorating them. In memory of Napoleon and the French empire, General Desnoettes built a museum in which he placed many relics and banners from European battlefields. Desnoettes had been a general of calvary in Napoleon's army.

Best overheard quote of the week: "My daddy moved so often that when he walked into the back yard at night with a lantern the chickens laid down and crossed their legs.

TIME TO BREED COWS FOR FALL FRESHENING

Cows that freshen in the fall produce more milk than those that calve at other seasons of the year.

"This being true," states Pete Turnham, API Extension dairy specialist, "now is an excellent time to breed cows to insure a constant supply of milk for next fall. Cows bred now will drop a calf early next September. This is the time when most milk will be needed because of the heavy school demand."

Turnham adds that cows bred to top quality bulls will mean extra dairy dollars for the farmer. And through artificial breeding of dairy cows, many dairymen can go a long way toward building a profitable herd. Ask the local county agent for complete details.

COST OF PRICE SUPPORT

The Department of Agriculture reported a drop of 80 per cent in the cost of price support programs during the 1951-52 fiscal year.

Getting Around
with Mac Brown

People have been asking why the sketch of me up at the top of the column was changed a couple of weeks ago. I don't mind telling, but it takes a bit of explaining.

To begin with, lots of folks said it looked like it was meant to be a drawing of a soldier. Now I don't object to being mistaken for a soldier. I was proud of it when I was one ten years ago and I'd be proud to be one today. I hate to see the way people's pride in their soldiers has ebbed away in the last few years. Sometimes I also think the young servicemen of today are not as proud of their responsibility and uniform as their older brothers were just a few years back. That's my impression, though I hope I'm wrong. I just wanted to make the point that no one insulted me by thinking the old drawing was supposed to show a man in a soldier's uniform.

But it so happened it was supposed to be me in my trucker's uniform. And it so happens that I'm proud of that too. My job is a good one. It is interesting, it is good honest work, and it is mighty important and helpful to other people. The fellows who earn their living the way I do are hard-working, honest, home loving citizens, almost without exception. And I'm not ashamed to be one of them. So I wanted my picture to show for sure what I was—a truck driver. That's the reason it was done over and shows me at the wheel of my rig. O.K.?

HIGH MILK PRODUCERS MEAN HIGHER PROFITS

Good cows produce milk at a lower feed cost. John R. Parrish, API Extension dairyman, says this statement is based on a study of records on 46,439 individual cows from 27,153 herds in all parts of the U. S.

The survey showed that a cow producing 5,000 pounds of milk returned $134 above feed cost, or less than half the cost of producing milk. On the other hand, a cow producing 11,000 pounds returned $297, and a 17,00-pound producer returned $448. The cow producing 11,000 pounds of milk ate $41 worth of feed more than the cow that gave 5,000 pounds of milk.

Parrish adds that Alabama dairymen have some animals in all levels of production, but few of these cows produce over 9,000 pounds of milk. The 1951 Dairy Herd Improvement Association average was a little less than 5,000 pounds. However, this would have been higher if there had been favorable weather to produce more pasture and hay.

With these facts in mind, Parrish urges Alabama dairymen to use sound culling, feeding, breeding, and other herd management practices for more profitable dairying in 1953.

TAR SPOTS POSE HEADACHES FOR COTTON INDUSTRY

Tiny particles of tar are giving the cotton industry headaches, according to the National Cotton Council.

Somewhere along the line—from the producer to the spinner—tar gets into cotton lint, finally showingup as fabric flaws and making even dyeing impossible.

The Cotton Council, in urging that cotton be protected against contaminants, emphasized that tar spots cause the value of cotton goods to be discounted. Spinners suffer a substantial direct loss and their loss is reflected back to the shipper, the warehouseman, the ginner and the producer.

Some likely tar spot sources are as follows: Floors, platforms and driveways of gins and warehouses; platens of gin presses and compresses; press boxes at gins and gates of compresses; hand trucks, electric trucks, lift trucks and other vehicles used in gin yards, compress and warehouses; floors, wall and ceilings of trucks and railroad cars splashings of asphalt and oil from roads and highways; leaks from roofs; oily substances in the exhaust from tractors, deisel engines and locomotives; asphalt coated picksacks; belt dressings; and contaminated bale bagging.

The Cotton Council is now carrying out extensive research designed to pinpoint major sources of tar spots. The Council expressed the hope that cotton men will do everything practical to keep tar spots out of cotton.

EBENEZER H. D. C. MEETS

Mrs. H. A. Pauly was hostess to the Ebenezer Home Demonstration Club at her home on November 21.

Mrs. Pauly led the group in singing "A Bicycle Built For Two" and also presented the Devotional.

Roll call, last month's minutes and the secretary's report was given by Mrs. Grady Wyatt.

The story of the hymn of the month, This is My Father's World, was read by Mrs. R. H. Davis.

Officers elected to serve in 1953 were as follows; President, Mrs. H. A. Pauly; Vice-President, Mrs. Frank Frost; Secy-Treasurer, Mrs. Earl Swinford; Music Director, Mrs. Nathan Frost; Reporter, Mrs. J. H. Wyatt.

Subject matter leaders: Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. Frank Green, Mrs. Earl Swinford and Mrs. R. H. Davis, Mrs. W. A. Nolen, Mrs. Gladys Allen, Mrs. Nathan Frost, Objective Chairmen: Mrs. Ferman Albright, Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. Grady Wyatt, Mrs. Frank Frost, Mrs. H. A. Pauly.

Miss Ivy Swinford celebrated her birthday and received gifts from the members of the club.

As it was a Spend-the-Day metting, each member had brought a covered dish and at noon, the meeting was adjourned for lunch.

After lunch, Mrs. Frank Green gave the demonstration, Gifts for the Preserving Pot.

The December meeting will be the Christmas party at the home of Mrs. W. A. Jones.

Members present were: Mrs. Jimmie Spain, Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. H. A. Pauly, Mrs. Gladys Allen, Mrs. Frank Green, Mrs. J. H. Wyatt, Mrs. Nathan Frost, Mrs. R. H. Davis, Mrs. Grady Wyatt, and Miss Ivy Swinford. Miss Elizabeth Collins, Home Demonstration Agent was also present.

One of the most satisfying repair or remodeling jobs on the farm is building safe and permanent concrete steps. Ask the local county agent for Extension plan Number BA-3 entitled "Steps".

Achievement Awards To Alabama 4-H'ers

OUTSTANDING accomplishment in the 1952 National 4-H Recreation and Rural Arts, Meat Animal, Girls' Record and Health Achievement programs has brought statewide recognition to four Alabama 4-H Club members.

Jane Moore

David Latham

Patsy Kennington

Nan Haynie

Recreation, a chief contributing factor to family pleasure and community spirit, is an important leisure-time activity in 4-H work. For outstanding leadership and achievement in the National 4-H Recreation and Rural Arts program, Jane Moore, 17, of Dozier, has been selected by the Alabama Club office for statewide recognition and will receive a certificate of honor. Jane teaches all types of folk dances, leads in group singing, gives readings, and plays the piano and most wind instruments. At county camp she was named the best girl swimmer in 1951 and has been selected as best girl camper for last two years. Her records will be among those from 46 other states to be judged for national honors. National awards, provided by United States Rubber company, consist of 12 educational trips to 4-H Club Congress.

Cash awards of $25 for the purchase of recreational equipment, also go to counties in which local 4-H Clubs have shown superior achievement in recreation and rural arts.

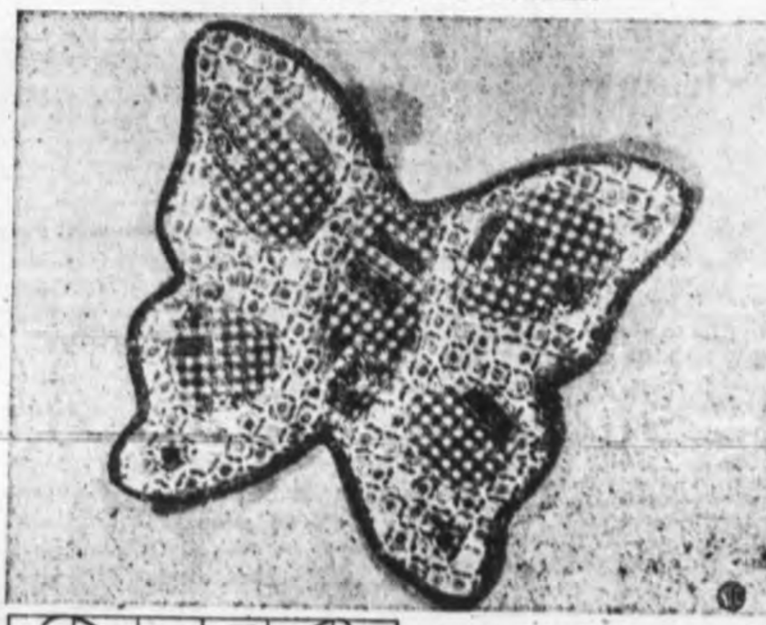
David Latham, 17, of Ramer, won the state award for topnotch performance in the 4-H Meat Animal program. With a real start toward being a leading livestock man, David's hard work recently won him a first in the Montgomery County Meat Animal contest. He has been in club work for eight years. A Jersey heifer, a gift from his uncle in 1946, was David's first animal, and he has increased his herd to 12 head along wit ha one-half interest in 20 meat animals owned by his father. Thos. E. Wilson provided the 17-jewel watch award.

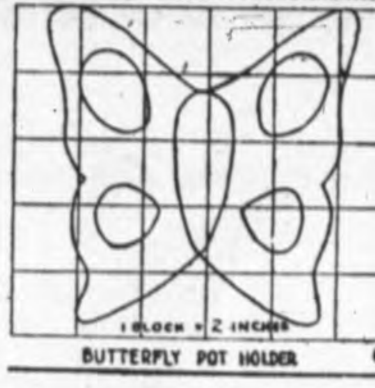
Tops in the 4-H Girls' Record program for Alabama, Patsy Kennington, 16, Atmore, will compare notes with other top homemakers at Chicago. As guest of Montgomery Ward, she will join record-making girls from all parts of the country for good times, exciting experiences, and serious discussion. Patsy's records during seven years in 4-H show outstanding accomplishments in clothing, food preparation, dairy cow, home improvement and food preservation. She lives on the 650-acre farm of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Kennington, where she does a great deal of the work. Her 30 local and nine county exhibits won many ribbons, as well as cash awards. Patsy was county award winner in the Home Improvement contest, and her Dress Revue exhibits have won many awards.

Nan Haynie, 15, of Carrollton, received statewide recognition in the 4-H Health Improvement program and will attend the Chicago 4-H Congress as guest of the Kellogg company of Battle Creek. With the help of her club leader, Martha Winston, she studied her individual problems, planned appropriate action—and then followed through. She has generously contributed to other local club programs by giving advice and information on Safety and Health. A careful vigil over eating habits, and planning meals to include foods listed on the "Basic Seven" chart, regular visits to family doctor and dentist for check-up, make up Nan's program for better health. She has been county health winner twice during the six years she has been a 4-H'er, and has served her club as junior leader.

All these national 4-H programs are conducted under the direction of the Cooperative Extension Service.

BUTTERFLY POT HOLDER





BUTTERFLY POT HOLDER

A colorful Christmas gift for mother is this pot holder made from cotton feed, flour or fertilizer bag scraps! Here's how: Using diagram, cut two butterflies, one body section and two of each of the wing spots. Applique body and spots on top piece. Arrange layer of cotton on inside of lower piece. Pin wings together at edges, and bind. Stitch around body and spots to hold in place.

A hotel manager here was telling me at Kiwanis Club the other day that since poultry is now cheaper than meat he no longer has to worry about whether veal or pork makes better chicken salad.

G. I. INGENUITY ON THE FARM

American soldiers have made a world wide reputation for creating needed machines or weapons from anything at hand. During the past war we heard of bulldozer blades added to tanks, washing machines made from miscellaneous junk, and numerous ohter improved machines.

Roy T. Reed, Columbiana, G. I. farm trainee is putting the same imagination and inventiveness to work saving money, labor, and time.

For six years after his war service he was a tenant farmer, but began purchase of a farm in February, 1952.

As a tenant he displayed his creative ability by building tractor operated post hole digger, cut off saw and seeder-fertilizer spreader. He also built sheet metal spiketooth harrow and numerous small items.

Moving to his new farm he built a complete post treating plant. His chain peeler has peeled as many as 40 seven foot posts per hour. He treats the posts in two vats, a horizontal one for normal posts and one built of end to end oil drums set into the ground vertically to treat very long posts or timbers. A sheet metal draining board returns surplus preservative to the tank.

He has peeled, dried, and treated hundred posts at a material cost of 16 cents each, saving him $273.00 on the lot when valued at local treated post prices.

His wife, and teacher, Charles Thornburg, inspired him and helped him install running water in the home. He also built a set of built-in cabinets in the kitchen. Much of the cabinet work was done in the shop available to trainees on the G. I. Farm Program.

S. S. Pierce, whose Farmers Home Administration farm purchase loan has made purchase and improving this farm possible is proud of Roy's abilities. Says Mr. Pierce, "Roy's skill and unsual imagination has helped him build at a cost of only $860.00 a modern barn with concrete block foundation and automatic feeding hay loft that is valued at $2,000.00." He has also built from a worthless tenant house a 20x40 ft. chicken house that would cost at least $400.00 if constructed commercially.

Roy is generous with his home built machines. Neighbors for miles around have benefitted from use of his machines on a loan basis.

ARTHUR F. WELLER BEGINS SEMI-ANNUAL CONFERENCE HERE

Arthur F. Weller, circuit supervisor from the New York Headquarters of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, arrived in Columbiana Monday to begin his semi-annual conference.

He appeared as the principal speaker at the week-long conference of Jehovah's Witnesses starting Tuesday night at the local Kingdom Hall.

The public is invited to hear Weller's key talk at 3 P. M. Sunday on the subject "The Truth - Where To Find It". Mr. Weller will bring his meeting to a close with his final talk, entitled: "Tell The Truth To All You Meet", at 5 P. M. Sunday, following the weekly 'Watchtower' study on the subject: "God Is Love".

I AM MUSIC

Some weeks or months ago I printed the famous classic prose tribute called "I Am Music". I have had several requests for a reprint. At this season of the year, I think we all grow more music conscious for no Christmas would be complete without MUSIC. So, it gives me pleasure to grant your request for this repetition of a beautifully expressed tribute to Music. I do not know the author.

I AM MUSIC

Servant and master am I; servant of those dead, and master of those living. Through me, spirits immortal speak the message that makes the world weep, and laugh, and wonder and worship.

I tell the story of love, the story of hate; the story that saves, and the story that damns. I am the smoke which palls over the field of battle where men lie dying with me on their lips.

I am close to the marriage altar; and when the grave opens I stand nearby. I call the wanderer home, I rescue that soul from the depths, I open the lips of lovers and through me the dead whisper to the living.

One I serve as I serve all; and the king I make my slave. I speak through the birds of the air, the insects of the field, the crash of waters on rock-ribbed shores, the sighing of wind in the trees; and I am even heard by the soul that knows me in the clatter of wheels on city streets.

I know no brother, yet all men are my brothers; I am the father of the best that is in them, and they are fathers of the best that is in me; I am of them, and they are of me. For I am the instrument of God.

I AM MUSIC.

SANTA CLAUS IS REALLY WHIZZING

"Frosty - The Snow Man", "Rudolph The Red Nosed Reindeer", "Angie the Treetop Angel", "White Christmas", "Wondering In A Winter Wonderland", are all getting in the air along with the immortal "Silent Night" and Brahms Lullaby, which means that Christmas is just a breath away!

Columbiana is always a little late catching on to the spirit of this glad season, but this year, seems to us to be an exception! Stores are replete with many attractive decorations and soon the lights will form a canopy over head and will twinkle a welcome to all who pass our way. The churches, beginning next Sunday night, when the Baptist Choristers present their annual offering, a very lovely cantata, called "The Chorus In The Skies", will all feature music to match this Glad Season.

The Methodist Church Choir will render "The Wondrous Story" on the evening of December 21, under the direction of Miss Collins, Jane Carter, Organist, which assures a very beautiful production.

Wedding bells are chiming in perfect unison with all these preparations for the Yuletide, as plans go forward for the wedding of Virginia Elizabeth Hunt and Captain John Patrick Mays, and we hear today by the grape-vine route that Sue Fiquette, daughter of Mrs. L. P. Dycus and her Prince Charming, will likely take the march to Hymen's Altar during the holiday season. Have not confirmed the plans we have heard, but will tell you about them as soon as we do.

Dinner parties are being arranged for congenial groups, at which time the old Bird of Cranberry will hold the spotlight.

The American Legion Auxiliary is sponsoring a Christmas Dance to be held in the High School Auditorium December 18. The "Snappy Seven" will furnish the tempo for this rhythmic occasion.

The Vignettes will hold their Christmas Party at the George McCord home, and a wonderfully fine surprise will be in store for a certain young fellow, who has long dreamed of owning his own bicycle.

Dick Ozley, affable postmaster urges all to mail cards and packages early, lest the Christmas congestion cause an unavoidable delay.

GOODFELLOWS STILL AT WORK RAISING FUNDS

Goodfellows alerted to the need of hundreds of children in this county. From the Welfare Departchildren are in need of toys to make their Christmas a joyous one. This number does not include those which individual groups and church circles will serve. If you have not given the Goodfellows a donation, do so today. Luther McGiboney is Treasurer, and he will be happy to receive your contribution.

The drive for funds to be used in the Shelby County Goodfellow Program got underway this week under the sponsorship of the Columbiana Kiwanis Club. The total amount contributed so far in Columbiana is $111.00. The names of those in Columbiana who have contributed to date are as follows:

Dr. Crawford $5.00, Wales Wallace, Jr. 5.00, Karl Harrison 5.00, J. I. Harrison 10.00, Wood's Store 5.00, McDow Motor Co. 10.00, Western Auto 5.00, Walton Hardware 10.00, N. A. Jones 1.00, John Thompson 2.00,

DR. MILTON PARKS OPENS OFFICES IN COLUMBIANA

Dr. Milton Parks is a very busy fellow, but, as he will quickly tell you, he is happy to be "back home with friends he has long cherished" since he went away several years ago. Dr. Parks offices are located over Meyers Variety Store, his office hours every day except Tuesday, are from 10 to 12 A. M. and 2 to 4 P. M. Dr. Parks takes one day off per week from his strenuous schedule, and this day is Tuesday!

Dr. Crawford's day off, is Wednesday! These two professional men have worked their schedule out together and one of them will always be in town, even though the other is seeking a bit of relaxation so much needed, especially in this altruistic profession.

Mrs. Thelma Miles, well known Medical Assistant, is associated with Dr. Parks, and needs no introduction to her wide circle of friends in Shelby County. Mrs. Miles is in the office every day having resumed her work in her chosen career.

SOCIAL ENJOYED AT NEW HOPE SCHOOL

New Hope School was crowded to capacity Saturday evening when the matrons of the community 'staged' another get-to-gether that was pronounced "most enjoyable" by both young and old.

Singly, in pairs and by families people arrived at the lunchroom, for one of the delicious chicken dinners that have proven so popular here.

Following the dinner, surprise packages were auctioned by the master of ceremonies, Owen DeShazo. He also conducted the pretty baby contest, the lovely cake going to Barbara Fallin.

The group enjoyed a splendid Western Film and War picture.

The proceeds amounted to $89, which will be used to complete

Have You Bought Christmas Seals

Christmas Seals are big guns in the fight against TB, the Number One infectious killer in Shelby county, in Alabama and the nation.

"Have you bought yours yet?" asked Richard J. Ozley, president of the Shelby County Tuberculosis Association.

"This year's Seal shows one little change, a candle burning in the window of hope—hope that someday TB will be knocked out. You can help keep that one little candle bright if you buy and use Christmas Seals."

More tuberculosis hospital beds, more money to run them and more adequate facilities to detect TB in the early stages are the great needs in Alabama.

This is the message of the Christmas Seal. The death rate from this disease has been forced down 85 per cent since the first Seals were sold 46 years ago.

But tuberculosis still strikes down too many people. This sad fact is emphasized by medical leaders who long ago announced TB can be prevented.

Christmas Seals will do their part if given a chance. "Have you bought yours yet?"

LOCAL SCHOOL FACULTY HAS GUEST SPEAKER AT RECENT MEETING

On Tuesday, December 2, the faculty of the Columbiana Elementary School held its regular monthly meeting.

Mr. W. B. Fleming, Social Studies Instructor at the Indian Springs School was guest speaker. He told of some of their plans and procedures at Indian Springs.

Mr. L. F. Rogers and some members of the high school faculty joined the elementary faculty for a pleasant and profitable meeting.

A social hour with refreshments was enjoyed.

PINE SEEDLINGS AVAILABLE NOW

Any 4-H, FFA Club member or adult farmer is eligible to get pine seedlings (LOB LOLLY) now. If you are interested in putting out seedlings you may get them through us immediately. No person is eligible to receive more than 5,000. These seedlings are being furnished us through the Coosa River Newsprint Company, Coosa Pines, Alabama.

It is necessary that you let your County Agent know immediately if you want to get any of these seedlings.

TURKEY SUPPER AT PELHAM SCHOOL

There will be a Turkey Supper and a variety of Christmas entertainment sponsored by the P. T. A. at Pelham School, Pelham, Alabama, Saturday evening, December 13, beginning at 6 o'clock.

The public is invited to attend.

CONGREGATIONS TO UNITE FOR CHRISTMAS PROGRAMS

According to an announcement made by the Rev. A. D. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist Church in Columbiana, there will be no evening hour of worship in this church Sunday evening, December 14, at seven-thirty. The members of the Methodist Church will join the Baptist membership and share the program offered by the Baptist Choristers who will interpret the Cantata, bearing the title "The Chorus In The Skies" at seven-thirty o'clock.

On Sunday evening, December 21, the Baptist congregation will go to the Methodist Church for the presentation by the Methodist Choir of "The Wondrous Story" and a White Christmas service.

These union services have proved most inspirational to all privileged to attend.

The public is cordially invited to attend both services featuring the glorious Christmas music.

SENIORS TO PRESENT PLAY DECEMBER 16, S. C. H. S.

The Senior Class of Shelby High will present their annual play on the evening of December 16, at 7:30 o'clock in the High School Auditorium.

The title of this year's offering is "Mother Is A Freshman", and is directed by Mrs. Billye Coburn.

Admission 75 cents and 35 cents.

Preceding the play, Miss Shelby High will be crowned.

25 Years Ago

From The Files of The Reporter

Christmas Greetings from business firms in Columbiana 25 years ago from the files of the Reporter include the following: Atchison Lumber Company, Columbiana Ice and Water, C. R. Tinney, Roy B. Lester, Columbiana Leader, City Market, Carter Brothers, Shealeys Sandwich Shop, Crawford Auto Shop, Davis Drug Co., A. R. Cooper, Vershot's Garage, A. P. McGhee, Shelby County Reporter.

The Wilsonville Bank in extending greetings to friends and customers has this to say: "The dollars that come in over our counter go out again in trade. But your friendship we have locked into the vaults of our hearts, our most dear possession. A Merry Christmas to you!"

T. R. Walton of Columbiana says: "While extending you our best wishes for the coming year, we wish to also thank you for the favors extended during the past year."

A Pantomine called "The Light Of The World" will be presented on Christmas Eve in the New Hope Church. Directed by Mrs. Irene Hudson.

Chelsea correspondent states.... "A few snowflakes fell Sunday afternoon, the first of the season."

Helena defeated Montevallo in a Basketball game and the following boys participated: Andrew Zoleski, William Bramlett, Ernest Braswell, Porter Cates, E. L. Bentley, Charlie Hinds, Gordon Espy, Charlie Butterworth. This is the fifth straight win.

Alvin Richards of Decatur was a visitor in town last week.

Eight counties in Alabama have taken advantage of the new Health unit now available.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Thomas have returned to their home in Paton.

J. W. Langley, optometrist will be in Columbiana next Friday.

The contract for grading and draining the road from Calera to Columbiana was let by the state highway commission to W. C. Shepard for $82,663.53. Boswith Smith Company received the contract for building bridges on the road for $25,933.

Rev. W. A. McKee at the Methodist Church will preach Sunday morning.

Dr. Spright Dowell whose term as president of Auburn will expire July 1, 1928, has been offered the presidency of Mercer University in Macon, Georgia. Mercer is a Baptist institution and ranks with the leading colleges in the South.

(Dr. Dowell has remained at this executive post since this time and the entire School of Education has been named in his honor. In addition to this signal recognition, Dr. Dowell has written a splendid biography of Columbus Roberts. If you have not read it, do so at once. You will be glad, if you are a former pupil or friend, that you have had the privilege of knowing him. I have an autographed copy of this excellent book and it is among my prized possessions. M. L. Orr, Chairman March Of Dimes Drive In County

Science at last is moving rapidly toward an effective preventive of infantile paralysis, M. L. Orr, Chairman, Shelby County March of Dimes Drive, declared here today.

Returning from Birmingham, where he attended a March of Dimes meeting, Mr. Orr said the latest polio news was very encouraging. Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, told the meeting that latest scientific advances foreshadow the certain conquest of polio as an epidemic disease, he reported.

At the meeting Mr. O'Connor explained the results of the 1951 and 1952 field trials with gamma globulin in which 55,000 children took part in Provo, Utah; Houston, Texas, and Sioux City, Ia. As a result, it was proved for the first time that paralytic polio in human beings can be prevented—even if only temporarily so far.

"There is no reason for undue optimism," said Mr. Orr. "In the first place, gamma globulin is not the final answer to preventing paralytic polio. It gives protection for only a limited time and there is not nearly enough of it to go around. There are 46,000,000 children and adolescents in the age group most susceptible to the disease.

"But the overall news is the best we have heard since the National Foundation launched the war against polio years ago. It justifies our faith and makes us more determined than ever to increase the totals raised in the March of Dimes next January.

"We must be certain we have sufficient funds with which to continue this progress," he stated. "The prospects of conquering polio have never been so bright. But the dark side of the picture is gloomier than ever. The 1952 epidemic is the worst in history, recording more than 51,000 cases up to the first week in November.

"The staggering financial burden of patient care for this year alone will be about $28,000,000. By the end of this year, the March of Dimes will have provided direct assistance in 1952 to at least 90,000 patients stricken in this and previous years."

The 1953 March of Dimes will be held January 2-31, Mr. Orr added, with plans for the participation of a record number of volunteers.

MISS KITTYE CRUMPTON HONORED AT SILURIA

Miss Kittye Clyde Crumpton was selected here today by the Senior Class and the Faculty to represent Thompson High School in the Good Citizenship Pilgrimage Program.

Miss Crumpton is the first President of the newly formed Student Council in Siluria; secretary of the Beta Club; secretary of the Senior Class; President of the F. T. A.; Business Manager of the school annual, and last year represented Siluria at Girls' State.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Only Crumpton of Siluria.

HARRISON D. LeBARON

H. D. LeBaron To Direct 'Messiah'

Alumnae of Alabama College at Montevallo who are former members of the College Glee Club will return to the campus from all parts of the state December 13 to sing in the Music School's 20th annual "Messiah" performance.

Scheduled for 8 o'clock in Palmer Auditorium next Saturday evening, Handel's majestic oratorio will be sung by a 75 voice chorus, composed of members of the College Chorus and College Chorale, in addition to the alumnae guest singers.

Harrison D. LeBaron, Director of the School of Music, will again direct the Messiah presentation, a traditional event of the Yuletide season on the Montevallo campus since 1933.

Four members of the music school faculty of the University of Alabama will be soloists for the arias and connecting recitatives of the oratorio. They are Eva Clapp White, soprano; Arline Hanke, contralto; Donald Ecroyd, tenor; and Gordon White, bass.

The choral group will sing eight choruses from the Christmas and prophetic portions of Handel's masterpiece, including the immortal "Hallelujah" chorus.

Two faculty members from the Alabama College music department will accompany the chorus. They are Mrs. Maxine C. Davis, pianist, and Putnam Porter, organist.

MISS S. C. H. S. TO BE SELECTED DECEMBER 16

Who will be Miss S. C. H. S., 1952? On December 16, just before the presentation of the Senior Play, "Mother Is A Freshman", Miss S. C. H. S., 1952, will be crowned. In the meantime, the campaign managers are busy getting votes for their candidates.

There are eleven candidates competing for the title. They are:

Junior IA, Jean Evans.
Junior IB, Jacqueline Vanderslice.
Junior IIA, Betty Jean Foster.
Junior IIB, Eleanora Lester.
Junior IIIA, Myra Bentley.
Junior IIIB, Mary Charles Poole.
Senior IA, Sara Sewell.
Senior IB, Peggy Stokes.
Senior IIA, Louise Barnes.
Senior IIB, Betty Jean Lay.
Senior III, Billie Sue Averett.

You don't want to miss the crowning of Miss S. C. H. S., 1952, just before the Senior Play, December 16.

HOME NURSING COURSE GIVEN BY MISS LIGHTSEY

The Shelby County Chapter of the American Red Cross is delighted to report that the program for instruction in Home Nursing is being continued.

Miss Sara Nell Lightsey recently completed a class in "Home Care of the Sick" which was taught in the Kingdom Community. Miss Lightsey generously gave her time to teach a group of ten women who had assembled the equipment needed in the home of Mrs. Davis. The cooperation in this instance again demonstrated that an objective can be obtained when a group of women decide that it is important.

Certificates are being issued to Mrs. Sara Cost, Mrs. Louise Talton, Mrs. Elna Mooney, Miss Estelle Crumpton, Miss Novie Crumpton, Mrs. Wilma Davis, Mrs. Lois Smith, Mrs. Minnie L. Robinson, Mrs. Lorene Boaz and Mrs. Inez Starnes.

Miss Helen Dauncy Gives Recreation Program Here

Columbiana and Siluria are th towns most fortunate this week They are hosts to Miss Helen Dauncey of Boston, Massachusetts who is a member of the National Staff of Recreation workers in New York.

Miss Dauncey arrived in Columbiana Monday. In talking with this attractive New Englander we found her most enthusiastic about the South, and more specifically speaking, Alabama. Miss Dauncey says she always looks forward to visiting in Alabama where she is invariably given full cooperation for her recreation activities in addition to that "friendly sort of way", which of course we know as an "old Southern Custom".

Several hundred people in Columbiana and Siluria will be in a better frame of mind after participating in the training course Miss Dauncey offers. The enlightened ideas along the "Party Line" are nice to know and in addition to this knowledge, it brings a delightful association with a most charming and gifted personality. Fact is, lots of folk who enjoyed Miss Dauncey on this occasion would like to keep her "down South".

At the first session held in the High School Monday afternoon, approximately 150 people were present. Naturally, as the course progresses, there will be many more. Miss Dauncey was presented to the group by Supt. Woodrow Elliott and Principal Leonard Rogers graciously offered the entire facilities of his school to Columbiana's distinguished guest to be utilized as she saw fit.

This writer is delighted to see Recreation recognized as a vitally important part of community life. These programs promote a splendid foundation for the coordination of effort among citizens of the town, and everybody knows that "all work and no play" will make any boy a dull one. So, take advantage of this outstanding opportunity now offered at Columbiana and Siluria, and be happier for it. M.W.W.

Community Night Friday, December 19

Roy Mann, Columbiana's alert Director of Recreation activities, and his assistant Doris Colvin, have announced the date for the Annual Community Night to be held in the Courthouse in Columbiana on the evening of Friday, December 19.

There will be held also at this time a song festival featuring Carols sung under the direction of Mary Mims, after which two appropriate films will be shown. Fruits will be distributed to the little ones by Santa Claus.

Under the tree on the Courthouse lawn will be placed a box for receiving can goods for the unfortunate ones in our town. Bring what you will and place in this "Good Will" Box.

Remember the date, Friday evening, December 19, and arrange your schedule accordingly.

DR. AND MRS. HUNT EXTEND INVITATION TO MAYS-HUNT WEDDING

Crystal Makes a Tinkly Christmas!

BY EDNA MILES

THE holidays always mean more parties, more dinners, more hospitable gatherings for everyone. And this, in turn, means more work for the housewife. It's the season of the year in which she gets out her best glassware, her fine linens and polishes up her good silver.

If you're doing a great deal of entertaining this year, you might prefer to leave your crystal packed away and depend upon modern, moderately priced glassware. The latter will need only reasonable care to keep it intact and sparkling . This means less work for you. It also means that you can relax and enjoy your own parties.

To keep your inexpensive glassware shiny and bright during the holidays, try these tips for its care:

Wash it in hot, not boiling, water. And never put glasses that have just contained ice straight into hot water. Warm them gradually, then give them a quick rinse under the cold water faucet. They'll sparkle anew.

Try adding a small amount of ammonia or detergent to the water for a high shine. Then rinse the glasses in water of equal temperature and air-dry with the rims down. If you do use soap, you should towel the glasses dry.

It's best to place a rubber mat or towel in the bottom of the sink, particularly if you're washing stemware. Never crowd either the sink or the drying rack. The rack should be rubber-covered. If you haven't a rack, place the glasses rim-down on a towel to dry.

You can clean sticky milk glasses by rinsing them in lukewarm water before you wash them. Then use more lukewarm water softened with soda to remove stubborn stains.

Often, glass dishes are stacked out in the kitchen during the rush of the holidays. If this happens and if the dishes stick together, don't try to pry them apart. Instead put cold water in the inner glass and hold the outer one in warm water. They'll separate easily.

Informal table setting is very modern, is achieved with dime-store glassware, inexpensive place mats and napkins. Flower container is a budget-priced basket that can have many uses.

When you put glassware away, place the different sized pieces in rows from front to back of the shelf. This way you need not bother to reach over a low piece for a tall one. And never crowd glassware when putting it away. Crowding can cause chipping or breakage.

New jobs and old for Santa's Seals

Since 1907 your purchase of Christmas Seals has helped cut the TB death rate substantially.

Yet the threat and problems of tuberculosis are still enormous.

TB is still the No. 1 infectious killer. And, ironically, as more patients are discovered and treated, new problems are created! More hospital beds are needed... more trained doctors and nurses... more help in rehabilitation. Your Christmas Seal dollars help solve these and other problems through popular and professional education, case finding, and research.

So, please, send in your contribution today. Keep the fight against TB a winning one!

BIRMINGHAM ELECTRIC AND ALABAMA POWER CO. MERGE

Recently stockholders of Birmingham Electric Company voted to merge the company with Alabama Power Company in accordance with the orders of Alabama Public Service Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission. Later in the day, Alabama Power Company stockholders also approved the merger.

The matter was presented to the Judge of the U. S. District Court at Birmingham, The Honorable Seybourn H. Lynne, recently for an order approving and enforcing the order of the Securities and Exchange Commission in accordance with the Public Utility Holding Act, and the order was granted.

Thomas W. Martin, chairman of the Board of Alabama Power Company, stated: "This is a significant event in the history of Alabama Power Company. Starting in 1906 with a nominal capital of only $5,000, men of faith in the future of Alabama enlisted the necessary financial support to enable the Company to create or acquire facilities and bring them together in an integrated system. The system so created during the past quarter-century has gained recognition as an efficiently operated, area-wide electric utility system. In this program our engineers have pioneered many technical advances.

"Birmingham Electric has for twenty-eight years received its entire power supply from Alabama Power Company, even while under other ownership. As the area around Birmingham developed, it became more and more logical that the service areas of the companies be combined and the operations integrated."

The new Birmingham Division will provide service to a larger area and to many more customers than the former Birmingham Electric Company; and will thus provide additional opportunities for the advancement of the employees of the Electric Company.

Headquarters for Alabama Power Company's Birmingham Division will for the present be at the location formerly occupied by Birmingham Electric at First Avenue and 21st Street, North.

THE VALUE OF A SMILE

A smile costs nothing, but gives much. It enriches those who receive, without making poorer those who give. It takes but a moment, but the memory of it sometimes lasts forever. None is so rich or mighty that he can get along without it, and none is so poor but that he can be made rich by it. A smile creates happiness in the home, fosters good will in business, and is the countersign of friendship. It brings rest to the weary, cheer to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and it is nature's antidote for trouble.

Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed, or stolen, for it is something that is of no value to anyone until it is given away. Some people are too tired to give you a smile. Give them one of yours, as none needs a smile so much as he who has no more to give . . . It takes sixty-two facial muscles to frown, only twelve to smile . . Why waste time?

—Anonymous

Never underestimate the "value of a smile". The ability to smile is a priceless gift, and the world is far more livable when "smiles that make you happy" come your way.

Fact is, once upon a time J. Will Callahan, a personal friend of mine wrote a famous song about "Smiles"—and it is heard around the world today, and furthermore, it is reliably reported, he made a cool million dollars on his lyric. J. Will has gone on to his Heavenly reward, but he has left this old world a memory and a song that will never be forgotten. So, try smiling, won't you?

YULETIDE HOLIDAYS BRING MUCH ACTIVITY TO MAIN

. . . Plans are rapidly shaping up for a wonderfully fine Christmas filled with the anticipation, for some, of rejoining loved ones long separated by miles. For instance, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Tinney left Columbiana Wednesday, for Wilmington, North Carolina, where they will spend the Yuletide with Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tinney, Johnnie and Tommy Jr. From this point they will return by Richmond, Virginia, to be the guests of Mrs. Tinney's brother, Mr. Johns and his family.

Christmas trip to Wilmington, Delaware, with the Bub Gordons and the four miniature Gordons. . . . The American Legion Auxiliary will be hostess at a Christmas Dance in the School Auditorium. Tickets now available. For further information see Mrs. Karl Harrison or Mrs. Thelma Glenn. . . . The Vignettes Christmas Party at Hazel McCord's on December 17, is an event the entire membership of this organization is looking forward to enjoying.

. . . School kiddies are looking most of all for the time when books may be discarded and stockings may be hung. Students from the High School should, eventually, make good salesmen, judging by the number of solicitors covering the town in the interest of their choice for Shelby High Queen. "Have you voted" has been changed to "How many times have you voted?"

. . . Dr. Orr of Montevallo is interested in the Drive soon to begin against Infantile Paralysis. No more worthy cause and none more capable of putting it over than Dr. Orr and his "helpers".

. . . Dick Ozley is very pleased with the generous response to his plea for the T. B. Seal Sale.

. . . Pretty Judy Carter enthusiastically looking forward to her

. . . The P. O. Lucks leave Columbiana on the 19th for their annual birthday which will be celebrated next Friday. May all thats gloriously bright and happy attend "Judy" on "her day"! And here's hoping she gets everything her little heart desires. She deserves it.

. . . Yoby Sims is also anticipating the approach of her birthday anniversary, and these little subdebs are as attractive as can be, and know exactly what it is all about, and what they want, not only for Christmas Day, but for their own special day!

. . . Mrs. Al Carlisle has returned to her home in Louisville, Kentucky, after spending a month with Mrs. Nell Davis in Columbiana.

. . . Seniors at High School are winding up rehearsals for their play this week. They will present it December 18. The title is "Mother Was A Freshman" and is being directed by Mrs. Coburn.

. . . The loveliest and most useful firm-gift to patrons has been received and gratefully accepted by us. It is a beautiful leather bound Day Book presented by the well known firm of Gordon-White Real Estate Company. It is a daily reminder of our many 'tasks per day' and we appreciate it more than these words can convey. Fact is, don't know how we could get along without it.

VIRGINIA ELIZABETH HUNT

The engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Virginia Elizabeth Hunt to Captain John Patrick Mays, U. S. Army, is announced by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith Hunt, Columbiana, Alabama. The wedding will be solemnized in the Methodist Church of Columbiana on the afternoon of December 21, 1952.

Miss Hunt is a graduate o fthe University of Alabama where she was a member of the Delta Zeta Sorority. Captain Mays, son of Mrs. E. W. Mays, and the late Mr. Mays, of Plant City and St. Petersburg, Florida, is now stationed at Camp Polk, Louisiana, where the young couple will make their future home.

. . . Warren and Patsy Duke are as busy as little beavers getting all settled in their new home (The Curlee Apartment) before time for Santa Claus. We are numbered among a lot of folk who feared, on account of the shortage of homes in Columbiana, this popular couple would move elsewhere. It is good to know they will remain with us!

. . . Ralph and Virginia Hunt are in the middle of beautiful and elaborate plans for the wedding of beauteous Elizabeth Hunt and Captain John May, which will be solemnized in the Methodist Church in Columbiana on December 21.

. . . Baptist Choristers are winding up their strenous rehearsal period this week before presenting their annual offering next Sunday. "The Chorus In The Skies", a Cantata, will begin promptly at seven-thirty o'clock Sunday evening.

. . . Gas pipe lines are in the process of being laid all over town and the progressive step is being hailed as one of the greatest things to happen to this community. It won't be long now until those 350 folk who have signed up for this modern way of heating homes will be turning on the gas, but be sure you strike the match first! A personal experience warns against waiting until the gas starts percolating!

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dorough and two weeks old Carol Patricia, were recent guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Looney.

. . . Friends of Zelle Barnett will be glad to learn he is satisfactorily recuperating from a seige of Rheumatic Fever and has been allowed to return from the hospital to his home in Montgomery.

. . . That good friend of ours known as Jep Greer of Sylacauga, in speaking of Santa Claus has this to say:

"The first time I peeked at old Santa
(And how it did give me a fright)
I felt so sorry for father,
He was kissing my mother good-night."

. . . We are delighted to have Mrs. Sarah Bozeman Walton join our weekly reading circle. Mrs. Walton tells me she is "tired of having to borrow a copy of the Home Paper, and wants one all her own". Thats the kind of news we like to write about, and the kind I like for you to read about, for it is, we think, a wise investment.

A LETTER FROM JUNE LUTTRELL MARTIN

It is always interesting as well as amazing to this writer to read of how these young married people adapt themselves to conditions this so called Korean Police Action plus former wars have created. Today, across the miles from Baltimore, Maryland, comes such an interesting letter from June Luttrell Martin. Many of you will recall June and John's wedding in the Methodist Church, as being the first in the new church. June is also a former member of the school contingent here.

Here are excerpts from her letter. Recently John, who has been stationed in Ft. Jackson, has been transferred to Baltimore, where June has just joined him. We quote: "To begin with, John's hours are most irregular. For example, he found out at 2 yesterday afternoon that he would be on duty from 4:30 until 8 P. M. However, as soon as classes are arranged, it may be different and a less hectic schedule."

"We like Baltimore so much, so far. We are really living in an 'international house'. The owner, Mr. Johanson, moved to this country from Finland after the second World War (And we like him so much). In the two apartments up stairs is a couple, the lady, Hawaiian, and her husband, French; and the other couple is composed of Japanese wife and a Polish-American husband. All are working at Ft. Holabird, except Mr. Johanson, the man of the house, that is.)

"We are having a wonderful time meeting and talking with them."

"I shop at the Commissary and an Italian Super-Store and a German bakery and all of us live in the Dutch-named section of Dundalk. I have to pinch myself sometimes to see if I am really still in the USA"—And so goes the army life, in various camps in this country.

However, nothing ever fazes these courageous young people, who have accepted conditions and things for which they are not, in any way, responsible, but will doubtless find a solution, where we, of this generation, have so far failed! My hat is off to them!

. . . Mrs. Myra Chandler's week end guests included Mrs. Auburn Kite, Law Kite, and Mrs. Leslie Glass and daughter of Birmingham.

. . . Mrs. Eula Carter has returned from a delightful visit with the Perry MacCormacks and the Mansfields in Birmingham.

. . . The Vignettes turned in a neat sum, about $60.00 for Free Lunches last week which Mr. Rogers of the High School sincerely appreciated.

'MR. 1952 CALLS'

Do you remember Tommy Lewis Blankenship, our New Year Baby for 1952, and our mascot thru this year? Saturday, Tommy, believe it or not as roly poly a fellow as you ever saw, walked in the office showing two tiny white pearly teeth and grinning as broadly as Santa Claus.

He also had on the cutest red corduroi suit we ever saw. He is all those good things rolled into one, and we are going to show you his picture pretty soon, and after January 1st, the first little babette Dr. Stork brings to Shelby County, will be Tommy's successor as our Mascot for 1953. So, be looking for him!

. . . It is always a pleasure to draw up a comfortable chair in our reading circle for these kahki-clad heroes of ours, and certainly, it gives me joy to enroll A/2c William I. Eaves Jr., this week and inform him that Mrs. Holmes of Wilsonville, has just been in the office after deciding that Billy had rather have the "home paper" for Christmas than any other gift she might send him. So, across the miles to Shaw Air Base in Sumter, South Carolina we go this week to greet the young bird-man and wish for him the merriest kind of a Christmas.

. . . Mrs. Joe Stone and her adorable little daughter, Judy, of Rome, Georgia, are guests of Mrs. Stone's father, Mr. Frank West. Mr. West will return home with the Stones for Christmas and perhaps a longer visit with his loved ones.

. . . With this issue of the Reporter-Democrat, we happily include the name of Mrs. J. W. Curtis of Wilsonville. And the gift is due to the thoughtfulness of her popular son, Jimmy, in Columbiana, who all of us know and call on for lots of things in addition to pharmaceutical needs. By the way, wonder if that election "prophecy" which involved steak dinners for Jeanette Niven has ever been completely used up. We saw Jimmy and Jeanette not long ago, enjoying two of Chesser's Choice Cuts, and we wondered at the time, how many columns of news we would have to write before we could afford one. Heck, as far as we are concerned, the "bovine product" has truly jumped over the moon!

. . . If there is a prettier girl anywhere than Sue Atchison Brooks, we just haven't met them, yet! By the way, did you know Sue held a responsible position with the WSGN Radio Station in Birmingham? No more fascinating work on earth than that found in the magical world of Radio! Congratulations to WSGN.

. . . For the loveliest sweaters and blouses we have seen on Main—Shop Eagles.

. . . Mrs. Edward R. Baumgartner of Grand Rapids, Michigan, the former Alleene Florey and daughter of the late Walter J. Florey of Vincent, will make a business trip to Columbiana in the near future.

KARRYE CLAIRE DORROUGH

Friends are extending congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dorrough in Birmingham upon the arrival of a little girl last Saturday, December 6, whom they have named Karrye Claire Dorrough.

Mrs. Dorrough is the former Allie Claire Cooper, and the happiest tow-some we have seen today include Bolin and Mae Cooper, the proud grand-parents. We join other friends in extending congratulations.

. . . If you have any doubt about "nothing doing in Columbiana", try and get a group, any group together, at any time. There is a conflict everywhere you turn. Next year, I hope, at least the churches and schools, which should be the controlling influences in this town, can and will get together before school starts and map out their entire schedules, so that few conflicts will occur.

. . . Sara Nell Lightsey is one of the most public spirited people we know. She is not only an efficient Home Ec Director, but, far beyond her call of duty, Sara Nell generously lends her talents to the churches, and has only recently completed teaching a class in the Kingdom Community in "Home Care Of The Sick", driving back and forth every night until the school had been completed. This altruistic effort on Miss Lightsey's part is truly appreciated by those who have profited from this training. Article elsewhere in this paper giving details.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 13.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 119:33-40.

The Great Teacher

Lesson for December 7, 1952

ALTHOUGH this column is not intended for Sunday school teachers only, many teachers do read it. This week, while so many thousands of Christians are studying about Jesus, the great Teacher, it is a good thing to think about the teaching of religion, and to see what can be learned from the methods of Jesus himself. He was called "Teacher" more often than by any other title, and summed up his own work by saying "I have taught."

What?

The first thing a Sunday school teacher needs to ask is. What am I supposed to be teaching? Just facts about the Bible aren't the thing; Jesus never formally "taught Bible" as we often try to do. There is a place for that sort of thing, of course; it is of some importance to know how many books there are in the Bible, with their names arranged in order; it is worth while to know the names of the Apostles and to be able to trace the journeys of Moses or Paul on a map. But teaching these is not teaching religion. What Jesus taught can be put into two words: God, man. What God is like; what man's relation to God ought to be; how man should act toward God and his neighbor; everything Jesus taught can be summed up in those topics.

Dr. Foreman

You can express it in various ways. You can say he taught the way a child of God ought to live. You can say he taught the laws of right living. You can say he taught how to come to God and to serve him. Any way you put it, it comes back to the same two themes, God and man,—not separately but related, man to God, man to man.

* * *

How?

There are two differences between a good teacher and a poor

all." Or as the Psalmist said long before Shakespeare: "The wicked flee when no man pursueth."

Many of our fears would never exist if we had lived as we ought to have lived. Men live in fear of exposure, fear of blackmail, fear of failure and defeat, often through no one's fault but their own. Then the disciples too were afraid. They were not superstitious, they were not haunted by their sins, but they were afraid in the storm, they feared the wind and waves.

Why Christians Are Brave

Students of the Bible have discovered that the word "fear" is usually tied there to another word: Not. Fear not, is one key-note of both Old and New Testaments. The reason for this is plain. Christianity is the religion of love: love to God, love to one's neighbor. Not mere good will or kindly feeling, but active, self-forgetful love. "There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear," as St John said.

Old writers, commenting on the story of Peter's sinking in the sea, have said that if he had kept his mind on Jesus instead of on himself and on the storm-tossed waves, he would not have cried out, "I perish." Certain it is that when we are self-centered we are sure to be tormented with fear, for we are always thinking what may happen to us—and of course plenty can.

If we keep our minds on our work and on the fact that God is our Father, if we remember morning, noon and night that the God who "so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" is the same God who created this universe and controls it, then we shall not be scourged with fears.

Courageous Christians

It is a tremendous mistake to think that Christianity is only for rabbity people, for mice and not men. Christ does something for even such persons, it is true; he takes them clear out of themselves. Remember the long roll of the early Christian martyrs, very humble people most of them, who died horrible deaths rather than deny their Master; remember such saints as the missionaries who converted our own savage ancestors, at great peril to their own lives; remember the missionaries of our own time, some of them suffering torture and all of them distress, yet not giving up. The ordinary Christian missonary has more to be afraid of than most of the rest of us have; yet he has less fear. He knows God too well.

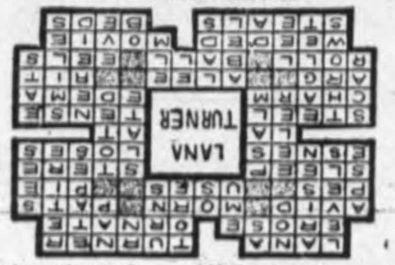
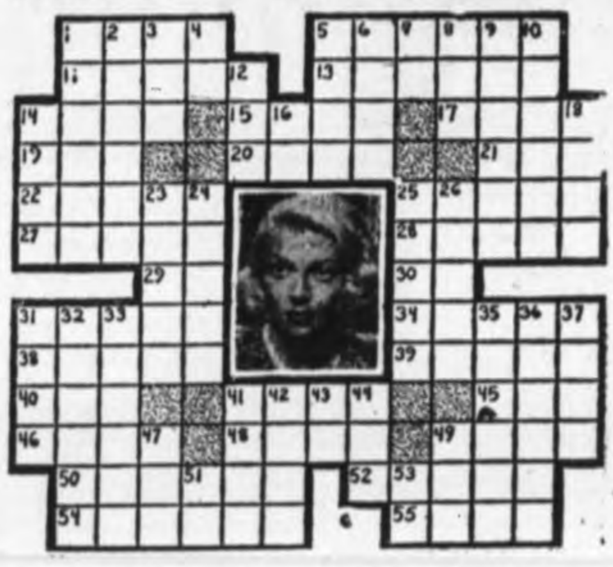
Here's the Answer





Good Morning

Milton Bird

FOLKS ALONG AN OLD STREET

One of my best buddies along Main is Jerry Mooney. I hadn't seen him for days until he came in today. You miss a guy like Jerry when he doesn't come around. Like you miss the sun during a spell of cloudy weather. Kicked in the teeth by Fate before he was old enough to fight back, he has come around marvelously. He's got the brightest smile I know. And his eyes have a twinkle in 'em that's something to see.

I guess it's as simple as that, coming out of the shadow of death and into the sunlight of happiness. If you've got a heart like Jerry's got, it is. Yep, I miss him more than anyone I know when he doesn't come around. I guess because he scatters more sunshine along The Old Street, with his bright smile and his twinkling eyes, than any ten folks I know.

Walter Partridge came in to see me today. Walter and I have been friends for years. Friendship is a splendid thing. It's like a maple tree in November, or the song of a blue bird, or the shade along an old creek. It's the stuff we get for free, after the tinsel and glitter is worn off our lives by a hustle and bustle world.

A few years ago Walter found a new world. Out of the sameness of his life he found something new, that opened up a thousand bright avenues of happiness along his way. I never saw a guy who got such a tremendous wallop out of living. As if, in some profound way, Providence was strengthening him for a time of tears.

I've thought about it a lot, since his hour of utter grief. I guess Faith is stronger than tears. And a guy, if he has it, is pretty well anchored against the storm.

I ran into Jim Gorman on Main today. Jim had conquered the nicotine habit and was up to his ears in things like sunshine and happiness. He felt so good that I have felt like I was sixteen all day. I guess some of his happiness caught on my coat. Then melted, like snow, and ran down under my vest. Happiness is like that. It'll open little windows all over you. For sunshine to come in, instead of gloom.

Jim is an old friend. A lot of years ago we used to trip the lilac trails together. Jim would play the piano and a bunch of us would tip-toe over the notes and whisper sweetnothings and help the moon shuffle down the sky. He would ride up around Calcis way and find a bundle of loveliness that'd take your breath. Then one night he came out of Calcis with his bundleof loveliness in his arms and in his heart.

And today here he was. With his pockets full of sunshine and happiness dripping out of his eyes. I've thought about it all afternoon. How simple it is to be happy. And how neighborly. It's like givin' instead o' gittin'. I'm thankful for the sunshine Jim left down this way. It'll come in handy, a lot of times, in a world that is crammed full of uncertainty and gloom.

I asked Bulley Fowler about his Pop today. Mr. Luke is a fine friend and I sho miss him along Main. He's been ill in the hospital in the big town, mighty sick, but is on the highroad now. I like to listen to him talk. His words come out in a slow deliberate fashion. And always, after I have been away a little while, I find I've got something good to gnaw on.

I remember one day he was talking about faith. And how, beyond the reach of man's knowledge and learning, a guy could reach out and grab faith in the dark. And that it would light little candles along a road that had been pitch black.

I thought about it afterward. Faith is such a simple thing. You just reach out with your heart and grab hold of it. And the little candles start lighting up all along the road.

Baby's bottles are easier to fill if you use a small coffee pot with a good pouring spout for making the formula.

Stir the water while cooking if you wish to keep the yolk in the center of a hard boiling egg.

CLUB NEWS

H. D. C. HAS BIG PLANS FOR 1953

1953 Holds big plans for Shelby County Home Demonstration Clubs. Council officers will begin these plans at a Luncheon Meeting Friday in the Old Courthouse Auditorium.

Plans will include work to be included at The Annual Workshop (on Tuesday, January 12th), and preliminary plans for attaining 1953 objectives, observing National Home Demonstration District meeting at Tuscaloosa, the Council Budget, Special Interest Demonstrations, Camp, Achievement Day, Dress Revue, Council funds, Roses, 4-H Rally, Annual Campaigns (Red Cross, Cancer) and Equipment in Extension Kitchen.

Officers expected for this Planning Meeting are: Mrs. F. E. Williams, President; Mrs. E. R. Naish, Mrs. F. R. Walls, Vice Presidents; Mrs. Carlos Warren, Secretary; Mrs. W. A. Jones, Treasurer; Mrs. Roma Steen, Reporter; Mrs. Dean Holcombe, Parliamentarian; Mrs. H. A. Pauly, Farm Bureau; Mrs. Leon Barton, Rural Youth; Mrs. George Bentley, Citizenship and Mrs. Frank Wyatt, Community Activities.

'GIFTS FROM THE PRESERVING POT'

"Gifts From The Preserving Pot" was the demonstration in Home Demonstration Clubs in November.

Foods Leaders made Amber and Carrot-Orange Marmalades. They stated that marmalades have the combined charactistics of jellies and preserves, counting pulp and the fruit skin suspended in jelling juices; citrus fruits are especially desirable for their flavor and peetic contect; the pectin is extracted more rapidly by cooking the fruit before the sugar is added in clises or shreds and is cooked until clear.

These leaders gave the demonstration in their clubs: Mrs. F. R. Walls, Mrs. J. C. Murdock, Yellow Leaf; Mrs. L. L. Barton, Mrs. Nina Kent, Siluria; Mrs. Charles Cordes, West Calera; Mrs. Frank Wyatt, Klein; Mrs. W. H. Chapman, Columbiana; Mrs. J. M. Sorrell, Calera; Mrs. J. P. Woods, South Calera; Mrs .Tom Knowles, Spring Creek-Valley Grove; Mrs. W. J. Strickland, Mrs. George Lee Green, Helena;

Mrs. J. M. Denson, New Hope; Mrs. Irval Arnold, Mrs. J. L. Campbell, Acton; Mrs. Roma Steen, Mrs. W. J. Bailey, Mrs. W. L. Brasher, Sterrett; Mrs. Thomas Gillen, Mrs. A. D. Glover, Mt. Era; Mrs. W. A. Jones, Mrs. Frank Green, Ebenezer; and Mrs. J. W. Willis, Mrs. H. P. Cox, Saginaw.

Amber Marmalade was made from this recipe: 1 orange, 1 grapefruit, 1 lemon and 1/8 teaspoon salt. Use 1of each and select yellow-smooth, thick-skinned fruit, free from blemishes. Remove peel and slice very thin. Parboil 3 times, as follows: add 1 quart of cold water, bring to boiling, cook for 5 minutes, and discard water after each boiling. Cut pulp into thin slices, removing seeds and rags. Combine pulp and drained parboiled peel.

Weigh or measure fruit, pulp, juice and parboiled peel. Add twice that quantity of water. Boil mixture rapidly 40 minutes before measuring for amount of sugar.

Weigh or measure mixture and add equal amount of sugar. Add salt and boil mixture rapidly for 25 minutes, or until jelly stage is reached. If a thick marmalade is desired, boil longer, but watch carefully to prevent scorching. Let stand until slightly cool. Then stir to distribute fruit. Put into pint jars. Process in a water-bath canner (212°F.) for 15 minutes.

Winners of 4-H Crop Awards

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER around the world

National winners of the 1952 4-H Field Crops program, of which International Harvester Company is the donor of awards, hear John L. McCaffrey, president of International Harvester, explain the importance of harvesting machine progress.

Inspecting a miniature replica of an 1878 McCormick hand-binding harvester, left to right, are: Jeff M. Beasley, 18, Gadsden, Ala.; John M. Sparks, 17, Phoenix, Ariz.; James L. Mosser, 20, Fortuna, N. D.; Roger D. Hagan, 18, Statesboro, Ga.; Mr. McCaffrey; Ronald L. Kouplen, 18, Beggs, Okla.; and Stanley H. Warner, 21, Great Falls, Mont.

These six young men each won an all-expense trip to the 31st national 4-H Club Congress in Chicago and a $300 International Harvester scholarship, acceptable at any accredited agricultural college.

The purpose of the Field Crops awards program is to encourage 4-H members to achieve the following:

1. To acquire a better knowledge and develop skills in good farming practices relating to field crop production.

2. To assist in increasing the economic per acre production of food, feed and fiber crops.

3. To demonstrate improved practices, particularly those relating to use and maintenance of farm machinery used in field crops production.

4. To increase supplies of certified seed, both for use on the home farm and for sale in the community.

5. To practice efficient methods of field crops production by: Careful selection of seed; use of better crop production methods; and most proficient use of available farm machinery.

Jeff Beasley has specialized in growing corn, legumes and cotton John Sparks grows hegari on irrigated land. James Mosser's crops are wheat, oats, barley and flax. Roger Hagan grows cotton, peanuts, corn and tobacco. Ronald Kouplen's crops are corn, oats and cotton, while Stanley Warner has concentrated on growing wheat.

Commenting on their accomplishments, Mr. McCaffrey said: "One of the reasons we at Harvester so much enjoy being with you is that you young folks here have already demonstrated outstanding ability and determination and are now looking ahead to new aspirations and new objectives. In addition, you represent more than 2,000,000 4-H'ers back home who will also go on to bigger things and larger responsibilities.

"I fervently trust—and am confident it will be so—that many of you in 4-H who continue on the farm in adult life will also continue active in 4-H as adult leaders in your community. That is the effective way to carry on the good work — the way many of your parents are doing it, parents who were themselves members of 4-H."

GLASS 'FREEZER JARS' FOR THE HOME FREEZER

Here are some of the advantages and disadvantages of the new "freezer jars".

According to Lavada Curtis, API Extension food preservation specialist, the jars are moisture-vapor-proof, can be re-used, need no heat-sealing as paper containers do, and, though food must be thawed somewhat for removal, there is no leakage from the container in thawing.

"Another advantage of the 'freezer jars,'" says Miss Curtis, "is that they are convenient than ordinary glass jars because the sides are straight so that food slips out easily after slight defrosting."

Of course the jars are breakable and slippery to handle.

A CHRISTMAS TREE CAN CAUSE A HOME TO BURN

Few people realize that a beautiful Christmas tree is one of the most easily burned holiday decorations.

Elta Majors, API Extension family life specialist, points out that a Christmas tree is filled with pitch and resin—materials which burn readdily. In fact, the average tree takes less than two minutes to burn completely.

"For safe trimming of trees," says Miss Majors, "don't set up the tree until a few days before Christmas. Place the tree in the coolest part of the house so it won't dry out and create a fire hazard. If necessary, turn off heat nearest the tree. Never use cotton that has not been treated and made non-inflammable or paper for decorations on or around the tree. And make certain that all lighting is turned off before retiring or leaving the house."

Dip a measuring cup or spoon into very hot water before using it for lard, butter, etc., and the fat will slip out easily.

MISS BETTY JEAN SMITH PRESIDENT FRESHMAN CLASS AT MONTEVALLO

An Albertville speech major will lead the Freshman Class as president during their first year at Alabama College at Montevallo.

Miss Betty Jean Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Olen D. Smith, of Albertville, was chosen along with seven other officers of the freshman class during recent elections on the campus. Dora Duncan, Aelxander City, was also candidate for president.

A liberal arts major from Andalusia, Sarah Booth, was selected from two other candidates as class vice president. Her opponents were Joan Munroe, Selma, and Syd Riggs, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Willodean Ruff, a Montgomery sociology major, was elected secretary of the class. Other candidates for this position were Ella McCrory, Greensboro, and Miriam Oglesby, Birmingham.

The treasurer, Ednell Chandler, Linden, was also elected from three candidates. Others seeking this office were Shelah Saul, Birmingham; and Margaret Spence, Mobile.

Edna Jackson, liberal arts major from Decatur, will serve as freshman justice to the Student Court. Others running for the position were: Marell Goodwin, Pinson; and Ann Oliver, Montgomery.

Three senators to represent freshmen in the student senate were selected from ten candidates. These are Joyce Greathouse, Gadsden; Ida Jo Harrison, Opp; and Jean Missildine, Billingsley.

Other senatorial candidates were: Mildred Callen, Chickasaw; Betty Sue Fowler, Birmingham; Libby Kirkland, Montgomery; Beth Mathews, Birmingham; Norma Turman, Birmingham; Sylvia Weaver, Flat Top; and Betty Weiss, Mobile.

Under The Study Lamp

By William Crowe

THE FRONT LINE

It was needful for me to write unto you and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints. - Jude 3.

The writer of this brief letter (twenty-three sentences) was the half brother of our Lord. However it was only after the atoning death and vindicating resurrection of Jesus that Jude became convinced that the holy, harmless and undefiled members of his own family was actually the Son of God; incarnate Deity, the embodiment of all prophecy, a Person toward whom millions of people through unborn centuries, out of every kindred and nation, were to look for the fulfilment of the highest hope conceivable in a mortal brain. Upon that amazing discovery the importance of his letter was based.

In the New Testament the word "faith" appears with two meanings. In one sense it expresses one's personal trust in Christ as the Redeemer; but in the sentence quoted here it is used objectively, meaning the body of truth revealed in the Bible. The sum and substance of that body of truth is incorporated in the record of the words and deeds of Jesus. The key to it is presented in this encompassing declaration: "And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into Glory". (I Timothy 3:16)

This faith, or body of truth, composes the manual for the operation of the Kingdom of God. The exhortation that we should earnestly contend for it implies that it meets opposition at every turn, even though it is the gift of infinite love to an otherwise They besiege the embattlements lost world. And so it does. The visible church on earth is, and always has been, the target of bitter enemies within and without. The Devil is always on the job, nor does he propose to surrender. His agents are skilled, alert, subtle, daring, unscrupulous. of the Kingdom from without. They also form a fifth column within the church itself. The prince of darkness sometimes masquerades as an angel of light, so the Bible tells us.

The conclusion of the whole matter is that Christianity will have to continue to fight for its very life, and that every believer is called to the colors. There is no escape from the searching question:

"Am I a soldier of the cross,
A follower of the Lamb?
And shall I fear to own his cause,
Or blush to speak his name?"

MISS JEWEL CATER BRIDE-ELECT HONORED

Honoring Miss Jewel Cater, bride-elect of William L. Clinkscales, whose marriage will be solemnized December 14th at Harpersville Methodist Church, a tea was given at the home of her aunt, Mrs. W. H. Baker, Sunday, December 7th from two to four o'clock. Co-Hostesses with Mrs. Baker were Mrs. J. H. Kimbrough, Mrs. Jeff Baker, Mrs. Fonza Jackson, Mrs. W. E. Stone and Mrs. R. W. Darby.

Christmas Motif was used in decorations through out the house. Mrs. Baker welcomed the guests at the door. In the receiving line were the honoree, Miss Cater, her mother, Mrs. Hansel Cater, Mrs. William Clinkscales and Mrs. Parrish, mother and grandmother of the bride groom.

The guests were invited into the dining room where Mrs. Jeff Baker and Mrs. Kimbrough assisted in serving refreshments. The table was layed in cut worked linen with white carnations as center piece in low arrangement of fern. Mrs. Jackson presided at the coffee service.

Mrs. Darby registered the guest who called during the afternoon. Mrs. Bryant Justice and Miss Sarah Justice received and displayed the gifts.

Miss Wilma Stone, at the piano, rendered music during the receiving hours.

Getting Around with Mac Brown

Things usually are pretty quiet in our neighborhood but last week-end it was different. The family next door married off their daughter. The wedding was at church, but there was a reception at home, and that was the cause of most of the fuss.

Saturday they had a big house-cleaning over there. They even had the maid come out and wash down the front porch and steps with the hose. Seeing all that being done to pretty up the place made me feel guilty, so I finally raked up the leaves in our front yard. I didn't want the guests to think the bride lived next to a bunch of bums. My work had a pay-off, though, because there was so much cake and nuts and punch left that a lot of it wound up in our refrigerator. It was mighty good.

While all the getting-ready was going on Saturday, the mother and four year old sister were all over the place with their hair up in curlers. The little sister was thrilled through and through with her flower girl role.

All day Saturday deliveries were being made at the house: flowers from the florist, the cake from the bakery, and so on. Everything was delivered by truck, and I took satisfaction in seeing again what a big part trucks play in all the events of our lives. You can't even get married and do it up right without using the services of trucks.

PRE-CHRISTMAS ARRANGEMENTS

"Christmas Cannot Start Too Early", says the Rev. Charles L. Allen in the Atlanta Constitution, and we agree with him.

Mr. Allen says:

"The other day a friend complained that merchants along our busy streets announce their Christmas bargains too early. 'Christmas shopping used to begin after Thanksgiving Day,' he said. 'Now Christmas trimmings appear in the stores about the first of November.' With some suggestion of bitterness he added, 'Christmas nowadays begins too early.' I thought of a little old lady who was taking orders for Christmas Cards last August, but I didn't mention it.

"I spoke to a business acquaintance of my friend's complaint. He is a buyer for a large store. He smiled and said: 'Christmas begins for me six or seven months earlier. I've got to get my orders in by the first of July.' Then he said something which seemed rather significant. 'My wife says that I begin to talk about Christmas on the first of June and continue to talk Christmas until Dec. 25. But, you know,' and there was a brightness in his eyes, 'I seem to have that good, warm, friendly Christmas spirit in my heart at least half the year.'

"Some people complain about the commercialization of Christmas. Maybe Christmas has been too commercialized, but I'd not want it slackened much. In the midst of the crowded, noisy streets amid the tumult of many voices, I hear the strains of beautiful Christmas carols. When else during all the year can we hear so eloquent a voice of the Christmas centuries.

And I know that the Christ of Christmas would feel at home on our crowded, busy thoroughfares. In the days of His life among men, Christ preferred to minister in crowded Jerusalem to the solitary, desert places of meditation. And today His spirit in a myriad ways ministers where the crowds are dense.

"I've watched mothers and fathers at the toy counter. I've wondered why they trouble themselves in this traffic of so many feet. Then I realize the bright-eyed expectancy in the eyes of small tots. The love of a father and mother for small children is surely a manifestation of that great love with Christmas symbolizes.

And making my way among the people on the streets, I am sometimes jarred with the remembrance that there were crowded streets, too, in Bethlehem long, long ago. Almost lost in the midst of the vast multitude were strangers, a man and woman from Nazareth. They were without friends and without a welcome in the City of David.

The crowds on the streets of Bethlehem 2,000 years ago and the crowds on our streets today have much in common. There is the tramp of weary feet. There is the clamor of many voices. There is urgency, hurry and noise. But there is a difference. I think that difference may be represented by all that is suggested to me by the sound of the bell in the hand of the Salvation Army lassie on the corner. All that is represented by the sound of that bell should last not one month or six months but throughout the year."

JUDGE JONES PROPOSES DRASTIC MEASURES, THE WHIPPING POST

We are numbered among the many admirers of Judge Walter B. Jones of Montgomery and have enjoyed most of the articles his talented pen has given us, but we cannot go along with him on his idea of "establishing a whipping post for minor offenses", as a satisfactory solution for punishing defendants in our courts. Fact is, we do not believe in the "lash" as a punishment for any individual. It seems to us a relic of barbarism. Wonder if Judge Jones will next advocate the return to the "Ducking Stool" for feminine chatterboxes? If and when he does, he may disregard "Sadie Hawkins" Day, for his "punishment" (?) will be a bachelor's existence from now on out!

BAPTISTS GOAL IS ATTENDANCE RECORD IN 1953

Possibly the largest crowd in the history of Baptist Training Union work in the Shelby Association gathered at the beautiful Church in Siluria Monday, December 8th, to hear a challenging message by Rev. James H. Butler, Pastor, West End Baptist Church, Birmingham, on the 1953 Theme and to set goals for the new year.

The attendance was finally tallied to be 457 as against a goal of 451 set prior to the annual "M" (Mobilization) Night meeting. (We had 423 present a year ago at Columbiana.)

These came from 22 different churches scattered throught the county and included in this number were 14 Baptist Pastors, 8 Associational Training Union Officers, 18 local Training Union Directors and 29 local church B. T. U. Leaders, Sponsors and Counsellors who work with the Juniors, Intermediates and Young People, respectively.

Winning the Attendance Banner for this meeting was the Pelham Baptist Church which had 59 present but with only an enrollment in Training Union of 41, giving them 144 per cent of their enrollment present. Many churches had better than 100 per cent present and these are to be congratulated for enlisting NEW people for this phase of Baptist Church work.

Appearing on the program were Rev. M. L. Butler, Siluria, The Siluria Choir, Bro. B. B. Curry, Wilton, Rev. Edward Glover, Montevallo, Mr. H. E. Ansley, Chelsea, the associate director in the association, Ed Rush, and Robert Holliman, Columbiana.

G. C. Moore, Jr., Columbiana, Associational Director, presided over the meeting and set forth many goals for the year 1953 to improve each church locally and to work toward making the Shelby Association a Standard association as soon as possible. These goals were adopted.

The next Mass meeting will be announced later for sometime in March.

"I'm going out on patrol . . ."

These were the last words written home by Pvt. Howard Edward Wallace, 26, of Harpersville.

He wrote them to his girl friend on November 6. The following day he was killed by small gun fire while on patrol.

His mother, Mrs. W. R. Wallace, notified the newspapers of her son's death.

A Marine Veteran of three years in the Pacific in World War II, Pvt. Wallace entered the Army last January. He landed in Korea October 6, a month before he was killed.

Born in Jasper, Pvt. Wallace attended New Merkle School. Surviving besides his parents are two brothers, James and Joe Wallace, of New Merkle, and a sister Ona Wallace of Birmingham.

Sincere sympathy to these berieved loved ones.

News On Proposed Big Calera Plant

Since the Birmingham News and Post Herald issued the news regarding millions of dollars to be spent by Westinghouse in nearby Calera, we have been beseiged by requests to know if this good fortune is really going to come our way? We have attempted to verify this "news item", but so far, we find the prominent citizens in this town, reluctant to affirm or deny the news article. So, we frankly tell you, we do not know it to be a fact but join everybody in Shelby county in "hoping" it is true.

This far reaching project, by this nationally known concern, would not only benefit Calera, it would give a "shot in the arm" to the whole county and might well be the beginning of the prosperous and happy New Year we have long been wishing for this section of Alabama. M. W. W.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Chapman of Columbiana, and their children, will be at home Sunday afternoon, December 21, 1952, from three o'clock until five o'clock at which time, the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Chapman will be observed. Friends are invited to call.

How To Stop Socialism

Some time ago Charles E. Wilson, former Defense Mobilizer, made public an idea that had been germinating in his mind since 1946. It is that all Federally-owned businesses—be sold to private enterprise. This would be done by converting the businesses concerned into stock companies and selling the shares to holders of government bonds.

Since then, it is reported, Mr. Wilson has received a flood of mail from all over the country and from all kinds of people endorsing his proposal and expressing their willingness to exchange their bonds for the shares of stock. And on top of that, the proposal has received warm praise and support from those who want to save this country from the blight of socialism.

In a recent article, Pathfinder magazine observed that Mr. Wilson's plan has six points in its favor, running as follows:

It would reduce the national debt by 10 per cent, for a total of some $27,000,000,000. It would reduce the interest on this debt by about $750,000,000 a year. It would produce a larger tax yield from properties which are now wholly or largely tax-free and, in addition, are supported by our taxes. It would give more people a share in U. S. production. It would break the trend toward socialistic ownership of enterprise. It would slow up the bureaucratic drive for more big government.

The socialist goal has been to gain a political monopoly of essential resources and services, notably electric power, on a piecemeal basis. Mr. Wilson touched on this in the speech in which he disclosed his plan. He said, "Down in Washington, I've watched our creeping paralysis of socialism at work . . . We have to launch a second era of trust-busting and we need a bigger stick than even

BAPTISTS TO HELP CHILDREN'S HOME AT TROY

The Baptist people in this area will join others this season in bringing Christmas cheer to their 300 wards in their Children's Home at Troy.

With many it will be a cash offering.

A total goal of $140,000 has been set by the Alabama Baptist Convention for the holiday contributions this year. It was explained this will actually be used for running expenses at the home for an entire year.

Previously, various groups had sent carloads of farm provisions to the youngsters. Still others "adopt" a certain child and provide clothes and various personal needs throughout the year.

Superintendent of the home, E. E. Cox, said the churches would use any one of the Sundays in December to receive the special offering.

Recent reports showed a farm operated by the orphanage now boasts 100 cattle, 40 hogs and 450 laying hens, with other regular farm products.

Some 50 children are cared for through a "mother's and" program, Cox explained, while an average of 265 are provided with living quarters in the several cottages on the campus.

NOTICE

Local Board No. 58 (Draft Board Office), in Columbiana, Alabama, will be closed December 25 through December 26, 1952. Office open on December 29, 1952.

Read The Story Of Growing Alabaster On Another Page

We refer you to some information regarding one of our fastest growing communities in Shelby county, Alabaster. We hope other communities will take the opportunity we offer them in printing the attractive features in their particular sections, and send them to us. In this way, more people will become Shelby county conscious, and will want to make their homes with us. More folks, more industries, and if you do not tell people what a splendid town you have and the outstanding advantages of this section of Alabama. How are they going to know about it? Let's tell'em!

If you will send me the facts, I will be glad to re-write them and incorporate them in an article giving these factual advantages to our wide circle of readers, who by the way are in many states of this Union, and abroad, believe

Wilsonville Woman Returning Home From Job In Orient

Miss Harriet Clark (Clarkie) Pope is on her way home from Bangkok, Thialand, where she has spent 15 months with E. C. A. which administers the Marshall Plan. She flew over Eastward and is returning by boat across the Pacific. She spent a week or two in Hongkong, from which she called the home folks to say "Hello", half-way around the world. She stopped at Formosa and at 4 ports in Japan. From Yokohama she went inland to Tokyo and from Kobe inland to Kyoto. She is now on her way to Vancouver and then to San Francisco. We hope this "round-the-world" traveler will be home for Christmas and can spend a few days before returning to Washington, D. C.

JASPER HOLCOMBE OF CALERA PASSES

Jasper Holcombe, 56 of Calera, died Sunday at a Birmingham hospital.

Born in Calera, Mr. Holcombe was a member of one of the oldest and most widely known families of Shelby county. He was a Mason and a Shriner.

For many years before his retirement, he was in the mercantile business in Calera and Montevallo.

He is survived by his widow: a brother, Robert L. Holcombe, Calera; two sisters, Mrs. Zollie Cowart and Mrs. R. E. Bowdon, Sr., both of Calera; a daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Davis, Tuscaloosa; a granddaughter.

Funeral services were held at Calera Baptist Church at 1:30 P. M. Tuesday. Bolton-Walton Funeral Home of Columbiana directed burial in Calera Cemetery.

Active pallbearers were Robert L. Holcombe Jr., O. C. Farris, Dr. L. H. Hubbard, George Holcombe, Zollie Cowart, Jr., Samuel Bowden.

Honory pallbearers were Cecil Cowart, Judson Salter, R. L. Jeffers, Fred Frost, T. W. Lawrence, Dick Martin.

CHRISTMAS DANCE SPONSORED BY LEGION AUXILIARY

The annual Christmas Dance, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary will be held in the High School Auditorium on Thursday evening, December 18. Music for this occasion will be furnished by the "Snappy Seven" orchestra from Sylacauga. Tickets are on sale at Eagles Store, Mrs. Thelma Glenn, and Auxiliary members.

The public is cordially invited.

FRIDAY NIGHT IS COMMUNITY NIGHT

Don't forget that Friday night everybody will gather in the Courthouse and enjoy another Community Night. A two reel film will be shown. A Santa Claus will make a personal appearance. He will also bring a sack full of fruits for all the little boys and girls. Carols will be sung, the Tree on the lawn will be ablaze with Christmas lights, and under its friendly branches you are to put your gifts for those less fortunate, so that Christmas Cheer may abound in Shelby county this year and everybody will be happy!

That is as it should be! And, if you will come to this annual "get-together", I believe, even if you haven't already caught the Christmas Spirit, that you will get what I mean on this occasion. So, I shall B. C. N. U. at the Christmas Community Party.

'CHORUS IN THE SKIES' PLEASES LARGE CROWD

The Baptist Church was crowded to capacity Sunday evening when the Choristers presented their annual Yuletide offering in the form of a Christmas Cantata, called "The Chorus In The Skies". The Church was a picture in decorative artistry, and those responsible for this lovely setting included Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Curlee, Mrs. Roy Towns, popular florist, and Miss Sara Nell Lightsey, to whom the writer wishes to express her wholehearted gratitude.

Immediately after January 1st, this talented group of congenial musicians will begin rehearsals on the Easter Cantata, which has already been chosen by the director, and bears the title "Sunrise Over Calvary".

AUTO COLLISIONS CAUSE DEATH AND SERIOUS INJURIES

Traffic problems continue to make driving a hazard. Robert Turner, Alex Davis, Billy Perry and Tommy Tillery were painfully injuried in an auto wreck near New Merkle Tuesday. Robert Turner has several ribs broken and is still in the hospital. The other occupants of the car have been released.

Friday night the Basketball members of Winterboro were on their way to play a game in Calera when a head on collision with a car returning from Veterans School in Montevallo, sent two players to the hospital, who later died, and two colored veterans remain in serious condition in the Jefferson Hospital.

ALABASTER . WATCH US GROW

MILDRED WHITE WALLACE

The writer of this article has ng contended that Alabaster, has ne of the most attractive slogans r a town, in the sentence, "Ala- aster - Watch Us Grow", and her eople are, in every respect, liv- g up to it. Talking with our ood friend George Scott, Jr., resident of the Bank of Alabaster o found out some more perti- cts about Alabaster, which, ore than ever, confirm our be- ef in this particlular section of helby county and we print them r you this week, with our con- ratulations to the alert citizens up and coming Alabaster, who e not only "dreaming dreams a bigger and better future," but e doing something about mak- g them come true.

First, let's take the town of labaster—

Alabaster is at present an unincorporated community, but has ken steps toward incorporating. is located on the Louisville & ashville Railroad and on High- ay No. 31 (Birmingham-Mont- mery Highway), twenty-two iles south of Birmingham in helby county, Alabama. The esti- ated population of the communi- is 1500. Siluria is a separate jacent community with an esti- ated population of 1500.

The estimated population of the ea within a radius of six miles om Alabaster is from 8,000 to ,000. Included in the area is e incorporated town of Helena, e miles distance, with popula- n of approximately 800 and also e following additional unincor- rated communities and villages, .,

Landmark, one mile distance, proximately 200; Keystone, two les distance, approximately 300; ginaw, two miles distance, ap- oximately 300; Pelham, three les distance, approximately 375; aylene, five miles distance, ap- oximately 550.

The population in area within said six mile radius outside foregoing towns, villages and mmunities is approximately 00.

The principal industries in area thin six mile radius of Alabaster e as follows;

Buck Creek Cotton Mills, Si- ria; Keystone Lime Company, ystone; Longview-Saginaw me Company, Saginaw; Ala- ma Aggregate Company, Pel- m; Alabaster Lime Company, abaster; Phillips Associates, Si- ria; Cheney Lime & Cement Co., luria.

The above industries employ 00 people and have an annual les of $8,450,000.00.

There are, in addition to above lustries employing over 100 per- ns and having sales of over a lf million dollars annually, a ge number of smaller industries d business establishments with nual sales ranging from $50,- 0.00 to $250,000.00, employing m 10 to 50 persons.

There are approximately 150 ail establishments of various ds within a six mile radius of abaster. Included in these estab- hments are General Stores, rvice Stations, Cafes, Furniture ores, Hardware Stores, Auto pply Stores, Taxi-cab Operators, welry, Barber Shops, and Beau- Parlors, Dry Goods & Cloth- , Drugs, Shoe Repair, Varieties, yCleaning and Theatres. The nual sales of these retail estab- hments is in excess of $4,- ,000.00.

[illegible] sa d six [illegible] le radius is [illegible] tate's best [illegible] here are [illegible] 17 Dairy farms with annu. es in excess of $ 500,000.0 [illegible] are within the said [illegible] cattle farms, 10 poultr ms 10 Truck farms, 6 [illegible] ms and 2?5 general farms [illegible] o 2?0 acres in area.

Seve [illegible] coal mines are located the [illegible] Plantation Pipe Lines intains an operation in the a for interstate carriage of soline and oil through pipe lines employs approximately 40 sons. Three railroads serve the a. There are manufacturers, in lition to larger ones already ntioned, producing dry ice, con- te blocks and lumber. It is imated that the annual payroll hin the six mile radius exceed 000,000.00 and the value of ducts manufactured in the area eed $10,000,000.00.

The only Dry Ice Plant in Ala- na and one of the few Dry Ice nts in the United States is lo- ed in Shelby county and the ice is made from a by-product coming from the lime kilns of the Alabaster Lime Company.

In burning limestone (calcium carbonate), carbon dioxide gas (CO2) is driven from the stone and this gas is captured from the kilns and processed into liquid CO2 or solid CO2 (dry ice). This company is owned and operated by Pure Carbonic, Inc., New York, and has been in production since 1937. The gas now used in the manufacture of dry ice was formerly wasted but is now being sold to the ice company on a royalty basis.

Dry ice is used, principally, for refrigeration and is also being used extensively by the bottling industry and as a fire extinguisher, which is either sold in a solid or liquid form. Liquid CO2 is used in making carbonated water for soft drinks, including Coca-Cola and other such beverages.

TOWN CLUB OF ALABASTER

"Civic Unity For A Better Community"

The Town Club of Alabaster is a civic organization formed during the early part of 1951 and is composed of business and professional men in Alabaster and surrounding communities. This organization is local and not affiliated with any national organization and to a great extent has run the affairs of the town as Alabaster is not incorporated. Several projects sponsored by the club are as follows:

1. A new post office.
2. The First Bank of Alabaster.
3. Install traffic lights in the business section of town.
4. Build curb and gutters through the business section of town, and in cooperation with the State Highway Department widen the pavement through the town.
5. Paved approximately 1/4 mile of road on the back streets.

In addition to this, the club employs and pays a night-watchman, makes payment for the street lights and does many other things in connection with running the town.

The officers of the club were elected for one year and the same fficers were elected at the end of th first year to serve another term.

They include: George L. Scott, Jr., President; John A. Montgomery, Sec.-Treas. The Board of Directors are: George L. Scott, Jr., L. L. Barton, J. A. Montgomery, T. A. Farris, J. E. Walker, A. L. Scott, Paul Adkins.

With such leadership and such town spirit, Alabaster citizens may look forward to the future, confidently!

SOIL CONSERVATION ON THE MARCH IN SHELBY COUNTY

MRS. ETHEL ROGERS Pictured in Fescue as it appeared on November 25. Two bulls and a steer are grazing four acres of this grass.

646, Or over one-third of the total number of farm operators in Shelby county are now cooperators of the North Central Soil Conservation District. Their farms have a total of 94,486 acres. Soil surveys have been made on 249,608 acres in this county to date, with 5,880 acres being completed this year. 97 Applications are now on file for early making of conservation farm plans. 42 New plans and one revision of an old plan covering 7,180 acres were made in the calendar year 1952.

These figures tell a story of the continuing steady growth of the "District" movement from the day of its formation in 1940, when Shelby county had few improved pastures, only a few acres each of kudzu and sericea, a few terraces, and little realization of need for conservation measures other than rather heavy planting of vetch and Austrian Winter Peas as winter cover crops.

In 1952 the following acreages of soil building legumes and soil saving sod-crops were planted on farms of cooperating farmers: 630 acres of sericea, 1700 acres of Ky. 31 Fescue, 25 acres of kudzu, 1000 acres of Chapel Hill Rescue Grass, 6,050 acres of legume cover crops, and 3000 acres of crimson clover for winter grazing and cover. Of the newer crops, 30 acres of Coastal Bermuda, 40 acres of ball clover, 4,00 multiflora rose plants, and 5 acres of reseeding sorghum were planted on trial.

New farm plans during 1952 have ranged from Carleton Frank's 37 acre Wilsonville farm to A. R. Long's 1577 acre "Big Spring Farm" rambling nearly four miles down a valley north of Harpersville. Typical of the way S. C. S. works with the "District" cooperators is the fact that owners of ten or 10,000 acres can count on the same care and detailed consideration, and each will get the best available recommendations for his special farm for land use and establishing crops he needs. Fencing arrangement, road locations, and water control systems will be suggested.

The growth of conservation is even faster than threse figures indicate, since they cover farms already under agreement with the "District", and do not include farmers acting individually or with P. M. A. or the Extension Service, but not yet cooperators.

There are several factors aiding in the spread of conservation measures particilarly the assistance of the G. I. Vocational Agriculture classes, 100 per cent having agreements, the F. H. A. with 85 per cent of its families cooperating, all Future Farmer clubs, The Alabama College, and interested businessmen. All of those named have worked closely with the district supervisor F. E. Williams, Columbiana, and S. C. S. personnel. This year they studied conservation at 48 meetings, 15 demonstrations, and 12 S. C. S. conducted tours.

Four F. F. A. clubs and the Shelby County Training School have projects based on complete conservation farms or specific crops or conservation practices. The students are also planting 134 pounds of bi-color lespedeza seed and 10,000 bi-color plants in wildlife borders on individual farms jointly with didstrict and Alabama Department of Conservation.

It is to be expected that this march of Shelby County's farmers towards a complete, county-wide program of correct land use, water control and protection of forests and wildlife will accelerate as more and more farmers get successful conservation in effect. Many of the wide-awake regular and veteran vocational students have, or will soon have, farms of their own and are expected to continue their interest in conservation.

Also, of importance in this movement is the fact that 48 farms have carried out all phases of their conservation plans. These farms are considered on "maintenance" and serve as examples of the value of such planning. Of course, even these farms will substitute newer and better suited crops as fast as these can be found and their value to Shelby county farmers determined. In the field and at the S. C. S. Nurseries trained men are working to discover or develop these new and improved varieties of plants to be brought to the farmer for trial and possible acceptance. The recent organization of the state into areas has released trained men from desks to furnish technical assistance in agronomy and engineering in the field.

Veterans of all U. S. Wars now total 19,452,000. 15,000,000 are World War II veterans.

Smart, sleek lines accentuated by new jet-tube taillights and a new chrome molding through the center of the rear fender line are featured in the 1953 Ford Customline Fordor sedan. Outstanding mechanical feature is a new "miracle ride" which brings to the high volume field for the first time the smooth riding characteristics of heavier, costlier cars.

New jobs and old for Santa's Seals

Since 1907 your purchase of Christmas Seals has helped cut the TB death rate substantially.

Yet the threat and problems of tuberculosis are still enormous.

TB is still the No. 1 infectious killer. And, ironically, as more patients are discovered and treated, new problems are created! More hospital beds are needed ... more trained doctors and nurses ... more help in rehabilitation. Your Christmas Seal dollars help solve these and other problems through popular and professional education, case finding, and research.

So, please, send in your contribution today. Keep the fight against TB a winning one!

Big New '53 FORD

THE NEW STANDARD OF THE AMERICAN ROAD!

Fordomatic Drive, Overdrive, white sidewall tires optional at extra cost. Equipment, accessories and trim subject to change without notice.

With 41 "Worth More" features ... it's worth more when you buy it ... worth more when you sell it!

This '53 Ford sets an entirely new standard for the American Road. For in this big new Ford you'll find 41 "Worth More" features that give you more of the things you want ... more of the things you need ... than ever before in low-priced car history.

You'll find the "Go" you need to handle today's long-distance driving ... the economy you want on long trips or short. You'll enjoy Ford's new Miracle Ride that brings you the smooth, quiet riding comfort you need for today's level parkways or rough, rutted byways ... plus nearly effortless steering, braking, and parking. And you'll see beauty that belongs wherever you may drive.

When you see this new Ford at your Ford Dealer's, when you Test Drive it and Value Check it, you'll understand why it is worth more when you buy it ... worth more when you sell it. You'll agree that here, indeed, is the New Standard of the American Road!

CHOICE OF V-8 OR SIX

Ford's famous 110-h.p. high-compression Strato-Star V-8 has a partner for thrifty "Go" in the 101-h.p. low-friction, high-compression Mileage Maker Six. Ford Automatic Power Pilot gives high-compression "Go" with regular gas.

A few of the 41 "Worth More" features in the 1953 Ford

NEW MIRACLE RIDE — Not just more responsive spring and shock absorber action, not just foam rubber cushions, but a balanced ride that gives you an entirely new concept of comfort.

SHIFT TO FORDOMATIC — and you'll never shift again. It's the finest, most versatile automatic drive ever built. And remember, Ford also offers the smooth and thrifty Overdrive.

POWER-PIVOT PEDALS — are suspended from above to eliminate dusty, drafty floor holes. They give more unobstructed floor space and provide easier operation of brake and clutch pedals.

CENTER-FILL FUELING — prevents hose marks, and makes "filling up" easier from either side of the gasoline pump. Shorter gas filler pipe gives you trunk space for an extra suitcase.

FULL-CIRCLE VISIBILITY — with huge, curved, one-piece windshield, a car-wide, one-piece rear window and big picture windows all around — gives you visibility unlimited.

Here now ... the '53 FORD

No wonder the swing is to FORD! Wow!

How To Stop Socialism

eddy Roosevelt could swing. If he concentration of power by business was bad for our country, and it was—then the concentration of power by the government is equally bad. And it is . . ."

It's hard to see how anyone who believes in freedom and opportunity—in all the ideals and principles this country is supposed to stand for—can quarrel with that. Mr. Wilson's plan for stopping socialism cold is the soundest one yet proposed."

The above thought provoking fact, carried in the Industrial News Review," presents a most practical and logical plan for stopping the socialistic trend in our country. It boils down to the old slogan: "Let's bring the government back to the people", which is not only wise, but essential, if we are to preserve our democratic form of government. M.W.W.

Cater-Clinkscales Wedding Solemnized

Miss Jewel Cater and Mr. William Clinkscales of Birmingham were married in a candle light service at the Harpersville Methodist Church, at five o'clock Sunday, December 14th, with a double ring ceremony. The Rev. George B. Creel officiated.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hansel E. Cater, was given in marriage by her father. Her dress was walz length made with an over shirt of lace on taffeta and tulle. Her shoulder length veil fell from a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a prayer book marked with a white orchid and valley lillies.

Miss Bettye Bowlin was maid of honor. Brides matrons were, Mrs. Fred Cleveland and Mrs. Raymond Martin. They wore dresses of jewel tone blue velvet with full skirts of net. They carried colonial bouquets of yellow carnations.

James Parsons was best man for the bridegroom and Charles Cleveland and Raymond Martin ushered.

Music was presented by Miss Wilma Stone and Mrs. James H. Kimbrough.

A reception in the church parlors was held following the ceremony. Mrs. Kimbrough cut the cake and Mrs. W. R. Baker, aunt of the bride, presided at the punch bowl.

When the couple left for a wedding trip the bride wore a grey suit with a white hat.

WEDDING PARTY ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kimbrough were hosts at their home to the wedding party of Miss Jewel Cater and William Clinkscales after the rehearsal at the church Saturday night.

Christmas decorations predominated the house, and a real Santa in Santa Claus attire greeted the guests at the door with a hearty welcome after which he delivered from an illuminated Christmas tree in the living room, gifts from the bride-elect and the bridegroom to their attendants.

During the social period Mrs. J. R. Gambell assisted Mrs. Kimbrough in serving refreshments.

WINTER-TIME JOB FOR MANY FARMERS

One of the most profitable ways a farmer can use the next couple of months is to clear grown-up bottomland to be used for improved pasture later, believes Lawrence Ennis, API Extension specialist in soil engineering.

He says that Alabama farmers have already cleared and put into profitable pastures many thousands of idle acres. They are now contributing greatly to Alabama's beef and cattle programs.

Miss Rena Carlson Weds Kelley Stone

Miss Rena Carlson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Carlson and Mr. Kelley Stone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Stone were married at the Methodist Church Friday evening, December 12. Rev. Hubert Stone, uncle of the groom performed the ceremony.

The bride, gowned in white lace, wearing a fingertip veil and carrying a bouquet of white orchids was given in marriage by her brother, Walter Carlson. Her sister, Miss Virginia Biles, the maid of honor wore a pink net dress and carried pink and blue flowers. The Junior maid of honor, Miss Sandra Carlson, wore nile green taffeta and Misses Brenda Carlson and Joyce Stone, who lighted the candles, wore sky blue taffeta. Mr. Hugh Stone was best man and Messers Bill Whitten and Herbert Sims were ushers.

The brides mother wore a grey crepe dress with a pink corsage and the grooms mother wore blue taffeta.

Miss Barbara Edwards and Mrs. Jack Story played the wedding music and Mr. S. S. McEwen sang.

The altar was beautifully decorated with white gladiolas, ferns and smilax, interspersed with white tapers in candelabras.

After the wedding a reception was given in the church parlor. Mrs. Jack Story poured coffee, Mrs. Juanita Williams cut the cake and Mrs. Virgil Fulmer presided over the bride's book.

LESTERS CHAPEL

Mr. W. L. Gardner had the misfortune of getting his hand cut very bad with a belt at a saw mill.

Malcolm Lee, son of Mrs. W. L. Gardner, got his left hand cut very bad with an ax, requiring 6 stitches.

Pvt. James B. Lee spent several days with his mother, Mrs. W. L. Gardner, and is now on his way to Camp Kemp, New Jersey, and on to Germany for 18 months.

Prayer services are being held at Lesters Chapel Church every Saturday night. They are just wonderful and they do not cost a dime to come or go away but a blessing awaits you. Come one, come all!

GI LOAN

Here's some information for you ex-GIs who are thinking about building a home with a GI loan. Just about every day, veterans come into our office seeking information about getting a GI loan. Even though the Government has relaxed the down payment requirements on new homes, I'm sorry to say that this hasn't done anything to improve the GI loan situation. As a matter of fact, GI guaranteed loans have just about dried up in most parts of the country. People are not willing to make loans at four per cent. There are some lending institutions which may make these loans but they still require that you have a substantial down payment and agree to pay off your mortgage within a period of ten or twelve years.

If you are unable to find someone who will put up the money, you can still make an application for a direct loan from the Veterans' Administration. However, our information is that these direct loans are few and far between. At the present time, the VA in Alabama is getting just about enough money to make eighty to a hundred loans every three months and the last time a check was made with the Regional Office in Montgomery, there were about 500 or 600 applications on the waiting list. When the Veterans' Administration receives your letter inquiring about a direct loan, they put it on file and you will take your place in the line with the ones wanting to make such a loan.

Finally, when all those ahead of you have been given a chance to make a direct loan, you will be notified that your name has finally come up for consideration. Just how long this will be for those applying now, we are unable to say.

The number of veterans discharged since the beginning of the Korean War, reached 1,112,000 Administration last week. at the end of August, according to a report issued by the Veterans'

APRIL, MAY AND JUNE DEATHS FROM DIABETES

More than a fifth of all the Alabama deaths attributed to diabetes in April, May and June were reported from the state's largest three cities. The announcement was made today by the State Department of Health.

The state total, the Department said, was 77. Ten of these were reported from Birmingham, four from Montgomery and three from Mobile.

The announcement was based upon provisional reports prepared by the Department's Bureau of Vital Statistics. These may differ slightly from the final reports not yet available.

Getting Around with Mac Brown

You are supposed to believe that you can tell which places along the highways serve good food by watching where the truckers stop. We truck drivers are supposed to know which cafes have food like mother used to cook.

I'm not going to say it is so, or that it isn't. I have my favorite places, but when all's said and done, I'm always glad when the trips are ended, and I'm back home to put away those real good meals the wife fixes.

She had a salad last week with some sliced fresh tomatoes in it, and they tasted almost as if they had just been picked from the garden. When I was a boy, we never had tomatoes, or any vegetables, out of season, unless they were canned ones. But now, look, you can have most anything, any time of the year.

I checked up on those tomatoes and I found a truck in the picture! They were trucked in from the Rio Grande valley in Texas, where there's a year-round growing season.

That's just part of the story. Trucks haul fresh fruits up from Florida, fresh seafood from the gulf, etc. Figures prove that practically every last bite of food you eat has been moved by truck. Those trucks sure make things different from just a few years ago. That's one of those things which make it nice to be living now.

FROM THE MAIL BAG

It is always good to realize that miles and miles and miles make no difference where real friends, such as old Shelby countians invariably are, who care and do, span the distance and send such wonderfully encouraging letters to those of us, "like the little pig who stayed home"! How refreshing these bright and breezy messages are that come to brighten our pathway. Gay, colorful cards, and remembrances from afar, making Christmas the very best time of the whole year.

Now, I am going to share some of these fine letters, from still finer folks, with you.

Here is one from pretty Marie Brown Shogren whose husband 1st Lt. Jerry Shogren will also be remembered by a number of friends. The whole family, Marie, Jerry, Carl and Sandra, are cozily housed on Okinawa.

Here is the letter:

"Hello Mildred White Wallace:

"Really I haven't forgotten you. I am just neglectful when it comes to writing letters.

"We are enjoying our stay over here very much. Living in the Far East is something that will always linger with us, even though, at times, we get awfully homesick as do all people who leave Old Main Street.

"You will never realize what the 'Home Paper' means to us so far from home. Please keep it coming. Tell Mommie to pay you, if our time has run out, and I will send her a check to cover.

"This life seems like one long vacation. I have a housemaid, a cook and a gardener. Jerry thinks I am getting spoiled, not having a thing to do. I shall possibly forget how to boil coffee. Our maid treats us so royally. The children have fallen in love with the help we have. The maid calls me "Oak-san", meaning 'the wife', or honcho (boss). We have had to learn some of the language to get them to understand us.

"Jerry has had quite an honor extended him. He is an assistant adjutant to General and top secret control officer for the 20th Air Force. I am so very proud of him.

"Here are some snapshots of James Crawford and me, (and these pictures are adorable! The pictures include some snap-shots taken of Captain James Crawford and Marie seated on the divan reading in the Shogren living room, and smiling broadly over a copy of the Reporter-Democrat.) You can imagine how we two kids from home are enjoying a 'get together' on Okinawa. James and I had a long talk tonight. He is just fine, but naturally, mighty homesick for his little bride. (Grace Sims)

"Tell every member of our Choir 'hello for me'. I wish I could be with them when they give the Cantata. I shall never forget the last one I was in. I just know this one will be equally as wonderful."

(Right here is a very beautiful tribute to my efforts, which I do not deserve, but shall treasure all to myself.)

Marie closes with a beautiful wish to all her friends for a merry-merry Christmas, and, we shall cherish the letter and the thoughtful spirit which prompted her sending it to us.

(Thanks a million Marie. We rendered the Cantata last night, and everyone was so charitable in their comments. Made us all feel, mighty good. We do appreciate so much your letter, and hope the day will not be too far distant, when you and Jerry with those little ones can return home "for keeps.")

FROM BURBANK CALIFORNIA

Ferman T. O'Haro, is a fellow, who used to live in Columbiana and Wilsonville. Every year, he gladdens our Christmas holidays by sending us a big box of those California Dates., we enjoy so much. This year is no exception. He writes to tell us, "our date with him is on its way" and we are meeting every mail, expectantly, knowing full well how much we shall enjoy them, when all these "editions" are put to bed, and we take off for a rest by our open fireplace, with nothing to do but, "fill that date with Ferman!"

. . . News next in telling us that Wynona Richards Helms and her husband "Sonny Helms" will soon be in San Francisco, and want their paper changed from Hawaai, to a new address in the Golden Gate section of our country.

. . . We are delighted to receive a lovely letter from our good friends Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Davis of Birmingham who request that we renew their subscription to the "home paper" for another year, and this is the best Yuletide present we know anything about.

. . . Thanks to Mr. J. F. McEwen of Wilsonville who, with many kind words regarding our efforts to please an ever whimsical public, came in to hand us two perfectly good dollars in exchange for 52 issues of the Reporter-Democrat for 1953.

. . . Helen Dauncey, Recreation Director from New York National Headquarters has come and gone, but Miss Dauncey left many happy memories of her bright and breezy sessions here, and also has the pleasure of knowing she has a host of friends who hope she will soon come back again.

. . . The Home Demonstration personnel, as well as the Methodist Choir, will lose a valuable asset to this community when Miss Collins leaves Columbiana for a new assignment in her chosen profession.

. . . We have seen several people go by our window today, with so many things on their minds they were "talking to themselves about it". Nothing like the Christmas rush for exciting moments.

MRS. P. O. LUCK ENTERTAINS SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS

The "Teen Age" group comprising Mrs. P. O. Luck's Sunday School class assembled in her home Thursday evening to enjoy the annual Yuletide Party.

The home was beautifully decorated throughout with greenery, and Christmas Holly. The candle-lit Christmas Tree held "exchange gifts" for all. Preceeding the presentation of these gifts, Homer Walton Jr., accompanied the group and the age old carols were sung.

Jimmy Harrison then read the bibical story as recorded by St. Luke, of the birth of Christ. Games were then enjoyed, after which delectable refershments were served and surprise packages presented the "teacher", as well as an inter change of gifts from the tree to each member of the class.

. . . Mrs. Rosa Teague and Mrs. Frank Wyatt spent Friday in Columbiana visiting friends.

. . . We happily include Mrs. Elmer Armstrong of Shelby, on our ever widening list of weekly readers this week.

. . . Mrs. Yetta Bloomfield is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Rose Kaplan. Other guests of Mrs. Kaplan's this week include her brother and father, the Messrs Nirenstein.

. . . Serving with Air Anti-Submarine Squadron 25, based at the Naval Air Station, in San Diego, is James E. Espey, aviation electrician's mate first class, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward V. Espey of Aldrich, and husband of the former Miss Kelly J. Pearry of Hartman, Ark.

AN ITEM FROM JAPAN

Pfc. Jerry Wheeler now stationed in Japan expresses his appreciation for the "Home Paper". He and Fred Austin are in Camp Drake, Repl. Depot, and as all boys, eventually pass thru this busy mart, we publish this item, so that should any soldier man from old Shelby county step jauntily thru this place, he can be sure and say "Hi Jerry!" Then watch Jerry go into action extending that old time Main Street greeting, we, who live here, so thoroughly understand and prize.

(By the way Jerry, your brother Jack is stationed at Ft. Jackson, South Carolina. Your mother was in the office today and had just heard from him. Hope this fracas will soon end and that all you grand people can come home for keeps. That would be the best Christmas present on this earth.)

. . . One of the happiest occasions we have heard about scheduled for the Yuletide holiday season is the celebration of the passing of the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Chapman, on the afternoon of December 21, from 3 o'clock until 5 o'clock. Their friends will join their loved ones in wishing for this widely beloved couple many more happy years together.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Stone of Camp Stewart spent the week end with their friends and family last week. During their visit, Hugh thoughtfully renewed their subscription to the "home paper" which he states is a cordially greeted guest each week in their home.

. . . Mrs. Orin Pearson thoughtfully sends in a subscription for a Christmas Gift to Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Pearson of North Augusta, South Carolina. We are on our way to greet the Pearsons this very week, and thank Mrs. Orin Pearson for the privilege of going.

. . . J. V. Cooper is moving from Alabama to Texarkana, Texas, but before "checking out" for the Lone Star State, Jack came home for a few hours and ordered the old "Home Paper" to follow him. We thank him for this courtesy and for the loyalty to his former home town.

. . . We have seen some very attractive leather-bound purse size memorandum books being sent to patrons of the First National Bank (that is some patrons), but so far, they have passed us up. We could use one of the useful gadgets, too.

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rogers will spend Christmas in South Alabama and in Mississippi.

. . . School will adjourn Friday, all the kids are just bursting with joy over this good news.

MRS. WILLIAM MACK FOSTER

FOSTER-BOZEMAN WEDDING

The marriage of William Mack Foster and Flora Mae Bozeman was impressively solemnized at the residence of the Rev. and Mrs. T. K. Roberts in Columbiana on the evening of November 29, 1952, the Rev. T. K. Roberts officiating.

Miss Mary Fancher was the bride's only attendant and the groom's best man was Billy Farmer.

Miss Bozeman is the daughter of Mrs. Ada Bozeman and the late Charles E. Bozeman and is a student in Shelby County High School where she is a Majorette and takes an active part in all school activities.

Mr. Foster is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Foster of Columbiana. The young couple have an apartment in the Bozeman home in Columbiana.

MACHAMER-FIQUETTE ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Dycus of Columbiana, announce the engagement of their daughter, Sue Fiquette to Wayne E. Machamer of Camp Rucker and Davenport, Iowa. The marriage will be solemnized late in January.

CONGRATULATIONS TO BARBARA HORN

Barbara Horn continues bringing signal recognition to Columbiana thru participation in University's Debating Teams. In an Invitational Debate Tournament last week end at Millsaps College in Mississippi, University of Alabama representatives won top honors.

Two teams from the University of Alabama defeated Louisana State University debaters for first and second places in the Women's Division. The winning speakers were Dorothy Sall, Carolyn Regan, Martha Hewes and Barbara Horn.

Sunday, Barbara brought several of her collegiate friends home with her and was numbered among the music lovers who gathered in the Baptist Church for the annual presentation of the Christmas Cantata. Barbara also brought home the trophies recently won in these debate engagements.

From Mrs. B. E. Martin, former resident of Columbiana, comes the following letter from this wonderful lady:

"Dear Mrs. Wallace:

"I trust you are well and happy and that Old Santa will bring you just what you want and remember you in many other different ways. I think of you and the "Home Paper" which stood by us all thru the War and sent the news to our boys in camp, and I do not want to neglect telling you, I have not forgotten this kindness. I trust you will continue to stay well, and make many other people happy.

May God bless you, I love you,
Mrs. B. E. Martin"

Mrs. Martin also requests that I extend her very best wishes to all her friends in the Kingdom Community, and she wishes for them a merry Christmas and a happy, happy New Year.

Naturally, Mrs. Martin keeps in touch with her friends thru the medium of this weekly newspaper, and includes a renewal subscription in her letter just received for which we thank her.

THE 'MERRY CHRISTMAS' EDITION

Next week's issue of the Reporter-Democrat will be filled brimful of good wishes from business firms and individuals to their friends and patrons. Don't miss it! Sorry we had to close down the edition, and that the late ones arriving, just could not be included without making this edition late, and who wants to hear about "Merry Christmas" after it has passed?

We told you this was going to happen weeks ago, and asked that you let us know early, what space you wanted, but, so busy we all are that many things were put off until the last minute. In this instance, we can only say, we regret it! Call us earlier next year, won't you?

THE STORK LINE

From across the miles, from Fair Oaks, California, to be exact, comes the announcement from Captain and Mrs. Vertnor Barnett of the arrival of Annette Teresa in their home. Little Annette Teresa was born on November 26. Congratulations!

. . . Collegiates are expected home next week, and a few of our soldier boys will likely be coming in before the holidays are ended to enjoy a bit of good old Home Life on Main, away from the fast tempo of a military routine.

DAWN FULTON, HONOREE BIRTHDAY PARTY

The writer got a distinct break last Thursday afternoon when we had the honor and privilege of attending the fifth birthday anniversary of popular Dawn Fulton, personality plus daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Fulton. We saw, on this occasion, "young America in action", and what a glorious occasion it was!

The Fulton home was ablaze with Christmas lights, and toys to please the Lilliputian guests. The Rocking Horse in the center of the living room was definitely the most popular spring board for activity. Dawn, exquisitely gowned in a checked Taffeta Party frock, greeted her guests, took their wraps, and cordially extended them an invitation to "come in".

After viewing the lovely gifts, displayed on her own little bed, the guests were invited to join in singing "Santa Claus is Coming To Town". After this rendition (on and off key), but lovely, the Lollipop Set were invited in to the dining room where a beautifully decorated table, centered with the traditional lighted birthday cake, caused more happiness to fast beating little hearts, as they lustily sang "Happy Birthday To Dawn", and were served ice cream, cake, and fruit punch.

"Time to go" came all too early. Again the gracious little hostess went into action, procured the coats and wraps for the guests, thanked each one in a most charming 'grown-up manner', and we left, somehow far happier down deep in our hearts than we had been in a long, long time. Nothing like the joyous blessing of a little child to brighten a fellow's pathway!

(May all that is gloriously bright and happy ever attend you Dawn, and only happiness greet you on each recurring birthday! And, I hope you will let me come again next year, Mimi.)

. . . Mrs. A. R. Looney has received some gorgeous jewelry from her daughter, Mrs. Byron Goley who, with her husband, Lt. Byron Goley, is now residing in Germany. A nice Christmas surprise. We are glad we shared the first "look-see" in this intriguing box from across the pond.

"Every day except Tuesday"

. . . Friday was indeed a "good day" for me. So many friends dropped in for a pre-Christmas chat. Among them Mr. George Beard of Columbiana Rt., whom we had not seen in a long time, and we had a good time talking over World War Two days when both of us were anxiously awaiting news from our boys over seas. Glad to learn Billie Beard, his son is doing so well in the Magic City, and if you want to find that "soft spot" in his heart, just mention that babette of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Beard's. Naturally, Mr. Beard asked us to renew his subscription to the Home Paper which has been on his reading table for many, many years. Thanks so much!

. . . We are delighted to incorporate the name of Mrs. George May of Detroit, Michigan, on our ever widening list of readers. Mrs. May, it will be remembered is the former Bert Pearson, and is a sister of Mrs. George Weaver's to whom she owes "thanks" for sending her the Reporter-Democrat for a year round Christmas gift. It is nice to know old friends are with us, each week thru the columns of this weekly paper.

. . . Mr. Bob Bowdon, one of the finest people we have ever known, and his co-workers, are busily engaged this week in filling the Jury Box, getting it all ready for new terms of Court to be held during 1953. We are deeply grateful to "Mr. Bob" for a personal call in our little office. He just did not stay long enough for us to finish the many things we had to tell him, but, he has promised to "come back soon".

DISTRICT SUPERVISORS TEST ARGENTINE BAHIA GRASS

Argentine Bahia grass, a temperate zone relative of dallis grass is being tried at Wilsonville by supervisors of the North Central Soil Conservation District. Mansel Wolf, cooperating farmer, is furnishing land, preparation, fencing and the supervisors are furnishing seed and fertilizer for a four acre patch.

The seed was planted April 17 and 18, 1952, and made some growth despite the severely dry summer. The grass will be studied carefully in 1953 to determine its possibilities for Shelby county.

Argentine Bahia is rapidly replacing the other bahia grass varieties in some sections of the South, and looks good as far North as Thorsby. It is expected to furnish a badly needed heavy summer grazing and forage crop.

Seed will be produced commercially on the Wilsonville patch to supply district cooperators first, then other farmers, if the grass grows it will be valuable to our farms.

God With Us

Lesson for December 21, 1952

WHAT does Christmas mean? It is all wrapped up in one of the words describing Jesus, one of the less familiar names: Emmanuel. (Or Immanuel; the Bible spells it both ways.) It means GOD WITH US.

The Christian religion is not the only religion that believes in God. Many authorities believe that without belief in some kind of god, there is no religion. But a man can wonder about God, or believe that there must be a god of some kind, all his life long, and be no better man for all that. Cruel, lying men have worshipped cruel, lying gods and they grew all the worse for it.

To Live Where We Live

However, some of the higher religions have had sublime ideas about God, indeed many ideas which a Christian will agree are true. The Romans understood there is a justice on high; their gods would see and reward the just. But few Romans ever loved their gods. The more lofty their ideas of God were, the less they loved and the more they were afraid. A holy god (they supposed) must be the enemy of all sinners. In many religions, not the Roman alone, there have been stories of gods who (like the Canadian police) would always "get their man." "Your sin will find you out" is a verse in the Old Testament which many another religion could have echoed.

Dr. Foreman

In contrast to all this, the coming of Christ means that God is with us, not against us. He has come to live where we live, to be on our side.

The bare belief, "God is," brings little comfort. Mount Everest is, and so is the South Pole. But the mountain and the pole are cold and far away. Most men who seek them perish. Only the Christian religion knows of a God who came to earth and still comes to make his home in the hearts of men of good-will.

Spelling God Out

When we say "God is a person" we can be misunderstood, and we can quickly get into thought-tangles. But if we ask the question, If God were a human being, what sort of person would he be, we have not only asked a very important question, but we can understand the answer: it is Jesus. He is the translation of God into human language.

We needed that translation, too. Jesus was not born into a world of atheists: far from it. There were "gods" everywhere. There were little mean gods and little nasty gods, and they did no one any good. There were vast gods of wrath, and there were high serene gods who went their ways in the sky like great airliners, casting fleet shadows on the farms beneath but not knowing nor caring who might live down there.

He Shall Save His People

Emmanuel means more than that God has visited his people. Your old aunt may come for a visit and stay for two weeks, and all that time never offer a word of complaint or criticism. She lets you do as you please, she gives the children candy and she helps your wife with the cooking and she knits you a muffler.

Some people think God is like that, a sort of handy deity around the house, a god who will hand out anything we care to ask for. "God with us," to such people, means that God is on our side no matter what we may do.

But that is a long way from the truth. For another name of Emmanuel is Jesus, and that means Saviour. We are not told that Jesus will save his people from hell, or from trouble; he will save his people from their sins. When God comes to visit us in Christ, it is not a visit of curiosity. It was no sentimental journey God took to Bethlehem. God is with us; but not to bolster up our self-conceit, not to back us up in anything and everything we may take a notion to do.

He is with us to do what we can never do by ourselves or for ourselves: namely to save us from ourselves. What the best of imaginary gods could never do, what the little gods (even if they had been real) would never do, the true God has done. Could he have done it in heaven? We do not know. What we do know is that our God had something to do for us on earth; and that is why Christ came to Bethlehem.

A SPECIAL SALUTE TO THE GOODFELLOWS

The Good Book says— "It is more blessed to give than to receive". If this be true, and we have no reason to doubt it, the "Goodfellows" of Shelby County who gave so generously of their time, talents and means, to help less fortunate ones, should be richly blessed at this Glad Season, and Christmas Day, 1952, should be the happiest they have ever known.

If each of you could have seen the joyous expression on the faces of the Mothers and Dads who journeyed to Columbiana in our office to select the gifts best suited to Johnnie and Mary, this article would not be necessary. Fact is, we have no adjective in our limited vocabulary to express the inner joy that came to those Shelby county folk who realized they were not forgotten, and that their little ones would share the joys that only Santa Claus can bring.

There are many "Goodfellows" who deserve special mention, but the few with whom we have been closely associated during the drive naturally, are the ones whose work we know has been outstanding.

So, hats off and a salute to every Goodfellow in Shelby county and a special snappy salute to Howard Hall and his bus driver, Walter Sawyer, for transporting the supplies needed for this occasion from Birmingham to Columbiana FREE. To Fernwood Morris and Lindon Benson of Shelby, who were "Santa Claus' Little Helpers" on this trip, and to those FFA boys and Elvin Hill, who met them at this end of the line, and unloaded that truck, quicker than we could say "Jack Robertson" and to Luther McGiboney, accurate Treasurer and tireless worker in this cause.

To the Culture Club members who remained on duty in our office until the last toy was safely tucked under the arms of "Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus" and to the Home Demonstration members for buying material and dressing 190 dolls.

All of these unselfish acts bespeak thoughtfulness of others at Christmas time, and thoroughly convinces me that this is a mighty good world after all. And, as long as the "Goodfellows" are in it, we are not worried too much about the final outcome of all this upheaval. They bear factual evidence that "God's in his Heaven and all is right with the world". Never doubt it!

The Birmingham Goodfellows and the Birmingham Post-Herald cooperated with the Shelby County group in the purchasing of all supplies.

TAX COLLECTOR AND TAX ASSESSOR RECORDS 100 PER CENT

The Judge always gets a copy of the official State Auditor's Reports on the offices in the Courthouse, and we always take a "looksee". It is a pleasure to state to Luther Fowler's (Tax Assessor) and Clarence Abbott's (Tax Collector) loyal supporters that their records received are 100 per cent perfect.

What a gratifying thing it is to realize, in this old topsy turvy political world, that there DO remain conscientious and efficient custodians who, thru all the years, have proved worthy of the people's trust. Shelby Countians are to be congratulated upon possessing these outstanding officials in charge of these all important records.

An Editor's Reflections at Christmas

Have you moved through the seasonal serenity of our streets and felt the exultation in the air? Have you let children's laughter quicken your hearts, and have you sung the age-old carols? Have you visited your friends and let their gaily colored trees instill in you a vivid Christmas magic?

We have done those things. We will do them again and again, for there is no age, no staleness in this kind of truth nor in the words we use to express it each year. Thus, as the Christmas bells voice their own glorious message, we humbly think that it is time to offer ours.

Our message is a quiet one—just that we would like to touch you with the warm sense of Christmas peace which we have tried to impart to every line of this holiday edition. Yet, whether or not you find that message anywhere else in these pages, let us say here, in the fine and direct simplicity of the old way, that we wish everyone a very merry and joyous Christmas.

THE WONDROUS STORY SUCCESSFUL PRESENTATION

The Methodist Choir, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Collins, Mrs. Jane Carter, pianist, presented an artistic pageant Sunday evening in the Methodist Church bearing the title "The Wondrous Story".

The Rev. A. D. Wilson read the devotional and the congregations from both churches joined in singing the age old carols together. The pageant then unfolded beginning with the Shepherd's vision of the Star; the arrival of the Wise Men, and the Manger Scene, interspersed with descriptive music beautifully interpreted by the choir.

The large assemblage witnessing this outstanding Christmas event was visible evidence of the town's appreciation for this impressive service. Those responsible for its presentation are to be congratulated.

VINCENT GOOD CITIZENSHIP GIRL IS SARAH PERRY

Miss Sarah Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce H. Perry, Vandiver, has been named Good Citizenship Girl at Vincent High School.

Miss Perry is an "A" student, vice president of the Beta Club, editor of the school annual, and secretary of the senior class.

ARTHUR F. SEALE, SR. DIES

Funeral services for Arthur F. Seale, Sr., 72, retired Calera policeman, were held Sunday afternoon, in Calera.

Mr. Seale died in a Birmingham hospital after being confined there several weeks. He was a native of Calera.

He had been a night policeman in Calera 22 years and retired last month because of ill health. Before becoming a policeman he was for 20 years a superintendent for the Alabama Cooperage Company.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Sidney Bird, Calera; a son, Arthur F. Seale, Jr., Wetumpka; two sisters, Mrs. Walter L. Crawford and Miss Pearl Seale, and a brother, C. J. Seale, all three of Birmingham; three grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held at Calera Methodist Church at 1:30 P. M. Sunday. Burial in Elmwood Cemetery in Birmingham with Bolton-Walton in charge.

TAX COLLECTIONS

Alabama tax collections continued upward in November, although some of the major revenue producers dropped.

State Revenue Commissioner Joe M. Edwards says total receipts paid into the department amounted to $10,263,415.

ALABAMA POWER OFFICES TO CLOSE ON SATURDAYS

Commercial offices of Alabama Power Company will be closed Saturdays after December 27.

Special depositories in which payments may be placed will be provided in or near the doors of the offices, says the power company.

In addition to serving customers who normally pay their bills on Saturday, the depositories will be used after hours during any day of the week.

MRS. FRANCES SMITH

Funeral services for Mrs. Frances Pratt Smith were conducted December 17 at the Wilsonville Baptist Church. Burial was in the Wilsonville Cemetery.

Mrs. Smith, who died in Sylacauga Monday, was the widow of Dr. T. O. Smith. She was a member of a pioneer Bibb County family but lived in Shelby County 40 years.

She was active in church and charitable work.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. L. H. Lewis, Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. C. C. Keeton, Birmingham, and Mrs. James L. Batson, Wilsonville; a son, T. O. Smith, Wilsonville; five grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

$3,000,000 PLANT SELECTS BUILDING SITE IN COUNTY

Construction Will Begin Immediately

Westinghouse Electric Corp. announced recently they will buil a $3,000,000 welding electrod plant between Calera and Montevallo to be completed in 1953.

To be the first welding electrode plant in the South, the plan will employ approximately 20 persons, at first, and will occupy a 52-acre site. Two miles fro Montevallo, towards Calera.

Plans call for a one-story stee and brick building 400 feet long The plant is the third Westinghouse unit to be built in Alabam in the past two years.

All of the Alabama units ar part of Westinghouse's $296,000,000 expansion program.

In addition to welding electrode of all types, the plant will manufacture brazing alloys. Otis O Rae, Atlanta, company-southeastern manager, and Tom Turner Buffalo, N. Y., vice president, sai the plant will ship welding rod throughout the South and Pacifi Coast and the brazing alloys ove the U. S.

Richard E. Ballentine, Buffalo engineer for the brazing alloys will manage the new plant.

At least 95 per cent of th plant working force will be draw from the Shelby county area, company officials said. Announcements will be made as soon a applications can be taken.

Mr. Rae, in announcing the location of the plant, said the industrial growth in the South wa a large factor in Westinghouse' decision to build in Shelby county

"We needed something closer t our customers," he said, "so w could offer prompt customer service. We found in the area a goo labor supply, a tax structure fa to new industry and good ra transportation facilities."

"Besides these features, plus readily available supply of ste in the form and quantity neede we found that the communit really wants us as a neighbor."

The plant will use hot rolle steel produced in the Birmingha area and make the complete processing to turn out packaged welding rods.

GOVERNOR URGES SAFETY CAUTION DURING HOLIDAY

Governor Gordon Persons appealed to residents of Alabam again yesterday to stop the "use less sorrow and waste" caused b automobiles and in the home an on the job.

With the Christmas holiday season approaching, the governor issued a special proclamation urging each citizen to make acciden prevention a "personal responsbility."

"The madness (of accidents which afflicts so many of ou homes and the peacetime loss t our economy through this cau are pathetically needless and indefensible," the proclamation sai adding:

"Accidents don't happen, as rule, except for failure on some one's part to use plain, ordinar care or to have a decent, sobe regard for the rights of others.

Failure to co-operate in accident prevention, he said, is "traitorous disregard of the common welfare."

MORE NEWS NEXT WEEK

Wedding bells in several town in our county have been chimin in unison with the joyous Christmas chimes, and you may lo for an account of these soci events next week. Due to the fa that we are coming out early th week with a Christmas Greetin to our friends, these items of interest will be incorporated in th New Year's edition.

Why Christmas Candles?

On Christmas Eve the Christ Child wanders all over the earth seeking deserving people—people who are kind and thoughtful of others, and people who have loving hearts. Lighted candles are placed in the windows by such people so that He may not stumble and fall. In the course of His search He visits every castle and hut, no matter how rocky and rough His path may be.

KEEPING CHRISTMAS

by

Henry Van Dyke

Are you willing to forget what you have done for other people, and to remember what other people have done for you; to ignore what the world owes you, and to think what you owe the world; to put your rights in the background, and your duties in the middle distance, and your chances to do a little more than your duty in the foreground; to see that your fellow-men are just as real as you are, and try to look behind their faces to their hearts, hungry for joy; to own that probably the only good reason for your existence is not what you are going to get out of life, but what you are going to give to life; to close your book on complaints against the management of the universe, and look around you for a place where you can sow a few seeds of happiness—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

FULL REHEARSAL FOR THE BIG DAY . . . Robert wanted Nick, the dog, to have dinner with him at his private table, but Dad and Mom were not enthusiastic until Robert demonstrated that Nick's table manners are impeccable. He did it with a dress rehearsal, which you see here. Nick seems to be enjoying nonchalantly an after dinner cigarette.

'Lord of Misrule,' 'Hodening Horse' Make Noel Jollier

A DIFFERENT playtime observance for your Christmas festivities is the game "Lord of Misrule."

When your guests have all arrived and have been greeted by the music of the minstrels and the song of the carolers, it is time for the most honored guest of the evening to arrive. With much fanfare the "Lord of Misrule" is announced. He enters with great pomp and ceremony and takes his place as the master of ceremonies for the evening.

The Lord of Misrule comes to us from the Tudor courts where he was elected annually to reign over the Christmas festivities. His word, during the festivities, was law, and the ridiculous commands he laid upon the guests had to be obeyed.

At your party, the Lord of Misrule will command each guest to do his bidding. He may call for singing, dancing, panomime, imitations and stunts of all kinds. Failure to do the bidding of the Lord of Misrule results in the payment of a forfeit. And here another unusual note may be injected. The forfeit, instead of being paid to the Lord of Misrule may be paid to another Christmas character, the "hodening horse."

It was the custom in Kent, England, for young men to go from house to house with the hodening horse, an imitation of a horse's head attached to a long stick. Two lads, forming the body of the horse, were hidden from view by a covering of cloth resembling horse's skin. The hodening horse was ac-

Chemical Solution Protects Christmas Trees From Flames

To fireproof your Christmas tree, which is still a hazard even with electric lights, select your tree four to six days before you intend to decorate it. Then weigh the tree and buy one-fourth as many pounds of ammonium sulfate as the tree weighs. This chemical is available in most stores that sell seeds and fertilizers.

For each pound of ammonium sulphate use 1½ pints of water to make the fireproofing solution. Mix the solution in something tall and narrow that will hold the tree upright. Then saw off the tree diagonally so as to give a large cut surface. Set the tree in the solution in a cool place, away from the direct sunlight, and leave it there until most of the solution is absorbed.

You Can Make a Big Christmas Candle

You can make a big, long-burning candle to fit into your Christmas decorations if you have a number of odds and ends of partly burned candles around the house. Melt them and pour into cardboard containers and remold. Use ice cream cartons, oatmeal containers or others. Use plain cord for a wick. When the wax is beginning to set, tie the wick to a pencil and suspend it in the wax. Let set hard, remove carton and there is a nice candle for your table.

1 B. C. and 1 A. D. Were Not a Year Apart

According to our calendar, one would naturally assume that between the year 1 B. C. and the year 1 A. D. there should be a year called zero. As a matter of fact, no such year exists, as far as historians are concerned, and the year 1 A. D. follows directly after the year 1 B. C.

A person born in 3 B. C. would not be five years old at 2 A. D. but would be four years old when one is calculating data in that period. When adding B. C. and A. D. years, it is necessary to always subtract one to compensate for the year zero omitted between 1 B. C. and 1 A. D.

The Mystery of God's Firmament

THE "STAR" which signaled 'the First Christmas" may be interpreted in many ways. In all such interpretations we must put ourselves as nearly as possible into the social and psychological frame of mind of those whom we try to understand. The astronomer knows that through the ages the word "star" has been used to indicate almost any celestial phenomenon. We still speak of "falling stars" or "shooting stars" which we know quite well are not stars at all. In more ancient times the comet was called a "hairy star" and was derived from the Latin word coma, meaning hair. The planets were the "wandering stars" as opposed to the "fixed stars," and from the Greek word for wanderer we derive our word "planets."

The Star of Bethlehem could have been any of these. It could even have been a "new star" or nova which suddenly burst forth with a many-thousand-fold increase in brilliance, due to some great stellar catastrophe. These are all explanations of what the "star" could have been. Had it been any of the above, it would have been seen by many peoples, and in literature would have been found references to the appearance of the object which attracted attention. But nowhere in the literature or in the folklore of any of the peoples noted as astute observers of celestial phenomena do these references exist.

From this we are forced to conclude the appearance of the star was a sight given only to the Wise Men to see.

Far-Off Lands Come to Life In Yule Toys

GEOGRAPHY comes down the chimney on Christmas Eve.

In the flood of toys soon to spill out into the nation's living rooms will be the touch of many different lands. Beside a teddy bear, replica of Australia's marsupial furred koalas, perhaps will stand a carved wooden farm scene from German Bavaria, a South American gaucho doll, or a miniature pagoda made in Japan.

Similarly, the United States, now the world's leading toy maker, sends abroad its wild west costumes, its shiny playtime trucks and cars and earth-moving equipment, its small-scale railroads and sky scrapers to delight children all over the globe.

Toy industries in Germany and Japan are on the upswing again. Germany was among the first nations in the world to make tin horses on wheels, engines that ran, animals that walked, birds that sang. Now U.S. buyers go back to cities such as Nurnberg for the output of ingenious middle-aged inventors.

New toys that startle the world often come from Europe. One such is a German duck which, when set on an incline, proudly walks down the slope. Another is a recent gadget from Denmark called a "tippe top,' a wobbly sphere about the size of a small apple that suddenly flips upside down and continues spinning on its stem.

Winston Churchill was intrigued by the top when he first saw it. In Stockholm, the King of Sweden, a cabinet minister and an atom physicist, a Nobel Prize winner, got down on their hands and knees at a banquet to study the mysterious flip-flop action.

As a mirror of mankind's culture, toys reflect the progress of civilization. Yet an amazing similarity can sometimes be seen between the toys of long-forgotten eras and the playthings of today.

CHRISTMAS FEAST . . The toys have been opened and church services are over. Now, it's time for that Christmas feast and a turkey drumstick.

Bethlehem Rites Feature March To Nativity Cave

CHRISTMAS is observed in Bethlehem on December 25 by the Roman Catholics and Protestants, on January 6, by the Greek Orthodox and affiliated churches, and on January 18 by the Armenians.

All Bethlehem, however, turns out on December 24 for the arrival of the Patriarch of Jerusalem—Cardinal of the Holy Land—who each year brings an ancient effigy of the Infant Jesus to Bethlehem which he lays in the manger within the cave where Christ was born.

Dramatically the procession approaches: heralded by a single horseman, his banner streaming aloft. A corps of native police mounted upon fiery Arabian horses follow and then another single horseman upon a prancing black steed carrying the cross on high; the Patriarch in his cardinal and ermine, mitred bishops, clergy in embroidered vestments and white robed acolytes—swinging golden censers—precede the jeweled pavilon of the Holy Child. Magnificent corteges of government officials, foreign embassies, bands, religious organizations follow, and finally, American made automobiles mingle with native two-wheeled carriages.

The procession enters the Church of the Nativity. The public is not permitted to witness the actual placing of the effigy, as that part of the Church—built above the Cave of the Nativity—is under the jurisdiction of the Greek Orthodox church.

The grotto-like Cave of the Nativity in no way conforms to the modern conception of a "stable;" in biblical times, however, shelters for man and beast were hewn into rocky ledges—thus, the Stable of Bethlehem.

On Christmas Eve, members of all denominations assemble to sing carols above the birthplace of the Holy Child before midnight mass is solemnized in the Church of the Nativity.

Yule Tree Business Figured in Millions

CHRISTMAS TREES are a multimillion dollar business. Throughout the nation, some 15 million trees are supplied to the holiday demand. Prices range from $1 to $5, and that adds up to real money.

A Christmas tree, in the lake states, is usually a balsam or a spruce. The same is true in New England and the Appalachian section. Elsewhere in the country, virtually all kinds of evergreens are used.

The lodgepole pine and Douglas fir are frequently used in Colorado. On the Pacific coast, it is principally Douglas fir.

In Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C., a scrub pine takes a trimming.

In other localities, white pine, southern pine, hemlock, red and white cedar and redwood are used.

The business of harvesting this annual crop begins in the fall, when cutters go into the woods after trees. It continues as truckers bring huge loads to metropolitan markets.

Many land owners manage their swamps to make them yield a crop of trees year after year. Thinning operations are another source of Yule trees.

Farmers have discovered that they can get a cash crop from eroded acres by harvesting Christmas trees 10 or 15 years after they are planted.

'Hansel and Gretel' Join the Procession

The original score of "Hansel and Gretel" was composed by Englebert Humperdinck as a Christmas piece.

The musical fairy tale created a sensation.

Since Humperdinck was one of Wagner's most intimate assistants, his harmonies have been dubbed "nursery rhymes — Wagnerian style" and since fairy tales and nursery rhymes are appropriate at Christmas, "Hansel and Gretel" has joined the procession of traditional Christmas music.

Wishing You
A MERRY CHRISTMAS

Wedding bells rang Sunday for a former resident of our town, Mr. Sherill McClure, who married Miss Betty Gore of Clanton. Mrs. Juanita Williams, Miss Mary Williams and Mrs. Jack Story attended the wedding.

We are glad to have some of our boys who are in the service of Uncle Sam home for Christmas, James Campbell, James Wallace and Marvin Eastis are home. Mr. John Shaw, who is stationed in San Pedro, California, also, here with Mrs. Shaw and Mike.

Another item of good news is that Mrs. Sammy McEwen is improving. She is in the South Highland Infirmary.

Don Whitten and Nell Taylor left last week for San Clements California for a visit with Captain and Mrs. C. D. Whitten, Jr. Captain Whitten is to leave soon for the Far East.

Mrs. John Vardaman spent Thursday in Birmingham.

Mrs. Nat Nivens is ill at the home of Mr. Maud Nivens.

Mrs. T. O. Smith, Sr., one of our oldest and beloved citizens, passed away Monday and was buried Wednesday. Funeral services were held at the Wilsonville Baptist Church and interment at the Wilsonville Cemetery. She will be missed by her many friends in Wilsonville.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Bolton have returned from a visit in Miami.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williams of the University, are home for Christmas.

Mr. Mark Bentley, from Charleston, S. C., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jack Story during the holidays.

Walter Carlson, Jerry Cross and Don Whitten attended a meeting of the Order of the Arrows at Camp Horn last week end.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Whitten and Mrs. Leon Boddie of Eastoboga, Mrs. John Hoover of Montgomery and Mrs. Herman Burgess of Bessemer were recent visitors of Mrs. B. W. Taylor.

Mesdames Ethel Tinney, Claud Edwards and Stinson Hill attended "The Messiah" given at Alabama College. Miss Barbara Edwards took part in this beautiful production.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Whitten, Mary Ruth and Pauline Sims, Mrs. C. D. Whitten, Don and Sarah Nell Whitten, Mary Fancher and Billy Farmer attended the Christmas program at the Baptist Church in Columbiana.

Mr. Howard Hill stopped for a short visit with his sister, Miss Mamye Hill Thursday. He was returning from Miami and only had a short time. We wish he could have stayed longer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Myers (Estelle Hughes) and Sonny from Washington, D. C. are here for Christmas.

We are glad to hear that Mary Aileen Ray is home from the hospital and is convelescing.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Walling and daughter Ann from Memphis, Tennessee are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Weldon and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Story are celebrating Christmas with a family get-together and six o'clock dinner.

Mrs. Alice Rodgers and daughter Faye, are spending Christmas with Mrs. Rodgers' mother in Anniston.

Mrs. James Curtis visited her sister in Pell City Saturday.

The boys and girls of our school enjoyed preparing and delivering baskets to our elderly citizens, shut-ins and people they wanted to remember Friday. They decided to do this rather than draw names and give gifts to each other. We think this showed a nice Christmas spirit.

BRIEF NEWSETTES

We have space for only some dots and dashes this week, as Good wishes from your friends and mine have taken up the paper, and what wonderful wishes they are to greet you and you and you on Christmas morning. Nothing like a cheerful little earfull on any day, but somehow "good wishes" mean more on this world wide holiday, when the whole world pauses to pay tribute to a little babe born in Bethlehem over 2000 years ago, and everybody catches the Yuletide Spirit, and turns this war-weary old world into a veritable Elysian field of Happiness for those of us in America. But, remember my friends, we have many gallant lads in Korea and in other parts of this world, and these very lads are repsonsible, in a large measure, for this blessing we, here at home, enjoy at this Glad Season. Forget them not—!

It was good to have Harry Atchison, who recently received painful burns while at work in Birmingham with a prominent industrial firm, come by our office Thursday and give us the chance to tell him how very glad we were that he was on the up and up again. Harry is a splendid fellow, and has been sincerely missed in Columbiana, since he and his bride moved to the Magic City.

Parties, patter and what have you is on the calendar for the gay season in Columbiana. The Baptist Choristers opened the musical avenues for this glorious season Sunday night, December 14, when they presented their annual cantata. Monday night, a Bridge Party, and a Supper Club, held forth, Tuesday evening, The Senior Play at the High School and the crowning of Pretty Eleanor Lester as Shelby High Queen for 1952-53, held the spotlight of approval. Wednesday evening, Robert Holliman and his Youth Choir at the Baptist Church presented a lovely Christmas Program.

Thursday evening, the Kiwanis Club and the annual American Legion Auxiliary Dance took place.

Friday night, was Community Night in the Courthouse, Roy Mann, Doris Coivin and Mary Mims, directing the varied program which is always an eye-catcher. Saturday night was a wedding rehearsal for popular Betty Hunt and Captain Mays, whose wedding was a beautiful event of Sunday afternoon in the Methodist Church.

There have been several group "Turkey Dinners" too that should be mentioned. The menu for these delectable feasts taking on the proportions of Mr. Purefoy himself. And the season is young. Fact is, another week or two is scheduled before the old slow tempo is again in vogue on your little Old Main Street and mine.

Collegiates are home and what a difference their presence makes on the Main Drag.

The best news to reach, possibly the widest circle of friends, is the news that Luther Fowler, Tax Assessor, who has been in the hospital for several weeks for treatment, is home again, and he looks just fine! This news is most gratifying to those of us who work with him day in, day out, and we hasten to share the good tidings with his host of friends in Shelby county.

Christmas Cheer

Never a Christmas Season dawns without a request for the classic editorial written shortly before the turn of the century for the New York Sun by Francis F. Church which answers for all time to come the age old question— "Is There A Santa Claus"—

We happily grant your request for its reprint. As you know, the editorial was written in answer to a little girl 8 years old who wrote a letter to the editor of the Sun. The letter reads as follows and the famed answer by Mr. Church:

"Dear Editor:

"I am 8 years old.
"Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus.
"Papa says 'if you see it in the Sun it's so.'
"Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?
VIRGINIA O'HANLON,
115 West 95th Street."

"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensive by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be man's or children's are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole truth and knowledge.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there was no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

"Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would you prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus but that is no sign there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn. Of course not, but that's no proof they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

"You tear apart the baby's rattler and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. It's all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

"No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the hearts of children."

TOMMY LEWIS BLANKENSHIP

Do you recognize this up and coming young American?

We should like to present him. His name is Tommy Lewis Blankenship and he is the Reporter-Democrat's Mascot for 1952.

Tommy came to town last week and asked us if we knew who his successor would be. Naturally, the answer lies with Dr. Stork and he has not divulged his or her name, but we are eagerly awaiting his or her arrival on or after the January 1st date.

We will say one thing, "Mr. or Miss New Year" is going to have to be pretty smart to come up to Tommy's record. Just wish you could have seen Tommy while he was in Columbiana last week. He had grown so much, we almost had to be re-introduced to him. He is truly a handsome fellow, and as friendly as can be. He was delighted with all the pre-Christmas arrangements now going on, and with his chubby fingers was busily engaged in pointing out what he most wanted Santa to bring with him.

After the arrival of our New Year Baby for 1953, Master Tommy will turn over the gavel in his department to the new "sweetest little fellow" who will automatically become our Mascot for 1953.

Reckon who Mr. or Miss Reporter-Democrat will be? Watch this paper for the flash news, which is always good news for us!

. . . Captain and Mrs. L. K. Bannister and family of Florida were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad M. Fowler.

Did you see those adorable known as Bobby Joyce Meshad and Anita Sloan down town shopping Friday afternoon? If you didn't, you missed a joy I wish you could have had. These two future belles of the Magic City and Columbiana, flattered us by coming in to see us for a few minutes, and long after they had gone their merry way, the memory of their presence lingered with us.

Naturally, we are wondering who the New Year Baby will be, and we are also receiving nominations for Shelby County's M

PRAYER . . . "O come let us adore him", these children pray on Christmas eve. Their prayer is the true and greatest gift of all.

'Silent Night' Hymn Is Often Called Song From Heaven

"Silent Night" is often called the "Song from Heaven" because the story of its inspiration and composition is one of the most beautiful Christmas stories in existence.

On December 24, 1818, in the Austrian village of Hallein, as Father Joseph Mohr sat reading his Bible, there was a knock at his door. It was a peasant woman who wanted the priest to visit a poor charcoal-maker's wife to whom a child had been born. The parents had sent her to ask the priest to come and bless the infant.

Father Mohr was strangely moved by the visit to the mother. And that evening as he returned to his home saw that the dark slopes of the Alps around the village were alight with torches of the mountaineers on their way to church. To him it was a Christmas miracle.

Later, as he tried to put down on paper his feeling and experience, the words kept turning into verse. When dawn came he found he had written a poem—a beautiful and moving poem.

On Christmas Day his friend, Franz Xaver Gruber, music teacher in the village school, composed music to fit the verses.

Village children heard the priest and teacher singing the song and learned it. From there it spread throughout the world. Today, it is regarded as the greatest Christmas hymn and wherever there are men of good will they sing:

"Silent night, holy night—
All is calm, all is bright,
Round you Virgin, Mother and Child;

Holy Infant, so tender and mild,
Sleep in heavenly peace—
Sleep in heavenly peace."

History of Christmas Seals

When you see the Christmas seal do you ever wonder how it started?

It was born in Denmark, home of the fairy tales of Hans Christian Anderson.

Einar Holboell, a Copenhagen postal clerk, was sorting mail one snowy afternoon before Christmas, 1903, when he thought of the idea of a penny stamp to swell a fund for children's hospitals.

Authorized by King Christian, the first Christian seals were sold in Copenhagen in 1904.

Holboell's scheme outgrew his wildest imaginings, for before his death in 1927, he lived to see it spread to 45 countries.

The seals found their way to America on letters and packages and first attracted the attention of Jacob Riis who wrote an article about them. Few people, however, were interested in the idea.

Then, in the autumn of 1907, Emily Bissell, a public health worker, concerned about the fate of a small sanatorium, recalled th article and sat down to sketch America's first Christmas seal, a wreath of holly encircling the words "Merry Christmas."

With 50,000 stamps printed and nowhere to sell them, Miss Bissell at last enlisted the aid of a columnist on a Philadelphia newspaper. The idea caught and within a few weeks $3,000 was collected.

The first nation-wide sale was held the following year and was backed by newspapers all over the country, religious and civic groups, and sponsored by the American Red Cross and the National Tuberculosis association.

First Community Tree At Christmas Was Held In City of Cleveland

THE COMMUNITY Christmas tree idea was born in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1912. The community raised funds to defray the cost of the tree and celebrations through the sale of preferred stock in "Cleveland, the city of good will (unlimited), incorporated under the laws of the commonwealth of good cheer."

Holders of preferred stock were entitled to "dividends payable daily in the form of happy voices of robust children, the contented faces of friendly fellow citizens and the advancement of the city of good will."

Sale of stock was pushed everywhere, the most unique place being the Cleveland stock exchange where the stock was listed at the head of other securities. The sale brought $12,000, which purchased Christmas cheer for 13,000 citizens, as well as the first community Christmas for the city.

Getting Around
with Mac Brown

Have you ever thought how, like everything else, they've put Christmas on wheels? A couple of weeks back when the wife and I were down town doing the Christmas shopping, I got to noticing all the wheel goods.

Seems that now, the time you get a kid on his feet and teach him to use his legs, you start putting wheels under him and teach him not to use his legs any more than he has to!

When I was ten years old, I started having ambitions about a bicycle, but at that age now I guess they are wondering how soon they can trade in their motor scooter for a motorcycle!

Ours isn't quite at that age yet, but we got him one of those little bikes. He's already had it out, and one of the little kids insisted my boy pretend he had a flat tire, so he, the little one, could "stop and fix it." "That's the way you real truck drivers do, isn't it, Mr. Brown . . . stop and fix flats when you see folk's got 'em?"

That kid put me in the right mood for the Christmas season —to realize that the boy had some appreciation for the work I do. I just wish more grown folks would get his attitude! Who knows, maybe they will. Remember — "A little child shall lead them."

Merry Christmas!

Christmas 'Open House' Was Early Saxon Custom

AT CHRISTMASTIDE, the great hall of the Saxon lord was thrown open to peasant and noble alike—all mingling democratically and exchanging gifts and hearty cheer during a great feast and festivities composed of dance and song. With a tremendous burst of shouting, the Yule Log was dragged into the hall and placed upon the open fire pit. These democratic Christmas festivities lasted until the last dying embers of the log.

In our south, prior to the Civil War, the slaves, following this Saxon custom, would soak a log in the cypress swamps to extend the length of their Christmas freedom.

You can avoid water marks on furniture caused by moisture on a flower vase if a piece of waxed paper is slipped under the vase. If the paper is cut to the same pattern as that of the doily, the paper will be unnoticeable.

Gifts to Christ

Lesson for December 28, 1952

WHAT the world brings to Christ is never to be compared with what Christ brings the world. Not all the Christmas gifts that ever were, including those given to the cause and in the name of Jesus, equal a small part of the value of Jesus himself to the world. Nevertheless, ever since the time of the wise men from the east, gifts have been brought and laid at the feet of Christ, in one way or another.

Wisdom

Many treasures of wisdom, through these 19 centuries, have been poured out for the Master's service. Not that men can make God wise; but the wisdom and learning of mankind can be, and have been, put at the disposal of Christ and his cause. To take one fact alone: the translation of the Bible into hundreds of languages throughout the world. The work of translating can never stop, because languages keep changing; the English and the French of this century are not the same as they were centuries ago, and Bibles translated for those times become hard to understand in our day.

Dr. Foreman

Not that a new English translation is needed every few years; but somewhere, all the time, into some language or other, this work is being carried on. It is no simple job; a translator must not only know Greek and Hebrew, but also, and very thoroughly, the language into which he translates. Most good translations are made by groups, for many heads are better than one, at this work.

When we add to the work of the translators all that other scholars have done, all the brain work that has gone into the printing and binding of the books and distributing them in many ways; we can see what the devotion of intellectual talents has meant, through the centuries, to the Christian religion.

Wealth

Think what a difference it would make, if suddenly every Christian in the world decided that the Lord's work could get along just as well without being offered another cent. No new churches would be built; existing churches would fall into decay because no one would pay for their repair (and free labor wouldn't do it, because that too is a form of wealth). Home and foreign missions would come to an end. Christian schools, hospitals and colleges would close down. No Christian books of any kind could be printed. Radio religious broadcasts would cease, because there would not be any one to pay for them, and even the "free" time, which always costs the station something, could no longer be offered.

• • •

From Each His Own

Christianity is today an international religion, though it started off as the religion of a few Asiatic Jews. But Jesus was scarcely out of his cradle before those men of the East came, and they were the first of a long line from every nation and race in the world.

In America we think of Christianity as almost an American religion; but it is not. Americans have brought much to Christianity, —their energy, daring, pioneering spirit, their practical slant on everything,—these have given to Christianity in North America a "color" and a "style" all its own.

But we are not the only Christians, perhaps not even the best ones. There are Indian Christians, and Chinese Christians; there are Christians among the Eskimos and Zulus. There is some Christianity behind the Iron Curtain; it is found in Scotland, Sweden, Spain, El Salvador.

And while we are all brothers under the skin, the fact remains that it takes all kinds of Christians to make the Christian world, and to make the world Christian. Our missionaries do not go out to make American Christians; they go to make Christians. And every one who comes to Christ brings something which is specially his own. As Rev. John Monsell's hymn has it:

"Fear not to enter His courts in the slenderness
Of the poor wealth thou wouldst reckon as thine:
Truth in its beauty, and love in its tenderness,
These are the offerings to lay on His shrine."

Christmas Has Everything

Christmas has everything—hasn't it?

Christmas holds tightly many happy memories, is loaded with joy and good cheer right now, and pierces uncertainties of the future with the bright twinkle of hope.

Christmas lifts you out of your ordinary self and pushes you up into being a person far nicer than you have thought you were.

Christmas opens up friendships more numerous, more delightful and more heart-warming than you knew you had.

Christmas appeals to all five of your senses. Is there any sight lovelier than gaily wrapped gifts, multicolored candles, shiny holly and decorations on a Christmas tree? Isn't there contentment in the fragrant smell of fir balsam in the living room and of spicy odors in the kitchen? Wouldn't the days seem empty without hearing again the universally-loved carols and the laughter of happy children? Isn't self-control overstrained by the taste of festive, tempting foods? And don't we respond to the invigorating touch of the sweet air outdoors and the welcome warmth of home and family within?

It looks like Christmas.
It smells like Christmas.
It sounds like Christmas.
It tastes like Christmas.
It feels like Christmas.

It must be Christmas.

Merry Christmas!

MERRY CHRISTMAS

GOOD LAND USE MEANS LIVESTOCK PRODUCTION

On many Alabama farms there are areas of open land where row crops cannot be grown continuously without serious erosion damage.

"Many such areas have already eroded to the point where they are no longer fit for cultivation," declares S. R. Doughty, API Extension soil conservationist.

He adds that now is a good time to get such land ready for planting sericea, kudzu, and other sod crops to be grazed by livestock. When livestock graze these soil-saving crops, meat is produced for sale but most of the plant food is returned to the soil.

A Prayer by St. Francis of Assisi

Lord make me an instrument of Thy Peace!
Where there is hatred . . . let me sow love
Where there is injury . . . pardon
Where there is doubt . . . faith
Where there is despair . . . hope
Where there is sadness . . . joy!

O Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek
To be consoled . . . as to console
To be understood . . . as to understand
To be loved . . . as to love,

For

It is in giving . . . that we receive
It is in pardoning . . . that we are pardoned
It is in dying . . . that we are born to eternal life.

In this season when Christian nations memorialize the birth of Christ, and when men and women contemplate the ideal of "Peace on earth, good will toward men," the prayer of St. Francis of Assisi seems especially appropriate for publication in space normally used for advertising.

Egyptians Made Elaborate Dolls For Children

No one knows for sure who made the first doll, but it can be assumed the earliest figures were sacred—gods and ancestor images. These doll-like forms were not toys for the delight of children, but solemn religious figures that preserved the tribe from harm.

Then, somehow, somewhere, a change took place. Dolls became a toy for girls and the most popular Christmas toy of them all.

Dolls have been discovered in Egyptian tombs and ruins, some even had real hair; some were ivory, carved by craftsmen for a king's daughter; others were made of straw by an overworked mother in a peasant's hut.

In ancient Greece dolls were played with and cherished by little girls until they were ready to be married. Then (their dolls were taken to the shrine of a favorite goddess) and, often with tears, presented to her. The Roman children played with dolls, too, but after the fall of the Empire there came a long period in which there is no record of dolls.

Not until the thirteenth century when dolls were made in Nuremberg and dressed in the fashions of the times did little girls again play with dolls. They were here to stay.

By and by in Europe, the French fashion dolls became all the rage, not for children to play with but as models from which fine ladies could pattern their own modish costumes.

In America, the Indian children had dolls of their own made of rawhide and feathers and wood. Pioneer children had dolls much like these, and some were made of braided cornhusks, or nuts, or corncobs, or rags; and were dearly loved in spite of their plainness.

Much later, lifelike dolls were imported from Germany, where the doll industry had reached enormous proportions. These dolls had fine china heads with carefully painted faces and kid bodies that were jointed at the arms and legs. Later there came the Japanese-made dolls, which were inexpensive enough for almost any child to own. Then the American-made dolls began to appear—the special dolls, the kewpies, billikens, Buster Browns, teddy bears, Patsy dolls and Shirley Temples and phonograph dolls, with all the host of others that have followed and which are still to come. For dolls always will be part of childhood and part of Christmases as long as there are little girls and boys to play with them, and parents and fond kinfolk to buy.

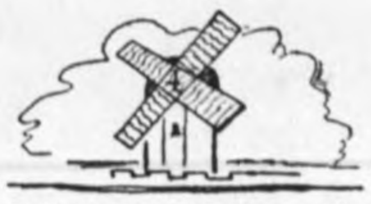
CHRISTMAS
AROUND THE WORLD

UNITED STATES (Merry Christmas)—Christmas tree, mistletoe and Santa Claus.

BRAZIL (Boas Festas)—A family dinner is first on the list of festive celebrations in Brazil. Christmas trees, gift exchanges and other typical U.S. holiday customs are being adopted in South America.

HOLLAND (Hartelijke Kertgrooten)—Land of old St. Nicholas, forerunner of our Santa Claus. In former years, the Dutch celebrated for a month. St. Nick scattered his gifts about the floors of Dutch homes as early as December 6.



ITALY (Bono Natale) — Shepherds gather in villages on Christmas Eve to play musical instruments as townsfolks sing sweet Nativity songs. Thousands flock to St. Peter's in Rome on Christmas Day.

GREECE (Kala Xristouyeha)—Decorated trees, greeting cards and gift exchanges are season highlights. New Year's Eve is really the top holiday, with big dances, parties and other celebrations for young and old.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS (Maligayang Pasko) — Church services, singing and dancing are Yuletide favorites in the islands.
